Rural Housewives of World in Convention

RURAL housewives from many countries began their third triennial conference in Washington with Mrs. Alfred Watt of Canada presiding.

Their first meeting was held in 1930 in Vienna, and the second in Stockholm three years later. Secretaries Hull and Wallace and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, extended greetings to the visitors, but beyond that there were no set speeches and little formality. Instead, the farm wives held "exchange of experience" sessions, viewed elaborate exhibits of rural needlework and crafts of organized countrywomen of the participating nations, and attended "open houses" held by all branches of the federal government in which countrywomen are particularly interested.

In exchanging experiences the women learned, among other things, that:

- English groups have stimulated a remunerative revival of quilting to supplement the family income.
- Australian countrywomen maintain seaside homes for convalescents.
- Canada's Federated Women's Institute promotes clubs for rural youth and combats maternal and infant mortality.
- By conducting evening classes for young girls Danish countrywomen have helped to check their migration to town to seek factory work.
- The East Africa Women's league visits native women in prisons and hospitals and provides information to prospective white settlers.

Huge Deficiency Bill Passed by Senate

THE senate by a vote of 62 to 14 passed the deficiency bill carrying $2,375,000,000, of which $1,425,000,000 is handed to the President to spend as he pleases for "relief and work relief."

As passed by the house, the measure turned the entire amount of relief money over to WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins.

Three Democratic senators voted against the bill—Tydings of Maryland, Bulkley of Ohio and Byrd of Virginia. By a senate amendment, the bill authorizes the President to order a study of reports on the $300,000,000 Florida ship canal and allocate another $10,000,000 to carry on work upon it during the coming fiscal year.

Efforts to do anything for the Passamaquoddy tidal project in Maine had proved unavailing.

New York's Wage Law Is Held Invalid

NEW YORK state's law providing minimum wages for women and minors was declared unconstitutional by the United States Supreme court on the ground that it conflicts with the fourteenth amendment by violating freedom of contract. The decision, written by Justice Butler, was concurred in by Justices Van Devanter, McReynolds, Sutherland and Roberts.

Chief Justice Hughes and Justices Stone, Brandeis and Cardozo dissented. A number of other states have statutes similar to the one thus held invalid.

It was evident to all observers the pope's age is beginning to tell on him and that he found the long ceremony very much of a strain.

That the pope's health is causing some concern also in Vatican circles was shown by the fact that the plans that were originally made for the pope to bless the crowd gathered in St. Peter's square from the outer balcony of the Basilica were abandoned at the last minute.

400,000 miners, Sidney Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers, David Dubinsky's International Ladies' Garment Union, the oil workers, typographers, flat glass workers, hat, cap, and millinery workers, mine, mill, and smelter workers, and textile workers.

Liner Queen Mary Fails to Equal the Record

BRITAIN'S magnificent new liner Queen Mary was given an uproarious welcome at New York as she completed the first leg of her maiden transatlantic passage. The giant steamship behaved well in every way but fell short by 42 minutes of equaling the record set a year ago by the French liner Normandie. The Queen Mary's officers offered no apology for this, but it was public knowledge that her speed had been cut down by a fog off the American coast.

The Queen Mary averaged 29.13 knots on a measured course of 3,158 nautical miles, between Cherbourg breakwater and Ambrose light, completing the journey between those two points in 4 days 12 hours 24 minutes.

Business Men Oppose New Guffey Coal Bill

BOTH the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers is firmly opposed to the new Guffey-Vinson coal control bill designed to replace the act declared invalid by the United States Supreme court.

Harper Sibley, president of the chamber, and James A. Emery, general counsel for the manufacturers' association, recalled, in almost identical language, that the most widely discredited phase of the defunct NRA was price fixing through codes. The new Guffey-Vinson bill, they said, like the old bill, is designed to establish price fixing by levying a prohibitory tax on products of mines which do not submit to its provisions.

"It is time," Mr. Emery said, "that we began to analyze these stop-gaps drafted hurriedly in an attempt to make permanent law of the things that are beyond control of congress and of the federal government; things which must, in the end, be harmful to the nation as a whole. Those who object to the new Guffey-Vinson bill did not even have an opportunity to present their valid reasons for objecting."

Pope, on His Birthday, Denounces Communism

CATHOLICS the world over celebrated the seventy-ninth birthday of Pope Pius XI, and the pontiff himself marked the day by attending a solemn mass in St. Peter's in the presence of 40,000 pilgrims who went to Rome especially for the occasion. These were mainly members of the Catholic Action organization which Pius XI founded, and to them he spoke for nearly an hour. He denounced communism, as he has done on other occasions, and declared the Catholic press was one of the best forces in combating the communists.

It was evident to all observers the pope's age is beginning to tell on him and that he found the long ceremony very much of a strain.

Germany Celebrates Her Revived Navy

WITH three days of maneuvers, reviews and ceremonies, Germany celebrated the revival of her navy, and closed the big event by dedicating at Kiel the huge monument to the men and ships that went down in the Battle of Jutland, Reichsfuehrer Hitler was aboard the dispatch boat Grille and from its topmast flew the old flag of the kaisers. In the maneuvers the new navy, about fifty battleships, cruisers, destroyers and submarines repelled an "enemy" attack on Kiel harbor. New submarines and speedboats, first units of the fleet being built under the Anglo-German treaty which wiped away the Versailles treaty limitations of the reich navy to 100,000 tons, were shown publicly for the first time.

Hitler, himself, did not speak during the ceremonies of the monument dedication. Instead he listened to Admiral Raeder, Vice Admiral Wolf, and Admiral von Prother, who was chief of staff during the Jutland fight. The latter two, both veterans of that fight, paid tribute to the English as well as the German heroes of the engagement.

Thousands of former sailors from all parts of Germany participated in the ceremonies. There were also assembled former colonial soldiers, dressed in their khaki uniforms. The presence of these colonialists constantly is assuming greater importance in German gatherings.

Serious Labor Troubles in Many States

FACTORIES and farms in 15 states, in all parts of the Union, were affected by labor troubles which intermediaries were trying, in vain to settle. Leaders of organized labor claimed that from 30,000 to 45,000 strikers already were out, but employers challenged the union claims that the strikes were effective.

- Workers in six plants of Remington Rand, Inc., were out on strike after union leaders ordered a walkout at Syracuse, N. Y. They said 6,000 workers in the company's New York, Ohio and Connecticut plants were involved. Company officials asserted there were 4,200 affected.
- Six thousand barbers in lower Manhattan, New York, were ordered to join 3,000 others in a strike which had spread over a wide area.

Garden Homes Planned by Housing Administrator

STEWART McDONALD, federal housing administrator, outlined to newspaper men a new program which provides for the construction of "garden homes" outside of large cities that will aid in the gradual movement of industrial workers from urban and suburban areas to small plots several miles out in the country. He said President Roosevelt was enthusiastic over the plan.

Emphasizing that "this is not anything in the way of a benevolent proposition" and that no grants of federal funds were involved, Mr. McDonald said it would be accomplished through a broadening of FHA regulations to permit government insurance of mortgages on such property. This will enable bankers and other lenders to advance funds for the development of these "in between" areas for residential purposes, he said.

"The President believes that whenever possible people should be on an acre to two acres of ground with trees, gardens and shrubbery," he said. "This plan has been made possible by inventions and improvements in the last ten years. Now we have good roads, electricity, water facilities, and other conveniences for those areas in between the city and the country. Such a program was not possible during the last building boom."

Raymond Moley's Warning to the Administration

RAYMOND MOLEY, who used to be considered the chief of the "brain trust," fears that his friend President Roosevelt may be destroyed politically by the radicals within the Democratic party who at the same time would "destroy moderation and destroy the very system which he attempted to improve."

In a speech before the National Economy League in New York, Doctor Moley said he saw confronting the Roosevelt administration these dangers:

1. That federal relief agencies will be turned into political machines to perpetuate the rule of state and local politicians.
2. The tendency, "all too prevalent in this congress, to engage in muck-raking, marauding expeditions which destroy the liberty of all of the people while they seek to restrain the abuses of a few. These orgies of public castigation . . . may be means of furthering individual political ambitions, they may be build-ups for those with Presidential hankering, but so far as the public interest is concerned they are simply sound and fury."
3. The tendency "of those in charge of the New Deal to over-emphasize adherence to the belief in the philosophy of the movement and to minimize the importance of competent technical administration."

Doctor Moley defended capitalism; declared that already there has been a wide distribution of wealth in this country, and warned the average man that he eventually must pay the mounting bills for relief—that he is the "missionary being fattened for a cannibalistic feast."

Hello Everybody!

"Riding Lesson" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter.

YOU'VE heard stories about how people have learned to swim by getting thrown into the water and having to swim. Well, here's the story of how Duke Edwards learned to ride a horse.

Duke lives in New York city. Maybe you've heard of him. Maybe you've seen him ride horses. He does it pretty regularly now. But I'll bet you've never seen anything half as good as that first broncoback excursion Duke ever took, out in KallsPELL, Mont., in July, 1912.

It was this way. Duke was twenty years old and fed up with the big city. The old adventurer's blood was pumping in his veins and his feet were itching to go places. So he invested most of his money in a railroad ticket and headed west. He didn't know what he was going to do when he got there. But that was soon settled for him.

On the train, Duke met up with a bird in a big, 10-gallon hat. He got to talking with him, and told him he was going west to see if he could get a job on a ranch.

"Can you ride a horse?" the big fellow wanted to know.

Riding a Horse Wasn't One of Duke's Accomplishments.

Well, Duke couldn't ride a horse any more than he could walk a tight rope, but he wasn't going to let that stand in his way of getting a job. "Sure I can," he said. And right there, his troubles started.

The big fellow told Duke he was a rodeo rider. He'd just finished up working for a wild west show and was on his way to join another one in California. He told Duke he'd fix him up with a cowboy outfit and see if he couldn't work him into a job somewhere. That was more than Duke had figured on.

I mean, he might have bluffed his way through the business of riding a tame horse, but getting aboard one of those bucking bronchos they ride in the circus was another thing altogether. The more he heard about that job, the less he liked it. But before he'd finally made up his mind, the big fellow had staked him to a lot of cowboy clothes, and Duke owed him so much money that he just had to have a job to pay it back.

The Reward for Bluffing Is Usually a Show-Down.

Duke began hoping they'd turn him down when he applied for a job—but they didn't. The big fellow saw to that. He went to work at seventy-five bucks a month and his keep, and since it was the off season and the show was in winter quarters, he managed to bluff his way through the first couple of weeks on the job. Duke's method was simple, but it had its drawback. He just bragged so much about what a good broncho buster he was that everybody took it for granted that he knew his horses. But all that talk was just going to make things worse for him when the big showdown came.

Rearing and Snorting the Horse Plunged Up and Down.

Duke fooled the rest of the show, but he couldn't kid the big fellow. When he found out Duke couldn't ride a horse, he started teaching him as much as he could. But you can't teach a man to bust bronchos in two weeks, and that's about all the time they had before the show went on the road again.

Duke had a streak of luck the first week or two the show was on the road. They forgot about him or something. Anyway, nobody asked him to ride a horse. Then, in KallsPELL, Mont., the blow fell. And a tough blow it was, too.

"Dynamite" Was a Tough Specimen of Horse Flesh.

KallsPELL was a great ranching town. A cowman in the neighborhood brought in a bad horse that went by the pretty name of Dynamite, and Dynamite's reputation was so bad around that neck of the woods that the show offered a prize of a hundred bucks to the first cowboy that stayed on his back. And the first name drawn to ride Dynamite was—you guessed it—Duke Edwards.

"I didn't say anything," says Duke, "but I felt myself going into a faint. By this time I knew how to mount a horse and ride it around the lot, but I'd never been on a buckler. It took six cowboys to saddle that brute and hold him so I could mount, but I had to act as if I wasn't afraid. I climbed into the saddle, and then, with a yell, we were off. "The horse, rearing and snorting, went down almost to his knees and bounced up again. I thought my head would snap off my neck. I felt myself fainting, but I stuck to the horse until we reached the bandstand."

Duke Played a Solo on the Big Bass Drum.

It took Duke and Dynamite just about forty seconds to reach that bandstand, but remember, that's quite a while to be on a bucking horse. It was at the bandstand that it happened. There, Dynamite put on an extra pound or two of reserve steam. He gave a last leap, kicked up his heels, and Duke went flying over his head.

Straight into the bandstand Duke flew. He could see the big bass drum coming up at him—felt his nose flatten out as it hit the drumhead. Then everything went black until he awoke in the hospital with a busted head and a big cut in his forehead. And did they fire Duke after that? Well—that's the funny part of it. Everybody said he'd given that Dynamite horse one heck of a good ride. Duke stayed with that outfit for three years and rode plenty more tough horses. Then he went into the movies and rode in western pictures, so you've probably seen Duke at one time or another, on the screen. And that one experience, he says, has given him the only rule of success he knows. "First throw your bluff," says Duke, "and then make it good."

Famous Maps of Path to Young Woman's Heart

As one journeys along the Rhone in France from Avignon, it becomes an easy matter to explain the famous maps of the "Path to a Young Woman's Heart," which the Courts of Love, held here in Seventeenth century, delighted in making.

Tarascon, down the river from Avignon takes in good part the sly fun poked at the character of the city's inhabitants in the tale, "Tartarin of Tarascon." The people of the town now go so far as to sell pictures of Tartarin on his expedition in the Alps, and some will even point out to gullible travelers the place where he lived.

Aries, also in this vicinity, is famed for its Roman antiquities. Its amphitheater is about 500 yards in circumference, has 43 tiers of seats and holds about 26,000 spectators. In the summer months it is the scene of many bull-fights. The old theater of Aries was also built by the Romans, although it was designed by a Greek architect. Where the Rhone divides before entering the Mediterranean, it forms a salt delta, the Camargue, which is one of the most romantic regions of Provence. Flamingoes with pink feathers inhabit its marshes, herds of cattle roam its fields, and steer-roping and branding are a part of everyday life. The cowboys of the region are expert, and their small white horses are very intelligent, taking as lively an interest in the games of their riders as the men do.

Tradition says that here the three Maries, Mary of Bethany, Mary, the mother of James, and Mary Magdalen, with their servant, Sarah, landed when they sailed away from the Holy Land after the Crucifixion. Sarah, an Egyptian, has become the saint of the gypsies, and in May they congregate here in colorful throngs to worship in the Church of the Saintes Maries de la Mer.

SERMONETTE

Vol. 3. No. 24.

Text: "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."—2 Cor. 5:10.

THE PUBLIC VERDICT

When a person dies he has already judged himself. If he is wicked he condemns himself to eternal punishment; if he is good he knows that only by virtue of Christ's redemption, as a believer in Christ, he will await to be taken body and soul to the eternal mansions of the heavenly father.

All bodies will be raised on Judgment Day. But on that day, called Judgment Day, there will be a judgment—a public one. All nations shall appear before the judgment-seat of Christ. This is no fantasy but a fact which the Bible tells us: "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

The fact that all must appear before Christ on Judgment Day is a doctrine of Christianity which all Christians accept and believe. It is something to look forward to. It will be a sad revelation to all unbelievers when they will hear from the Judge of heaven and earth, the very Jesus Christ, the Messiah, the public verdict. Then they will know to their embarrassment that there was a true God and a Savior from sin and damnation in Whom they did not believe.

Another fact must be remembered. The crown of life, eternal salvation will be granted not because of or by virtue of our works but alone by faith in Christ Jesus by the grace of God. Good works are done by Christians if they are Christians. Evil works cannot be done by Christians. But the good works will not save anyone. Only faith, and faith alone in Jesus Christ saves. Works, good works dare not be slighted. They are mentioned in our text for a good reason.

Let us not waste time. Let us practice our Christianity. Let us prove our faith both to the Lord and to the world. The last day is coming soon (according to Scripture) and we must be prepared. God grant that all of us be found properly prepared and that we may all appear before Christ as faithful stewards both in earthly life and spiritual life.

CHANT TO MY AUTO

(Apologies to "My Country 'Tis of Thee")

My auto, 'tis of thee, short cut to poverty, Of thee I chant.

I blew a pile of dough on you three years ago, Now you refuse to go—or won't or can't.

Through town and countryside, I drove thee full of pride, No charm you lacked.

I loved your gaudy hue, your cries so round and new; Now I feel mighty blue, the way you act.

To thee, old rattlebox, came many bumps and knocks, For thee I grieve.

Badly thy top is torn; frayed are thy seats and worn; The croup affects thy horn, I do believe.

Thy perfume swells the breeze, while good folks choke and sneeze As we pass by.

I paid for thee a price, 'twould buy a mansion twice; Now everyone yells "ice;" I wonder why.

Thy motor has the grip; thy spark plug has the pip, And woe is thine, I, too, have suffered chills, fatigue and kindred ills,

Trying to pay the bills since thou wert mine.

Gone is my bank roll now; no more 'twould choke a cow As once before.

Yet if I had the yen, so help me John-amen! I'd buy a car again and spend some more.

Texans are seeing Texas during CENTENNIAL YEAR!

Centennial year is not only an opportunity for Texas to be host to millions of visitors from other states, it's a year for Texans to travel Texas and know their own state! For real vacation pleasures Texas is unsurpassed anywhere. We have mountains, seashore, missions, foreign atmosphere, pine woods, gay night life in our metropolitan cities, historic places, unexcelled golf and fishing—every attraction you can find anywhere, right here in our own state. Millions of Texans are seeing the big exposition at Dallas, then driving on to various other parts of the state for other equally interesting Centennial Celebrations. The Texas Centennial is state-wide. See all of it that time permits. Read the calendar of interesting Centennial events at the right. Write the various chambers of commerce for complete information at cities you are interested in.

The Tree Crocodile

The customer proved most exacting and the clerk was growing impatient. "Now are you sure this is genuine crocodile skin?" the customer inquired, critically examining a handbag. "Quite sure, madam," was the reply. "You see, I know the man who shot that crocodile." "It looks rather dirty," remarked the customer. "Well, yes," replied the assistant, "that's where the animal struck the ground when it fell out of the tree."—The Automobilist.

GAS-MAKING STOVE COOKS MEAL FOR Amazing New Invention of Coleman Brings All the Modern Conveniences of City Gas to Homes Beyond the Gas Mains

Economically-minded housewives will share the enthusiasm of Mr. Coleman, inventive genius, for the new gas-making stove which cooks a meal for 2c or less. The new Coleman Range will do the family cooking at a cost below that of coal, wood or kerosene stoves, and do it quicker and better. This remarkable new Coleman Safety Range lights instantly like gas. Makes its own gas from ordinary lead-free gasoline, patented, fuel-saving Band-Aid Burners are easily regulated to act the heat desired for boiling, baking or broiling. Mr. Coleman uses Everdur for the fuel tank, a big safety feature. Everdur metal will not rust or corrode. In addition to providing a cooking advantage of the new gas range, Mr. Coleman's Safety Range adds beauty in the kitchen by distinctive styling and color effects in gleaming enamel finish. Readers of this paper will be served to the full information about the wonderful Coleman Ranges will be illustrated literature and a Stove Check Chart by writing a postcard to W. C. Coleman, Dept. WU-235, Wichita, Kansas.

Cardui During Middle Life
Women who are entering middle life will be interested in the experience of Mrs. L. C. McDonald, Paragould, Ark., who writes: "I am Cardui during change of life. I am so weak, so nervous, I could not go. I just dragged around. I had fainting spells and would just drop down. My back and head ached. I read of Cardui. I took about six bottles. It gave me relief and strength. I am now 60 years old and can do a pretty good day's work in the house and garden." Thousands of women testify Cardui's benefits. Advertisers report a good business in McLean last Saturday. That things are on the up and up is conceded by most everyone at this time.

There was never a man who made a success of his business but there were a dozen others who thought they could do the same thing.

There are more people nowadays who think it is smart to get by, but the world must still depend upon the man whose word is as good as his bond.

Discourtesy is the cause of most automobile accidents, outside of drunken driving, according to judges who try the cases growing out of such accidents. The application of the Golden Rule would cure a lot of the accidents.

Amarillo is the logical center of the Panhandle by virtue of being the biggest town, and knocking Amarillo for this fact, is futile effort. The growth of Amarillo only reflects the growth of the entire Panhandle and should reflect credit upon every other town in this section.

The city of Wellington published their financial statement last week, in which it is shown that the bonded indebtedness has been reduced the past year some $9,500.00. A feature of the report was an explanatory statement along with the statistics that should be appreciated by the taxpayers.

A double page advertisement in color in the Saturday Evening Post costs $18,500.00 for one week, yet such an advertisement would reach a very small fraction of the people in this community, while an advertisement in the home paper at a ridiculously low price will reach 85% of the local buyers.

The newspaper is the dominant advertising medium. Over one-half of the money spent for advertising in all forms is spent with the newspapers. Newspaper advertising is flexible and can be used at will by any merchant to his advantage, which a trial schedule will prove to the most pessimistic.

Chas. Armour Guy of the Lubbock dailies says that it makes an editor feel real good to be thanked for services rendered, once in a while.
You bet your boots. But it kinder galls one to go out to a play that you have given two or three columns of free advertising to, sometimes on the front page, and everybody is thanked and rethanked, but the paper is entirely forgotten, and perhaps it is rendered the greatest service in getting out a crowd—and the money—than any other individual mentioned. That incident happened right here in Brownfield not over three weeks ago.—Terry County Herald.

3 Reasons Why
You Should
BUILD WITH THE BONUS

YOUR FAMILY... will get that joy and satisfaction and pleasure of living that comes from the fullest possible measure only with a home of their own. Your wife and youngsters will sense that added security and independence that is rightfully theirs... the feeling that no matter what happens, they have a cozy, comfortable place to live.

YOUR COMMUNITY... will benefit
if you put your bonus money in a home.
It will mean work for carpenters—plumbers—electricians—etc.—business for building material dealers—a general aid to returning prosperity. With thousands of others doing the same, the stimulating effects would be felt over the country.

YOU, YOURSELF... will realize upon ful thought, that putting your bonus money into a home is the surest possible way you have of safeguarding the monetary value. All the time you are enjoying your home you realize that the VALUE is still there... instead of gradually seeping away.

S. S. LESSON

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

JESUS CRUCIFIED

Lesson text, Luke 23:33-46. Golden text, "God commendeth His love toward us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us." Romans 5:8.

In the close of the last lesson we left Jesus as He was being borne away by the mob to which He had been betrayed by the traitor, Judas Iscariot. That was after midnight. He then was taken back into Jerusalem where He underwent six trials and many insults and scourgings during the following six or eight hours.

Jesus was first taken before Annas, a former High Priest, who had made the bargain of betrayal with Judas. He was taken there first, of course, as proof of the arrest, that Judas might be paid off in full. From Annas He was taken before Caiaphas, the High Priest, at an irregular and informal meeting of the Sanhedrin. He was, of course, condemned. Yet it was necessary to have official condemnation, even from the Sanhedrin. Therefore, after daylight, the meeting was resumed and more false witness produced against the Master. He was condemned, but the body did not have the right of execution. It was therefore necessary to take the case before the government officials.

At the earliest possible moment Jesus was taken before the Roman governor, Pilate, and accused of rebelling the Jews to pay tribute to the Roman government, and of calling Himself king. Pilate could find no fault in the man but since He was called a Galilean, he sent Him to Herod Antipas the Tetrarch of Galilee, who was in Jerusalem at the time. Herod could find nothing for which to condemn Jesus, and sent Him back to Pilate.

While Pilate could find no fault in Jesus, he was anxious to keep the Jewish people pacified. They were a difficult people to handle, and this particular man seemed to have stirred them to depths of feeling not usually manifest. Therefore he asked them to choose between Jesus and a desperado who had been captured. They chose to free the desperado. Pilate then turned Jesus over to them to do with as they pleased. They chose to crucify Him. Jesus was worn with sleeplessness, anxiety and torture. He was unable to bear the cross. Simon, a Cyrenian, was picked from the crowd to bear the implement of torture. The three, Jesus and two thieves, were nailed to the crosses and the crosses dropped into holes in the rocks of Golgotha. All this had taken place by nine o'clock in the morning. The crowd taunted Jesus, one thief deriding Him. The other thief asked for mercy, and Jesus had time to stop dying long enough to speak the saying words that only God can speak. The sun hid its face, the veil of the temple rent in twain, and God the Father turned away. Jesus, who was God, died with the sins of all men upon Him. And before sundown He had been hastily removed from the cross, wrapped in spices and laid in the newly hewn grave of Joseph.

Note this statement of Dr. Moore: "All that the four Gospels tell us of Christ on the cross may be grouped around seven points: the one submission wherein He endured the cross; the two malefactors, the one penitent, the other impenitent; the tree inscriptions, Latin Greek and Hebrew; the four challenges of His word and work, title and trust; the five fulfillments, including His crucifixion with robbers, the disposition of His raiment, His cry of thirst, the fact that no bone was broken and that His side was pierced; the six testimonies from Pilate the thief, the sun, the centurian, the disciples and the multitude; and the seven sayings which include the voice of prayer for His enemies, of protection to His mother, of promise to the penitent thief, of spiritual loneliness before God, of intense physical agony, and at last the shout of triumph followed by the tranquil surrender of His spirit to the Father." The above is a very concise yet accurate statement concerning the entire historical fact of the crucifixion of Jesus as recorded by the four sacred writers.

Two things we might call attention to: first, too many in the world are like the mob. They definitely choose the wrong. They choose against Jesus. He has been kind and patient, yet they are satisfied that He was crucified without accepting the offer He makes through that crucifixion; second, too many of His followers are too much like Pilate. We are weak and vassalating. The world can treat our Savior as it pleases and we are satisfied to wash our hands of it. We need to learn to stand up like men for Jesus and what is right.

GARDEN BLIGHTS

Gardening, I told myself, is the most sociable of hobbies. The very nature of one's field of activities demands an audience. No one wants flowers to blush unseen or waste their sweetness. This was what I thought until last week.

Last week I worked hard, weeding, setting out new plants, dividing old ones. When at last I arose from my muddy knees, I felt elated, though weary, and eager to display the fruits of my labors. My first hope was an old friend who dropped in for tea. I restrained my impatience until she had been properly fed. Then I led her forth.

"Oh, yes," she cried, "I'd love to see your garden. I'm so fond of flowers."

As we neared the scene of my triumphs, and I was slowing down to begin my introductory speech, she tucked her arm in mine and said, "I'm so glad to have a chance to chat with you alone. We have so many, many weeks to catch up."

"Yes, indeed," I said vaguely. "Now here is the entrance, you see. I'm very proud of my iris. I planted these clumps myself so that I have three months of continuous bloom."

"How nice," she said. "Have you heard from Ann lately?"

"No," I said, thinking to block that detour. It was the wrong answer.

"Well, I have," said my guest, firmly planting her foot on my favorite sedum. "She's been to a psychoanalyst and has a new ego—not a very nice one, if you ask me." Nothing would have induced me to ask her, but that made no difference. I learned all about Ann's ego.

"We'll stay here by these clumps of iris until she looks at them," I thought, but I finally took pity on the sedum and led her on. Ann's ego absorbed her until I had passed the peonies, about which I was bursting to talk. At last she paused for breath.

"You must notice my Scotch broom," I said hastily. "It's very rare in this country."

"Did you know the Scotts were getting a divorce?" she asked. This time I knew better than to say no.

"Yes," I said, concealing my surprise. "I heard all about it." But it didn't work, either.

"Oh, you did?" she said. "I doubt if you know the whole truth. Few people do." The whole truth carried us past my violas, my prize lupins, my rare old pinks. The only interruption was when she fell over the watering pot.

"I didn't see it," she explained.

"No," I said coldly, "you weren't looking."

It was several days before I recovered from this interview. I chose my next visitor more carefully. She was a real gardener, deeply interested in gardens, and she approached me as eagerly as I did.

"The hedge," I explained, "has not recovered from the terrible winter of 1934. It died right down to the ground."

"Don't talk to me about the winter of '34," she cried. "Do you know that I lost two box bushes that were a hundred years old, and that lovely Dr. Van Fleet rose that I planted myself in 1920?"

My soul began to expand. "They are so perfect," she went on, "I think they ought to be where they would show off more. Couldn't you put them over there with the stone wall for a background?"

"The peonies are there now," I protested. "I set those all out myself. You have no idea what a job it was digging up the old roots and dividing them."

"Well, if I were you," she said, "I'd put the peonies over here."

"Yes," I said doubtfully, "but these lupins took five years to grow, and they don't move well once they're established."

"Oh, my dear," she said, "that's what the books tell you, but don't you believe it. You can move anything if you do it carefully. Speaking of moving," she went on, "I'm not sure I wouldn't move that hedge. It seems to me it would be more effective if you set it back about three feet."

"Next year," I said, "I'm going to have a new hedge, a very tall one, made entirely of thorns."—The Atlantic Monthly.

Lovely Lace Makes Lovely Brides

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

COMES now fashion's big moment to play up romance and the picturesque for the June bride-to-be is calling, calling for lovely gowns for herself and her attendants that shall group into a "perfect picture" on her wedding day.

What bride is not a "vision of loveliness"? Her gown is so carefully selected and fitted, her veil is made just so—to tune perfectly to her individuality, to drape correctly, at the same time beguilingly over the head and down while the train must hang in just the right proportion and line with the dress.

Many a spring bride this 1936 found the expression of her dream of a vision of loveliness in a lace gown, and veil. With its importance in the current fashion picture generally it but follows in the natural sequence of events that lace should become first choice with brides. Now that the early brides have demonstrated how really lovely lace is for the wedding gown, June and midsummer brides-to-be have taken their cue and are enthusiastically planning their trousseaux in terms of beautiful lace.

Not only does the lace gown in itself enhance feminine charm to the utmost but lace for the bride brings up the splendor and richness of former periods, when lace played so important a part in the costumes of historical and royal brides. The fact of the lure of lace for brides was dramatically brought out in a "Bride-of-Two-Centuries" showing recently held in New York, in which fifteen period bridal gowns copied from those worn by eminent ladies in the last two hundred years was the feature. This show was topped by the modern party, done entirely in lace, in shades of azalea pink.

Which brings us to a very important subject—that of the fashion approval of color for the bride instead of the traditional all-white. A modern bride may wear lovely blush pink or ice blue or any tone or tint of her fancy.

One of the attractions of a "lace wedding" is that lace offers every opportunity to work out fascinating color schemes, for this existing flair for lace is not exclusive with the bride but the theme is carried out for bridesmaids as well. One of the newest gestures is that of lace dresses, with cunning lace capes for each bridesmaid.

Brides, too, are looking into the future in the selection of the wedding gown, having in mind a dress that may be worn later to social events. This feature is admirably interpreted in the very chic and lovely gown in the illustration. Since the full long train is detachable at the waist, the dress alone becomes perfect for the cocktail or dinner hour. The sweep of the train, and the smooth silhouette of the gown cut on true princess lines are the more lovely because of the lace of fine alençon of which this bridal gown is designed. The dress with its narrow waist and tailored neckline, buttons all the way down the front. Tulle is used for the veil which falls in a beguiling drape over the face and hangs quite long at the back.

The bride in the foreground chooses exquisite chintilly lace for her gown. It bespeaks an elegance of simplicity in every detail. The effective arrangement of the tulle veil adds greatly to the glory of the "picture."

HER SMART COAT,

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

English tailoring in suits and coats down-up ladies of fashion has its in boyish tailoring for the younger from toddlers to teen-agers. The little girl here pictured in the best-dressed flannel coat is ready to be out in the park, in a coat her brother would envy. Broad lapels, wide notched collar are becoming, slightly at the waist for chic that is roomy and comfortable. Six bone buttons, masculine and substantial, trim the high double-breasted. This little model is the very one to buy for them.

Laboratory to Study Soy Bean

Seek New Varieties for Many Industrial Uses.

A co-operative industrial research laboratory has been set up at the University of Illinois to study the soy bean crop. Dr. E. O. May has been named the director. Breeding work is under the direction of W. J. Morse of the bureau of plant industry.

Three immediate objectives of the new laboratory are: Improvement of present industrial uses for soy beans; more facts on the effects of different processes on the quality and quantity of soy bean products; and facilities for testing different varieties as to adaptability for industrial use. On experimental plots nearby, plant breeders hope to grow new varieties even better suited to industrial demands.

Soy bean acreage rose from 2,000,000 acres in 1924 to nearly 5,000,000 last year. Production of the beans themselves increased from 5,000,000 bushels to 40,000,000 bushels. Reasons for this increase—in addition to the demand for beans for food, feed and industrial uses—are immunity of soy to chinch bugs and other pests, good prices compared with other grain crops, drought resistance and high seed yield.

Soy beans are used in making industrial and food products such as paint, enamel, varnish, glue, printing ink, rubber substitutes, linoleum, insecticides, plastics, glycerin, flour, soy sauce, breakfast food, candies, roasted beans with a nut-like flavor, live stock feeds, and so on. Lecithin is a valuable product of soy bean oil used in the manufacture of candies, chocolate, margarine, medicines, in textile dyeing and as an emulsifier.

A question the new laboratory will study is why the same soy varieties growing under varying soil and climatic conditions show a range of 12 to 26 per cent in oil and 28 to 54 per cent in protein. For paints, varieties having an oil high in "iodine number" are desirable. For food purposes an oil low in "iodine number" is better.

This laboratory is being established under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones act of June 29, 1935, which provides for establishing by the Department of Agriculture of a limited number of specialized laboratories in the major agricultural regions.

Use Safety Pens for Handling Young Bulls

Never slaughter a high grade young bull just because he has an ugly disposition. The indiscriminate slaughtering of young bulls is a great hindrance to herd improvement in this state," says John A. Arey, extension dairyman at North Carolina State college.

When a bull has been found to have the ability to transmit good type and high milk producing capacity to his daughters, Arey added, he is a proven asset to the herd. The life of these bulls, which take the guesswork out of breeding, should be prolonged as long as they are active.

A dairy bull can be handled safely, and his period of usefulness extended, by keeping him in a safety bull pen. Such a pen can be built by any dairyman at low cost from materials usually found around a farm, he added.

"A wider use of safety bull pens would not only make possible more rapid progress in herd improvement," Arey declared, "but at the same time would protect the care-takers from ugly bulls. No matter how tame a bull may appear to be, there is no way of telling when he may suddenly turn on his handlers."

Oats as Feed

Oats are not so high in fattening properties as corn. However, oats are very desirable as part of the grain ration, especially for breeding animals and growing young stock, says the Rural New Yorker. On a strictly nutritive basis oats contain an average of about 16 per cent less starch and sugar, or as the chemist calls them, carbohydrates; about 1 per cent more crude protein than corn. On the average oats contain about 15 per cent less total digestible nutrients than corn. Corn contains an average of about 1.74 pounds of total digestible nutrients per ton and oats an average of 1.408 pounds.

Cow Always at Work

"Contented cows" are lazy-looking critters. All they have to do, seemingly, is eat, sleep, and chew their cud, yet enviable as their lives may appear to be, they are one of the hardest working animals on the farm. Night and day their bodies are working to produce milk, the secretion of which requires a steady drain of food from the blood stream. If well fed, nutrients are taken from the digestive tract by the blood, but if undernourished the cow produces milk at the expense of her body as a result.

Use of Buckwheat

Very little experimental work has apparently been done on the use of buckwheat for hay. This plant is very high in fiber and unless cut quite green makes very coarse fodder. It has also been claimed that, fed alone, it sometimes causes digestive disturbances and has been known to bring out an itchy rash on the light-colored skin of animals. Buckwheat does its best work as a weed-killing crop or to plow under to add humus. Only small amounts are harvested as grain.

Washington's Letter on Spy's Expenses Sells for $2,000

Back in Revolutionary war times, George Washington wrote a letter to one of his commanders, General Talmadge, telling him that it would be difficult to raise $250 for expenses of an American spy, Enoch Crosby. This spy is believed to have been the original in James Fenimore Cooper's book, "The Spy."

It was hard to raise the $250 needed for spying purposes in those perilous days, but the letter Washington wrote about it brought $2,000 in a sale in Philadelphia recently. It had been a part of the collection of the late Charles T. Jeffery, Merion Station, Pa.—Wall Street Journal.

"Morning sickness"—is caused by an acid condition. To avoid it, acid must be offset by alkalis—such as magnesia.

Why Physicians Recommend Milnesia Wafers

These mint-flavored, candy-like wafers are pure milk of magnesia in solid form—the most pleasant way to take it. Each wafer is approximately equal to a full adult dose of liquid milk of magnesia. Cleaved thoroughly, then swallowed, they correct acidity in the mouth and throughout the digestive system and insure quick, complete elimination of the waste matters that cause gas, headaches, bloated feelings and a dozen other discomforts.

Milnesia Wafers come in bottles of 20 and 48, at 35c and 60c respectively, and in convenient tins for your handbag containing 12 at 20c. Each wafer is approximately one adult dose of milk of magnesia. All good drug stores sell and recommend them.

THE New Firestone HIGH SPEED TIRE for 1936

AVOID accidents — take no chances — buy your tires on Proof of Performance. Make sure that you and your family will be safe! Skidding, blowouts and punctures caused more than 37,000 accidents last year. Many of these accidents could have been avoided with safe tires.

The new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1936 is the safest driving equipment you can buy. Here is your proof:

PROOF OF GREATEST NON-SKID SAFETY
A leading university made 2,350 tire tests and found that the new scientifically designed Firestone High Speed tread stops a car up to 25% quicker than other tires.

PROOF OF GREATEST BLOWOUT PROTECTION
Every year, since Firestone developed the Gum-Dipped Balloon tire, Firestone Tires have been on the winning cars in the gruelling blowout test of the Indianapolis 500-Mile Race.

PROOF OF GREATEST ECONOMY
The new Firestone High Speed Tire for 1936 gives up to 50% longer non-skid mileage. This is proved by the fact that the world's largest transportation companies, such as Greyhound, to whom safety and tire economy means business efficiency, use Firestone Tires. This is further proof that they are the safest tires ever built.

MERCHANTS "BREAK" ON INSIDE—NOT OUT

When a merchant announces that he has "gone broke," he makes a plain statement of fact. He may have done so, but he did it himself in at least 90% of the cases we hear about. Merchants break from the inside.

This is due to management rather than condition. Take for instance, our present highway situation. It is true that more people make purchases in the larger town than ever before. The small town merchant who maintains the old attitude of "take it or leave it," is a goner in the mad rush of 1936.

If he stocks greater variety, in small quantity, and is willing to push his business and be content with smaller profit, he has little to fear. At least for the present. This idea is being proven every day.

Ladies who can find the latest shoe styles in their home town, buy. She is just as particular about her hat and dresses. She can't be fooled any more than her city sister. She keeps up with the times, knows what she wants, and what's more, she knows what she should pay for it.

Let us not forget that the big town merchant is using more and more newspaper space to tell the public about his business, what he has to offer, and the prices they will have to pay when they look at it.

Human nature is the same in folks whether they live in a small town, large town or in the rural districts. A study of the tactics of the successful merchant in either place, is a valuable lesson to any man in business of any kind.—Donley County Leader.

BUT DAD HAS HIS DOUBTS

Dad—Is the teacher satisfied with you?

Johnny—Oh, quite.

Dad—Did he tell you so?

Johnny—Yes, after a close examination he said to me the other day: "If all my scholars were like you, I would shut up my school this very day." That shows that I know enough.

A feller says that it's all right to pay as we go in the depression. 'Nother feller wanted to know if we're goin' anywhere.

ANALYSIS AND APPRECIATION

With this, that and the other thing given recognition by a week specially designated or dedicated to it, we feel that at least a few paragraphs can be offered at least once in a great many years, concerning the home town newspapers.

Call it newspaper appreciation week, if you will, or whatever, but stop to think what the home town paper means to you and your community. Though the newspaper's story is generally the same, each publication has its individual style, trend and characteristic make-up.

Consider this paper. Week after week, year after year, it comes to the home as a daily messenger, bringing you news of the town, the personal items, church, school, fraternal, political and industrial activities; telling you of happy weddings, babies born, the Grim Reaper's call.

Analyze your home town paper some time, don't "just read it." The first page is the "front window," generally well-dressed, and with a variety of attractions.

Then there is the editorial page with its many separate and distinct features. There's the News About Town column of personal paragraphs. The merchants themselves have their various departments in which, day after day, they make contact with the reading public. This is an important feature of any newspaper, and of inestimable value to the merchant, the reader, and the paper. There is a lot of personality in it for each advertisement is an expression of the man or business it represents.

The classified page is likewise a feature, far more than advertising alone. There can be read romance and tragedy, unhappiness and sorrow, failure and success, fortune, progress—in fact, it is a barometer of the times.

And so we could go on. But we asked you to make the analysis, and with that thought still in mind, will "sign off."—Southbridge (Mass.) News.

A contemporary claims that the average span of human life has lengthened. It looked that way for a while, but we think the automobile has taken up all the slack.

The outlawed NRA cost the taxpayers $25,057,164.

THE FARMER'S ADVENTURE

Every spring the farmers risk a bold and daring adventure. They put their seed into the ground, they devote unceasing labor and much money to cultivating it. Will they get any return?

In less enterprising countries, such people will plant only what they can utilize themselves. The American farmer is a business man who wants to take greater chances. So he sweats and pours out his money into the soil, and hopes for a just reward.

This act of faith has produced such abundant gains that the country is worried today, not because not enough is produced, but because too much is grown. The farmer's bed is not one of roses. If he grows too little, his product is too small to support his family, while if he grows too much, the product is almost given away.

What the American farmer needs is the stopping of the importation of millions of dollars worth of agricultural products from other countries as now is being done. When from ten to twenty millions of people starve to death in a single year as has been the case in two or three countries, it would not appear that there could be any such thing as over-production. It would seem to a country editor that there is something wrong with a civilization that is not able to figure out proper and equitable distribution of food stuff.—Lowell (Mich.) Ledger.

A controversy over who possesses the horns of the cow used by Dr. Jenner in his experiments which led to the discovery of vaccination for smallpox is still going on. If the various claimants are to be believed, at least five of the aforesaid cow's horns have been located.

"In Assam, a girl does all the proposing. After the marriage, the husband lives with his wife's people." American custom differs in that the boy does the proposing.

Oscar Rogers, 83, retired fisherman of Orleans, Mass., claims he sleeps with his eyes open and says they haven't been closed since he was born.

The power of the sun to cause sunburn is six times as great in summer as in winter, according to Dr. Landsberg of Pennsylvania State College.

Strayed, last week—black Shetland pony. Reward. Oil and Gas Co., McLean.

NEARER THE NEWS

A stout actor was late one morning and the party annoyed. He said: "I know where Blank is!"

"Yes," said one of them. "He's gone to the tailor for a suit."

"Measured!" shouted the other. "You mean surveyed, didn't you?"

AND WHAT HE DID

Auctioneer—What an auctioneer! This beautiful bust of Benjamin Franklin was sold at the auction. Can in Crowd—That's that! Shakespeare. Auctioneer—Well, folks, on me. That shows that about the Bible.

People go to war to see if it is right, but the only thing out is who is left.
