and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines, 85 horsepower for maximum performance, 60 horsepower for maximum economy. The 60-horsepower V-8 engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine, available in five body types, is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase - to the same advanced design - with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." And it delivers V-8 smoothness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour. Two engine sizes-but only one car and one purpose-to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937.

THE sea, boys and girls, has produced some pretty tough L customers. What I mean, Pop-eye the Sailor isn't entirely the figment of a cartoonist's imagination. He's more than half truth. The lads who spend their whole lives fighting the elements in the places where those elements are at their worst, develop the sort of constitution that a dray horse would envy. Some of their feats of endurance are almost unbelievable.

Well sir, we've got a sailor with us today, in the person of Distinguished Adventurer Janis Libert of Brooklyn, N. Y., but I'm going to let you judge for yourself whether or not Jan is one of the lads who can take it when the sea starts dishing it out. And just to give you something to judge by, I'm going to tell you the story of an adventure he had on St. Patrick's day, March 17, 1920.

Jan was signed on as an able seaman on the S. S. Tewkesbury, out of the Peruvian port of Antofogasta with a eargo of nitrate, bound for Hamburg, Germany. They had passed through the Panama canal, coaled ship at St. Louisburg, and then beat their way through high seas and heavy snowstorms until they were nearing the Newfoundland coast. There the first trouble

She Struck a Submerged Ledge.

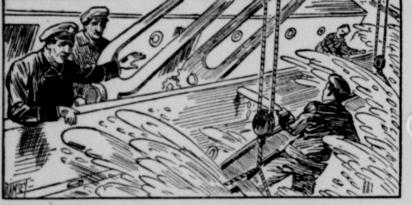

A few miles off Newfoundland the ship was caught in a heavy undersea current that began dragging them toward the barren cliffs that marked the coast. The Tewkesbury was doing 11 knots an hour, in an effort to beat out to sea again, but the current was dragging it inshore at the rate of 30 knots an hour, and it was only a matter of arithmetic to figure out how long she'd stay afloat.

Jan says it was five bells St. Patrick's day morning-2:30 a. m. to us landlubbers-when the Tewkesbury struck a submerged ledge about a ship's length away from the 250-foot cliff that rose in front of them. As they struck, the VESSEL'S BOTTOM WAS RIPPED OUT. The stern broke off and slid from the ledge into 30 fathoms of water.

Immediately, the crew tried to launch life-boats, but one by one they were dashed to pieces against the side of the ship by the heavy sea that was running. There were two lifeboats left-barely enough to carry off the crew of 28 and the 3 passengers-when Captain Privox, the skipper, ordered two men to get into the next boat and fend it off from the sides while it was being lowered. One of the men was Jan Libert.

Jan Was Left to Do the Job Alone.

It was a hard job-and a dangerous one. It's no cinch to fend off a heavy lifeboat in a sea strong enough to dash a steamer against the rocks. But how dangerous, Jan had no idea in the beginning. He got a hint of it, though, when his partner caught his hand in a pulley and smashed it while trying to pull in a piece of slack rope. That left Jan to fend the boat off alone—a perilous, two-man job, in the hands of one. IT WAS A BATTLE FOR LIFE. Not only Jan's life, but the lives of a dozen others as well. If that boat smashed up, there would be only one left, and that barely half big enough to hold the passengers and crew. The seas were so high that Jan had all he could do to keep the boat from smashing-so violent that the skipper couldn't send another man down to help him. The Newfoundland waters were cold as ice, and the Newfoundland winds were colder still. As Jan labored to keep the boat away from the side, the salt spray collected on his hands-soaked his clothing-and froze there!

The lifeboat was pitching and tossing like a chip in a hurricane. It was impossible to load the crew into it while the lashing storm kept up its furious assault. And so, FOR THREE HOURS Jan fought a battle against cold, ice and the Atlantic three terrible hours during which time the only chance to rescue all the crew lay in Jan's freezing hands.

Snow was falling by the time the wind had calmed and the loading of the boats started. Then minutes after fresher, less weary men took over the task of fending off the boat, Jan's hands were frozen and useless. Still he wasn't much better off than when he'd been fighting the elements alone. Tremendous seas rapidly filled both boats and, due to the cliffs that stretched along the shore, the only place either of them could land was at Peters river, 15 miles away. Frozen though he was, Jan knew it would be a long time before he got a chance to thaw out

Too Cold to Heed the Warning.

While some of the crew rowed and the others bailed for their lives, the two boats started out on a heartbreaking journey. For FOUR MORE HOURS they kept up the struggle. "And believe me," says Jan, "if I thought I was cold before, I now knew what cold really was As we pointed our boat toward the beach, a fisherman hailed us and warned us not to try to land there. But we were all so cold and weak that we knew it was our only chance.'

Desperate, the freezing mariners headed their boats into the breakers, not knowing what new danger to expect. They found out soon enough. As the combers threw the boats into shallow water, they hit sunken rocks and capsized, hurling their occupants in all directions. A wave hit Jan and hurled him under water-whirled him round and round. He was too weak to fight it. He thought he was finished then.

He was about to give up when he felt gravel under his feet. He stood up-sank to his knees in soft sand, and remained there, rooted to the spot, exposed to the full force of the giant combers that rolled over him one after another. The world began to go black in front of his eyes, and the next thing Jan remembered was someone's hand clutching at his neck-dragging him to shore.

For the next few weeks, Jan saw everything through a gray haze. At first he thought he was going blind from exposure. After a while, hough, the fog vanished from before his eyes, and he could see as well as ever. You have the whole story now-and you can judge for yourselves if Jan can take it when Old Man Sea dishes it out. @-WNU Serv

BORESOME holiday! If only I had invited Fred to come here with me," Manly jerked his hat from a rack when Julia, his sister, rushed into the hall:

comers of the city."
"I don't care much about the party. But so much in the papers about the Willis Graham's family who will be at the Judge's. Graham is the big shot who made millions from his washing machine patents. He's sort of a god in these parts. He has no son-but some daughters. Maybe, when I'm through college old Graham might husband. She was raving about remember a Manly boy, for an my husband's eyes, and engineer or in his office." Manly, form, and clothes and—" after assuring his sister, Mrs. Horace Linn, that he would accompany her, mused on his way down to

Manly's parents had gone South for the winter and Julia had urged her brother to spend the holidays with them because she and Horace would be a bit lonely since recently settling in the thriving factory municipality of Palas City. At first Manly reasoned that Horace and Julia wouldn't enjoy his peddling around, since they were newlyweds, and thought to decline the urgent invitation. But remembering the loneliness of a home, without parents, he found himself in his sister's comfortable home, for at least two weeks "en-duration" as he thought. In evening clothes Manly was nearest satisfied with himself as being "well groomed," than in any other attire. Somehow, the black dinner coat, light vest, brilliant studs in the spotless shirt front, illuminated the sparkle of his brown eyes and enhanced the manliness of his form. Upon arriving at the ancestral estate of Judge Thompson, Manly was bewildered when the Judge, with unusual ceremony, introduced them as "Mr. and Mrs. Horace Linn, new residents of Palas City!'

"Sh! They think you are my husband. Don't make them any wiser. Horace and I are strangers, you know, here," Julia motioned. Not knowing whether Julia had planned to pass her brother off as her husband, or whether it was a surprise to Julia, as well as to hiraself, Manly played "husbandly faithful" beside Julia. But it seemed that every place Manly stood or sat, Patricia, one of the Graham daughters, was near, kindly gracious, but aloof. When he asked her to dance she quickly assented, as though she feared he might never ask for another dance. "She thinks I am married. Huh! A Manly Christmas husband, indeed! Dum it all! Why did Julia get me into this jam? She will have to un-jam me," he snorted to himself.

Julia seemed satisfied with the evening's pleasures. But Manly felt for the first time, that his sister was selfish. "Of course," he reasoned," sister doesn't suspect that I wanted more dances with Patricia, and a chat on the mezzanine in one of those brilliantly Christmas decorated booths up there. If Julia suspicioned such a thing, she is clever at hiding it."

The next morning's mail brought Manly an invitation to a party at Willis Graham's for the Graham daughters! "How do they know my name is not Horace Linn and that I am not the husband of my sister?" Manly asked, almost provoked at the smile on the face of his sister who was at that moment darning her brother's hose.

"Of course, you'll go. A secret! No, not a secret any longer because the secret has been long enough," she teased. "I whispered to Patricia, at the party, that you were my brother and to introduce you to others of the younger groups, and to Mr. Graham. She, however, promised secrecy to all but Mr. Graham. Since she did not introduce you to others, not even to her father, I believe she enjoyed the brother-husband affair and planned a party to reveal the secret to her father and guests. No, her interest in you began before I told her you were not my my husband's eyes, and hair, and

"Huh, jealousy, more than kindness for your brother prompted you to tell the truth," Manly teased. "You made a Manly Christmas husband, anyway. I'm sure Patricia would agree with me," Julia answered. After the party at Patricia's, the Christmas holiday failed to be boresome. For with Patricia's pep, and promises, Manly looked forward to the days after college, of becoming a Manly husband, in

ON BASKETBALL SUPPORT

Last Monday night, Dec. 14, Mc-Lean played a thrilling basketbal: game with Pampa. But to our surprise we were supported by five town people, excluding the pep squad and a very few high school students. This town is not a true supporte: of basketball as it is of football, and that is the main reason why our basketball teams are never as great as the football teams. There were a great many people from Alanreed and many more from Pampa. This incident reminds us of the Clarendon-McLean football game in 1935. At this game there were twice as many supporters from McLean as there were from Clarendon. The lack of support was partly due to poor advertisement.

We ask you from the bottom of our hearts to try and support the teams

HE snow was beautiful but made one feel somewhat lonely, Nancy Atwell thought as she stood at the window watching the falling snow. For an instant she regretted refusing the urgent invitations of her two brothers and two sisters to spend the holidays with them. Each of them had been insistent, but were all so far away it was out of the ques-tion, financially, and she didn't want them to furnish the money— and then for years she had spent Christmas here in the Connecticut hills with grandmother and she couldn't imagine it seeming like

Peggy North, her old and dear friend, had written that she could not get away for the holidays, so hoped that Nancy could be with

Nancy had done little toward any sort of festivities and had left putting up the decorations until the last minute. In fact she hadn't bought anything new-the old ones would do well enough. Perhaps she might just as well go up to the attic now and see what there was. It might seem more like Christmas with some decorations around.

As she opened a drawer in an old chest her hand touched grand-mother's old quilt—"Grandmother's happiness quilt," as she always called it. It was just such a day as this so long ago, when sitting at grandmother's feet down in the "setting" room she had heard the history of the pieces in the quilt. There was no place here in the attic to look at it, so together with wreaths and garlands of tinsel she carried the quilt down to the room where she had heard its history for the first time, and spread it out on the bed.

Here was a piece from the dress grandmother had worn when grandfather proposed. Here was the piece of grandmother's wedding dress-others from Christening robes, party dresses, wedding dresses and dresses worn on other happy occasions-some almost in shreds, but still enough left to recall the stories to Nancy as Grand-mother Atwell had told them. How grandmother had loved telling them and how she had laughed at some memory. Nancy had commented on what a happy life grandmother had had. No one ever had a happier one, grandmother assured her. How cheerful, unselfish, grandmother had been, never dwelling on her own troubles, but ready to help others in theirs.

Nancy recalled the times grandmother had been the means making the path a little smoother the pain less keen, by the gift of something Nancy especially wanted or the fulfilling of some che ished plan of Nancy's. And w Nancy was left alone in the old home and grandmother sent for her she must have guessed just how much Nancy wanted the re and quiet the hills would give her Nancy never forgot the smile embrace with which grandm greeted her - no rehearsing painful experiences, but plans mediately made for happy days the future. you, won't you?" "Of course," she agreed, forgiving him completely. "As much as you like, my dear."

Early that evening Nancy and Dan had gone in her car, with sandwiches which she had herself prepared, to have a picnic supper together beside the Cochituate reservoir; they made a lark of it, enjoying the fact that all about them at little distances were other cars, other young folk like themselves who had come here to be alone. "It makes me feel as though I belonged," Nancy confessed. "I suppose it's common, but I like it. I like to be doing the things all these other girls are doing, riding out here with their young men, and whispering together in the darkness, and making love." She said halfdreaming: "It makes me feel as though I were part of a big thing, a universal thing." She held Dan's hand tightly. "It is big, and universal, Dan: this loving, this mating, isn't it?"

Dan chuckled. "Bless you, yes, I suppose so," he said. "But I like to think it has never happened to anyone but us before. No one here can even half guess how I feel about you," he assured her. "No woman could!" He said, with mock gravity: "In fact, a seriously doubt if even a man could more best, this change presented it- than vaguely understand the depth,

But in his arms she confessed "Men are different, presently: though, aren't they?" And she appeal to a conservative man, asked: "Dan, do you like Father?" "Like him?" he echoed. "Sure,

I think he's a wonder." "So do I," she admitted. "But I'm scared of him.'

CHAPTER V

It was not wholly true that Mary Ann saw no change in Doctor Greeding. She did not confess this even to Dan; yet no woman can be wholly unconscious of the fact that a man's thoughts are bound tight around her.

A day or two after that trip to Kennebunk together, disturbed by her own perception of the developing situation, Mary Ann came to the Doctor to suggest giving up her employment with him.

"I think Dan and Father need to have me more at home," she said evasively. "To keep the house running smoothly."

He said seriously: "I can understand the need for you there; but there is also a real need for you here."

"You could get some one-" He spoke directly, with a disarming frankness. "Let's be straightforward about this," he urged. know what you're thinking. You're -ill at ease, since our drive together the other night. You suspect that-my interest in you is rather more than professional!"

Her cheeks flamed; and he said with a chuckle: "I suppose that suspicion on your part is not unnatural; but Mary Ann, if it will reassure you, I guarantee that I'm not in danger of falling in love with you.

"Heavens!" she protested, laughing. "I never thought that! You must think me insufferably conceited!"

He shook his head. "Not at all!" You know that I like you. I admire your ability, but I like you personally too. Very much indeed. But you need have no least misgiving, Mary Ann." He added soberly: "And in all seriousness, I do need you here. You are invaluable to me in my work. We can save a good many lives together, you and I.'

In the end she did stay. He had, by stating her thoughts in plain words, shrewdly succeeded in making them ridiculous, and so destroying any reason she might have had for leaving him. But also, she wished to stay. She found in this association with his work a daily pride and wonder. He had a healing magic in his fingers. He did miracles, without apparent-She interrupted reflectively: "I ly realizing that they were mirtions which her training told her were well-nigh hopeless; yet the patient proceeded to swift and com-

"I suspect your father is a little bored with me," he said. And he added: "I'm dining with Jerrell tonight. I hope he will spend the week-end at the lake with me. . By the way, when can you and Dan come up there? Sometime during August, say?"

"I know Dan will want to," she asserted, added evasively: not sure, myself.'

But he insisted. "You must come. Myra and I like to have young people around. I suppose it makes us feel a bit younger ourselves."

"You're the youngest man I know," she assured him, smilingly; but she did not promise to accept this invitation. He did dine that night with Jerrell; and Jerrell asked: "How's Nancy? I had no chance to see her before she went to the lake." "You'd better run up with me over the week-end," Doctor Greeding suggested. "Myra will be glad to have you, and Nancy too, I know."

To this Jerrell readily agreed. They arranged, before they parted, that Jerrell should accompany Doctor Greeding to the lake Friday night; and at Jerrell's suggestion they chartered a seaplane and made the trip by air. Doctor Greeding telephoned ahead, and when they landed in the open water in front of the island, a boat put off to meet them, Nancy at the wheel, some one beside her. Doctor Greeding with a quick resentment and concern recognized Dan Carlisle. He had not anticipated the possibility that this young man would be here, and regretted it; and when they were in the boat, he said almost on my way through." "I made him stay for dinner."

Nancy explained, and turned the boat toward shore.

Mrs. Greeding was on the wharf to meet them. They moved up the path to the house, and Jerrell made appreciative comments. A balcony ran along two sides of this living-room at the second-floor level, and bedrooms were accessible from this balcony. Doctor Greeding showed Jerrell his room, in the rear on the second floor, then himself returned with Mrs. Greeding to the big south bedroom which they occupied. And when they were alone there, he said to her in a low tone, resentfully:

"You might have used a little common sense, Myra. You knew Jerrell was coming. There was no need of his finding Dan here."

She said defensively: "I was playing bridge, at Mrs. Thurston's, when he telephoned. So Nancy answered, and when I got home he was here. After all, if Nancy is going to prefer Dan, she had better find it out before she marries Ira Jerrell, rather than afterwards."

"She'd have too much native decency to find it out afterward," he retorted. "You know, she's my

Mrs. Greeding chuckled in affectionate amusement. "Darling, of course! You are a model of loyalty, I know. Not many middle-aged wives can be as sure as I that their husbands have never looked around the corner."

"It's not a thing to brag about," he retorted.

"It happens to be one thing I'm proud of," she insisted smilingly. 'The fact that you still love me. I shall even boast about it, if I choose.

He said morosely: "I've heard mothers boast about their immaculate sons, when I happened to know that the youngsters were plain dev-She laughed. "Don't try to pre-

So he was silenced, and began to undress.

After dinner Dan had to leave. Nancy suggested: "Shall we all go for a boat-ride, drop Dan at the harbor, and then have a run around the lake afterward?"

Doctor Greeding caught his wife's eye. "Take Mr. Jerrell," he suggested. "Ira, if you're a timid man, she'll give you bad dreams. thing to offer a girl like her.' I. Its Origin (I John 4:7, 8). "God is love." In other words, love is not merely one of his characteristics, but of the very essence of his being. He not only loves, but he is love. Therefore only those who know him can truly love, and those who have not love do not know

II. Its Manifestation (vv. 9, 10). "We may give without loving, but we cannot love without giving." God's love "sent his only begotten Son into the world that we might live through him." Let us be sure to emphasize that Christmas celebrates the coming of the Saviour miring world. It is not only that than lace there is nothing lovier with which to adorn as an expression of the "eternal feminine," but the significant thing we are coming to learn about lace is that in many of its modernized types it is absolutely practical for general wear. Through convincing demonstration in present-day fashions the theory has been utterly done away with that lace is a luxury to be reserved for "occasions" only.

The following might seem merely a pretty fairy tale to entertain. It is, however, a really and truly true story which has to do with the recent arrival from Paris of a prominent American who brought with her a perfectly exquisite and thoroughly practical wardrobe fashioned all of lace: Of course this collection embraced laces of versatile type for the lingerie as well as sports and evening clothes are each is a raincoat of handsome closewoven waterproofed lace. message and here it is-the happy possessor of this most charming and replete lace wardrobe is telling her friends that for travel lace clothes are eminently practical and satisfactory. Not only does lace prove flattering at all times but a vitally important thing about lace clothes is that pack them as hurriedly as you may they come out unwrinkled, maintaining a well groomed appearance without the

There is no end to the types of a lace 'tuned to your every need and to every mood of fashion. In the lace story for winter, it is the daytime dress made of wool lace that is making the headlines. A stunning model is pictured in the foreground of the illustration. It is of suede-finished brown wool lace in a heavy fabric type which makes the perfect thing for daytime street wear. To trim this handsome frock, Piguet uses a stitched sheer fabric woven of wool the same as made the lace, bordering the square neck, for the sash belt and to finish the side seams. We venture to predict you'll be deciding on a wool lace frock for your "fashion-first" this

REVERSIBLE CAPE By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Complete tweed ensembles are excellent style. The model pictured is a Creed masterpiece done in terms of select wool weave such as declares its style supremacy. The cape is made reversible, which is a feature to be commended as it adds to the adaptability of the ensemble to occasion. Tailored outfits of this type, with jacket suit and top cape, are a whole wardrobe in one.

RED IS IN FAVOR FOR EVENING WEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The fashionable set literally "saw red" at the brilliant first night functions of the winter season. Red velvet wraps, gowns of red taffeta and slipper satin, the gleam of red in nails and lips-the shades varied all the way from the subtle smoky reds to the brighter tones of ruby, coronation and mountie, or orange

Particularly effective is a red velvet gown, ermine-trimmed and worn with a white ermine wrap, and an artful Juliet cap of red over sleek blonde hair. The sleeves were long and bound with ermine at the wrists. An ankle-length wrap of faille taffeta in mountie red, very slim of waist and broad of shoulder was worn by a striking bru-

Muffs are worn demurely small or large and debonair. A girl in bouffant black net under a slim black velvet wrap carried a large muff of white ermine tails, decorated with a spray of gardenias.

All-black splashed with color is again repeated and is second in favor to the predominating red.

Paris Sponsors Spots

A fingertip sports jacket made on boxy lines and recently shown in Paris was made of rabbit "mouette," a black and white spotted fur presented in several collections. Under it goes a belted waistcoat of the fur.

THE OTHER WOMAN LIVES JUST AROUND THE CORNER

IT may seem unreasonable, but most men cannot understand why a woman who is usually happy and loving should have recurring periods when her whole character seems changed. He cannot appreciate the distress, the discomfort that all women must endure. He does not know what it is to do housework with an aching bachand failing energy. All he does know is that other women seem more cheerful by comparison.

Are you such a three-quarter wife?

Are you such a three-quarter wife?

Don't let the ordeals that all women face cause you avoidable discomfort or endanger your home. Do as so many wise women have—try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For three generation: one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife;

As they declined in prestige, many fraternities dropped much of their numbo jumbo and did away with hazing. Among many others, however, the practice continued in one form or another.

Recently the National Interfraternty Conference, representing 62 national fraternities, met in their 28th annual session in New York City. Recognizing the necessity for readjustment of fraternity life, the conerence unanimously pledged itself to (support efforts to eliminate the horseplay and hazing still prevalent during Hell Week."

The resolution declared that greatest responsibility for severe initiations rested with college authorities rather than fraternities .- Pathfinder.

THE CHRISTMAS "HOWL"

Did you ever see a business man who raised a "Christmas business howl" along about a week before Christmas and wondered why the people were not rushing to his store to buy his merchandise which he had purchased for the holiday trade? We have some men like that in every town including Monahans. They buy the merchandise and "expect" the public to know all about it and come and take it out. On the other hand "Sears," and Montgomery Ward and National Suit and Cloak Company, A Harris, etc., etc., have been flooding the doors of Monahans housewives with Christmas promotion advertising for sixty days. Too often people do not go where they have no invitation. Merchandise worth selling is worth advertising, and the wise merchant will make an advertising budget along with his purchasing budget. Goods allowed to become out of dtae on dusty shelves canno be paimed off on the public any more

The small town merchant bemoans the business going out of town and that is all right, it should remain at home, but the public is just as fickle printing out of town. If the high pressure salesman makes them "think" they can save a dollar by driving hundred miles and "shows them" his merchandise in an attractive ac or catalog, they go. On the other hand, a properly educated citizenship by consistent advertisers will trade at home. The public goes where the
