Customs change. Thirty years ago girls wore long skirts and boys wore short trousers, now girls wear short skirts and boys long trousers.

And now they are threatening in at least one state to have an official score keeper for professional golfers. We have always been under the impression that golfers and fishermen were privileged characters in this respect.

Some counties in Texas have let the county printing on an equitable basis to all the newspapers of the county, paying NRA prices. This is an example that could well be followed by all counties.

Much is made of the fact in some quarters that some half millions dollars has been paid to the state from horse racing, since it was legalized in Texas, but nothing much is said of the 22 million bet on the races and lost to legitimate channels of trade.

Business men near the big racing tracks know how business is lost to the races and are squarely behind the movement to outlaw the so-called "sport."

Publicity and printing is all the newspaper has to sell, and while any paper is anxious to print all the news, and must of necessity help many causes without hope of reward, yet it should be remembered, when asking for publicity, that if you do not, or cannot pay for it, when it is directly beneficial to yourself, to make a mental note to give the paper the next printing job that you have anything to do with. A good way to get the editor's goat is to present him with a bill on a statement bought from a peddler, or a tax receipt bought the same way.

There is no printing job of whatever nature that the home printer cannot handle for you. The home paper is the community's best friend and should be remembered when tempted to listen to printing peddlers who pay no taxes and cannot offer near the service that can be had at home.

The number of our regular weekly columns has increased to such an extent that we must ask our writers to have their copy in by Monday noon of each week, and all columns should be confined to not over 300 words. This rule is made in order that we may give everyone a chance and at the same time have time for other parts of the paper. We have worked overtime each week for some time in order to get in everything, but hereafter we will be forced to leave out any article turned in after Monday.

We would much prefer that these articles be written weeks ahead, and most of them could easily be done that way—some of them are—which gives us time to get them in type without any extra expense.

School and church news will still be accepted up to Tuesday noon, and live news items are desired just as soon as they happen. We cannot appreciate items of happenings of several days before being brought in at the last minute. It is not that we do not want to publish everything, but a paper is the result of a whole week's work and everything cannot be done at the last moment.

We appreciate the cooperation of the columnists, sermonette and Sunday school article, and hope that all of them can comply with the above rules and insure insertion each week.

S. S. LESSON
 By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
 Pastor First Baptist Church

PETER PREACHES AT PENTECOST

Lesson text, Acts 2:22-28, 36-41. Golden text, Acts 2:38. "Then Peter said unto them, Repent, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

Forty days after His resurrection Jesus appeared to a group of people of about five hundred in number. He taught, gave them final instructions, and ascended into heaven before their very eyes. The final command to the followers was that after the Holy Ghost descended upon them they were to go forth witnessing for Him throughout the world. Bewildered and afraid, they returned to Jerusalem and continued in prayer for a period of ten days. They did not know what effect the Holy Spirit would have upon them when He came, but they were waiting for Him. On the day of Pentecost He came.

Pentecost commemorated the giving of the law on Sinai. It was one of the three national festivals of the Jews which every Jewish man was expected, and was anxious to attend in Jerusalem. There were Jews from all parts of the civilized world in Jerusalem that day, men who spoke a dozen different languages as their native tongues. It was on this day that the Holy Ghost came; according to Dr. Hight C. Moore, it was the 28th day of May, A. D. 30. The disciples were in prayer meeting. There was the sound of a mighty wind without the pressure of quickly circulating air—the sound without the motion. Then there appeared a great sheet of fire that broke and rested upon the head of each one present, in the form of a flame upon each. It burned there as the fire in the desert bush before Moses, without consuming. They were each filled with the Holy Spirit. This 120 had been praying daily in fear; now they went out to proclaim the Gospel message with a clarion call as brave as the night roar of a lion.

The disciples spoke with such bravery, fluency and in the language of the different peoples present so that the people at first thought them drunk. Then Peter takes the front of the stage. Every apostle preached to be sure, but Peter's sermon is the only one recorded. He dispelled the idea of drunkenness, and then pointed the people to Jesus. He acclaimed Him the Son of God and the Savior of the world, and accused the people of slaying Him with wicked hands. Not long before, the disciples would not have dared to speak such a truth, because of fear and the ferocity of the Jews. Now they spoke and the Jews were stricken with conviction.

The people recognized their sin and desired to know what it would take to save them from that sin. Peter quickly and definitely told them. Repent! was the first thing. Jesus had said, "Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish." Again He had said, "Except a man be born again he cannot see the kingdom of God." (Luke 13:3; John 3:3). That was the implication of the "teach" in the first phrase of Matt. 28:19. Those on the day of Pentecost, as men today, must turn from their lives of sin and repent that they might be born again. Men do the repenting. God gives the new birth or the new spirit of life.

Following the first step they were to be baptized, as is described in the first six verses of the sixth chapter of Romans. They each were to submit to the baptism of Jesus for, or to show forth, or to represent to the world, the remission that had come to them. That was a part of the command of the Master. They had to do that before they could be one of those "added unto them." There were three thousand who repented and submitted to the ordinance of baptism that day. There were plenty of the apostles and plenty of water for their baptism. The task could have been accomplished in a very few hours. There were in and just outside of Jerusalem six pools as large or larger than the average municipal swimming pool. It was a great revival, the largest the world has ever seen in one day. Such a thing might happen again, should all the followers of Jesus spend ten days in prayer. All of Jesus' followers were in prayer those ten days. A similar prayer meeting would no doubt produce similar results.

Much has been said in these modern days concerning the lack of religious restraints among the people. We forget that every generation has been the "modern generation," and that in every generation there has been the same cry concerning religious restraints. This is because in every generation there are many who stray far from the beaten paths. But it is the man of some religious scruples who feels that religion has lost its power over the lives of our populace. He is right, but he must also recognize that this is not bothering the irreligious. It is his tribe who must let the world go its way, become separated from the world and led by the Spirit of God, that the irreligious world may see its error and turn to God. We are to be witnesses—preach by example—and that can only be done by following the command, "Come ye out from among them and be ye separate." Should all—not part, but all—of Christian faith set themselves apart as those 120, God would likely bless our setting apart as He did theirs.

HOME ECONOMICS

The state home economics rally meets on April 25 and lasts until the 27th, in Corpus Christi. The McLean department hopes to be able to send three or four delegates to this meeting. The girls are planning a number of projects to make money to send the delegates.

ASSEMBLY

The Glee Club entertained in assembly on Tuesday morning with several beautiful selections. Mrs. Goff directed the club and Willie Louelle Cobb accompanied.

The guest speaker was Rev. Bonine new pastor of the Nazarene Church. He read his scripture from the Sermon on the Mount and gave an interesting discussion in which he compared religion and salvation.

The student body then took part in a pep meeting to show their loyalty to the Tigers who were going to play the Groom Tigers that night.

BASKETBALL

The Tigerettes won a very exciting game from Lefors on last Friday night. Although each team exhibited some roughness, many thrilling plays were enjoyed. The score was 30-14. Sybil Young was high point in scoring. The Tigerettes also defeated Miami Saturday night in a non-conference game, by a score of 42-27. The game was played in a clean manner, and the Miami team was slightly incapacitated by illness of first string girls. Their return on Saturday night, Feb. 9. The Groom girls decided to forfeit the conference game of the week to the McLean team without playing. The Tigers also won a rough but thrilling game from Lefors, with a six point lead. Stratton was captain and H. McCarty was high point man. The Tigers were also successful in winning the game with Miami, and they are hoping to do the same in return game Saturday night.

F. F. A. REPORT

The F. F. A. chapter of McLean had their practice fat stock judging contest and entertained friends with a barbecue on the Bar LO Ranch last Friday. About 250 people were present.

The boys judged some of the prize beef and dairy cattle of the ranch, which included Jerseys and Holsteins, and breeding stock, both for beef and herd production. They also judged draft horses and mules.

The agriculture string band, including Billy Robinson, Eugene Greer, Joe Hefner, J. L. Jones and Cleve Hancock, furnished music for entertainment during the meal. Delicious barbecued beef, furnished by the ranch and prepared by the agriculture boys; buns, pickles, and coffee were served to people from McLean, Shamrock, Clarendon and Wellington. Everyone present enjoyed being a guest of the ranch and the boys.

Shamrock has invited the McLean boys over to judge some stock in the near future. As usual, the spirit of rivalry will be present and the McLean boys hope to win by a large margin.

TENNIS COURTS ARE NEARING COMPLETION

The two new tennis courts, one at each school, are nearing completion. They have been built with comparatively little expense to the school system, for work has been done under the Federal project and supervised by Supt. Cryer. The ground was leveled, then caliche was spread on, wet, and rolled. When it was ready, asphalt was spread on and rolled until the surface is hard, and we hope lasting. These courts were badly needed and the tennis teams hope to begin practice immediately in preparation for the county interscholastic league.

INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE MEET

The county interscholastic league will be held this year in Lefors on March 15 and 16. No definite assignments other than those that are already at work have been made for local coaches.

THE STORY

Mary Brown, daughter of David Brown, self-made multi-millionaire, obsessed with the idea that her personality is obscured by the fact that she is the child of the "rich David Brown," determines to make her way in life, discarding her father's wealth and her own. She has a million dollars, legacy from her mother, which she insists her father invest in the "wildest dream" imaginable, and about which she must know nothing. She is a graduate of a college of engineering. Her father, secretly admiring her courage, humors her.

As "M" Brown, Mary secures a job on the Paradise Valley project, near the village of Foggy Gulch. She antagonizes Hank Johnson, wealthy and eccentric citizen, by suggesting that he build a gymnasium and swimming pool for the little town.

In an accident, Mary, at the risk of her life, saves a valuable instrument, and, through the accident, is drawn closer to Craig. She discovers that she has misjudged John Stark and that he is really her friend and well wisher.

Mary learns, inadvertently, that it is her money which is financing the Paradise Valley Project, her father having loaned it to Craig for the "wild dream" she had insisted it must be.

Piqued at actions of Goodenough, Mary tenders her resignation, which Stark refuses to accept, and tactfully reconciles the pair. Stark tells Mary to report to the department of design, telling her that he is leaving the project.

Together, Mary and Denis Craig pay a visit to a deserted cabin which Mary says she would give her "hope of heaven" to be able to buy. It asks if she ever lets her dreams run away with her.

Did she? What if Denis could know that her doubts of him had gone something of a sham-sh-tailed, like a named little dog that has barked at a man's heels? What if he could read the dreams she was dreaming now? This retreat, remodelled to please all its rustic romances should be the best of them? This project, really the thing through together by Denis, his management—

If she attempted a light answer, "Yes—always a little mad when I'm with you, Denny."

"That's the sweetest thing you ever said to me, Mary. It means things just as it meant things when you said you loved this old cabin. I love it, too. I want it. You want it."

He was very close to her. His hair brushed hers as he bent to ask, "Has it ever occurred to you, dear, that maybe we want the same things of life, you and I—all through?"

She looked up at him quickly. Teasing—and tenderness and his arm went about her shoulder. "That we want the same things of life—even though the first words you heard me utter convinced you—just the contrary?"

"Money talks." It shrieked, even at this moment. Ah, but it no longer shrieked that money was his god. His dreams were that. His dreams—which might run away with him occasionally—but in which he believed.

Still, money was obtruding now. Omniously. Terrifyingly. Wanting to tell him the truth of herself, wanting to shout her silent partnership from the housetops—fear tied her tongue. If she told him—she'd lose him! A millionaire in her own name, until he had spent her inheritance! That made men run—the ones you might love.

"Mary!" He turned her face up to his. "You have to tell me this! Do you love young Goodenough?"

"Oh, no!" quickly. "That is—of course, I love him. But I love Bill and Don and John and the chief and—"

"Darling, don't you dare put me in that pigeon-hole!"

"You don't belong," tremulously, "in that one."

"And just where do I belong?" His face—his eyes—his lips—so close! And she had imagined he was putting her aside these days!

An arm closed about her. His cheek touched her forehead.

Unsteadily. "At least, you aren't putting me from you any more, dear." Putting him from her! If only he'd never let her go! If they could forget everything but this sweet isolation!

"Denny!" in a small smothered voice.

"Tell me."

"Couldn't we—just drift—a little while?"

He laughed, indulgently, victoriously. "With as much as this to go on, I could be an understudy to Job!"

She raised her face, stood back from him, radiant, both tangible and elusive. "You're—sweet, Denny!"

"That's a lot. Just how long," whimsically, "do you think it will be until you discover I'm the nicest man here is, in every way?"

Mary made a dash to their littered table, gathering up dishes. "It—oughtn't to be so very long. I should say."

Just until he made his little wad, so that his pride would stand the shock of a sweetheart in golden hackles. Money was pouring in to him these days.

"There's one thing more, Mary."

"And that?"

"We name the cabin. Hope of Heaven. Also, we dedicate it."

"Dedicate—"
"Like this."
Deliberately he took her into his arms and kissed her. A hesitant second, and two warm arms closed about his neck—and Mary contributed to the ceremony of dedication.

CHAPTER 9

Pink Slips

Now came the halcyon days for the Paradise Valley project. Following the land-sales convention, the tract was opened to purchasers. Soon the hills reverberated with the sound of carpenters' hammers as homes were built—consonant with their environment, as stipulated in the promoter's dreams.

"Perfect-mannered guests, these houses, Mary," Craig said whimsically one evening as they lattered through the hills on horseback. "They have come into the wilderness unobtrusively and made themselves at home, without disturbing so much of the family regime as the mountain quails' foraging grounds. In fact, quite the contrary: the old-timers here seem to be imposing their ideas of landscaping, et cetera upon us tender-feet."

Mary understood that by old-timers he meant the wild wood folk to whom these foothills had belonged time out of mind. She liked his attitude.

"How about draperies and furniture, Mary?" he queried, one day. "For Hope of Heaven?"

"But why ask me?"

"Just for advice," guilelessly. "If you were equipping Hope of Heaven as a week-end rendezvous for the crowd, how would you furnish it?"

"With the things I bought for my own room in Foggy Gulch—when I forgot I wasn't a bloated plutocrat," said Mary promptly. "Then I'd save the storage I'm paying on them now."

"Marvelous! I'll have them moved out tomorrow." And he added: "It makes a neat arrangement. Gives me a mortgage of sorts."

He had a mortgage. But it was more a partnership to which he laid claim. A sweetly preposterous partnership.

That evening as they turned their horses' heads toward headquarters Denis summed up their survey with a heartfelt, "Mary! I have not demeaned the wilds!"

She saw him again, the young man on the mountain with five hundred dollars in his pocket, seeing his ten-million-dollar vision.

"You've carried out the dream perfectly, Denny! Your ideal home place still looks like virgin wilderness. Everyone who comes is so—ecstatic over it. But Denny! Strangers can't love it as we do, who made it. Out there against Lone mountain tonight I see three million-dollar buildings arising. But I shall always see, more vividly shall not you, Denny, the five hundred mules at one time corralled there?"

"You are a darling!"

"Denny, when it is all completed—what shall you do? Stay here—or move on to new dreams?"

"Which shall we?" he asked. He held out his hand, she put hers into it, and so they rode down the hill in the gathering shadows. Drifting—just drifting.

But Denis was very gay these days, very confident of her, very teasing. Mary saw him infrequently, so occupied was he. But he did not let her forget him for a moment. Once when he scarcely had seen her for a week he came to her drafting table with a brisk, "I just wanted to remind you, Miss Brown," picking up her drawing of a rustic bridge, "that," he lowered his tone as he bent to trace a meaningless line on the drawing, "I love you." He was gone.

angles. "You won't forget that point I made, Miss Brown? It is important."

"I'll make a note of it, Mr. Craig." Happiness like this came to a girl unshackled by millions.

Success and prosperity pervaded the atmosphere. Settlement of the project went on with unbelievable swiftness. Upon nearly twenty thousand rolling acres young orchards added swift inches to their stature.

A few months of these halcyon days, and then a vague, insidious uneasiness came creeping into the atmosphere. Rumors there were, coming from no one knew where. The project's momentum was letting up considerably. The project was wobbling. The project was on its last legs. Apprehension was in the air.

And, most disconcerting of all, there was worry back of the assurance in Denis Craig's eyes and words; questionable mirth in his smile.

A month or two of this, and payment checks were a week late. The following month they were two weeks late. There were apologies, but no explanation. "Handwriting on the wall," diagnosed the older engineers who had been on development projects before.

Mary Brown set her lips in a straight line and flung up her patrician head. Not all the rumors on the twenty-five thousand acres could shake her faith in Denis Craig, once she had given it!

Next week—Should Mary risk losing Craig by offering to help him out of his financial difficulties?

MATTRESS MAKING

By Mrs. E. R. Rigdon The mattress we made on Dec. 7 as a part of my bedroom improvement demonstration is my most highly prized attainment.

Ten yards of good grade 32 inch wide ticking, 30 yards of mattress tufting twine, a mattress roll needle and 50 pounds of cotton are the necessary items.

The ticking is made as follows: Cut two strips each 82 inches long. Tear a 5 inch strip from remaining material.

Put the ticking on top of the cotton with the open side down. By careful lifting and pushing the cotton into the corners it can easily be transferred to the ticking.

Turn the mattress and whip with heavy thread the open part. Baet each side of the mattress 40 minutes, using a broom stick.

Roll edges, using the regular mattress roll needle and mattress twine. Do not tuft these mattresses because an occasional sunning and beating will keep them in highly desirable condition.

MR. BROWN WAS THRIFTY

A man who had just opened a store in a strange town was asking one of his early customers on the purchasing power of the citizens.

"Now, there's Mr. Brown," he said. "He has the reputation of being wealthy. Would he be likely to spend much money in here?"

"Wa'al," drawled the native, reflectively, "I wouldn't exactly say he'd go to hell for a nickel, but he'd fish around for one until he fell in."

The storm was increasing in violence and some of the deck fittings had already been swept overboard.

"Captain," he said, "I'd be the last man on earth to cast a damper on anyone, but it seems to me that this is no time for letting off fireworks."

Judge—"Madam, how long did you know this man before you married him?"

Woman—"I was acquainted with him for two years, but I never really knew him until we were married and I asked him for a dollar."

By PERYCROSBY Cartoonist.

"I WAS born in a haunted house," related the comic artist, Percy Crosby. "The first gleam of consciousness which I can remember in my life was seeing a colored mammy under the kitchen table, and hearing my mother say that the mammy was a ghost."

"I can remember vividly that first experience—the only time I ever saw the ghost. It left an indelible impression on my mind.

"I had gone into the kitchen to get a cookie. Under the kitchen table I saw a negro mammy; a red bandanna was tied tightly around her head, her two hands were on the floor. She seemed to be backing away from me. I screamed in fright at the strange sight and ran to my mother.

"Mother grasped my hand, and took me back to the scene. The woman was still crouching there.

"I saw my mother slap at her, and her hand went right through her head and struck the wall; and the mammy disappeared.

"Ghost, ghost," screamed my mother. I screamed also, not knowing what the word meant.

"Mother called witnesses who agreed that there was no sign or hide or hair of the mammy in the room. I was with her to testify that she had been there, and that when mother struck her she disappeared.

"After that experience my mother grew more nervous and timid; but, like all small boys, the experience only gave me more courage, and more ideas for adventure. But I have never found a ghost since that time. No doubt since I was born in a haunted house, I'll probably die in one."

Farmers War on Lark

Even if Shelley wrote an ode about it and Schubert was inspired by it to compose a beautiful melody, the lark is just a bird that damages wheat and other crops. So declare the farmers in the vicinity of Norfolk, England, and they have started a war on the songster.

The Norfolk Agricultural committee has excluded the bird from the new order under the wild birds protection act.

Collapse Reveals Secret Tunnel

Not known previously to exist, a brick-lined tunnel six feet high, ten feet wide and about ten feet below the surface of the road and believed to be over one hundred years old, collapsed at Sheffield, England, while workmen were preparing foundations for a garage.

STORE KEEPERS AND MERCHANTS

Advertising is the greatest selling force in the world. Advertising will sell anything from a ten cent package of breakfast food to a three hundred dollar mechanical ice box.

Advertising, however, cannot perform miracles. It cannot sell merchandise for a man who is not a merchandiser. It cannot sell merchandise for a merchant who refuses or neglects to attractively arrange his store and display his merchandise.

It will not sell show worn and musty stock when others are offering bright new goods at their stores. In other words, advertising will do practically everything when it comes to selling merchandise except supplying the knowledge of merchandising to the man who does not possess it.

If the advertiser isn't a merchant the advertising won't make a merchant of him. It isn't equal to the task of making a merchant out of a store keeper.

What is your classification? Are you a store keeper or a merchant? Too many men who are store keepers expect advertising to make business for them like it does for the merchant. Advertising pulls. It does not jerk like many seem to expect. That steady, consistent pull of newspaper advertising has built a fortune for many merchants.—Monahans News.

The collector approached a parishoner and held out the box. "I never give to missions," whispered the parishoner.

"Then take something out of the box, sir," whispered the collector. "The money is for the heathens."

Young men of today consider they are "broke" at a point where their fathers would have thought themselves rich.

BURDENS SELDOM EXPRESSED

Did you ever stop to think of the many parents in this community—every community—who are sad and disappointed on account of the doings of their children?

This is a burden parents bear with seldom an expression about it to anybody, but down underneath their courtesy and smiles to their fellows, there is no burden harder to bear, or one that takes a greater toll of happiness.

Few children take a thought of just how keenly their transgressions are felt by father and mother. Some recognize it when they are scolded by years of living some find out about it when they have children of their own and some tramp with hobnails on the hearts of those they should try hardest to comfort or should through life until it is too late to make restitution and to heal the sore wounds they have opened and torn.

Every boy and girl should think the problems of life through and resolve to bring joy and satisfaction pride and appreciation, to those who have worked and sacrificed for their well-being, comfort and happiness.

If there is a sadder spectacle in the wide world than a parent torn with the burden of a wayward boy or girl, it is that rare sight of a son or daughter bowed down with shame over the conduct of a father or mother.—Clarendon News.

MORE DRUNKS

The Abilene Times told us last week that they were having an epidemic of drunks in that city. That seems to be the general complaint everywhere, in wet or dry towns, in the big cities and the little towns. Some attribute this to repeal, and it may be at least a partial cause; but others think that with money more plentiful, more of it is being turned to booze purchases.

We don't know what the statistics of arrests for drunkenness in Brownfield are compared to a year or two years ago, but they are high enough. In fact, one year is one too many.—Terry County Herald.

Most people outside the news craft don't know it, but the obits (death notices) of celebrities are prepared far in advance of their passing. Thus, when the flash comes—the biographies are ready for the presses. In grave illnesses, these obits are put in type and kept ready for the machines.

That was what happened during a serious illness of Big Bill Thompson, one-time mayor of Chicago. A proof was pulled on the obit and sent to Thompson's advisers for verification. Like all obits, it was laudatory, but Bill's henchmen prettied it up even more.

Then Bill recovered and again ran for office. When the newspaper in question assailed him, Bill produced the obit, and read to the voters all the lovely things the attacking sheet had been ready to print about him.—Walter Winchell in "Along Broadway."

TRUE DETECTIVE STORY
by Vance Wynn Public Ledger

The Sapphire in the Moonlight

GEORGE MANNERS was very much in love with Mary Lascelles, of Middlesex, England, and proposed marriage to her.

She was an orphan and lived with her brother Edmund, but for some unaccountable reason he opposed the match.

The girl, who was one of the beauties of the neighborhood, was very fond of her brother, and in deference to his wishes she consented to postpone the wedding for an indefinite period.

Love deferred is very likely to be love enkindled, and George Manners was more than ever desirous of making the girl his wife.

They corresponded frequently, and one night Manners called unexpectedly to renew his suit.

The brother was not at home at the time and Manners consented to wait and see him.

The interview between the two men was not a pleasant one.

They retired to an adjoining room, and when they emerged, twenty minutes later, Manners had a very flushed face and Edmund Lascelles wore a look of dogged determination.

On leaving, the sister offered to shake hands with Lascelles, but was repulsed.

As he left the house he freed his mind:

"I've asked you for the hand of your sister for the last time. I have tried to be nice, but my patience is at an end. The next time we meet the results may be a little different."

The girl was naturally distracted at this quarrel between the two men she loved most.

Lascelles was morose and silent for a long time and then he took his hat and left the house.

Shortly after ten o'clock that night two men came to the door of the cottage, carrying between them the dead body of Edmund Lascelles.

It was a terrible shock and Mary almost fainted. But before she had time to recover, George Manners came to the house, with his face and hands marked with blood.

He said that he had found the body in a ditch and had sent the men home with it while he remained to try to find some clue to the tragedy.

The circumstances were all against George Manners.

Nearly everybody was positive that he had murdered Lascelles, and it must be admitted that the evidence was against him.

But there was one who accepted his protestations of innocence and that was Mary Lascelles, the sister of the victim.

She did everything in her power for him at the trial, but in spite of that he was convicted and executed to death.

Even then the devoted girl did not despair. She worked until she had secured a reprieve for the man she loved.

After that she enlisted the services of a detective and set about the seemingly hopeless task of securing evidence that would exonerate Manners.

Now one of the curious and shocking features of the crime was the fact that the right hand had been cut from the body of Edmund Lascelles.

It contained a costly sapphire ring that he had been in the habit of wearing.

No trace of the missing hand had been obtained before the trial of Manners, and when the detective—James Shropshire—learned his belated task he kept this fact steadily in mind.

What had become of the hand containing the sapphire ring?

That was the question he asked himself, not once but a hundred times.

The first clue that he obtained was in the nature of footprints around the Lascelles home.

Although many weeks had passed, Shropshire found footprints in the grass.

These prints were carefully measured, as they did not correspond with the size of Manners' shoes.

The detective sought the village shoemaker and learned that they were about the size of the shoes worn by a former named James Parker.

More than this, the footprints when followed led to the house of this man.

An examination of his barn disclosed a knife that had been hidden in one of the stalls.

There was a loose board in the door of the barn, and when this was removed the detective found the missing hand buried in the earth.

Parker, confronted with the evidence, confessed that he had murdered Lascelles.

He said he had been tempted by the sapphire ring, glistening in the moonlight, and that being unable to get it off, had severed the hand from the arm.

He was tried and condemned and soon after that George Manners and Mary Lascelles were married.

Christina Queen of Sweden

Christina, Queen of Sweden, was born December 8, 1626, and ascended the throne upon the death of her father, Gustavus Adolphus, in 1632. Under her reign she reigned over a regency headed by the Chancellor Oxenstierna, and she was crowned in October, 1650. She was notorious for her amours but was generally a benevolent ruler.

CHOICE

By A. T. Wilson

I once knew a young man who was entering the incipient girl-on-the-brain complex, to call a girl's hand and she turned him down flat. He had heard somewhere that "If at first you don't succeed, try, try again." So he tried another one, but alas the news had already spread and she turned him down on the ground that she did not want to be second choice, and was very unlike the old maid who said any old dudeloo.

The first choice we hear of in sacred history was Eve choosing the forbidden fruit, and Adam, in order to be in style and not lose his standing in society also chose partly through sympathy, but mostly through weakness; besides he didn't know anything about divorce, and if he had he could not have located the next victim.

Adam was not as cunning as Prometheus of Grecian mythology who took the first woman and had his brother Epimetheus to marry her, and thus passed the buck (or the doe) to him. Eve chose unwisely, but we come on down and find Daniel choosing wisely when he purposed in his heart that he would not eat the king's meat nor the wine which he drank.

Ruth although a Gentile, said to Naomi, "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God." She was more loyal to her mother-in-law than most modern daughters are to their own mothers.

Abraham was subjected to one of the most grueling of choices when he was commanded to sacrifice his only son who was the idol of his heart and the comfort of his old age, on the sacrificial altar, but when he showed his willingness he was spared the ordeal.

I have heard men condemn Joseph for choosing to run from Potipher's wife, but he made a wise choice, without a doubt, and adopted a sane course of action as a man going to a cellar when he sees a tornado coming.

On account of his mother's training, Moses chose to suffer the afflictions of his people rather than enjoy the pleasures of sin in the court of the king of Egypt, and none but false philosophers and materialists will gainsay his choice.

And Joshua, in olden times when man was the head of his house and monarch of all he surveyed, called on the Israelites to "Choose you this day whom you will serve, whether God or Baal; but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

When choice is taken from man and he is not given the power of selection, there would be no honor or tribute to any man for any kind of performance, but given his choice and he makes a supreme sacrifice and acquires himself with glory and honor he has gone his limit and has reached the zenith of his endeavors.

Now Solomon started out on the right foot in that he asked for wisdom to govern his people, but few the track before he got to the straight-away and wasted his wisdom on 700 wives and other foolishness.

You know that a man with that many wives would not have time to run a government, or even a peanut stand.

The old Greeks had lots of foolishness in their religion, but it would do anyone good to read of the choice of Hercules the hero of heroes, who chose Duty rather than Pleasure, and you will find it in Gods and Heroes by Francillon.

The most vital and eternally important choice mankind is compelled to make today is the choice between old fashioned religion and modern materialism.

AND LAUGH!

Go build of your worries a strong-box;

Have every part strengthened with care;

When as strong as your efforts can make it,

Corral all your troubles right there.

Store in it all thoughts of a failure

And each bitter cup that you quaff;

Lock all your heartaches within it,

Then—sit on the lid and laugh!

—Louisville Times.

Constituent—"Senator, I wish you would give me a job as your private secretary."

Senator—"Oh, my boy, don't get mixed up with the government service. There's nothing in it. It ruins a young man—takes away all his ambition and gives him entirely false ideas. And besides, I've promised that position to my son."

The heavy man was trying to get to a vacant seat at the circus. "Pardon me," he said to a woman, "did I step on your foot?"

She glanced at the ring. "It must have been you," she replied. "All six elephants are still out there."

AMERICAN CULTURE

The general state of culture in the United States of America may be gauged by statistics showing 109 grocery stores, 59 filling stations, 49 restaurants and 19 drug stores to every book store in the land of the brave and home of the alleged free.

It is funny, when you think of it, that men and women who willingly spent a few dollars to visit a restaurant or theatre are struck with horror at the thought of paying as much as two dollars for a good book. After all, what are the public schools for if the average American hasn't a desire to continue his educational development?—News, Ridge-wood, N. J.

Straight Thinking

By Cleve Well

The Senate of the United States refused to ratify the World Court, for the time being anyway. We had much discussion, both pro and con, on the World Court. We have many graves in Europe and many of our people have not forgotten that awful conflict.

The Texas Legislature has refused to ratify the Child Amendment Act. This does not signify that the legislature is in sympathy with the sweat shops, cotton patches, or any other activity where child labor may be used, but just merely the fact that the legislature of Texas is not ready to ratify the Child Labor Amendment.

The big question before the people of Texas now is where the legislature is going to find sufficient revenue to run our state government. Taxes certainly should not be increased, but by all means reduced. People cannot afford to pay more taxes than property will produce.

There are many small items in the running of the government. According to the fiscal year ending August 31, 1933, the state government of Texas spent $77,827 for ice and water. How many of the old boys down on the forks of the creek enjoyed these pleasures? The state government, during this same period of time, spent $7,000 for washing and storing of automobiles. Mr. Taxpayer who washes your car, and if it has to be stored, who pays for the storage? During this same period, the state government was out $114,000 for telegrams and telephone accounts. These are interesting items, but just a drop in the bucket of where our tax money goes.

Going in debt is a very easy thing, but getting out of debt is another and more difficult thing. Corporations check, recheck, and account for every item carefully. Taxpayers are entitled to a very careful consideration.

The public school boy and girl certainly should be well cared for by the present state legislature. $16 is not enough money for the state to appropriate toward public education. The public free schools belong to the people, then certainly the state should be very considerate and careful in making adequate appropriations for the support of the schools. The public school system touches every boy and girl in Texas, from the smallest community to the great business and commercial centers. With our modern public school system and our first class high schools, boys and girls are equipped to carry on in life, then certainly we should put forth every effort to aid these worth while institutions.

The state, town, or community cannot rise above its schools. The schools should be the pride and admiration of all. We cannot succeed in government unless our citizenship is an informed one. See to it that the schools are well provided for.

A LETTER

Oviedo, Fla., Jan. 26, 1935.
Editor, The McLean News,
McLean, Texas.

Dear Sir:
Have just returned this afternoon from a 2800 mile pastoral trip which was completed in sixteen days. After ploughing through a stack of mail, I noticed that one of the Sermonettes arrived too late for publication. Am sorry it was held up in the mail. Am enclosing a ms. for the February 7, 1935, issue. The ms. would have been in your hands sooner if not for the extra work which I had to do.

I hope the farmers and cattle men in Gray and Wheeler counties are progressing and coming out of the red.

Florida has been hard hit by the unexpected killing frosts last December. The orange and celery crops were damaged a great deal. At present the celery crops are picking up. Things look more favorable than they did before Christmas.

Very sincerely yours,

Household Hints

By Betty Webster

Wouldn't it be rather amusing to celebrate Abraham Lincoln's birthday with a "picknanny party?" Ask the guests to dress as colored mammys and "Uncle Toms." Decorate the house with balls of cotton.

After all have arrived, it would be amusing to play a game of "inventions." Give each one a list of inventors and ask them to write the names of their inventions in a corresponding list. A time limit can be named and a prize awarded for the best list. A guessing name of civil war songs would also furnish amusement.

A table decorated with white cotton and white refreshments would carry out the idea of the party.

Do You Know That:

- Buttons will not be torn off so easily when clothes are put through a wringer—if the buttons are folded inside the garment?
- Grenadine curtains will look fresher and stay clean longer if they are starched lightly when washed?
- Marquisette curtains ought to be dry cleaned because washing causes the threads to "bunch"?
- Using a vacuum cleaner on rugs prevents the dust from being collected beneath them?
- Spots can be removed from mohair-covered furniture by washing with milk?
- Christmas tree lights can be used effectively for decorating a room or table for any entertainment during the year?
- Pestooned about the dining room and using red and white bulbs the lights make a charming setting for a valentine party?
- By using round, red bulbs and placing them in clusters on a small branch of a tree an amusing cherry tree centerpiece can be made for the Constipated?

The doctors say . . .

Use liquid treatment

Here is the soundest advice anyone can give on the subject of laxatives. It is based on medical opinion. We want you to have the benefit of this information no matter what laxative you may buy:

The secret of real relief from constipation is reduced dosage. You can't regulate the bowels unless you can regulate the help you give them. That is why doctors use a liquid laxative; the dose can be measured to a drop.

Avoid laxatives that you can't cut down in dosage; especially those that seem to require larger doses than when you began their use.

Under the doctor's care, you usually get a liquid laxative. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. Smaller and smaller doses—until you don't need any.

The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It containsenna and cascara—natural laxatives that form no habit.

MRS. HANSEN FUNERAL

Mrs. Sallie S. Hansen was born on Nov. 7, 1880, in Bedford county, Tenn., and passed away January 8, 1935, from pneumonia. She was sick only seven days. She spent all of her childhood in Tennessee. After leaving Tennessee, she went to Oklahoma to make her home, and lived there until 1917, when she moved to Texas, residing here until her death.

In 1898 she was married to C. B. Clary. One child was born to them, Clyde B. Clary, of Long Beach, Calif., who was here for the funeral.

On January 14, 1903, she was married to Albert F. Hansen, at Adair, Okla. Two children were born to this union, John Albert, who died at birth, and Mrs. Ida Crews, of McLean. He had three step-children, Mrs. Katie Morrison of Shamrock, Ed F. Hansen of Loveland, Colo., and Mrs. Jessie Thompson of Lawton, Okla. Besides these, she leaves to mourn her death, twelve grandchildren, two great grandchildren, her father, John Covington of Unionville, Tenn., four brothers, J. H. of Bell Buckle, Tenn., W. C. of San Antonio, Kit of Chicago, Clarence of Youngstown, Ohio; one sister, Mrs. Laura Crowell of Franklin, La.; two half-brothers and one half-sister. Two sisters, two brothers, and her mother preceded her in death.

She was laid to rest on February 2, 1935, in Hillcrest cemetery.

TUBERCULOSIS TESTS HELD

Testing for bovine tuberculosis began in Gray county Monday, with three veterinarians working in the Pampa district and one east of McLean. This number will be increased to ten for the county next Monday. Dr. M. A. Molohon is in charge of the testing.

There will be one local helper for each veterinarian. The work is being done by the U. S. Bureau of Animal Husbandry in cooperation with the State Livestock Sanitary Commission and the commissioners court and is absolutely free to livestock owners.

All dairy cows, all bulls, all pure-bred animals and 10% of range cows will be tested. No steers will be tested. Testing will be done even though a man has only one cow.

County Agent Ralph R. Thomas has been working most of the week getting the work lined up, and urges every cattle owner to cooperate in getting the work done as quickly and as thoroughly as possible.

After the testing has been completed, Gray county will be accredited and cattle may be shipped to any part of the United States without being tested.

Owners will be reimbursed for any cattle that may be condemned.

JUST A SOFT SNAP

"One day a week job," say the observers of the activities of the county editor. I wonder. If I could edit the paper in accord with practices of other professions, here is how I could do it when the going is tough: As a lawyer ask for a postponement; as a doctor, call a consultation; as a merchant, hold a sale; as a teacher, give a quiz; as a banker, cook up a legal holiday; as a housewife, go to a bridge party; as a farmer, reduce crops; as a preacher, stage a revival. As me, here I am at the typewriter.—H. R. Long, in the Crane (Mo.) Chronicle.

The city of Slaton is only sixteen miles from Lubbock, and most of its trade was going to the big city. Finally it dawned upon the people that something ought to be done, and everybody signed up a contract promising to trade at home hereafter. They lived up to it too, and at present Slaton is again one of the liveliest towns upon the Plains.—Quah Tribune-Chief.

C. H. Millinger of Llano is installing several hundred feet of concrete tile for subirrigation around his home. Mr. Millinger secured the tile from Walter Roberts, a 4-H club boy of Llano county, who learned to make it as a part of his club work undertaken under the supervision of D. D. Steele, Llano county agent.

"Yes," said the enthusiastic motorist, "she'll do eighty-five." "Per hour, per gallon, or perhaps?" inquired the wag.

He (showing her the town)—"And this is a skyscraper." She—"My! I'd love to see it work."

True Ghost Stories

By Famous People

Copyright by Public Ledger, Inc. WNU Service

By RITA WEIMAN Author.

"RITA WEIMAN is too strong-minded to have a ghost story," cautioned her husband.

"Beg your pardon," he added. "Come to think of it she does have a ghost story, a very real one. She has a knack of foreseeing things. Tell about your 'voltage story,' Rita."

Simultaneously, the author her husband and I drew our chairs closer to the fireplace, above which burned dim lights from Chinese furniture, which she favors.

"Seven years ago," she began. "I read an obscure notice in the news paper, about John Hulbert, of Auburn, N. Y., an electrician, resigning as an executioner at Sing Sing, because he was being ostracized from society. At the same time he justified his job, saying he was only fulfilling his work as a servant of the state."

"I thought this was a grand idea for a story. I wrote a story about an electrician, who was ostracized by his family and friends, because they found out he was serving as an executioner and who eventually killed himself because of their actions, by seizing a high-voltage electric wire. I sold the story to a magazine."

"A few months later the editor called me to say that the owner of the magazine felt that my story was a plea against capital punishment and that he did not feel that his magazine should take issue on the subject. I should keep my cheek, but the story would not be published by them; I could resell it if I wished."

"I let the matter drift, although I felt that I wanted to see the story published."

"One morning, two years later, my secretary handed me a paper."

"Look," she cried, with amazement in her voice.

"Joins in death the 140 men he slew," said the headlines. 'John Hulbert, by suicide, answers the question all who knew him asked.'"

"How I rejoiced that my story had not been published! I would always have been haunted by the thought that Hulbert had read my story and brooded over it, and had eventually committed suicide."

"In view of the strange finale of events, the magazine then published the story, and I rejoiced that I have been saved from that ghost."

A MAN OF PEACE

An old Quaker going down a street one night was assaulted by a thug who struck him on the cheek. The Quaker quietly turned to the thug and said:

"Would you mind slapping the other cheek also?"

The thug promptly did so, saying: "Well, you are an easy mark."

"Now God be praised!" said the Quaker, proceeding to throw off his coat and roll up his sleeves. "I have obeyed His teaching—and now I am going to lick hell out of thee!"

"Thanks to my terraced and contoured land, I raised enough feed to winter my cattle and won't have to sell them to the government," said E. A. Oberst, who lives five miles southeast of Canyon, to W. H. Unchurch, farm demonstration agent of Randall county. This feed enables Mr. Oberst to avoid sacrificing a herd that he has spent years developing.
