Roosevelt vs. Hearst

ASSERTIONS made by William Randolph Hearst and other opponents of the New Deal that the President "passively accepts" the support of the Communists have got under Mr. Roosevelt's skin. A statement issued through Stephen T. Early, his secretary, said: "My attention has been called to a certain notorious newspaper owner to make it appear that the President passively accepts the support of alien organizations hostile to the American form of government."

W. R. Hearst

"Such articles are conceived in malice and born of political spite. They are deliberately framed to give a false impression, in other words to 'frame' the American people."

"The President does not want and does not welcome the vote or support of any individual or group taking orders from alien sources."

"This simple fact is, of course, obvious."

"The American people will not permit their attention to be diverted from real issues to fake issues which no patriotic, honorable, decent citizen would purposely inject into American affairs."

Mr. Hearst, who was in Amsterdam, promptly replied by cable, saying in part:

"The President has issued a statement through a secretary. He has not had the frankness to say to whom he refers in the statement."

"I think I am justified in assuming that I am the object of the statement, and that I may courteously endeavor to correct Mr. Roosevelt's misstatements and to set him right."

"Let me say that I have not stated at any time whether the President willingly or unwillingly received the support of the Karl Marx Socialists, the Frankfurter radicals, communists and anarchists, the Tugwell bolsheviks, and the Richberg revolutionists which constitute the bulk of his following."

"I have simply said and shown that he does receive the support of these enemies of the American system of government, and that he has done his best to deserve the support of all such disturbing and destructive elements."

Al Smith Will Make Some Anti-Roosevelt Speeches

SPECULATION concerning what part Al Smith would take in the Presidential campaign seems to be settled by the news that he will deliver several anti-Roosevelt addresses, the first probably in Carnegie hall in New York in October. He is reported to be making out his own program and planning talks also in Massachusetts and New Jersey. It is said neither the Republican party nor the American Liberty league will be sponsor for his appearances. Until Mr. Smith announces his intentions it will not be known whether or not he will advocate the election of Governor Landon.

Crop Insurance Pushed by the President

IMMEDIATE action toward putting in operation a two-fold crop insurance and drouth prevention program was called for by President Roosevelt. It is designed to guard the farmers and the consumers against the danger of food shortages or price collapses. Two committees were named to work out legislation to be asked of the next congress.

M. L. Cooke

Mr. Roosevelt named Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace chairman of a committee directed to "prepare a report and recommendations for legislation providing a plan of 'all risk' crop insurance," and suggested that the system provide for payment of premiums and insurance in commodities. This is in accord with Wallace's proposed plan under which farmers would put part of their crops of good years into a pool from which they could draw in lean years. It would serve, he believes, to keep surpluses from destroying the price structure in good years and provide an "insurance" against crop failures in other years.

Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator, was named chairman of another committee to draft recommendations for a permanent land use program designed to avert drouth emergencies in the great plains area.

The President suggested the crop insurance plan might be limited to one or two major crops at the start and that it should be formulated with the advice and assistance of national farm organization leaders so that it can be submitted to congress with their support.

Veterans of Two Wars Open Conventions

VETERANS of the World war and of the Civil war opened their annual gatherings, the American Legion in Cleveland and the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington. The Legionnaires, many thousands of them, started off with the dedication of the Peace Gardens in the Ohio city, for which soil had been brought from sacred shrines of foreign countries and the forty-eight states. National Commander Ray Murphy presided over an impressive ceremony and unveiled a memorial plaque bearing the inscription:

"These gardens, planned by men who know the horrors of war, were dedicated to the brotherhood of man and peace throughout the world."

Commander Murphy in his annual report said: "Whether our country shall be spared participation in another great international conflagration may well depend upon our courage as Legionnaires to stand up and demand that our government now take the steps which may save us, without the loss of honor—a sacrifice we are unwilling to make at any cost."

Only about nine hundred survivors of the Union army were able to attend the G. A. R. encampment, and many believe it will be the last to be held. The aged warriors, headed by Oley Nelson of Iowa, the national commander, began their proceedings with a service in Washington cathedral. The route of their parade was six blocks on Pennsylvania avenue, the scene of the grand review of the Union armies before President Andrew Johnson seventy-one years ago.

Virgin Islands Have New Federal Judge

GEORGE P. JONES of Minnesota, who has been serving as a special assistant to the attorney general of the United States since 1934, has been made judge of the federal district court for the Virgin Islands. This is a recess appointment by President Roosevelt and is subject to confirmation by the senate.

G. P. Jones

Mr. Jones planned to leave for St. Thomas about October 1. He succeeds Judge Albert C. Levitt of Connecticut, who resigned August 1 because, as he alleged, the Department of the Interior interfered with the processes of his court. The oath of office was administered to Mr. Jones in Washington by Ugo Carusi, executive assistant to Attorney General Cummings, in the presence of Mr. Cummings and a number of other officials.

McAlexander, "Rock of the Marne," Dies

MAJ. GEN. ULYSSES S. GRANT McALEXANDER, U. S. A., retired, who won fame in the World war as "The Rock of the Marne," died suddenly in his home in Portland, Ore., at the age of seventy-two.

The general won his appellation for his stand in stemming a terrific assault by the Germans in their final great offensive on the western front in July, 1918.

He was then colonel in command of the Thirty-eighth infantry, and at the most critical period of the German attack he was told by headquarters that he might fall back if he thought best. He replied positively: "I will hold my lines," and he did. It was the Germans who fell back.

Spanish Rebels Rush on Toward Madrid

SEVERAL columns of Spanish Fascists and Moorish legionnaires were reported to be making a determined drive toward Madrid under the direction of General Franco, and the loyalists were falling back at the rate of five miles a day.

The rebel garrison of the Alcazar in Toledo was still holding out though the government forces, after dynamiting part of the old fortress, made attacks with flaming gasoline. The defenders lost heavily but the survivors kept up their deadly machine gun fire and repulsed the charges of the loyalists. This heroic garrison had been holding the fort for nine weeks.

The American State department ordered the embassy in Madrid closed and warned all Americans still in the capital that they remained at their own risk. The consulate at Malaga also was closed and the consul took refuge in Gibraltar. Diplomats of 13 nations, who had gone to Saint Jean de Luz, France, rejected the Spanish government's demand that they return to Madrid.

Killings Pave the Way for Japan's Move Against China

PROBABLY Japan is about ready to proceed further with the subjugation of China, the latest excuses being the alleged murder of several Japanese nationals by Chinese. It was announced by the navy department in Tokio that Japanese marines had been ordered to land at Hankow to protect the life and property of Japanese there, and that "the navy fears that it may be forced to resort to some defensive measures in the near future." The announcement added that the sincerity of the Nanking government in wanting to end anti-Japanese feeling in China was not dependable and hence protective measures were taken.

Havana Paper Dynamited; Four Persons Killed

FOUR persons were killed and two buildings wrecked by a dynamite blast that shook Havana, Cuba. The plant of the newspaper El Pais was destroyed, and only the quick work of the police saved that of the Diario de la Marina.

Informed authorities expressed belief the explosion was planned by Spanish residents who became angry over publication of Spanish civil war news in the two newspapers.

The blast demolished a Catholic church near the El Pais building. Scores of suspects were arrested, many of them being members of the Spanish Socialist circle.

Defeat of Senator Couzens Pleases the Republicans

REPUBLICANS were highly gratified by the results of the Michigan primary election for two reasons: First, because three out of five persons who went to the polls asked for Republican ballots; second, because a Senator James Couzens, a Republican who has openly declared that he is supporting President Roosevelt for re-election, lost his fight for re-nomination.

Sen. Couzens

Couzens, one of the wealthiest members of the senate, was badly defeated by former Gov. Wilbur M. Brucker, and there is more than a suspicion that he knew his fate beforehand. Brucker, who is only forty-two years old, has been in public life for almost twenty years. The Republicans re-nominated Frank D. Fitzgerald for the governorship.

On the Democratic side Representative Prentiss M. Brown won the senatorial nomination against Louis B. Ward who was supported by Father Coughlin. For governor they chose Frank Murphy, high commissioner to the Philippines and former mayor of Detroit. Both Murphy and his defeated opponent, George Welsh, campaigned as Roosevelt supporters.

In the New Hampshire primaries Gov. H. Styles Bridges won the Republican senatorial nomination, ending the effort of former Senator George H. Moses to stage a comeback. The Democrats put up Representative William N. Rogers. Nominees for governor are Maj. Francis P. Murphy, Republican, and Amos N. Blandin, Democrat.

Massachusetts will have for senator either Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican, or James M. Curley, now governor, Democrat. John W. Haigis, Republican, and Charles F. Hurley, Democrat, were nominated for the governorship.

The gubernatorial nominees in Wisconsin are: Gov. Philip La Follette, Progressive; Alexander Wiley, Republican, and Arthur W. Lueck, Democrat.

Savants Gather for the Harvard Tercentenary

IT IS pleasant to turn from war and politics and read of the doings at Cambridge, Mass., where Harvard university is celebrating the tercentenary of its founding.

In Sanders theater was held the academic reception for 554 scholars representing 502 universities, colleges and learned societies in every state of the Union and in forty foreign countries, and all of them wearing the caps, gowns and hoods signifying their various degrees of scholarship.

President James B. Conant greeted the guests, accepted their credentials and delivered a simple address of welcome. He noted that the assembly was an impressive demonstration of the solidarity of the academic world, and saw in the greetings of the delegates "the continued aspiration of mankind toward a universal fellowship based on human reason."

When the delegates were called up in the order of the age of the institutions they represented, first to respond was Prof. Saleh Hashem Attia of Al-Azhar university of Cairo, founded in 970. Then came the next oldest, the Regia university, Neglie Stuni Bologna, founded in the Tenth century, and represented by Prof. Carrado Gini. Third was the University of Paris, founded in the Eleventh century, whose representative was Dr. Cartan. Oxford, Cambridge and all the others followed, down to the youngest represented, the Academia Sinica of Nanking, China.

Floyd Gibbons Adventurers' Club Hello Everybody!

"How to Get Killed"
By FLOYD GIBBONS,
Famous Headline Hunter

TODAY, boys and girls, I'm introducing Distinguished Adventurer James Daly of Bronx, N. Y., who tells about the most original method of getting yourself killed that I've heard of in a coon's age.

Jim doesn't want to take the credit for that invention of his. He didn't really think the thing out by himself. It just happened that way. If there are any royalties on it, part of them ought to go to the horses. They supplied the power without which the whole scheme would have been a flop.

Jim further wishes to state that he never did think enough of his contraption to have it patented, because he'd rather stay alive than die, even in the most ingenious gadget there ever was. Besides, nobody but the War department could have any use for the dog-gone thing, and if they want it Jim will be patriotic and give it to them for nothing.

Young Jim Is Introduced to a Disc Plow.

When Jim was a kid of sixteen, his uncle took him out to California to live. That was in 1914. His uncle owned a big farm in Yuba county, about three miles outside of the town of Marysville.

About a week after Jim arrived at the farm, his uncle hitched him up a four-horse team and sent him out with a disc plow to bust up some land against planting time. Maybe you've seen one of those disc plows and maybe you haven't. There's a long axle with a row of razor sharp steel discs on it, and over that a seat for the driver. The discs are set sort of cockeyed, coming together in pairs at the front, so that, instead of cutting a straight groove in the ground they throw the soil this way and that.

Jim drove that plow with its set of sharp-edged blades for just exactly a week. Then, on Monday of the second week, things happened. It was around two o'clock and the day was windy. The horses were feeling pretty frisky after their Sunday rest, and the work was going along fast.

Piece of Paper Blows Lad Into Terrifying Adventure.

Jim just finished one strip, turned the plow around and was on his way back down the field again when suddenly a gust of wind picked up a bit of paper that was lying on the ground. That bit of paper blew right across the faces of the two front horses. The front horses reared. The horses behind them gave a leap forward.

Jim, clinging to the reins, was yanked out of his seat. He tumbled to the ground RIGHT IN FRONT OF THE SHINING ROW OF PLOW BLADES. And as he landed, the horses gave another leap and bolted down the field.

Jim tightened his grasp on the reins and held on for dear life. If he let go—Well—figure it out for yourself. Right behind him was that razor-bladed plow—a plow that slashed through the hard, frostbitten ground as if it was so much cheese. Imagine what that plow would do to Jim if it went over him.

Plow Blades Give Imitation of Grim Reaper's Scythe.

Says Jim: "With every step those horses took I could feel a couple of those discs touching my feet. I was dragging along the ground between four crazy horses and twelve circular knives sharp enough to make mincemeat out of me. Each one of those discs weighed about twenty pounds, and all I could do was pray the plow wouldn't hit a bump and come down on top of me."

The horses dashed on down the field, dragging Jim with them. They were almost at the end of the field when the thing Jim most feared—happened. The plow hit a bump, leaped up and forward. It came down on Jim's right leg and he felt a stab of pain about his ankle.

They were almost at the end of the field now. Ahead of them was the fence that ran alongside of the main road. The horses ran up to the fence and came to a stop. But still Jim didn't let go of the reins. They were still nervous—those horses. They might bolt again at any moment. Jim's leg was bleeding—still stuck between two sharp blades of the plow. But he didn't dare try to get it out. One move might set the horses to running again. The second he let go of the lines he'd be giving them a chance to run away and drag the plow over him.

Jim's Pocket Knife Outwits the Murderous Discs.

Jim began talking to those horses—quietly—soothingly. He talked to them for five minutes before it seemed to him that they were sufficiently calmed down. Then he took a chance. He let go of the reins and reached down to see if he couldn't free his leg.

"All I could see was blood," he says, "and try as I might, I couldn't pull my leg loose. Those discs were six or seven inches apart at the top, but at the front they came together at the middle, and my ankle was in between two of them."

"I was lucky enough to have a pocket knife with me, and if it hadn't been for that I guess I'd have been there yet. With the aid of the knife I was just barely able to reach back between the blades and cut my shoe lace. Then I could pull my foot out, leaving the shoe behind."

Life-Long Scars Are Souvenirs of Jim's Experience.

Jim got the foot out, but there were three terrible gashes in the back of his leg where the discs had run over it. He had a good three-quarters of a mile to go before he reached the house and he thought he'd be dead to death before he got there.

His uncle was scared almost as much as Jim was when, finally, he dragged himself into the barnyard. He took Jim to the hospital in town, and Jim lay there for a couple of months. He still has the scars of that experience, and what's more important, he still has the pocket knife that got him out of it. That knife, Jim says, is going to be his rabbit's foot from now on.

Emperor Penguins

Emperor penguins are the largest and rarest of all penguins, and are found only at the earth's southern extremity. They stand from three and one-half to four feet tall, and weigh on the average about seventy-three pounds, but large specimens have been known to reach as much as ninety-four pounds. The average temperature of the region they inhabit is fifty degrees below zero. The birds are flightless, using their small highly specialized wings principally to aid them in swimming.

Sweden Thinly Populated

The densely populated countries of Europe may vie with each other in telling of how many persons live to the square mile, but Sweden, if it could do so, might tell how many glades and how many million wild flowers it supported to the square mile, for as much as 12 per cent of that country is occupied by dales and meadows, while over half the country is given up to woodlands. There are countries in Europe with over 60 persons to the square mile. In Sweden there are only a sparse thirty-two.

"I don't know quite what you are suggesting," she said icily, "but I think you are being insulting."

"Not at all," Pilar replied. "I am merely trying to discover Bryn's reason for this quixotic gesture. It certainly cannot be that he is willing to spend a year with you for your platonic companionship, Deborah. Obviously, you are not suited to be a companion to him. You have not the sophistication, the knowledge of his world. You scarcely speak his language. You say he does not love you; I think that would be impossible, too. There must be companionship in real love, an equality. But I think I do begin to see his reason. There you were, beauty in distress . . . and Bryn was always fond of a new adventure. Some thing new, something nobody has ever done before. Yes, it becomes quite clear to me. And he would get considerable enjoyment out of this play-acting to your grandmother, this pretense of being simple and bucolic, this pretense of loving you. It is rather an interesting situation, as I must admit."

Deborah was staring at her. "I don't think I care to discuss it any further," she said quietly, "if you don't mind, Pilar."

"There isn't much more to say, is there? Except that I suppose I ought to thank you for explaining it to me, Deborah. I have been . . . troubled. You can understand."

Deborah folded her linen. "Yes," she said.

"Bryn is very difficult," Pilar sighed. "I think this has been the worst fright he has given me. But once, two years ago, I was nearly mad, too. He was in Tibet, and I didn't hear from him for nearly six months. It was reported that he was dead. Of course, he wasn't, nor lost either. He was just living in a native tribe, living like a native, to get the atmosphere, he said. He's wildly interested in people, different kinds of people, the farther from his own kind, the better. But he always comes back in the end. I have discovered that. And when he came back from Tibet," she said with a smile, "he brought me my ring. This ruby. Isn't it a beauty?"

The ruby flashed and glowed on her finger as she held it out for Deborah to see. "It is very lovely," Deborah said gently.

Gary tapped on the door-casing. "Miss Deborah, please," he said. "Mr. Bryn would like a dry pair of shoes. Might I go through and get them?"

"Certainly, Gary."

With a little half bow to Pilar he sidled past her and opened the door on the left. He pushed it back and left it open as he went in, and Pilar, glancing through, saw the narrow white bed against the other wall. She turned deliberately and looked at Deborah's closed bedroom door, and then, with a deep breath, she looked at Deborah and smiled.

"It's all very romantic, isn't it?" she said, and went swiftly across to the hall door. "Thank you for telling me, Deborah. It makes rather a difference."

Bryn had been over in the stable talking to Joe, who came to milk every evening as punctually as sunset.

As he approached the bridge his eyes caught the flutter of a skirt, and his heart turned a complete double somersault. If he had been in any need of proof as to his emotional condition, he had it then. But the skirt did not belong to Deborah; it was much too sophisticated a skirt for that, as he saw at second glance, and his heart settled down sadly into a recumbent position again, and he went forward without interest to meet Pilar.

She was standing in the middle of the bridge, leaning over the railing to look into the water. Bryn stopped beside her, put his elbows on the railing, and gazed down into the brook, too, without a word. Pilar turned, after a moment, and smiled at him; the flashing brilliant smile that was peculiarly her own, that no one else could duplicate. "You know," she said, "I don't blame you for burying yourself away up here, Bryn. It's so far back in Nature that I don't suppose you've ever had quite the same experience before, have you?"

Bryn glanced down at her. Her black eyes, liquid and melting, met his. Her lips were very red.

"No," he replied. "Never." There was a little silence. They stood together, elbows touching. After a moment Pilar said softly, "Deborah told me her story today."

"Deborah?" he repeated.

"She seemed to think I ought to be told, Bryn."

"Oh."

The black eyes opened wide again. "Had you . . . talked to her about me?"

"Never," Bryn said promptly.

"Oh," Pilar murmured. "I had an idea you had, perhaps. She certainly knew that we had been friends for a long time. Of course, that may be obvious. Whatever she knew, she wanted me to understand just what the situation was between you. Dear quaint little thing?"

"What did she say the . . . situation was between us, then?"

"Why, simply that this wasn't, as all of us thought, a love match after all. That it was simply a marriage de convenance. I don't quite know why you, of all people, Bryn, had to tangle yourself in it. You may have difficulty in getting free again."

"So she told you we weren't in love with each other?"

"Yes, quite without restraint. It seems rather queer that a girl could be so absolutely cool and businesslike about her marriage, even if it were this kind of marriage. But of course it is not in the least romantic to her, and does not affect her emotions at all, so why should she be anything but businesslike? Do you really mean to stay here for a whole year?" she asked with a sigh. "Is it really necessary?"

"Yes."

"Grandmother's no fool. She's a good deal sharper than you think, Bryn."

"What do you mean?"

"I don't think you're fooling her for a minute. She knows you and the girl aren't living together as man and wife. She must know it. Anybody can see it with half an eye."

"Can they? How?"

"By that child's face, of course."

"I see," Bryn said quietly.

Pilar put her hand on his arm. "Tell her," she begged. "Go and have a talk with the old lady Bryn, and tell her the truth."

"Why?"

"I do think it is too much for them to ask you to sacrifice your life for a whole year to an old lady's whim. She wouldn't die, Bryn. I tell you she is a lot stronger than you think she is, and a lot sharper."

Bryn laughed. To Pilar it was not exactly a pleasant laugh, and she winced a little as she heard it. "I'm not sacrificing my life," he said.

"What do you mean?" she asked, sharply.

"Leaving here would be sacrificing my life, Pilar. Don't you understand? I care more for Grandmother's left eyebrow than I do for everybody I ever know before, and as for Deborah . . ."

"As for Deborah?"

"Well," Bryn said at last, "upon racking my brains, I can't think of anything in the world that you could put in the scales to balance Deborah that would push them down a feather's weight."

"Are you trying to tell me that you're in love with her?"

"That is my general idea."

She came a step closer. "Listen Bryn," she said, under her breath. "Listen . . . you're bewitched. You're mad. You can't marry Deborah. You can't do it."

"I can," Bryn said happily. "I have."

She made a despairing gesture. "I mean . . . a real marriage. Why, she'd drive you crazy, Bryn! She'd drive you mad. What does she know about life, or the world, or any kind of culture? She has no sophistication, she has no polish. She's nothing but an ignorant child, pretty, I grant you, but as insipid as . . . as brook water. In two years—in five years, what are you going to have for a wife? There's nothing there, Bryn. Don't be carried away by a pretty face. You need intelligence, you need companionship, you need a wife who is your equal, who understands your position in the world and can help you carry it off."

Bryn was looking at her, unhappily, compassionately. "I'm sorry, Pilar," he said gently. "I'm afraid it's not I who am making the mistake about life. You are not quite fair to Deborah, but we will pass that over. You suggest that I would be happy with sophistication and polish, and a woman who understands my position and can help me to carry it off. Those things mean nothing, Pilar. I've seen a whole world full of girls such as you describe, and not one of them has meant anything to me. They're all alike, Pilar, all cut to a pattern, and a false pattern at that. I never knew what it was to be in love until I saw Deborah. I never stopped to think what it is that a man really wants out of life. I'll tell you what it is, now. He wants a girl of his own, and then he wants his own fireside; and then he wants his own son. Do you understand that, Pilar? And when he finds the loveliest girl in the world, whose mind is as pure and sweet as Deborah's, whose heart is completely untouched, whose emotions and perceptions are as delicate as a flower in spring, and who is absolutely kind and unselfish, Pilar, what can he do but fall in love with her? That's how I feel about Deborah. I know she doesn't love me now, but if I get the time and the opportunity I'm going to do my best to make her love me, and I'm not sure I can't succeed, even if she is a thousand times too good for me."

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

The Passing of Thalberg.

HOLLYWOOD, CALIF.—Big an industry as the moving picture industry is, the death of one slender, shy, frail man has stunned it. The old guard of this business has lost its little corporal and the second generation of producing talent is left with a yawning gap where yesterday there loomed a leader who was both a pioneer and a progressive.

Irving Thalberg was an authentic genius of the films—a master showman, a deft interpreter of that tricky art which finds its medium through story and camera and screen.

It will be long before they breed another Thalberg out here. For men of his brain, his energy, his pathfinding instincts don't come in sets, don't often come singly.

The name Napoleon has been overworked to describe ability within some small body, but here, to the limits of his own craft, was not only a Napoleon but a Daniel Boone and a Balzac all rolled in one.

Payroll Patriots.

SOME low industrial royalist has been checking up on the sisters and the cousins and the aunts of New Dealers who are on the federal payroll. We call that nepotism when the opposition does it, or family love when one of our own crowd is guilty.

Would seem Dixieland leads in this display of domestic affection. The champion is Senator Smith of South Carolina. There were all sorts of delegates at the Democratic national convention, but he was the only walking delegate—walked out twice, and each time walked right back again. He has five relatives drawing salaries from Uncle Sam. Even Uncle Jack Garner, the sphinx of Texas, has three.

This looks like an improvement on the old southern system, when kinfolks dropped in for a week-end and stayed the rest of their lives.

Summer Annoyances.

EVEN in sun-kicked California, summer is on its last legs. This one will go down in history as the summer which produced handies, knock-knocks; the dust storm and the campaign speech, these two being interchangeable terms in most cases; likewise the seventeen-year locust and the gentleman who was in active charge of our Olympic team's trip to Berlin. People were seriously annoyed in other ways, too.

Political Geysers.

CAN it be we made a mistake by plowing under cotton instead of orators?

That famous phenomenon of nature in Yellowstone park, which spouts at such frequent intervals ought to be getting uneasy. Any moment it may lose its name of old faithful and become known as the Junior John Hamilton geyser.

And Secretary Ickes certainly is qualifying as the minute-man of the new revolution—or oftener than that, if there's an audience. Colonel Knox isn't doing so badly, either. In the modern version of "the spirit of '76," he's the one who's beating so hard on the eardrum. Still, it's a grand thing—but surprising—to find a newspaper editor who talks forcibly on his feet instead of writing feebly on his seat.

On the other hand, Uncle Jack Garner continues to be the ideal back-seat driver—the one who hasn't said a single word during the entire trip.

Dictators and Shirt Tails.

LET'S see. Among others, we now have the blue shirts in Ireland, the brown shirts in Germany, the red shirts in Russia, and, of course, the black shirts in Italy, which seems the most practical of all because you don't need to wash a black shirt for months and months.

So maybe we're too quick. The alarmists among us are predicting an early dictatorship here. At the rate all the standard shares are being snapped up, we'll have to think up a new color in shirts, and, unless we hurry, there may not be any new colors to think up, and you can't have a dictatorship without a shirt to match—that's the rule. Lavender hasn't been taken yet by anybody, but lavender seems kind of sissy, and, while, a gray-colored shirt might suit the careless eater, it lacks zing, don't you think?

In any event, our shirt ought to have a good long tail to it, because, by that time, the American taxpayer probably will have lost his pants.

"Length" in Horse Racing
In horse racing the measure of a "length" is the distance from the tip of the nose to the base of the tail. The average horse is over eight feet while running with neck outstretched.

Let Us Take a Page From the Note Book of the Hotel Chef

Favorite Meat Dishes Which May Be Served in Home Meals.

Certain hotels and restaurants through years of service have gained for their foods a reputation which has traveled far and wide. These dishes, many of them, can become favorites at home, if we but take a page from the chef's note book.

Steaks and mixed grills—in fact, broiled dishes of any kind—are hotel favorites, say the chefs.

Choosing Tender Steaks.

The chef usually knows how to choose a tender steak. His best indication of tenderness is the amount of fat which it carries. It should have a generous covering of fat over the outside and a marbling of fat throughout the lean. The steak should be cut thick, at least one inch, and if it has been aged, so much the better. Frequently, the hotel chef buys a whole loin of beef and allows it to hang in his refrigerated room for several days before he cuts it into steaks, and in some markets this same practice of aging is followed before the steaks are cut.

The best way to broil a steak is to thoroughly preheat the broiling oven with the regulator set to "high," and then place the steak on a rack far enough from the flame or heating element that by the time it is nicely browned on one side it will be half done. When browned on one side, it is seasoned with salt and pepper, turned, and allowed to brown and finish cooking on the second side. The steak should be served without a moment's delay after it is cooked. This, as much as any other factor, makes the steak served in a hotel so thoroughly enjoyed, because it is still sizzling hot and puffy with its own juices when the diner makes the first cut.

For a Delicious Mixed Grill.

The mixed grill means simply a whole meal cooked in the broiler. Usually this includes a lamb chop, perhaps little link sausages, sweetbreads, which have been parboiled in acidulated water and put under the broiler to become browned, and frequently ground meat patties wrapped with bacon. These are broiled in exactly the same way as the steak, except for the length of time needed in broiling. This depends on temperature and the thickness of the meat. Broiling, however, should be done at a moderately low temperature for the best results.

Pork chops, too, can be just as delicious as those baked and served at hotels if you but insist that they are cut thick and cooked slowly. Here is the way one hotel chef prepares them:

Baked Stuffed Pork Chops.

Pork chops, cut thick
1/2 cup minced ham
1/4 cup minced mushrooms
1 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup rice, uncooked
2 tablespoons minced onion
2 tablespoons minced green pepper
1/2 cup tomatoes

Brown the ham, mushrooms, onions and green pepper, then add the uncooked rice and tomatoes, together with two cups meat stock. Let cook until the rice is tender. Add the bread crumbs and season to taste. Fill pocket in chops with this. Brown the chops on both sides, cover tightly and bake slowly for twenty-five or thirty minutes.

SUCCEED WHERE YOU ARE, WORD OF HELEN KELLER

There is nothing like the word of doing something worth while to make us forget the limitations there? We can do anything we really want to if we stick at it long enough. No matter how handicapped we are, we can do ways do something, if it is with a bright smile, or a kind word, or a helpful act. Many of us make the mistake of thinking that if we were as fortunate as our neighbors, we could live better purer, and more useful lives. I have learned from experience that if we cannot succeed in our present position, we cannot in any other. If we cannot help the world where we are, we cannot help it anywhere else. It is not the kind of environment we have, but the kind of thoughts we think every day and the ideas we are following—in a word, the kind of men and women we are. We have already that within us which will respond to the right influence when that comes. Let us stand upright in our own lives and try to discover beauty and ice and happiness in our own lives.—Helen Keller, L.L.D.

Better Wisdom

IT is not until the soul has learned a better wisdom that the human race is one, and that none can rise by treading on his brother's neck, but that all are to be the servants of humanity. I learned that happiness is not of the lust to possess and enjoy, but of the desire to give and to bless—then, and not until then, when she brought others with her, can she find true rest in her Palace.—Van Dyke.

The little things make up life.

CANDIDATES' WEALTH

Much capital chatter, and no doubt national, too, has been on the subject of the two leading presidential candidates. How much does Mr. Roosevelt have? Is the President more in the money than Governor Landon?
 Although the wealth of the candidates will probably have little significance, either in the campaign or after election, estimates place their worth about equal—around $850,000 each, including, of course, family holdings. Nobody seems to know about Lemke, Thomas, or Earl Browder, the Communist man.

A small political job sometimes ruins a man for anything else.

It is not the amount of brains a man has that makes for success, it is using what brains he possesses.

There should be some protection for local merchants against peddlers. This does not mean that any farmer who raises his stuff should be molested in selling his produce; but those who make a living peddling, should pay a license. The local merchant pays taxes and is entitled to protection.

There is no way to publish a weekly paper and do all the work in a couple of days. We must insist that our reporters turn in news as soon as they have the facts, and not wait until Tuesday or Wednesday. It is not a matter of what we would like to do, but a matter of necessity. The News force had to do a lot of overtime work this week on news matter that happened last week and could just as easily have been turned in last Friday and Saturday.

The schools can assist by cutting their items short and turn in not over two columns each week. Live news is wanted but clipped stuff is not acceptable, for many times it is copyrighted and cannot legally be used.

It might be a good idea for the Garden Club to accept entries from churches in next year's better yards contest. It is certain that if such a division of the contest had been made this year, Bro. Sharp of the First Methodist Church would have taken the prize for the most improvement done in one season. It is hardly conceivable how so much improvement could have been made in so short a time.

While the committee is due its just share for this fine work, we noticed that Bro. Sharp and his family gave the church and parsonage grounds daily attention during the summer, something that must be done if any yard is to show its best. The Methodist people are to be congratulated for putting in this improvement this year and for the good work Bro. Sharp has done in giving such good care to the property.

Text: "For my people have committed two evils, they have forsaken Me the Fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water."—Jeremiah 2:13.

SEEKING LIVING WATERS

A lot of talk, good and bad, is being disseminated over the radio and the press at the present time before the national elections. Citizens of this country are entitled to state their opinions and views in regard to national, political and economic affairs. How strange it must seem to most of us that one man stresses certain principles and considers them as the only national salvation for us; and then at the turn of the radio dial or upon turning a page in the newspaper opposite opinions are given. This serves to remind us that many people do the same in spiritual things. They seek about for the proper way of life and salvation. God grant that all those who have not heard the Word of Truth, the only saving Gospel as recorded in the Holy Bible, will have an opportunity to learn of their only personal Savior from God. On the other hand there are many that are looking for a new gospel, something more stylish and up-to-date, as they think to replace the old truths of the Lord God of the Old Covenant and the New Dispensation.

Such people who have known the truth of God and have become deserters and enthusiasts for modernism are classed with the children of Israel of old concerning whom the Lord said: "My people have committed two evils; they have forsaken Me the Fountain of living waters, and hewed them out cisterns, broken cisterns, that can hold no water." How accurate and touching are the words of the Lord! He clearly states that it is an evil to forsake Him Who is the Fountain of living waters.

Who can find a better source than the living waters of God, the revealed and recorded Word of God as we have it in the Holy Bible? Verily, we must admit that there is no substitute for the Sacred Library of 66 books, the Bible, available to each and everyone of us. To know the Truths of God, and then—to forsake them? Ah, what an evil! What a crime! What an attempt at spiritual suicide!

Think of the many modernists of our age who are drilling wells for new kind of spiritual water, but to no avail. After drilling a while they either get poisonous water, poisonous teachings contrary to Scripture, or else they get a so-called "dry hole," empty teachings which do not show the way to heaven! The Lord calls such sources: "Broken cisterns, that can hold no water."

Let the cry of our present age be: Seek ye the Lord! Yes, may America turn to the Lord and ask Him for the forgiveness of all sins with which we are still afflicted; strikes, droughts, floods, ravaging storms, unemployment, immorality, racial suicide, spiritual decline and inroads of atheistic communism!

Seek ye the Lord! Seek the living waters which proceed from a cistern or well which can never be exhausted because they spring forth from an eternal and holy source. Seek the living waters. Amen.

THE PREACHER, THE HEATHEN, AND MARK TWAIN

When we think of American humorists, we think first of Mark Twain. One of the best of Twain's anecdotes—and one that carries a lesson which all should learn—is that about the sermon delivered by a missionary in a church that Twain visited on a Sunday morning. So impressed was Twain by the dire plight of the poor heathen, as described by the preacher, that he decided to contribute a dollar to the cause when the plate was passed. But as the preacher continued to describe their sorry state and what their suffering would be in the hereafter if their souls were not saved, Twain's heart grew bigger and he decided to make his contribution ten dollars. If the preacher had stopped at this point, Twain tells us, the fund that was being collected to have the heathen brought here, He kept on, and on, and on. And Twain's arder became cooler and cooler until, by the time the plate was passed, he not only did not deposit anything, but sneaked 25 cents from the plate while the usher wasn't looking—Heavy Stuff.

TEARS IN THEIR EYES

Customs men these days literally have tears in their eyes—from smuggled onions. In addition to their fight on smuggled drugs, jewels and liquor, Customs Bureau officials point out that they now have to worry about onions, beans, wheat, corn, potatoes, and other farm produce—due to higher prices for farm products. According to Frank Dow, assistant commissioner of customs, the majority of these new smugglers are farmers trying to make $10 or $15.

Fur Ensembles for Autumn

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Autumn ensembles for risk autumn days are the talk of costumes among rivals for brisk autumn days. Furs are combined with the sheer wools in stunning daytime modes, while popovers such as kidskin and are teamed with novelty outfits that will add extra to the football stadium and promenade this fall.

Soft rabbit woolen in a muted green shade styles the nicely cut and detailed frock shown to the left. The identical rabbit woolen also lines the gray moleskin swag coat of this smart fall ensemble. Which reminds us that style experts are all agog in regard to gray this season, especially in respect to furs. Silver lame accents the bucktoned narrow gilet and edges the pocket tips. As further attraction the gilet has a row of lame-covered tiny buttons. The diagonal seaming of the dress is noteworthy.

The Greatest Need

WITH her faded bonnet slightly awry, the little, white-haired woman glanced timidly about the great bargain-basement store. How, amid the jostling, pushing, hurrying throng, could a body tell the clerks from the customers?

"Help you, Madam?" rang as sweet music to her ears. She turned gratefully to the enquirer. "Why, yes," she said. "I'm looking for Ellie Farlow—you know, she sells these beautiful dresses. She's my daughter."

"Don't know her," returned the clerk, "but there's an awful tribe of us here. You ask Mary Lacey over there. She may know."

"Mary Lacey!" But the old lady apparently was too intent upon giving thanks and reaching Mary Lacey to notice the girl's disapproval.

"So, you're Mary Lacey!" The little lady smiled up at a tall, thin girl, carefully rouged. "I'll wager a doughnut you can't guess who I am." She waited expectantly.

Mary Lacey narrowed shrewd eyes and wrinkled plucked eyebrows. What was the old party raving over? But she restrained a flippant answer; somehow, the old lady demanded respect, even from Mary Lacey.

"I'm Ellie's mother, Mary," said the little lady, with a bright smile. "Ellie?" repeated Mary. Then, brusquely, "Don't know the party!"

"Why—why, aren't you Mary Lacey who rooms with my little girl, Ellie Farlow?"

"Oh!" The word was expressive of mixed emotions—surprise, consternation—almost fear. "Oh, you're Elaine's mother?"

"Elaine, is it?" chirped the little lady. "Well, she was christened Ellen. Perhaps it's cited to change names to sound like those in story books. You see, I haven't heard from her for so long that I feared she was ill—or in trouble—and didn't want to let me know. But she isn't, is she? She's well—and here, somewhere?"

"Out her lunch," answered Mary briefly. "Be back at two. She'll be s'prised."

The old lady beamed. "I'm right glad to meet you, though, Mary." She extended a cotton-gloved hand. "Ellie wrote me about you when she first met you—told me your mother was dead. I'm so glad Ellie has a friend like you." Mary eyed the lady suspiciously. What was the big idea? What was the old dame getting at?

never been in a real cathedral in my whole life!" "Great," answered Mary, brightly. "Now I've gotter scatter—beat it. Yes'm," to a customer peering behind the dress rack, "all $3.95. You take about a 40?" But her eyes sought a shabby bonnet fast losing itself in the jostling crowd.

It was shortly after 2 when a young, slim girl, in a scanty, flimsy dress barely covering two thin knees, dashed into the girls' room of the great bargain basement.

"Mary," she cried to the girl who arose from a sagging chair, "I got a real leather overnight case—scratched a bit, but a bargain. I was so excited I couldn't eat a thing."

"Lissen," said Mary, as the girl started to spread a thick, red paste upon wan lips. "Let's have a look at yer before the war paint goes on." She quietly surveyed the astonished girl and frowned over her thin, drooping shoulders, her pale face, the blue rings beneath her soft eyes.

"I know I'm a wreck today," said the girl. "It's because I'm sort of nervous. You know, this is my wedding day—"

"Do yer think I'd let yer marry that cheap bozo—that little bum?" Mary exploded dramatically, if inelegantly.

"Why, Mary! What are you saying!" The girl sank weakly upon a couch.

"Lissen! There ain't goin' to be no weddin' tonight—because there ain't a bride or a bridesmaid—"

"How dare you!" stormed the girl through hot tears. "You said yourself that I could make a new man of Tom—"

"Reform him like yer tried to reform me when I first met yer. You poor little weak darling—" Mary was on the verge of tears herself.

"But he needs me—" "Needs yer," echoed Mary shrilly. "Someone else needs yer a lot more. Lissen! I've just finished talking with a little old angel—the kind of angel I hope my mother is now. She was lookin' for her little Ellie! And I could hardly look her in the eye, knowing what I knew. But wait," as she saw the girl had become deathly pale, "she don't know a thing. Now you lay down on the couch here for the afternoon. I'll tell Snyder you're sick. I won't be far from the truth—"

"My mother, my little mother," sobbed the girl brokenly.

"Yeh, and she's going to see both of us at 6 o'clock—think that over—you, she and me—that's all. Think that over."

While a girl lay quietly in a stuffy room and thought things over—and arrived at a decision—a little, bent old lady knelt in the dim peacefulness of a great cathedral. "Thank you, God," she murmured softly. Then, not really knowing the great truth of her words, "You sent me, just in time!"

Glass Invented to Save Manuscripts in Museums

The documents concern George Washington, Nathan Hale and General Burgoyne. They are on display at the society's museum display at the society's museum.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Airplanes at $750 Each
Perils of Pacifism
The "Man of Calcium"
Improving Human Breed?

Fourteen concerns have offered to build small airplanes to cost as little as $750. That is important aviation news; the bureau of air commerce is to be congratulated on its effort to encourage individual flying.

The day is coming when there will be more machines in the air than there are automobiles on the ground now. More than 25,000,000 airplanes may sound like exaggeration.

But it sounded like exaggeration some years ago when this writer published editorials urging citizens not to spread tacks and cut glass on roads, to puncture automobile tires, because, before long, automobiles would be used by workers going to and from work. That prediction came true.

Some one preparing a list of ten things that Christians would and would not do says:

"There would be no private wealth; Jesus denounced great possessions as alien to His gospel, and fatal to His kingdom.

"There would be no poverty and no war, because real Christians would refuse to fight."

In this civilization, if Christians refused to fight, they would rapidly diminish in numbers and the Pacific coast would be settled by Asiatics.

The founder of Christianity taught that what was due to Caesar should be rendered unto him.

If he were on earth now he might say the same of organized capital, knowing that it supplies, in our complicated system, the possibility of steady work.

Nobody, not even a clergyman, can be positive as to what Christ's commands would be if he returned in this age of flying machines, automobiles, public schools and the strange problem of too much of almost everything, combined with want among many thousands of families lacking food and the government wondering, occasionally what to do with millions of bushels of wheat.

Before long you may have football coaches feeding calcium to their players. You know what we call "a man of iron" is really the "man of calcium."

The metal calcium in the blood, in quantities that do not change, or that change little, produces a steadiness of nerve lacking in men with a fluctuating calcium supply.

It is said that experiments made on four young men at an eastern university showed that a drop in calcium brought on "moodiness, depression and pessimism."

If there is high calcium content in the blood serum they are in a "happy, cheerful, optimistic, emotional state."

But ask your doctor about it. Don't swallow calcium recklessly.

The supremacy of the Alaskan malamutes as the Arctic beast of burden is being challenged by the lowly billy goat. Late dispatches from Seward claim that several trappers and explorers are already using Swiss milch goats instead of dogs to pull their sleds.

It is claimed that the goats will not only outpull an equal number of dogs, but require much less feed—an important item in the Arctic. In addition, by taking a nanny goat along, the trapper or explorer is provided with about a quart of rich, wholesome milk daily.—Washington Post.

TIGERS DEFEAT HORNETS

The Tigers clicked offensively Friday afternoon, but the defense only clicked off and on. The final score was 37 to 0 and scoring honors went to Capt. Laswell with three touchdowns. The Tigers took the ball at the first of the game and scored on a straight drive. Mobeetie then took the ball and very efficiently moved it to the Tiger ten yard line, before being halted. The Mobeetie offense failed to function after that and the Tigers checked off on and for touchdowns. The substitutes were run in twice and received a little baptism under fire.

The Tigers meet Panhandle, one of the "hot shots" in the race for regional honors, next Friday night at Tiger Field. The last two years the Tigers have beaten Panhandle by margins under seven points both times. Pampa defeated Panhandle 7-0 and McLean 12-0 this year, therefore it looks like a bloody battle is near.

The Panther line-up is given below:

Table with columns: Name, Wt., No., Pos.
Capt. C. Sparks 185 87 Q
N. Sparks 180 85 H
Crawford 150 72 H
Smith 150 77 F
Watts 150 75 E
Paul 155 74 E
Sterne 165 86 T
Barnett 220 92 T
Anderson 145 84 G
Howe 145 76 G
Eagle 165 78 C

The team has an average of 164 pounds per man, while the Tigers average only 155—meaning that the Tigers are outweighed nine pounds per man. If the Tigers "dish out the oats" at this game, the chances are that the girls will be wearing gold footballs denoting champs, at the end of the season.

FRESHMAN REPORT

Joy Masterson had been absent for several days because he discovered he had swelling on one or both sides of his face called mumps.

Bill Gregory, the vice president, has started to move to the state of California. The Gregory family left here last week.

Many freshmen went to the fair last Thursday. That diminished Thursday's English class greatly. Those who didn't go to the fair had a bit of vacation as well as those who went. We had book reports during English period.

NEWS FROM THE SOPHOMORES

The sophomores completed the organization of their class this past week. In addition to Norman Trimble and Helen Sharp, president and vice president respectively, Dorothy Sitter was chosen for secretary-treasurer and Ermadel Floyd for reporter. Mesdames Blevins, Sitter, Cooke, Lynch, Vester Smith, Hale, L. T. Jones and Bogan were chosen for room mothers. The president appointed the following students to serve on the social committee: Jessie Mae Lynch, Dorothy Sitter, Georgia Colebank, Billy Cooke and Vester Lee Smith. With their organization complete, the sophomores are looking forward to a social soon.

BAND GETS NEW CAPS

The band members have received their new caps. They are styled in military fashion from black and gold material. They arrived in time to be worn to the fair at Amarillo last Friday, where the band broadcasted from station KGNC. McLean is very proud of her band and has received many compliments on it.

Mr. Leeds received the following interesting paragraphs in a letter, and is passing them on to you:

Pills or Piccolos

For centuries the health-promoting value of music has been recognized. Hippocrates, "father of medicine," is said to have taken his mentally disordered patients to the Temple of Esculapius to listen to music, in the year 400 B. C. Theophrastus mentioned flute playing as a remedy for sciatica. In the 13th century, the Arabs equipped hospitals with music rooms.

Today, scientists with galvanometers, cardiographs, and other gadgets have studied the effects of music on the human organism. They have found that when a man lifting a weight fails and stops, a brisk, snappy march will cause him to lose his sense of fatigue and be able to lift the weight again. A soft lullaby will quiet a heart flutter. Modern dentistry includes a radio equipped office. There are mysterious health building powers in music. Perhaps one of these days instead of sending for a doctor we will send for a musician to cure our ills, or, perhaps, the doctors of the future will carry a flute, clarinet or piccolo in their kit bag and use musical notes instead of pills to make us well.

JUNIOR CLASS NOTES

The junior class has completed its organization. Miss McCarty was elected as their sponsor. Kid McCoy was elected president; Jesse Dear Cobb, vice president; Olive Louise Atwood, secretary. The following room mothers were selected: Mrs. Kid McCoy, Mrs. J. L. Hess, Mrs. Rish Phillips, Mrs. Scott Johnston, Mrs. Ernest Dowell and Mrs. C. C. Bogan.

The junior class is very proud of its members that have done some very outstanding work in agriculture the past week. Maurice Wilkins was high point man of the dairy judging contest held Sept. 21 at the Amarillo 171-state fair. Perry Masterson was high point man in a poultry judging contest held at Quail Sept. 18.

HOMEMAKING REPORT

Some very unusual as well as amusing sights were seen at school Tuesday when the new members of the Future Homemakers were initiated. The initiation closed Tuesday evening with a covered dish luncheon, followed by a theatre party. Fifteen new members greatly increased our membership. The old members wish to compliment the new Future Homemakers upon the good sportsmanship displayed Tuesday, and extend them a hearty welcome. The girls are looking forward to a very interesting club this year.

A new pair of Weis pinking shears has been added to our department. We are very proud to receive this new equipment and will find it very useful in our work.

Several improvements have been made in our library this year. The books have been numbered and arranged according to the Dewey System. This is the same system that is used in the high school library. This plan will simplify the issuing of books to students and will enable us to keep an accurate check on our books.

The second year girls have completed a very interesting study of marketing. A new unit of work in meal planning, preparation and serving was started this week.

The first and third year students are busy solving their clothing construction problems.

SENIOR NOTHINGS

Jesse Finley is afraid that Miss Cousins' green coat will get frost-bitten and turn brown.

Fred Cable and J. L. Rice are thinking of putting in a beauty parlor. Metz Christian will be their first customer.

Earl Moon is glad to report that he has reserved his locker for future use, since he didn't move to Borger. Eula Faye is wearing a counterfeit ring. Is she going to replace it with a senior ring, when a certain "red" head gets his?

Wilson Shaw doesn't think it is so funny when Miss Kennedy looks at him when he has a mouth full of peanuts.

"Cowboy" Finley certainly rates high with May Belle Grogan. (What about Saturday night?)

If you see any of the faculty members looking puzzled, it is probably because they are trying to think of something complimentary to write in the new memory books that the senior girls are getting.

Poor Lois seems to be studying too much, 'cause she had to get glasses. (The boys seem to think it makes her look grown up. Will it make her act that way?)

INTERESTING PEOPLE

Every week in this paper will appear some interesting facts about some interesting person in McLean high school. The members of the senior class will of course rank in this "Who's Who" column. Watch this space. You might find out something new. The subject matter for this week is found in:

Name—John Harding (principal of high school).

Born—in Noah's Ark, on April 6, 1889.

Hometown—Byers.

Colleges—Howard Payne, Texas University and University of Colorado.

Ambition (other than teaching school)—to own a ranch in South America.

Hobbies—music, art, dramatics (he has so many he really does not know his favorite).

Nickname—Zigzag (in high school), President (in college), Uncle Johnny (McLean high school).

Favorite sport—Polo.

Ability excelled most — making freshmen squirm (don't the sophs, juniors and seniors).

ADDITIONS MADE TO LIBRARY

The library has just received 91 new books of fiction, biography, history and science. These have been numbered according to the Dewey System and are now available for the use of high school students. Approximately $60 worth of class magazines are now coming to the library in weekly and monthly issues. A repair section has been added to the duty of the librarians and it is planned that no book be re-issued until necessary repairs have been made.

The library needs the cooperation of every student. A book will last for as many as thirty readings and possibly more under good care. With each student interested in 29 others reading the same material he is reading, the money expended for library supplies will go far toward a store of knowledge. The books are to be used, but to be used with care.

THE MACEDONIAN CALL

Lesson text, Acts 16:6-15; Roman's 15:18-21. Golden text, "Go ye therefore and teach all nations." Matt. 28:19.

When Paul was ready to begin his second missionary journey there was a discussion between him and his fellow worker, Barnabas. The difficulty ended in Paul's taking Silas and Barnabas going with his nephew, John Mark. The two companies went different ways. Paul and his companion went out toward Tarsus and on the cities preached to on the first journey through Asia Minor. The missionary went to these churches strengthening those small groups of new converts and inspiring them to greater work for God.

We recall that upon that first tour after preaching in Lystra, Paul was stoned and left for dead. This seems like a terrible suffering to be called upon to bear. Few would have ever returned to the place where they had been so badly treated. But it was here on this second journey that Paul found his son in the ministry. Most likely Timothy had been converted the first time Paul preached there. His father was a heathen, but his mother and grandmother were Jewesses. Timothy had a knowledge of the Old Testament and the new teaching came more natural for him. He likely was strong in the little group of Christians Paul left behind. At any rate when Paul returned on his second tour, he found this charming young Christian surrendered to preach and ready to continue with him on the remainder of his journey.

This group continued its ministry through Asia Minor. But when Paul would have turned eastward along the coast of the Black Sea, the Holy Spirit restrained him. God had other plans. The company continued westward and came to Troas on the coast. Here they did some work, and started a church. Then one night Paul had a vision of a man standing across the waters and calling for help. Paul had never had any idea of crossing the Aegean Sea and going into Europe. But God changed his mind. With the view of the vision in his mind he did not hesitate to seek passage across the narrow rough water into Europe.

How easy it was for God to change

Paul's mind. First he determined to go back east in northern Asia Minor but God turned him. Then he had never expected to go across the sea with his message. But God changed him again. His mind and heart must have been exceedingly open to the will of God. How many of us can look back and see where God has so definitely guided or changed the thinking of our minds. All too often as we look back to view our mistakes the sole reason for them is that our minds and hearts were not open to the will of God.

Here is also a lesson for Christians in our land today. It is time we stopped and checked up on our attitude of going across the waters with the Gospel of Christ. We might claim to believe in taking the Gospel message to a lost world because it is the command of Christ, yet to what extent do we give that the Gospel may be sent across? Practically all the money we give is for home consumption. And to tell the truth we don't give much. Most of us have by our attitudes and stinginess placed our churches on the charity list. The fact is that Jesus Christ established His churches and they are the biggest business in the world. When men pass through the dark hallway of death they will know more about the "big business" of God. What a pity men will not open their hearts now to the teachings of God and be honest by reporting His kingdom through His churches by titles and offerings, as He commands.

God says in Ezekiel 3:17. 18 that those unwarned of their wickedness (in this generation) will die in their wickedness, but their blood will be required at our hands. And until Christians give enough to send everyone God calls to go as a missionary to the fields of service, the blood of the unwarned men will be upon our hands. God knows how many He needs. It is our failure when they

WHY AMARILLO DIDN'T GET THE BUSINESS

The above caption heads a very thoughtful editorial in the Plainview Evening Herald, which is printed below. The Herald presents facts from the standpoint of both the buyer and the merchant—something that is seldom done in articles which urge people to trade at home. If every citizen would give the home merchant the first chance to serve him, the merchant would be in better position to anticipate the needs of the community, and to carry a stock which would meet the needs of the community. But let the Herald tell the story.—Canyon News.

How often the newspapers of the country are beset by the merchants to preach trading at home is known probably only to the newspapers. It's a pet topic with many a merchant that the people of the old home town do not trade at home. He bemoans the fact that the attorney's wife, the doctor's wife, the newspaper man's wife, the school teacher's wife, and wives of all others trade at this distant or nearby place or the other.

It is ever thus. The Plainview merchant complains of trade lost to Lubbock, Amarillo, Fort Worth or Dallas. While Amarillo complains of trade lost to Kansas City and Denver or Oklahoma City. Meanwhile, Kansas City merchants sigh when they ponder how much Chicago and New York merchants realize on trade that is rightfully Kansas City's. How New York must sigh at the Parisian turnover on milady's wardrobe, which rightfully belongs in Yankee marts. It is the perennial problem.

Simply, the local merchant should have a prior claim to local patronage when he can serve one as well or better than another. He might be entitled to a little break beyond this, too. For he does help maintain local schools, churches (sometimes), city and county government, sing at neighborhood funerals, attend the Rotary, Kiwanis or Lions, boost the Bulldogs, vote against your favorite candidate for office, etc., etc.

There's not as much merit to a lot of the "gripe" about people trading out of town as one might suppose, however. Business goes where it is invited and appreciated, and where price is right. That's where it should go.

But for those who would go afield with their trade that rightfully belongs in their home town, wherever that town may be, attention is invited to an absolutely truthful incident of this week. A Plainview housewife sends to Amarillo for samples of cloth suitable for making a suit for a little girl. Reason: Plainview stocks didn't offer what she wanted, some stores—purporting to be dry goods stores to her, department stores to the more sophisticated—not having a single bolt of suitable material.

Samples came from Amarillo. She compared with Plainview samples. Amarillo's variety did not suit her better than Plainview's, and, oddly enough, but truthfully, she selected a pattern and grade that was shown in both Plainview and Amarillo. The Plainview price was $1.95 per yard, the Amarillo price was $2.25 per yard. She bought the Plainview offering, highly satisfied.

(Name of lady, name of Plainview and Amarillo firm, samples of cloth supplied any Herald reader upon request).

Moral: Trade at home when everything's equal, and look carefully before you jump at the conclusion that they're not.

Correlative: Carry the stocks, give competitive value and service before you beef about folks trading away from home.

Women Turn Confidently to

CHERIE NICHOLAS
Nationally Known Fashion Authority

CONCERNING styles and fashions, women desire only that information which they know is authentic. They demand accurate reporting of the new clothing trends, with candid portrayals of the described garments through truthful illustrations. They seek the correct, the latest and finest—but never the bizarre, the extreme or sensational. They wish their fashion writer to speak of smartness and good taste, of what is practical for the average woman, and [a very important item] of garments and hats they can find in their own local stores and shops.

Small wonder, therefore, that women turn confidently to Cherie Nicholas, whose illustrated fashion articles appear regularly in this newspaper. Miss Nicholas tells what the nation's foremost designers and creators of fine styles decree shall be right for the weeks to come.
