Supt. Cryer of the McLean schools is to be congratulated in that he has never scheduled any games or major school activities on Wednesday nights.

It is a strange thing that anyone would confuse the United States chamber of commerce with any local body. The so-called national body has no control over the local body, and the McLean chamber of commerce has no affiliation of any kind with the U. S. C. of C.

Anyone who writes for this paper may have his articles printed just as they are written, even to misspelled words and grammatical mistakes, if necessary, provided he signs the articles and makes such a request. Otherwise, we reserve the right to edit all articles and make them conform to the accepted style of the paper.

We must say again that this paper makes a charge for publicity of all kinds where an admission price is charged. In other words, if you would charge the editor for admission, we must of necessity make a charge for publicity.

There are many good and worthy causes that the home paper would be glad to give all the advertising needed, but such a practice would have no end, and we must charge for some things if we are to continue to publish a paper.

S. S. LESSON

PETER TEACHES GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Lesson text, 1 Peter 2:11-17; 4:1-5. Golden text, Romans 13:10, "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law."

First, Peter was written to the Christian people in Asia Minor during the time of Nero's unspeakable persecution of the Christians of Rome and the provinces of his country. The followers of Christ in and about Rome felt the greatest sting of the governmental whip. Thousands of the faithful died for Christ. Many of them were driven into the arena with wild beasts, thousands of others were tied to the posts in Nero's gardens, covered with pitch, and set afire to give light while the select ones of the Neorean choice made merry in their wild and vulgar revelry. Many of the Christians to whom Peter wrote were suffering similar persecutions. Many of them were dying rather than deny their faith in their Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

With all of this in mind Peter was inspired to write his letter of encouragement to the people of Asia Minor. He reminds them that after all they are only sojourners and pilgrims in a land from which they shall pass in the end to a great reward and eternal happiness. For this reason they were to abstain from the things of fleshly lusts that they might be good citizens. Regardless of the persecution the government was perpetrating upon them, they were to be obedient and faithful in so far as was possible for them to be. There was a limit to the demands that they were to meet. Their first duty was to God. They first belonged to His spiritual kingdom. Then in so far as was possible they were to be obedient citizens.

Such action on their part would cause further persecution. But that would have to be borne. They were to withdraw themselves from the people that indulged their desires in the excesses of pleasure and who walked in "lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquets and amiable adulteries." This meant that they would be talked about, and persecuted. But they had to make their answer for their lives and living to Christ who would judge the quick and the dead, and only such living and witnessing for Christ would be an acceptable answer.

We must remember that the words of this Book are inspired by God. He knew the circumstances of the extremely severe persecution, and yet in the fact of that He had His servant to write such admonition to His people. Could anyone suppose that if God sent this Word to His suffering in Asia Minor, He would be any less severe in a message to us today? Christians in these prosperous times excuse themselves on the grounds of their many flimsy pretexts for failing to live a sincere Christian life. What will be their answer to Him that judges the quick and the dead? God does not expect less of us today than He did of the brethren in days ago. In fact, we have a greater opportunity and He expects more. We are giving less—far less from the standpoint of sacrifice than they; what will be His condemnation?

It seems that in applying this lesson to our own lives, it might say first to us that we are to be influential witnesses to the power of Christianity. This witness will be in the form of a good life—a life that places Jesus first. Jesus is not first in the Christian world today! Business, politics, success, money, power, pleasure, find a warmer place in the heart of Christianity as a whole today than Jesus does. There are individuals—many of whom this is not true; but it is true of Christianity as a whole. It might surprise many to know that there are more licensed saloons in the United States today than there were before the enactment of the prohibition amendment. This is because there is something dearer to Christianity as a whole today than Jesus. Again, it is hard to say, but the average Christian spends more time each week in personal pleasure and entertainment than he does in church service attendance, reading his Bible, and in prayer. This does not prove to a lost world that there is much power in the light, life and love of the Christian religion.

Another test is that Christians ought to be the best citizens the nation has. It seems that it is likely that on the whole this thing is true today. The failure of our Christian citizenry is not in the actual commitment of crime, but in the neglect of the Christian's duty as a citizen at the polls. Christian citizenship could change the aspect of our national outlook over a very few election periods, if they would. The difficulty is that too many are afraid to be outspoken of Christ at this point, for fear it might hurt their influence or business.

Another need is the willingness to sacrifice for Christ. Someone has said that suffering for Christ's sake is the highest test of a genuine Christian experience. Not many of us have reached that test in our experience. The lures of modern pleasures and indulgences—may it be said in shame—have touched the lives of more of us than has sacrifice for the sake of Christ. We have taken our pleasure and then suffered at the hands of less earnest Christians. Most of us have been growling at the depression and government, rather than bearing it for the sake of Christ and because of it become better Christians.

Vol. 2. No. 6
Text: "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of Me and of My words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels."—Mark 8:38.

ASHAMED OF JESUS?

Two things are necessary for personal mission work: KNOWING and DOING.

It is an important requirement for a Christian to know his personal Savior from sin, to be well acquainted with Him, to love Him above all things, to fear Him and trust Him above all else, to have confidence in Him Who is the Rock of Ages, the only consolation in our present era of strife, discontent and misunderstanding. A Christian must believe in Christ, otherwise he cannot be called a Christian. He must believe that His holy Word is powerful, yes, "the power of God unto salvation to everyone that believeth." Rom. 1:16. Only then can a Christian do mission work when he is first convinced of this himself.

However, some Christians believe but are often ashamed to confess Christ publicly.

If a Christian believes privately but not publicly, then something is wrong with his Christianity. Mission work is done by confessing Christ with word and work. We must publish the "glad tidings," the Gospel of Jesus Christ; we must tell others of it and also show the public that we are not ashamed of Him Who died for us that we poor sinners might live.

It is true that we are living in a sinful and perverted world. That is just why Christ came visibly into the world: to save sinners from damnation. That is why it is our duty to profess Christ and not be ashamed of Him.

If we are ashamed of Christ, then He too, will be ashamed of us on the last day when He will make His second visible advent. Of this Christ clearly speaks in the Gospel according to St. Mark: "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of Me and of My words in this sinful and adulterous generation, of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when He cometh in the glory of His Father with the holy angels."

It is important to KNOW. But that is not where a Christian may stop. He must also DO. Knowing and doing are the two important requisites for personal mission work. We must first know the Gospel and then preach it, publish it, disseminate and scatter it among all nations. Can a true Christian afford to be ashamed of Jesus? No, never! A genuine Christian is always true to his Christian confession; never ashamed of His Lord and Savior. At all times he seeks opportunities to tell others of Jesus so that they also may believe in Him and be saved.

"Jesus, and shall it ever be, A mortal man ashamed of Thee? Ashamed of Thee, whom angels praise, Whose glories shine through endless days?"

"Ashamed of Jesus! That dear Friend On Whom my hopes of heaven depend! No; when I blush, be this my shame, That I no more revere His name."

"Ashamed of Jesus! Yes, I may, When I've no guilt to wash away, No tear to wipe, no good to crave,

No fears to quell, no soul to save. 'Till then—nor is my boasting vain— Till then I boast a Savior slain; And oh, may this my glory be, That Christ is not ashamed of me!"

The "liquid test"
... It ENDS bowel worries for many people

This is a test that tells you whether the system needs a cathartic change. If you have constant sluggish spells or bilious attacks, and laxatives seem to make things worse, it would be wise to try this:

Stop all use of any laxative that does not encourage variation from a "fixed dose" (which may be entirely too large a dose for your individual need). Use instead, a liquid laxative that you can measure and regulate as to dose. As necessary to repeat, take smaller doses, less and less often, until the bowels are moving without any help at all.

Doctors use liquid laxatives, and a properly prepared liquid laxative, containing natural laxative agents like senna and cascara is a joy and a comfort; a real help in establishing regularity. Ask your doctor about this! (Doctors use liquid laxatives.) You can get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a most dependable liquid laxative, at any drug store.

FORD PRESENTS ANOTHER ADVANCE IN TRUCK ENGINEERING

Forward Load Distribution

Obtained by mounting front springs ahead of axle and moving V-8 engine forward. This places more load ahead of rear axle, more weight on front end.

THE important fact to remember about the new Ford V-8 Truck for 1935 is not merely that it gives you new money-saving features—but that these features have been added to a truck whose economy, performance, stamina have already been proved.

For 1935, Ford gives you an entirely new development—Forward Load Distribution. This makes possible more uniform tire and brake wear—better brake action—improved operation and wear throughout the truck. In addition, with more space between the cab and rear axle, the 1935 Ford V-8 permits acute angle turns with full-width semi-trailers.

No matter how efficiently you are now doing your hauling, these and the other features of the 1935 Ford V-8 are important advantages to consider. They are matched by no other truck in America today, regardless of price.

Test this new Ford V-8 Truck yourself. Your nearest Ford dealer will let you do this... on your own job, under your own load, with your own driver!

"KEEPING UP WITH THE JONESES"

THE STORY

Mary Brown, daughter of David Brown, self-made multi-millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," determines to make her way in life, discarding her father's wealth, and her own. She has a million dollars, legacy from her mother, which she insists her father invest in the "wildest dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate of a college of engineering. Her father, secretly admiring her courage, humors her.

As "M" Brown, Mary secures a job on the Paradise Valley project, near the village of Foggy Gulch. She antagonizes Hank Johnson, wealthy and eccentric citizen, by suggesting that he build a gymnasium and swimming pool for the little town.

In an accident, Mary, at the risk of her life, saves a valuable instrument, and, through the accident, is drawn closer to Craig. She discovers that she has misjudged John Stark, and that he is really her friend and well wisher.

Mary learns, inadvertently, that it is her money which is financing the Paradise Valley Project, her father having loaned it to Craig for the "wild dream" she had insisted it must be.

Craig declares his love for Mary, and together they dedicate an old log cabin, naming it "Hope of Heaven."

After a period of what seems to be the pinnacle of success there are days of uneasy rumors, when apprehension fills the air. "Handwriting on the wall," diagnosed the engineers.

One evening at a ball by which the rich girl from the train christened the fifty-thousand-dollar house on her estate, Mary pleaded fatigue, and asked Craig to take her home early. She had to talk to him.

"What's the matter, Denis?"

"You mean," with his ineradicable smile, "what's behind these most recent allegations that I'm a crook, de luxe?"

"I mean—what's behind the new little lines around your eyes, and the tiredness in them, the lines under them that tell on you—of insomnia! What's rocking your boat, Denis?"

"Primarily, the European war. With the upset to stability and the fear that we may become involved, payments are not coming in. Added to that, our expenses of maintenance are out of proportion to the size of our community. We still have enormous development costs to meet; our payroll is twenty thousand dollars a month. There is the interest to be met on the borrowed money with which I bought the ranch."

"Borrowed?" Mary couldn't help it. She had to ask the outright question. "I thought your million was given to you by—by some conscienceless nut—"

He looked at her quickly. "I didn't say that, did I?"

"I—I was thinking you did."

"As a matter of fact," he explained in a somewhat puzzled tone, "I might have had the money gratis; though I could swear I never mentioned it to a soul. I couldn't accept it, of course, except as a loan. What fun would there be in the game—if I had a million?"

"That's exactly what I thought!" It escaped involuntarily as a great wave of exuberance swept Mary. Money wasn't Denny's god!

"What do you mean?" he demanded.

"I mean," she tried to extricate herself with frank truthfulness, "that we have another slant on life in common, Denny. But, you see, I couldn't understand what was making it so hard for you, thinking you had such a generous stake—"

"But you've heard me worry about my payments."

"I—hadn't figured things out. I—never gave much thought to money matters, Denny."

"You wouldn't doubt me, would you, lady?" he teased.

She slipped a hand under his on the wheel. She believed him. Dear God! She believed him! She didn't even need corroboration from her father.

A few moments later she asked, "Can't you get more time on your payments?"

"I have, Mr. Brown has been more than generous. But there are still the payrolls to meet—with ever-dwindling income, and, so far as I can judge, no chance of a pick-up of economic conditions perhaps for years. But," with his never-failing optimism, "it'll come out all right eventually."

Mary suggested mischievously, "I'm sure our hostess of tonight would be glad to help you, Denny."

"I wish I could flatter myself that there was jealousy in your heart, young lady! Could I put it there by telling you that I'm sure she'd come to my rescue?"

"I shall not."

"Why?"

"I don't want a million with a girl attached."

"Or vice versa?" asked Mary cryptically.

"Vice versa goes, too," his eyes meeting hers ardently.

A cold little shiver swept Mary. He would be like that. She could take a million dollars' worth of worry off Denny's shoulders right now—by just calling the project ours! He need not worry about payments, nor interest. What if she should suggest it?

How Denny would run! There was nothing for her to do but wait until he had won out. Years, perhaps, she must pretend just to drift, if she didn't want to lose him altogether!

He alighted and opened the door for her.

"Mary, these are hard days for me. But I glory in them! And do you know what gives me courage to go on?"

His face in the moonlight, was exalted, transported.

"What, Denny?"

"Your faith in me, Mary!"

"Oh!"

"You don't know you have it, sweet. But it's there. I see it in your eyes, in your smile, in the lift of your shining head! That's what gives zest to the battle. Fighting it—for you!"

His words, his attitude, making the golden wall between them more un-surmountable! With a little cry Mary reached up and drew his face down to her, pressed her cheek against it for a moment, and ran inside.

A week later the engineers of the Paradise Valley project arrived at their offices one morning to find a pink slip upon each desk.

A pink slip. The official notice of dismissal!

The project, then, had gone "floopy!" All work was suspended. The beautiful dream had petered out, according to prophecy.

CHAPTER 12

Good-by to Paradise Valley

The bottom had dropped out of the world. The engineers looked at each other. Some shrugged. Some protested. Some doubted their own eyes. Mary Brown dug her nails into the palms of her clenched hands. Denis couldn't fall like this—couldn't fall—

And then Denis was there among them. Not Denis the dreamer, Denis the hard-headed business man. He was very white, very resolute, very determined. Now he was telling them tersely, in substance, what he had previously told Mary, adding:

"We're down, but never out. I will finish this thing if it finishes me. My only way out now is the bonding plan, which merely means the borrowing of a large sum of money to carry us on, the bonds to be paid off as delayed payments from purchasers come in. I'm fighting to put over this issue—leaving immediately for my third session with the corporations commission."

"In the meantime, these pink slips are dismissals only if you wish to consider them so. Call them suspensions, if you like. Stay here, if you can, and if work opens up again," he corrected himself, "when work opens up again, the jobs are yours. But there isn't a cent at present for engineers' salaries."

"However, there are a few jobs of maintenance that must go on. There must be night watchmen, janitors, et cetera. If any of you feel it not beneath your dignity to do such things temporarily, there will be laborers' wages."

Hilton Dorsey spoke. "There are details of engineering which must be looked after, Mr. Craig."

"They can't be looked after, Hilt. Not for a while."

Casualty, but with finality, Hilt said then, "I'm still seeing to them, Denny."

"There won't be any salary available, perhaps for months."

Hilt's nice boyish grin widened. His eyes warmed with affection "I guess I can worry along a while, Denny."

That touched, spiritual look, which Mary before had seen aroused by beauty, suffused Denis Craig's face. He made no reply.

"Guess there won't be any danger of the Greeks going unherded, nor of buildings being carried off in the night, Craig," said Jim Moore.

Others spoke up similarly, and Denis Craig, the eloquent, the spell-binder, opened his lips, closed them, opened them again to utter something that had to do with "thank-ing" and "loyalty," and hurried from the room.

Mary Brown had stood among the others, silent, trying rather unsuccessfully to keep her heart-sickness from her eyes. The bottom may have dropped out of the world for the rest of the engineers: for her it had dropped out of heaven. How long would it be now?

Her busser sounded. She was summoned to Denis Craig's office.

Denis stood in the center of the room, looking not at all beaten. Looking like a Nordic god!

"Darling, you can't go away from here! Can't you be mad with me now? Overwhelmingly, gloriously mad? Can't you shut your eyes to reason and orthodoxy—and marry me today? Go up to the city with me—and marry me?"

"Denny! To do that thing! To marry him today, just as Mary Brown letting him discover the bally millions when she was his wife—his wife—

why not? Why not?"

Mary shut her eyes against the sweet vision.

"That would be madness, Denny!" she said tightly. It would, wouldn't it, to give the world a chance to say that the promoter had got out of a hole by marrying a rich girl?

"Wonderful madness. We'd move out to Hope of Heaven. And, honey, there are berries on the hills, and game in the canyon to live upon. And the proverbial love—"

"Denny, don't!" How could she hold out against him?

"I can't do it, Denny!" Mary cried doggedly.

He looked at her keenly. "Why not?"

"I—I can't tell you."

His eyes narrowed. For a moment there was almost a cynical curve to his lips, almost disillusionment in his eyes.

"I—I thought we had the same slant on life, Mary."

"There—might be a difference, a little difference," she faltered. Just the difference in slant on a mere million dollars—if that million belonged to Mary Brown.

Next week—Mary decides to leave the project in favor of one more needful of the position.

MYSTERIOUS WORDS—on a Slip of Paper

Often the first step toward getting well is the prescription your doctor writes for you—mysterious words, useless to you until the pharmacist translates them into medicine.

But sickness consults neither the calendar nor the clock before it strikes. It is likely to come late at night, or in the hours of early morning—and your doctor, called in the emergency, might order a much-needed medicine compounded immediately.

Your pharmacist stands ready. He keeps his lights burning after other stores have darkened theirs—and even after he has gone to bed, following a long and hard day, a phone call brings him promptly to his prescription counter. Sundays, holidays, into the night—at all times and at any time, he is ready to fill, with microscopic accuracy, a prescription on which a human life may depend.

To fathom the cause of cancer we must plumb the depths of infinity and their unending reaches can never be attained.

Household Hints

By Betty Webster

A fancy dress party is a nice one to have on St. Valentine's day. The invitations can be written with white ink on red hearts and each guest requested to dress as a Mother Goose character. The hostess ought to be "Queen of Hearts."

As the guests arrive each one is asked to write the name of the character he or she represents on a card which is dropped into a large heart-shaped box—a red one for boys and a white one for the girls. After everyone has arrived, the white box is passed among the boys who draw out the cards and find their partners for the first game.

After this is over, the red box may be passed to the girls who draw out the cards and partners for the second part of the entertainment are selected.

The refreshments may be served at small tables covered with white cloths on which large red paper hearts are fastened. Tiny heart-shaped boxes of small candies, heart-shaped cakes, and pink and white ice cream hearts, make attractive refreshments.

The Road to Better Health

By Dr. William J. Scholes

CANCER STATISTICS

Part 2
 Periodically someone bursts into print with the announcement that cancer is on the increase, a statement that is in no sense true. The increase is only apparent and not real, for several reasons.

First, vital statistics are now more accurately recorded with the result that cancer cases are reported now that would not have been reported some years ago.

Second, advances in medical science during recent years make for more exact diagnostic methods, as a result of which cancer is today discovered where formerly it was overlooked.

Third, with the increase in the man of life during recent years more persons now attain the age in which cancer develops in the human organism.

The Lesson in the Above Figures
 Everyone is agreed that if the cause of cancer could be found a remedy would not be long in developing, which is the experience of the past with all diseases.

Discouraging and pessimistic as this may appear on its face, I contend that we'll still be looking for a cause of cancer ten thousand years hence, if that is to be the sole object of our search. Why do I say that? Because there is no cause of cancer, in the sense that we think of a cause of a disease process.

But there is a reason for cancer. And if we will stop looking for the cause of cancer and concentrate on finding the reason for it, we will get somewhere in the study of this problem.

Let me illustrate the difference between the two terms: The cause of a blade of grass? The cause of a stone? The cause of one and another kind of living cell? The cause of these things never had a beginning—it always existed, else it would itself be an effect and not a cause.

DO YOU KNOW THAT:

1. A house should never be weather stripped until it is a year old, because in that time the doors and windows become adjusted and the weather stripping can then be put on permanently.
2. Plate glass instead of window glass in the doors and windows of a building costs very little more and adds a finish and richness that can be acquired in no other way.
3. The cement floor of a basement will be very easy to keep clean if it is either oiled or waxed?
4. A lock that turns with difficulty will usually respond readily if a little oil is put on the key before it is inserted in the keyhole?
5. A thick layer of sand on top of a furnace will keep it cool and prevent any danger to the ceiling from the intense heat?

At a distance of 1 1/2 feet from the lamp, a minimum of 20 footcandles are produced by the New Study Lamp. This is the amount scientists tell us we need for close work.

Good home lighting means having the correct wattage of lamp bulbs, and the correct choice of fixtures and portable lamps. A little care, a small expenditure now, may mean normal eyes for your family.

These are the most important lighting rules:

1. Use lamp bulbs of the correct wattage . . . at least 40-watt Mazda lamps for 3-socket lamps, 60-watt for 2-socket lamps, 100-watt for single socket lamps.
2. Have all lamp bulbs shaded. For portables, a shade light in color, wide in spread, and open at the top is most desirable.
3. Never read in glaring light, or in your own shadow.
4. Always use lamp bulbs of reputable make. Inferior ones burn out and blacken quickly.

CHAPEL

Pep meetings were held on Friday and Tuesday mornings. Louis Toliver, president of the student body was in charge. Announcements of ball games, play, P. T. A. programs, and interscholastic league work were made.

TIGERS SHOW RARE FORM IN DEFEATING BUCKS

Friday night the McLean Tigers played one of the best ball games they have played this season. Passing the ball with much accuracy and shooting at the basket with rare skill, the easily defeated the Bucks 28 to 17.

Led by Ledbetter, little forward, the Tigers all ranged within a few points of each other in point gathering. Each man on the Tiger squad gained between three and seven points. The Tigers have played their last game of the season, so we shall give you a brief summary of their short but impressive performances. The Tigers won a total of fifteen games while losing five. This is a rather impressive margin and everyone is looking forward to the next season.

The Tigerettes have been a little more impressive in conference play so after defeating White Deer Friday night 46 to 36, they journey to Panhandle to play the Pantherettes to decide the championship of the girls in Gray and Carson counties. Up to date the Tigerettes have lost one game to Panhandle and tied one. Everyone is backing the Tigerettes to defeat Panhandle and play in the district tournament at Panhandle. The Tigerettes will go to Plainview March 5 and 6 to play in the state tournament. The Tigerettes are enjoying a very successful season.

Both Tigers and Tigerettes were able to defeat the Miami teams in non-conference games Saturday night.

F. F. A. DISTRICT MEET SATURDAY

Saturday, February 16, the North Plains F. F. A. district meeting will be held according to President McGregor of Panhandle. There are about 12 schools in this district. The meeting will be held on Saturday afternoon while the boys are waiting for the dairy and livestock judging results.

The calf show will be judged by Mr. Felton of Sayre, Okla.

The McLean ex-students will help conduct the judging contests. Also, this group will conduct the livestock contest at the Shamrock show on February 23. McLean teams will judge for practice in the two contests.

INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE ASSIGNMENTS MADE

Assignments of local directors of interscholastic league contests were announced this week. They are: Tennis, Mr. Cryer; typing, Mr. Harding; playground ball, Mr. Rush; track and girls basketball, Mr. Loter; manager of girls basketball, Miss Dishman; essay writing and spelling, Miss Cousins; volley ball, Miss McCarty; extemporaneous speech, Miss Abbott; declamation and one-act play, Miss Kennedy.

PUPILS SEE WAR PICTURE

"The First World War," a picture sponsored by the American Legion, was shown for one day only in McLean, on February 12. The school administration felt it worth while enough to allow pupils who were unable to see the night production to attend a matinee Tuesday afternoon.

Relief Roller—"I want to register a complaint against the meals."
Manager—"What is it? Wasn't the caviar good?"

B. R.—"It wasn't that. What we object to is having to work six hours and being allowed only three hours for meals. We think it should be the other way around."

Mr. and Mrs. D. Medley of Lefors visited in McLean Saturday.

Straight Thinking

By Cleve Well

One of our courts this past week had to stop and learn how to spell. A witness in the court answered one of the attorneys' questions by saying "Oakie-doke." The attorneys in the case could not agree on the spelling of the word and finally appealed to the court, so the court recessed long enough to come to a definite agreement on the spelling. This modern day is offering us many advantages and disadvantages. It is an interesting thing to note many new expressions coined, and it may be that Webster lived too early.

It is about time of the year for us to celebrate the lives of great characters. American history is rich with great characters. Abraham Lincoln lived in a log cabin, and the cabin had many cracks in it, and the rain and the snow would come through the cracks. Inside the cabin there was a bed and a fireplace, but Abraham Lincoln later lived in the White House.

Lincoln never hitch-hiked nor thumbed his way. He worked it. He was poor and had to overcome many obstacles, but he never accepted dole. He did not look to charity, but put forth his energy and efforts in making a great citizen. It takes hardships and hunger many times for us to appreciate the worth while things.

I suspect that it would be a good idea for every American citizen to get the Constitution of the United States down and read it carefully. We need to know just what the preamble of the Constitution contains. Divide the preamble into six clauses and give a critical study of these six clauses. Our government is the greatest government in the world and its greatness is due to its Constitution, and maybe the greatness of the Constitution is due to its brevity. This great government is divided into three definite departments.

All of us are citizens. If we are good citizens we will be unselfish, trustworthy, polite, helpful to those who need us, truthful; ambitious, honest, obedient and cheerful.

Great Britain is looking for a new deal. Where did the new deal have its beginning—in America or in some other land? An old saying, but a true one, that a child can lead. America is a new nation in comparison with many other nations, but it leads the world.

Huey Long is coming into much play for lime light at this time. Huey got mad at the governor of Texas several years ago over the cotton program and there were people in Texas who sympathized with him at that time. I doubt if you could find those sympathizers today.

Bar LO ranch has had a great barbecue and picnic. The Bar LO ranch is a historical place in the Panhandle of Texas. Its history will be worth while history in the centuries to come, for it has been well written and these copies will be preserved for future Texans to study what the Bar LO ranch contained during this great formation period. Geo. W. Sitter will live a long time in the cattle kingdom.

Next time we are going to write about 99 years ago.

A sweet young "deb" was taken to see her first ball game. It was one of those games in which everything went against the home team. At the beginning of the ninth inning, when the score was 27 to 3 in favor of the other fellows, the sweet young deb clapped her hands and exclaimed: "Aren't our pitchers swell! They hit the clubs no matter where those boobs hold them."

Paul M. Bruce, or Bruce Nursery, Alanreed, was in town Tuesday.

PANNING THE HOME PAPER

When you hear a man running down his home paper, or any other local industry, take a good look at him. Ten to one he will have a chin as long as a rail, an eye shiftless as a horse thief, and he will hitch around in his chair as though he had a touch of St. Vitus dance. Talk to him a while and you will discover that he has made a failure of everything he has ever tried (except being disagreeable), and nine times out of ten he is dependent on the public for favors or support; you will find him of a meddlesome, peevish, hateful and unreliable nature, a man who is always complaining, and although he has but little, if anything, of his own, one would imagine to hear him talk that he had a quit claim deed to the earth and a first mortgage on heaven. He knows everybody's business, and why shouldn't he? He has none of his own to take up his time. Such people, like mosquitos, were not created in vain, perhaps, but one fact remains staple, they do not add materially to the pleasures of conducting business.—Rochester Reporter.

Governor Allred does not think he is going to be a pardon fiend and that means that criminals may be kept where the law put them. Way go to the expense of putting men behind the bars if some fool governor lets them out before they have put in time enough to insure the safety of the public?
