"Was that sandwich quite fresh that you sold me just now?" asked a customer in the snack bar, says London Tit-Bits.

LOCUSTS GOOD, SAY STUDENTS

If the example of University of Maryland entomological students is followed everyone may enjoy an un- usual dish every 17 years at least. As far back as Bible times records of locusts have been eaten. They are still considered delicacies in certain parts of the Orient—along with grass- hoppers and the like. Now the Mary- land students say the Orientals have had good judgment and that such dishes are "fit for a king," as the saying goes. They speak from ex- perience too. Locust Saute was the special dish at a recent banquet. According to J. A. Hyslop, Depart- ment of Agriculture expert, the recipe calls for young locusts freshly dug from the ground which are then fried lightly and quickly in butter. They are said to taste like soft- shelled crabs—but you can't prove it by the editor.—Pathfinder.

STATE RAILROAD COMMISSIONER
(Second Term)

Col. Thompson has made an enviable record in fighting for the state's rights to regulate the oil and gas industry in Texas. He is responsible for the gradually increasing market for Texas oil. Oil rates in many towns have been reduced through the efforts of Col. Thompson—including our own community. Motor transportation on highways has seen marked advancement during Col. Thompson's term of office. This directly benefits every man, woman and child in the state. Legal oil shipments by truck have almost been wiped out the past year. Rail- freight rates on cotton and feed have been cut during the last two years to the lowest level in Texas history. Col. Thompson is a strict believer in the conservation of the state's resources.

74th Congress Adjourns After a Long Session

THE Seventy-fourth congress adjourned after a session lasting five and a half months during which it appropriated nearly $10,000,000,000 and was faced by some unexpected legislative complications.

In the closing hours the emergency tax bill which is expected to produce $800,000,000 in revenue was passed. Supreme court invalidation of the AAA and Guffey coal bills and the passage of the cash soldiers' bonus over the President's veto upset the budget plans and made such a bill necessary.

Although it was passed by the house, the amended Guffey coal bill designed to remove the objections of the Senate court failed of passage in the Senate. Similarly, the Wagner slum housing bill, which had passed the Senate, failed in the house.

Larger than normal appropriations for governmental activities were passed. The bonus, farm payments, relief and the greatest national defense program in peace time history helped swell the total.

Funds for continuing the present relief program were voted; the public works revolving fund was amended to permit more heavy construction projects. But congress failed to approve the Florida ship canal and Passamaquoddy tide dam.

Invalidation of the AAA brought a revised and expanded soil conservation and domestic allotment act; the rural electrification administration and electric farm and home authority were both placed on a permanent basis; the Commodity Credit corporation was expanded; two flood control bills were passed. Labor received attention through the Walsh-Healy bill dealing with working conditions on government contracts. A compromise ship subsidy bill was rushed through in the closing hours. Financial legislation included expansion of the jurisdiction of SEC. Important among business legislation was the Patman bill amending the Clayton anti-trust act regarding price discrimination.

A number of important bills failed of enactment. Among these were the Pettigill long and short hauls bill, stockyard regulation, Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, and bills on the 30-hour week, extension of the railroad co-ordinator's tenure, anti-war profits, alien deportation, enlargement of the federal trade commission's power and treasury agency service.

In Russia, Maxim Gorky, early foe of the czars who became a hero of the Soviet regime and its outstanding writer, died of influenza at the age of sixty-eight. Although not a member of the Communist party, Gorky had a preeminent position in Soviet life and was a former member of the central executive committee. Moscow honored him with a public funeral and interment in the Kremlin in a niche facing Lenin's tomb.

Rep. Lemke Will Be Presidential Candidate

REPRESENTATIVE WILLIAM LEMKE of North Dakota announced that he would run for the Presidency as candidate of a new political group known as the Union party. Father Charles E. Coughlin, Detroit priest, is the leading sponsor of Lemke's candidacy. Thomas Charles O'Brien of Boston will be the vice-presidential candidate on the ticket, it was announced.

Mr. Lemke made public a 15-point platform embodying demands for refinancing of farm mortgages, old age security, a living wage for all workers, limitation on individual incomes, the establishment of a central bank, the issuance by congress of all currency and its regulation of the value of all the money.

Plans were made for the new party to hold a national convention some time during August in Cleveland.

Mr. Lemke said the Union party has the support of farm unions, labor, the National Union for Social Justice established by Father Coughlin, the Townsend old age pension movement and "all other liberals who have been driven from the old parties."

Packers Seek Recovery of All Processing Taxes

A BATTLE to recover all the processing taxes paid to the government under the invalidated AAA was undertaken by the "big four" of the packing industry—Swift and Company, Armour and Company, Wilson and Company and the Cudahy Packing company.

Having won back $45,000,000 when the AAA was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court the packing industry has decided to attempt to recover from the government more than $200,000,000 paid before injunctions against the tax were granted and subsequent payments impounded.

The meat packing industry as a whole paid a total of $271,000,000 in processing taxes from the inception of the AAA. The packers are basing their claims for recovery on the ground that as the Supreme court ruled the processing taxes invalid, payments made in accordance with that law were illegally collected and should be returned. It was reported that smaller packing companies were considering action to recover their tax payments, but have waited until the major units in the industry instituted their proceedings. The total in tax recoveries sought by the four big Chicago companies is approximately $100,000,000.

U. S. Revokes Sanctions Imposed on Italy

FOLLOWING the lead of Great Britain, the United States formally revoked all sanctions imposed against Italy during the recent Italo-Ethiopian conflict. A proclamation by President Roosevelt declared all previous communications dealing with the sale of munitions of war, loans and travel by Americans on Italian ships was revoked.

Although the sanctions were against both Italy and Ethiopia, in practical application they were used only against Italy, since the United States did not supply the African nation with any war materials and the empire of Haile Selassie had no ships of its own.

The French cabinet agreed to abide by any action which the League of Nations may take in cancelling sanctions against Italy.

The British government's decision to abandon sanctions was defended in an address by Prime Minister Baldwin as the only alternative which would prevent a suicidal war plunging western civilization into "barbarous anarchy."

Farm Income Sharply Up In Year's First Quarter

FARM cash income from marketing in the United States amounted to $2,017,000,000 in the first four months of 1936, compared with $1,749,000,000 last year, an increase of 15.3 per cent, according to a compilation issued by the Alexander Hamilton Institute.

The institute's figures showed that the price level during the first four months was 2.3 per cent lower than a year ago, but the quantity marketed showed an increase of 18.1 per cent.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"The Bridge That Wasn't There"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter.

WELL, give a good look at this one, boys and girls, from Dr. Alexander E. Strath-Gordon of East Orange, N. J. If you ever read this yarn he is going to tell you, in a novel, you wouldn't believe it could happen. If your own brother told it to you, you'd tell him he was just plain goofy.

Doc Strath-Gordon thought he was cracked himself when he found out what had happened. And the people he told his story to thought he was crazy, too—for a while. But here are the simple facts, all checked and attested and sworn to. You can't get around the truth of the thing.

You can't say it was a dream, because a bridge is a big, heavy, solid object. If it's there, it's there, and if it ain't, it ain't. You can't dream it out of place and then back again.

All of which leads up to Doc's story. The date is August, 1909, and the place is—well—somewhere on the road between Seattle, Wash., and Duwamish Head on the other side of Elliott bay. Doc was practicing medicine in Seattle and had received a hurry call from a patient in Duwamish Head.

Patient's Husband Thinks Doc Flew to Sick Room.

He started out in his car, and you know what those 1909 vintage automobiles were like. To make matters worse, the dirt roads of the time were wet from a week's steady rain. Parts of them were flooded. But a patient had called him, and even though he was twenty miles away, it was up to Doc to get to him if he possibly could.

The night was pitch dark. The roads were unlighted, and the flickering kerosene headlamps that rattled on the sides of Doc's horseless carriage didn't throw any light on the road at all. There were two ways to get to Duwamish Head and Doc took the shorter. It took him an hour and a half to cover that twenty miles, but when he got there, his patient's husband said: "Good gosh, but you made that trip fast. How did you manage to get here so quickly?"

Well, sir, Doc thought that was funny, but he didn't say anything then. His patient was waiting, and he was needed in the sick room. He worked over her for half an hour until she was out of danger, and then he went out to assure her husband that everything was all right.

Doc Hears He Crossed Bridge That Was Out.

He sat down for a few moments' rest before starting on the return trip, and again his patient's husband brought up the subject of the quickness with which he had arrived.

"How the dickens did you come here, anyway, Doctor?" he asked. "Did you fly?"

"Why, I came by the Bay Side road, of course," said Doc.

The man looked at Doc sidelongly, curiously. "You couldn't have," he said bluntly. "The bridge is out."

Doc thought he was joking, and tried to laugh it off. But the man insisted the bridge was being repaired—that the planking was all off and it was unpassable. He told Doc that the only available route to his house was the upper road, a 28-mile trip.

He began to urge Doc to stay all night, and at last Doc saw he was serious. Then it occurred to Doc that the man must have gone insane, or become unnerved by his wife's illness.

Daylight Reveals That Bridge Wasn't There.

Says Doc: "I decided to stay with him, partly to humor an overwrought man, and partly because I didn't think it safe to leave his sick wife alone with one in such condition. I spent the night at his house, and in the morning he brought the subject up again at breakfast. He said: 'Now Doc, let's both go down and look at that bridge before you go back to town.'"

There was something in that fellow's manner that reminded Doc of a sane man humoring a sick one. It occurred to him then that this bird thought he was the crazy one. But he agreed to go down and look over the bridge, which was only a mile distance from the house. They got into Doc's car and drove the short distance down the road. They got in sight of the bridge, and then—

"Imagine my surprise—even horror," says Doc, "when I saw that bridge in broad daylight. All that he had told me was true! There was nothing left of the bridge but the gaunt string pieces—two of them—running from one side of the river to the other."

Strath-Gordon Had Piloted Car Over Fingers of Death.

"The planking—the rails—the superstructure, all had been taken away. And yet, I had come across that bridge in the darkness of the night. I knew that, I wasn't crazy. And yet, for a moment, I began to think that I was losing my mind."

"The string pieces were the answer. They were less than a foot wide, each, but they were separated by the same width as the wheels of my automobile. I had driven across them in the dark, like an acrobat on a tight wire. My heart came into my throat when I thought of what might have happened."

All the local people knew that the bridge was impassable, so no warning sign had been posted. I, not knowing this, and having crossed it so many times before, drove over it automatically. The only way I can explain the miracle is that, having a surgeon's hand, I drove with the same steadiness with which I performed operations. Had I deviated an inch from the straight path over that bridge, I would have fallen into deep water—and I might not have attended my patient."

History of the Fan Is as Old as Civilization

Ever since the vestal virgins used fans to encourage sacrificial fires, women have prized these time-honored implements of coquetry, states a writer in the Kansas City Star. Cupid, according to mythology, tore a wing from Zephyr's shoulder when he was flirting with Psyche and presented it to her to prove he was the better man.

"Helen of Troy," Euripides wrote, "knew when she suffered from summer heat how to cool her cheeks, fresh and velvety as a ripe peach, by the use of a peacock's tail arranged fan-wise."

Queen Elizabeth loved fans and her subjects vied with one another in giving them to her. It is said she had 27 in her wardrobe when she died. Shakespeare demanded a wing of painted butterfly to waft over the sleeping Titania.

The history of the fan is as old as civilization. In the beginning it probably was a palm leaf or a bird wing used for winnowing grain, fanning fires or brushing flies. The first record of a fan, it is said, appears in the annals of the Chow dynasty, 1052-1101 B. C. The emperor received as tribute two magnificent tropical birds. The birds not surviving, the feathers were made into fans. Ancient sculpture shows attendant women waving fans.

Fans were first used by men, but women soon discovered their artistic possibilities and quickly appropriated them. When an emperor went to war two fans were nailed upright on his chariot as standards. The empress carried a fan to dust the chariot wheels lest her robes become soiled.

Glazed Chintz and Quilted

Gay Prints for Gay Hours

COME to the party frocked in gay glazed chintz and you will look not only charming but "new" as to fashion. What! Glazed chintz going formal after all these years it has been serving as material for sofa cushions on summer verandas, as bathroom curtains and as general utility household hangings? Yes'm, it's not only true but what's more, glazed chintz is simply perfect in the new role it is playing as high-style fabric for evening gowns and wraps. Try a gown of glazed chintz, you'll love it.

You will be perfectly safe and sane in choosing a dress of glazed chintz for the merits of this charming material have been recognized by leading Paris couturiers. Worth fashions an evening redingote with big sleeves of this cotton, the patterning of which accents huge gorgeous flowers.

See in the picture the lady seated in the foreground. The adorable gown she wears is fashioned of gleaming glazed chintz or cired chintz, as some call it. The daring astral patterning is done in vivid coloring on a dark background. Bows of self-fabric accent the off-shoulder silhouette. The Alix skirt is cut with a very full circular flare in last-minute fashion.

It is nothing short of a revelation the way cottons of every description are coming to the fore in a formal way. Designers are fearless in appropriating the most ordinary of household cottons for their use in creating fashionable apparel. For instance, clever coats to wear this summer, are being made of bed-spread pique and they are that

Cottons Gain Favor

Each summer proclaims the uprising of some particular cottons. Denim appears in some smartly tailored suits with fitted or swagger jackets. Long cloth familiar in the past for intimate wear and baby dresses has been printed up for daytime, play and evening fashions that are fresh and fashionable.

Smith Asks Roosevelt "Be Put Aside"

CALLING upon the delegates to the Democratic national convention to "put aside Franklin D. Roosevelt" and to nominate "some genuine Democrat" for President, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and four other anti-administration Democrats charged the New Deal with failure.

The demand came in the form of a telegram and was signed by Smith, Bainbridge Colby, secretary of state under President Wilson, James A. Reed, former senator from Missouri, Joseph B. Ely, former governor of Massachusetts, and Daniel F. Cohalan, former justice of the Supreme court of New York.

Former Governor Smith and his colleagues indicated that they will not support President Roosevelt in the forthcoming Presidential campaign, fulfilling Smith's previous threat to "take a walk."

Pro-Roosevelt delegates from every section of the country prepared for a concerted attack upon the "bolters."

Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York turned his back upon Mr. Smith and predicted President Roosevelt would carry New York by a substantial majority in November. He declared:

"I have read the statement. I am confident that the views expressed by the five signers of statement represent the feelings of only a handful of Democrats."

Death Takes von Buelow Noted German Diplomat

THE death of Bernhard W. von Buelow, secretary of state for foreign affairs in the Hitler cabinet, removed one of the most skilled of Europe's diplomats. Von Buelow, who was fifty-one, was an expert on the League of Nations and gave his country valuable counsel when Germany began to consider rejoining the league. He was noted as a studious and hard-working official, with a vast amount of detailed information always readily available.

A "blueblood" of the German nobility, the diplomat was a nephew of the late Prince Bernhard von Buelow, imperial chancellor. He was one of the first of the German nobles to associate himself with the republican regime after the collapse of the empire in 1918. Although different in background from Hitler, he nevertheless enjoyed the chancellor's confidence.

In diplomatic circles it was regarded as likely that Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, chief of the political department of the Foreign office, will succeed Buelow as secretary of state.

The First Declaration ★

Years before, in 1776, Nathaniel Bacon (above) signed a famous "Declaration of Independence" wherein the king's governor was vigorously arraigned. Bacon died when he died suddenly.

ons Yearly ew Declaration

MORE than a million patriotic pilgrims a year pause before a marble shrine on the second floor of the Library of Congress to gaze with reverent eyes at a fading document—sheltered in a coating of gelatin to prevent its further injury—which is a certain Declaration of Independence signed in the city of Philadelphia on July 4, 1776.

John Hancock

his signature to this fateful paper he remarked: "I'll write it large so King George can read it without his spectacles."

John Hancock, one of the richest men of Boston town, had much to lose by his stand. It was no idle gesture to him, this adoption of the cause of the colonies. His properties were to be forfeited to the crown for what would be considered an act of treason but John Hancock did not hesitate because of this. He was a native of Braintree, therefore a friend and neighbor, no doubt, of John Adams, who was afterward to be the second President of the United States.

The adopted son of an uncle, Thomas Hancock, who left him a large fortune, young Hancock was a graduate of Harvard in 1754, and was one of a numerous family of Hancocks in the vicinity.

As a member of the Committee of Safety appointed after the massacre at Boston asking the British to withdraw, Hancock had counseled every honorable means to avoid the conflict.

When the Continental Congress was named John Hancock represented Massachusetts therein and in 1775-1777 served as its president.

In his spacious Boston mansion meanwhile Lord Percy, Britain's pet, held many a party. A price was put on the head of John Hancock as well, which only increased the game patriot. Hancock was so eager to fight that he let it be known that he was willing to face the hardships of the field. But congress was wise and kept him in his post as the presiding officer.

Printed the Declaration

The Declaration of Independence was printed on the press of John Dunlap during the night of July 4, 1776, in Philadelphia.

When the Fourth Was Noisiest Day

LOOKING back from the security of our present Fourth of July saneness to the early 1900s when all Fourths were insane, we are compelled to admit that we did pretty well in those days considering the limited means we had of being insane compared to the advantages we enjoy now in our state of scientific sanity, states a writer in the Kansas City Star.

To a boy of the Insane Fourth era, the Fourth of July ranked only with Christmas in fiscal importance. On Christmas we knew it was 192 days to the Fourth, and on the Fourth we knew we had only 173 days until Christmas. Christmas savings funds had not been invented at that time, and would have been of no interest to boys anyhow, because boys were on the receiving end at Christmas.

On the night before the Fourth, the children began showing strange symptoms, especially an unnatural willingness to go to bed early. That gesture was deceiving and specious; the children were not interested in getting their rightful rest before a strenuous day, but were insuring themselves against the sad accident of sleeping past three o'clock in the morning. Any boy who wasn't out by three o'clock in the morning shooting firecrackers under the respective windows of the pastor, the school principal and the truancy officer was deemed a sissy and not fit for human companionship the rest of the day.

The opening ceremony was the only one unanimously attended. From that time on, too many things were happening to engage the entire juvenile attention at one time. There was the sunrise salute of 21 guns, engineered by the village blacksmith who placed one great anvil upon another with giant powder in between, touched off from a daring proximity with a red hot iron. Usually the nether anvil grew very hot before the 21 salutes were fired and this was one of the causes of many distressing accidents in the insane era. At ten o'clock there was the rendition of the "Star-Spangled Banner," led by the band and assisted by the ladies of the G. A. R., whose voices sometimes didn't quite make the high notes; and the reading of the Declaration of Independence by the mayor.

Hostilities usually were suspended at noon for the community dinner in the city park, where fried chicken, watermelon and lemonade from a barrel engaged the general attention until satiety was reached. The afternoon was a dizzy succession of patriotic and athletic events, wherein the popular candidate for congress, vied with the honorable candidate wound up with a ball game, for popular attention. If the honorable candidate wound up with thirty in his audience, and the ball game wound up in a fight with victory for the home club, the celebration was considered a success. The only remaining item of importance was the stupendous fireworks display, staged on a hay wagon at the north end of Main street; an event which sometimes was rained out, and sometimes prematurely ignited by over-zealous manipulators, resulting in bad burns duly chronicled in the vital statistics column of the home paper in the succeeding issue.

Such was the Fourth of July celebration in the early 1900s, fraught, as one may see, with a lot of danger later minimized by the sane Fourth campaign.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Heroes of the Southwest.
GALLUP, N. M. — Through the dust of vanished yesterdays we've just traveled the high ranges of the earlier pistoleroes—Pat Garrett of the itchy trigger finger; and John Wesley Hardin, the Texas preacher's boy turned scorpion; and Doc Holliday, the coughing dentist with his nervous mannerism of shooting people; and that babyish king of all the killers, little saved-off Billy the Kid, who smiled his diffident buck-toothed smile even as he blasted out a life for every one of the twenty-one years of his life, "not counting," as he himself would say, "Mexicans and Indians."

Irvin S. Cobb

We viewed the historic bullet pocks and their personal burying grounds, and we discovered just one survivor of those ancient two-gun clans—a rancid octogenarian, wearing the look about him of a venerable, shamefaced sheep where he sat with a gingham apron draping the withered flanks which once had supported his artillery, and he shelling pens by the kitchen door of his present wife's boarding house.

As somebody prematurely remarked, before I thought it up myself, the old Southwest is gone. But you never saw nobbler service stations than we passed, nor shinier beauty parlors, and the curb service was excellent.

Destructive Pests.
ALTHOUGH it weren't bad enough already with a Presidential campaign on this year, grasshoppers have threatened growing things in the Midwest.

True to their advance notices, the 17-year locusts are popping out along the eastern seaboard. In Ontario a plague of caterpillars covered the railroad tracks so thickly trains could not run on schedule.

There's no word yet from our little southern friend, the boll weevil, but news is expected. Maybe he's waiting for the return of the cotton crops that we used to plant for the export trade—when we had an export cotton trade.

The pine borer is reported on the job in the north woods. To date, out here, we have only the regular resident pests, including the white termite, the red ant and the mother who can prove her child is another Shirley Temple, if her obduracy will only listen. Of the last-named, we already have upwards of 30,000 and more arriving every day.

Still, we cannot hope to escape. Presently the party who goes around taking straw votes on the election will start multiplying rapidly. And then professional California spellbinders will be binding; and at any moment Upton Sinclair is liable to start running for something.

What Makes News.
SOME gentleman who must work at the postoffice because, seemingly, stamps don't mean a thing in the world to him, keeps taking issue with me for saying the reason why successful newspapers feature so-called sensational above news of art and science and literature is not through any desire to pander to morbid or vulgar tastes, but because the average publisher, being a smart merchandiser, puts such wares in his shop window, which is his front page, as are calculated to catch the eye and win the trade of the general public.

My correspondent demands an answer. All right, let's make it a parable:

Suppose, mister, that tomorrow, through the town where you live, passes a train bearing a distinguished savant who has made some great discovery—say, the cause and cure of botch—and on another train there is a tuff-haired lady who, after a spectacular murder trial, has just been triumphantly acquitted on the ground of self-defense for shooting a gentleman friend eight or nine times in the back. Which one of these two travelers will draw the biggest crowd down to the station? And, brother, which train will you meet?

Favorite Son Keynote.
BACK home the folks are all puffed up with pride. Our own Albin W. Barkley keynoted for the Democratic convention until the rafters warped.

Besides being a grand person and a hard-working senator, he's one of the last of the real southern silver-tongued—the kind that can make a song of a syllable and turn any reasonably long word into an anthem.

And does he come from the place where the true faith prevails? The majority stabilized just as soon as we got a lot of old-timers to quit voting for Jeff Davis. We weaned them on W. J. Bryan. Ours is probably the only congressional district in the Union that never has gone Republican, although, when Al Smith ran, it had a comparatively close call from going Baptist.

Let the creatures of entrenched greed beware. As goes Paducah, so goes Paducah.

But the Young Man Said a Golf Club

The multi-millionaire's beautiful daughter was drowning when her canoe tipped and a gallant young man dived in and saved her.

Pop was so grateful that he signed a check and said, "Noble sir, fill in your name and sum you wish."

The youth smiled modestly and replied, "I desire no reward, I merely did what any chap would do."

But the father was so pressing that the hero remarked casually: "Oh, well, if you insist, just give me a golf club."

A week later he received a telegram from the multi-millionaire: "Have bought for you Green Valley, Am now negotiating for Sunnydale."

There is a growing need for a swimming pool at McLean, and it would appear that one should be a paying proposition for someone.

Flies do not get very far from their breeding places, and the epidemic of house flies now in McLean is due to the stock lots in town. Concrete floors in cow sheds and hog lots would help solve the problem.

With many good men in each party, it is too bad that so much mud slinging is done. It is much better to talk the merits of your party, or favorite candidate, than to talk the demerits of the other party or its candidates.

The most satisfactory way to close for holidays is for the merchants to agree at the beginning of the year just what holidays they want to observe. This would prevent the last-minute confusion that sometimes obtains when trying to reach an agreement to close for any certain day.

A garden enthusiast mentioned the fact the other day that when people have trouble they call on their garden friends for flowers, but at other times some of them turn their chickens and dogs loose to ruin their neighbors' gardens. While any garden friend is glad to furnish flowers when needed, yet it would seem that those who have no use for flowers except in time of trouble would try to see that their animals and chickens do not trespass on others' gardens.

School men deplore the increasing tendency to over-emphasize school athletics, which is almost entirely a growth from outside the school system—a demand for entertainment from fans. Thousands of dollars are tied up in equipment that can only be used half a dozen times a year, and while the school athlete finds his services in great demand during the school season, he finds no use of any kind for his prowess after he receives his diploma.

This is a problem that will have a lot of attention from educators within the next few years.

College Station, June 30—When the Federal Government's new business with farmers came into the state of Texas four months ago, action and speed became the keynotes of the agricultural center at the Agricultural and Mechanical College.

The two-wing building, shown in the upper left, was built by the A. & M. College in which to house the 325 trained workers of the General Auditing and General Accounting divisions. It has 18,820 square feet of floor space.

The brick building, on the campus of A. & M. College, shown upper right, with a floor space of 4,000 square feet, was rapidly turned into the Disbursing Office, a branch of the U. S. Treasury with a personnel of 93 who are busy writing checks for the Texas farmers participating in the various agricultural programs.

Lower left to right—Here are the 325 men and women carrying on the auditing and accounting work of clearing the remaining old AAA contracts, the checking and certifying of the Cotton Price Adjustment Program applications and the working out of the details of the Agricultural Conservation Program with its more than 300,000 farmer cooperators.

A majority of the work of these divisions, during the last few months, has been on the Cotton Price Adjustment Program. An average of 4,000 Cotton Price Adjustment applications per day are being certified for payment, amounting in number up to date to 186,082 and totaling $6,880,503.28.

Lower middle—The State Agricultural Conservation Committee holding its first meeting at A. & M. College to plan for the tabulation of the work sheets of the 300,000 farmers who have indicated their intention to cooperate in the 1936 Agricultural Conservation Program.

In one year the government sold more than 635,000,000 duck stamps.

SYNOPSIS

Charles Brynildson III, a tall young man of wealth, and his wife, Tubby Forbes, are discussing their coming marriage. Tubby believes it is time to get Bryn's wealth from her. She should the girl, Deborah, whom she had met at the office of his attorney. The Holworthy, marry Stuart, who will inherit a vast fortune. Deborah, who refuses to marry him, Bryn, posing as an unemployed engineer, offers to marry Deborah. She is surprised to find her charming and sweet. The wedding over, the couple arrives at the home of Deborah's grandmother. The grandmother and Bryn, who she believes to be Stuart, take to one another, which somewhat displeases Deborah, who foresees difficulty when they are to separate after a year. Deborah commiserates with Bryn for his familiarity and insincerity. Bryn declares he is sincere.

She was gazing into his face. A slow wave of color, quite unlike the angry flush of a short time ago, began to spread up from her throat over her face. She dropped her eyes.

"As for you," Bryn went on calmly, "it would be most presumptuous for me to have any feeling for you whatever. You are, in a sense, my employer. I recognize that. I have no idea of presuming on that relationship. Nothing could be farther from my mind. However—it might be easier for both of us, under the circumstances, if we came to a definite agreement as to my duties and my attitude. Obviously we cannot go on as we began yesterday, or all our plans and sacrifices so far are wasted."

She had turned away and was surveying the eastern horizon. Now she faced him. "Did you make sacrifices to do this for me?" she demanded.

"Nothing of any particular importance," he replied calmly. "Nothing that will not be far outweighed by the benefits I will receive from it. How long a year is a year?"

"You considered," "I'm afraid I was very thoughtless."

She began to smile. "I suppose there are other girls somewhere in the world," she said with a touch of relief. "I am a stupid creature. I might have guessed. It's because you're so self-centered here. To be perfectly plain, you have been putting yourself to the utmost to live up to your bargain, and I've been thinking about it. Haven't I? I'm sorry. It's going to be . . ." she bent over and lifted her bowl. "I think I have enough," she went on.

Bryn took the bowl. They walked slowly toward the house. The door suddenly thrown open by his veils of clouds and emerged in glory.

Entering the kitchen together, they found Gary there. "This is certainly an early rising household," remarked Bryn. "Up with the birds," must be its motto."

He put down his coffee cup, Gary served them in the sitting room. He reached into his pocket mechanically for his cigarette case. "Mind if I smoke?"

At the round table, Deborah looked at her head.

"Told me . . . and Mr. Hoy told me . . . that . . . that is easy to get nowadays."

"Easy?"

"Don't ask you," she went on slowly. "Something I should have asked. My mother's day a divorce was a disgraceful thing. Is it a disgraceful thing to be divorced? Does it . . . ?"

"I can manage it so quietly that no one will know you've been married."

"I wasn't thinking exactly of my mother," she said, faint color in her cheeks. "Nobody knows me. It wouldn't be a disgraceful thing for me. I was thinking of you. I was wondering if the . . . the girl you . . . that is, the girl you care about . . . don't mind rather dreadfully. I don't quite understand these things," she hurried on, "but I think if I were she I should mind."

"Did I say I cared about a girl?" Bryn inquired, in surprise.

"Perhaps I saw for myself that there must be one. You spoke of sacrifices. You couldn't have meant your career, because you told me yourself it was at a standstill, and would be assisted by this agreement of ours. And . . . saw quite a lot of other young men," she said, scarlet, but determined, "and it seems to me that you and your friend, Mr. Forbes, were much the . . . the most attractive. So there must be a girl. I am glad, of course it will make Gary feel much better. But has the world become so liberal minded that she won't mind your taking this way to earn money for her?" Her eyes lifted to his, waiting.

Bryn considered. If he said there was no girl, Deborah might take fright again. Gary, thoroughly conscious of the amount of loveliness and charm and innocence which Deborah possessed, would certainly do what he could to spoil this friendliness and trust which were beginning to spring to life.

"I must tell Tubby what you said about him," he said lightly. "He will be extremely flattered, as I am. And grateful. As for your other question—I can assure you that no complication will arise."

She had begun to speak, perhaps to question him further, when a bell tinkled inside the kitchen. She rose hastily. "That's Grandmother," she explained, and hurried down the steps to the narrow side door into the kitchen. Bryn sat down again and lit another cigarette, thinking.

He recalled himself with a start, and got up hastily. He lifted the table, dishes and all, and carried it down

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Land Ho! The Changing Ocean Safety and Speed Much for Science

Arthur Brisbane from Chicago to Lake Forest, or from Wall street to Forty-second street by subway. You are in Europe before you realize that you have started. The poetry of travel has departed with fast ships on the ocean and automobiles instead of camels on the desert.

No matter how often you cross this Atlantic ocean, or the North American continent, the crossing is always different and interesting. The ocean, like the wide plains, is forever changing.

Two days ago the waves looked like playthings for children. Last night the ocean changed its mind and rolled the waves up high with a shrieking wind. The steward said, "We shall have to fasten the arm chairs tomorrow," but the heavy ship paid no attention to the waves. The ocean changed its mind again and calmed down.

A speedometer telling how fast the ship moves is operated by a mechanism like the keel that records the speed of the rushing water. Burning oil produces steam; steam power is converted into electric power, and that drives the ship. The captain always knows how deep the ocean is beneath him; an electric contrivance sends a sound wave down through the water to the bottom, which sends back an echo.

Knowing the speed at which sound travels through water, it is easy to calculate the depth. The machine does it for you. It is a feeble sound—one hundred and sixty thousand vibrations per second. No human ear could pick it up, but the machine records it. Twenty-five thousand vibrations per second is the limit of your ear, and that is not bad for a primitive contrivance like a human being.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war in the "big" war, tells graduating students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology it is their duty to "carry science into politics." Scientists, Mr. Baker thought, must seek for "the solution of world problems when the great international crisis comes, as it surely will come."

A sufficient "great crisis" seems to be here now, with many countries wanting to fight each other, different classes already fighting each other, and in this richest country in the world—ten million human beings living practically on charity.

If that is not a real crisis, few would care to see one.

George Bernard Shaw, not yet eighty, says, "I must give up public speaking. I am too old." That surprises you from a Celt and an Irishman. At eighty many men have been vigorous in thought and body; for instance, Pope Leo, Von Moltke, Gladstone, Michelangelo.

Not one of those, however, suffered from handicaps that have aged George Bernard Shaw prematurely; he is a vegetarian and a teetotaler. Youth and strength reside in a saddle of four-year-old mutton and good, light claret, greatly diluted with water.

In spite of England's pitifully weak and belated backdown on sanctions, due to London's fear of Mussolini's air fleet; a backdown denounced as cowardice by Lloyd George, Britain, for face-saving purposes, will maintain a great fleet in the Mediterranean. Mussolini will welcome such convenient air and submarine targets near home as a sort of British hostages to fortune.

M. Aurio announces that France will not devalue the franc any further. It has already been reduced by 80 per cent, as though our dollar had been knocked down to twenty cents. Instead of fifty-nine cents, Prime Minister Blum knows that it does not pay to scare capital out of its wits, something that our best Washington minds have still to learn. The French workmen will have their forty-hour week and the strikes are about over. The French, a homogeneous people, realize that if they destroy France they will not have much left.

Returning to the real American interest, the defeat of Joe Louis, young gentlemen and old will observe that it is most important in all undertakings not to be afraid, worn out or cowardly. Fighters that Louis had encountered saw before them "an invincible conqueror of men."

Watch Your Kidneys!

Be Sure They Properly Cleanse the Blood YOUR kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as nature intended—fail to remove impurities that poison the system when retained. Then you may suffer nagging backache, dizziness, scanty or too frequent urination, getting up at night, puffiness under the eyes, feel nervous, miserable—all upset. Don't delay? Use Doan's Pills. Doan's are especially for poorly functioning kidneys. They are recommended by grateful users the country over. Get them from any druggist.

"WASTED, A GOOD EDUCATION"

"I don't know why I did it. I've certainly wasted a good education," were the words of a Chicago medical student as he faced officers who were questioning him about an automobile accident in which he and four others were severely injured.

It appeared that a pint of whiskey could do much to make life miserable, even for a senior in medicine who, after his graduation in June, had been promised an internship in a Cleveland hospital. At any rate, the young man, who confessed that he "couldn't remember what had happened" after he had consumed the aforesaid liquor, said he stole the taxicab "because it seemed such a joke at the time." He drove the cab at high speed, and crashed into a stalled automobile, with resultant injuries to himself and the four passengers he had picked up—also "as a joke." He was arraigned on charges of reckless driving and larceny of the cab.

The student was very contrite about the matter. "I never did any drinking until a year ago," he asserted. "I wouldn't have had this happen for anything. I only took that cab because it seemed like a good joke."—Union Signal.

Just as Good...

Often said, but seldom proved

Printing, like most other commodities, is subject to a variety of qualities, dependent on how much you wish to pay.

Formerly, many buyers too often felt that the low bid was the right price. Now we are glad to note that a distinctly different trend is manifesting itself. "You get what you pay for" demonstrates its truth. Buyers now are beginning to look askance at a low price.

It is not how many letter heads for a dollar, but how many dollars in value you get for your money.

PREVENTION

 problems immediately assert themselves. According to averages, some two billion swims will be enjoyed by people in our country during this swimming season, and again, according to the law of averages, some eight thousand adults and children will forfeit their lives either to carelessness, inability to swim properly, or accidents preventable and otherwise. From these facts it easily will be seen that the situation is sufficiently alarming to warrant the attention of authorities and individuals everywhere.

But there is one more enemy that strikes with equally fatal strokes on Independence Day. This is the careless automobile driver, the driver who believes himself immune from traffic regulations on crowded holiday highways, who is in a great hurry to get to or from the beach or the picnic grounds, and who sacrifices the rights of others on the altar of speed and impatience.

On the morning of July fifth each year the newspapers carry tabulated stories from all over the United States listing deaths and injuries from automobile accidents, along with drownings. It is a story newspapermen automatically turn to writing on this particular day. If you by any chance would doubt this, take a look at your morning paper this coming July fifth. Ten to one you'll find this story given a prominent place on the front page of all metropolitan newspapers, many of the smaller ones.

With the march of progress that we are all so boastful of in the United States, it is ironic to note the height of the accident rates. Carelessness is undeniably at the root of this condition.

Think of the memories that will come to you during the years in the future should you run a little child down on your way to the picnic this year! Think of the home you may run by careless driving while giving your family an outing on this coming holiday! Think of the sorrow that could come to your own family should you drive carelessly or impatiently this Fourth!

We have a great and beautiful country to be thankful for, and as a nation still young we have much to look forward to. Let us unite as a nation of wise people to cut the terrible loss of life and limb from accidents, do it quickly and drastically, and begin by making this year's holiday a truly "safe and sane Fourth."

HOW WAR DEBTS WERE MADE

Contrary to erroneous opinion in some quarters, the United States did not lend our wartime allies cash money or gold to the tune of more than $10,000,000,000, which they now seem unwilling to pay. During the World War, the total stocks of money of all kinds in the United States amounted to less than $6,000,000,000. By the end of the war it had increased to over $7,000,000,000, showing that little of it went across the "pond." The present debtors "touched" Uncle Sam for so great a sum in this way. During the war period we sent abroad not money but munitions, cotton, foodstuffs, tobacco, cloth for uniforms, steel, and other supplies of war that were so badly needed. Not only did we send the flower of our manhood free, but all of these materials were sent on credit. There wasn't enough gold in all the world to pay for the goods we sent. After the war several different debt refunding agreements were made and payments were made on the installment plan up to June, 1924. Since then all of the nations except Finland have defaulted on their semi-annual payments.

Despite recent references in France and Great Britain as to the resuming of war debt discussions and possible payments, there is little hope that anything will be done. Europe is in a constant state of turmoil and terror. All of the principal debtor nations, and in fact nearly all nations of the world, are burdened to the gills with huge expenditures for armaments. Because of this there is no chance for curtailment of their American debts. And so pathetic as it seems, the only thing left for the United States to do is to hope that some day international conditions will improve sufficiently to allow substantial part payment, if not payment in full.—Patriot.

The newest color is the "Poppy Anne London Yellow," a soft clear shade symbolic of the Sunflower state which is especially becoming to the daughter of the Republican nominee for President.

We must not spend that which we do not have.—Gov. Landon.
