EDUCATIONAL VALUE OF MUSIC

Prof. C. H. Leeds with vocal and instrumental, a field which offers opportunity for the educational of the individual. This and more becoming real-administrators of education placing courses in music on the traditional academic of the school curriculum. The value of music in education may be witnessed especially in the phenomenal rise of school orchestras in the last few years. The larger schools in training is offered during the school year and is considered fully as important as the time-honored courses in algebra or ancient history. Courses in music offer credit as do the academic courses in instrumental music. Music is as valuable in the educational development. Let us look at it with reference to the directions of development: (1) the physical, (2) the mental, (3) the emotional and (4) the spiritual. Physically, playing a wind instrument is conducive to health. When music is properly conducted, it develops and made strong, and their resistance to disease. Physicians recommend wind playing for individuals with nervousness. One of the greatest values derived from performance of musical instrument lies in the coordination between the brain, the tongue, the hands, and the feet. Music is a school subject that systematically develops bodily rhythm, which is impossible without muscular coordination and are necessary factors in musical performance. Rhythmic coordination of hand and foot is the essential characteristic of whether it is playing a typewriter or operating a typewriter. Studies show that, in general, those who work seriously on a musical instrument tend to average in class work than those who never attempted to play. Proof of this is an excellent miniature comes from Oxford University where those students taking music receive 75% of all prizes and scholarships. Attention and concentration are necessary pre-requisites to the attainment of proper habits in musical performance. Furthermore, the required attention and sustained concentration serves to develop an individual's intelligence to its utmost. The social life of band and orchestra is essentially lies in the very cooperation and mutual cooperation in the rendering of a musical performance. We talk about the harm that should exist in an ideal organization. Is there a social institution which demands harmony in the successful performance of a musical organization? To a musical instrument in harmony with the instruments of others is the individual to listen for and date the tones produced by his associates. He soon learns the perfectly balanced ensemble possible only with each member of the ensemble properly contributing. He soon learns that the egotistic tendency to "make heard" often results in an unbalanced ensemble and is detrimental to the successful performance of the composition. The performance on a musical instrument has its spiritual value. "If you don't want your child to blow a horn, teach him to blow a horn." Studies show that this is a truth. One finds very few musicians in our jails and penitentiaries. It is nothing that draws man to God more than the strains of beautiful music. The ability to produce this music has its value, for the production of good music requires spiritual-ness. Music is a builder of character, for music exercises a profound influence on the emotions, and is essentially a product of emotions. Tenderness, sympathy and compassion are virtues engendered by good music. The contact with music which the student attains in the school room serves as an emotional stimulus which, if continued, result in the formation of highly desirable habits of thought which color his attitudes toward the means of life. There are many other values one can consider in connection with music, but our discussion in this column is limited. (Continued on back page)

Sitter, Sumrall Speakers, Lions Luncheon Tuesday

E. L. Sitter, who has returned from a vacation in California, and Rev. D. D. Sumrall, guest minister at the First Baptist Church, were present on the program at the regular luncheon of the Lions Club at the Meador Cafe Tuesday. Jesse J. Cobb acted as chairman for the program committee and introduced the speakers. Lion Sitter told of the fine fishing enjoyed in the surf and hinted at his visit to Zoro's Gardens at the San Diego fair, but failed to go into details to any extent. Rev. Sumrall disclaimed any desire to talk, but gave an interesting dissertation on the "responsibility of personal influence." "A man needs to be constructive in his association with others," said Rev. Sumrall. "He should realize that his business has a definite influence on the community." The speaker quoted Roger Babson on the need of a revival of religion to get us out of the depression. Tail Twister Cryer was busy through the session and most everyone present contributed to the charity fund for various infractions of the tail twister's rules.

GOLF GOSSIP

By D. A. Davis

Folks, I'm switching off to golf this week because there's too many nasty jokes being poked out to us modern golfers. The jokes are so old they are almost petrified, while us golfers are right up to date.

For instance, that old joke about it costing a golfer one hundred and fifty dollars for clubs, a dollar and a half for balls, and a caddy at two dollars a round, and spotting his opponent at a dollar a hole, big g.n. parties at the club houses and a profusion of "Sweet Adeline" quartets with the voices of a bunch of donkeys are all bunk, pure and simple, and I'm getting fed up on these old stale jokes. What I want to know is why you golf haters don't get up something modern and lay off that old petrified stuff.

Of course there are a few smart alecks that play golf just like all o'her games that think it smart to load himself down with clubs and lose a dozen balls a day, but most of us golfers are fairly intelligent and practically all are prominent men of affairs as well as good sports and providers for our families, and we can't see any difference in spending a few dollars to play golf than spending it for a thousand other things that are equally as foolish that don't afford near as much pleasure.

For instance I can't understand why any man wants to spend from fifty to a hundred dollars on a little garden spot where a whole lot of hard work is necessary, just for the pleasure of growing fifty cents worth of radishes or turnip greens, or spend twice that much on his lawn to have a nice place for his neighbors' cows, dogs and chickens to play on and ruin in a few hours what he has worked hard on the entire summer. I think it is entirely more pleasurable to even go to the extreme and ridiculousness of taking a swim, drinking a pint of gin, singing "Sweet Adeline" with six or eight other liars and call it the end of a perfect day than it is to swing a grubbing hoe, rattle with a spade, push a lawn mower all over the front yard, set out shrubs, bushes, trees and flowers, landscape your ground, put in curbs, sidewalks, lily ponds, fish ponds and all kinds of doodads, to have it either ruined by old Pide and Bruno or killed by old Jack Frost or blown down by a twister, and at the end of a "perfect summer" you ain't got a doggone thing in the world to show for your work. While on the other hand you can buy yourself a $9.98 set of clubs, a dozen $1.50 balls and have more fun, have more friends, have better health, drink more gin, tell bigger and better lies, cuss better, walk farther and live longer and die perfectly satisfied. So why not take up golf in the first place?

And another thing. You are always hearing some boob raving about the "poor golf widow" while the fact is right now there are just about as many women playing golf as there are men, and I dare say they are enjoying the game just as well as the men. Of course they don't cuss, tell lies about their scores, drink gin or sing "Sweet Adeline," but go into the game for the real enjoyment they get out of it as well as the companionship, sportsmanship and real humane understanding of each other. And further than that, many "poor golf widows" have really learned to love and understand their husbands better, because strange as it might seem, there are just lots and lots of husbands and wives who play golf together and I am perfectly satisfied that many family rows have been prevented just because wife grabs her golf clubs and goes right out to the golf grounds with hubby where they can talk over their problems together out in the wide open spaces instead of fussing it out at home, and if they happen to get into a heated argument they have got plenty of good clubs to fight with.

No, folks, you can't convince me that golf ain't a fine game for everybody and you old grippers can just set around and gripe and pull all the funny jokes you want to on us golfers but it won't do a bit of good. However, I am bound to admit that there are times when you got to lay the old clubs aside and take up the hoe and cut a few weeds away from your front door, especially if they are goat-heads.

Spanish Government Is Checking the Rebellion

REPORTS from various sources when analyzed indicate that the Spanish government was more than holding its own in the desperate fighting with the Fascist rebels. It was sending men out to check the advance of General Mola's columns on Madrid from the north and bombing rebel strongholds in that part of the country, as well as Cordoba and Seville in the south and Ceuta and Melilla in Morocco. The loyalists won decided victories at Caspe in the Guadarrama mountains where the rebels were trying to break through to Madrid, and at Oviedo.

C. G. Bowers

Mola's officers explained that he was waiting for the arrival of General Franco's forces from the south, but those troops had not been able to get very far in their advance on the capital. Their chiefs, however, professed to be confident of ultimate victory.

Claude G. Bowers, American ambassador to Spain, was cut off from communication with the summer quarters of his embassy at San Sebastian for several days, being himself at his summer residence in Fuentarrabia, close to the French border. He finally got in touch with the embassy and removed the staff to his villa. Mr. Bowers also provided safe haven for a number of other foreign diplomats and their families. He said he had ascertained that not a single American had been injured in the civil war. American warships and liners were utilized to evacuate all the Americans in ports where their lives were in danger.

Nazi-Polish Quarrel in Danzig Is Ending

ACCORDING to announcement by a Polish news agency which is generally considered to be the mouthpiece of the Polish foreign office, an accord has been reached between Berlin and Warsaw on the policies to be followed in the Free City of Danzig. The Nazis are said to have agreed to give explanations that will take the sting out of recent incidents in the city. The texts of notes exchanged between Germany and Poland will be submitted to the League of Nations before being made public.

Vimy Ridge Memorial Unveiled by Edward

MORE than 100,000 persons stood in silence at Vimy, France, as King Edward VIII of England unveiled the magnificent memorial built by France to commemorate the heroic capture of Vimy Ridge by the Canadian forces in April, 1917. After greeting President Lebrun of France in French, the king said:

"We raise this memorial to Canadian warriors. It is an inspired expression in stone chiseled by a skillful Canadian hand of Canada's salute to her fallen sons. It marks the scene of feats of arms which history will long remember and Canada can never forget. And the ground it covers is the gift of France to Canada."

The dedication culminated ten years of labor and an expenditure of about $1,000,000 on erection of the memorial. The work was completed after earlier delays in construction because of difficulties in finding the 7,000 to 8,000 tons of special stone required.

Walter S. Allward, Toronto architect and sculptor who designed the monument for the Canadian battlefields memorial commission, supervised the preparations for the unveiling.

Sir Henry Wellcome, Scientist, Dies

SIR HENRY WELLCOME, who was born in a log cabin in Wisconsin 83 years ago and who became one of England's greatest scientists and explorers, died in London following an operation. His scientific achievements ranged from the establishment of physiological laboratories to pioneering in the field of archaeological survey through the use of airplanes. He won the Royal Humane society life saving medal in 1885 and as late as 1927 founded the Lady Stanley Maternity hospital in Uganda, Central Africa.

Queen Mary Sets New Atlantic Record

THE Queen Mary, Cunard White Star line's great liner, set a new transatlantic record in her latest crossing to New York, taking the blue ribbon of the sea from the Normandie of the French line. Her time from Cherbourg breakwater to Ambrose lightship was four days, eight hours and thirty-seven minutes. This beat Normandie's record by three hours and five minutes, but Queen Mary's course was somewhat shorter than that taken by her rival, and the latter still holds the speed by hour record.

Flying out to greet the British liner, a big seaplane piloted by Capt. W. W. Wincapaw fell to the sea. The nine persons aboard were picked up by a boat from the liner Exermont, but one of them, E. T. Ramsdell, a Boston newspaper photographer, was fatally injured.

Repudiate Debts If Lemke Loses, Says Coughlin

FATHER CHARLES E. COUGHLIN, speaking at the homecoming celebration for William Lemke at Hankinson, N. D., advised his hearers to repudiate their debts if the Union party candidate were not elected President. "And if anybody tries to enforce them," he added, "repudiate them also." This, the priest declared, is the only way out.

Board Is Appointed to Study Drouth Remedies

SCATTERED rains over limited areas brought only temporary relief from the heat and drouth, and then warm weather started a new advance over the corn belt. The federal crop reporting board in Washington said the drouth was as severe as that of 1934 and worse than any since the western country was settled. The serious conditions prevailed over practically the entire area from the Rocky mountains in Montana to the Hudson valley in New York and southward over western Pennsylvania, central Maryland, the Ohio valley, parts of Arkansas, and most of Oklahoma.

It was announced in Washington that President Roosevelt had created a national committee to study measures for remedying conditions in the drouth region through utilization of natural resources. The committee is headed by Morris L. Cooke, rural electrification administrator. Other members are Col. Richard C. Moore of the army engineers; John C. Page, acting commissioner of the bureau of reclamation; Frederick H. Fowler of the national resources committee; Rexford G. Tugwell, resettlement administrator, and Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator. Mr. Roosevelt intends to make a trip through the drouth area late in August.

Many Quitting the CCC to Take Private Jobs

DIRECTOR ROBERT FECHNER reports that nearly 13,000 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps left that organization during June to accept private employment, and he said this was largely attributable to the general improvement in business conditions, and in part to the practical education given the men.

The exact number discharged in June was 12,995, the largest group to quit since the corps was reduced to a maximum of 350,000.

Nominations for Senate Are Made in Iowa

IOWA Republicans nominated Barry Halden of Chariton, editor and American Legion leader, for the United States senate seat made vacant by the death of Louis Murphy. His Democratic opponent is Guy M. Gillette.

The state Farmer-Labor party delegates met in Des Moines and named former Senator Smith Wildman Brookhart as their candidate for the seat. Until recently he has been connected with the New Deal farm organization.

Ousting of Eleanor Holm From Olympic Team

PROBABLY the controversy over the ousting of Eleanor Holm from the American Olympic team is destined to be long lived; but it is difficult to see how the committee could have done otherwise in the circumstances. The backhand swimming champion, who is Mrs. Jarrett in private life, refused to obey the training rules and indulged in several drinking parties on the ship that carried the athletes to Germany. She disregarded warnings, and afterward said the officials knew she liked "a good time, particularly champagne." Her defenders seem to think she was old enough and experienced enough to be permitted to do as she pleased, regardless of the effect on discipline.

Organized Labor Split Nears the Climax

IT SEEMS at this time that nothing can prevent the great schism in the ranks of American organized labor. John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, and his followers in the industrial union movement, are determined to go ahead with their plans for the organization of steel workers into a mass union, and now have expanded their program, proposing to unionize thus the employees of steel fabrication and processing plants.

Moreover, Lewis and his associates have declared they will not appear before the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to stand trial on charges of "fomenting insurrection," so it appears the council can do nothing but suspend the rebels and their unions, these constituting about one third of the federation's membership. If this is done, the final decision as to expulsion of these unions will be made by the national convention in Tampa in November.

Gov. Landon Accepts the Republican Nomination

GOV. ALF. M. LANDON now knows officially that he is the Republican nominee for President of the United States. Before more than 100,000 of his fellow citizens he stood at the south entrance of the Kansas capitol in Topeka and received the formal notification from Congressman Snell of New York, who was permanent chairman of the Cleveland convention. Around him were grouped a thousand leaders of the party, and in front of him were the throngs of his supporters and admirers who had gathered from far and near to do him honor and to witness the ceremonies. Trains, automobiles, buses and airplanes had been pouring them into Topeka for several days and the gayly decorated little city was crowded to the limit. Everyone was happy and enthusiastic and everyone appeared confident that Landon would be elected.

The nominee's speech of acceptance was the plain spoken, outright kind of talk his hearers expected. Asking divine guidance to make him worthy of the faith and confidence shown in him, he said:

"This call, coming to one whose life has been that of the everyday American, is proof of the freedom of opportunity which belongs to the people under our government."

Here, briefly, is what Mr. Landon had to say on some of the more vital issues:

Recovery—"The record shows that these (New Deal) measures did not fit together into any definite program of recovery. Many of them worked at cross-purposes and defeated themselves. The nation has not made the durable progress, either in reform or recovery, that we had the right to expect. . . . We must be freed from incessant governmental intimidation and hostility. We must be freed from excessive expenditures and crippling taxation. We must be free, from the effects of an arbitrary and uncertain monetary policy, and from private monopolistic control."

Relief—"Let me emphasize that while we propose to follow a policy of economy in government expenditures, those who need relief will get it. We will not take our economies out of the allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters."

Agriculture—"We shall establish effective soil conservation and erosion control policies in connection with a national land use and food prevention program—and keep it all out of politics. Our farmers are entitled to all of the home market they can supply without injustice to the consumer. We propose a policy that protects them in this right. . . . We propose to pay cash benefits in order to cushion our farm families against the disastrous effects of price fluctuations and to protect their standard of living."

Labor—"The right of labor to organize means to me the right of employees to join any type of union they prefer, whether it covers their plant, their craft or their industry. It means that, in the absence of a union contract, an employee has an equal right to join a union or to refuse to join a union."

Constitution—"It is not my belief that the Constitution is above change. The people have the right, by the means they have prescribed, to change their form of government to fit their wishes. . . . But change must come by and through the people and not by usurpation. . . . The Republican party, however, does not believe that the people wish to abandon the American form of government."

State Rights—"There has now appeared in high places a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their state governments or which they have reserved in themselves. In its ultimate effect upon the welfare of the whole people, this is the most important question now before us. Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?"

IT'S a strange and gruesome story I'm going to tell you today—about as old a tale as ever a man ran across in the course of his day's work. Anthony A. Maffe of Elizabeth, N. J., is the man to whom this adventure happened and it's just about the most ticklish piece of business he ever engaged in in his whole life.

Curiosity got him into it. That's a trait most adventurers have. They say curiosity killed a cat once. Well—I'll bet it's killed a heck of a lot of people, too. People who started to look into something that looked a bit strange and found it to be not only strange, but dangerous.

That's what happened to Tony Maffe. Tony was working as a quartermaster on a ferry boat that runs between Staten Island and Elizabethport when, on June 10, 1923, his curiosity was aroused by one of the passengers. That curiosity almost cost him his life. As a matter of fact, it did cost one man his life. But that wasn't any of Tony's fault. He only did his duty.

It was about a quarter of eleven at night. The ferry was docked on the Staten Island side, waiting for the trolley car that would bring another load of passengers. Tony was standing on the upper deck, waiting for the signal to get going. Down by the ferry gates a taxi pulled up to a stop, and he watched it idly as a man got out and began unloading a heavy, awkward looking bundle.

Furtive Filipino's Bundle Arouses Tony's Suspicions.

Tony's interest quickened when he saw that bundle. It was a huge package, and from the way the man carried it, it must have weighed a hundred pounds or more. Then, too, there was something furtive about the man that carried it. He was a Filipino, judging from his appearance, and there was a look of apprehension—of slyness—on his pinched face as he paid the driver and moved toward the ticket office.

Tony had a hunch that something was wrong with that guy, and, on the spur of the moment, he decided to investigate. He ran down the stairs to the lower deck, walked ashore and went into the ticket office. He got there just as the man reached the window, walked up behind him and took a closer look at his package. There was a spot of blood on it!

Still, Tony couldn't swear there was anything wrong with that bundle. It might contain nothing more damning than a hundred pounds or so of meat from a butcher shop.

That would account for the spot of blood. Wouldn't he look foolish if he made a fuss and then that package turned out to be nothing more than a bunch of beefsteaks for some restaurant across the river? No—Tony couldn't prove anything. But just the same, he determined to keep his eye on Mr. Filipino.

Stranger Is Carrying a Wrapped-up Body.

As the man boarded the boat, Tony followed. Going through the ladies' cabin, he moved up behind him and felt the package. His fingers closed on something round. He couldn't be sure of it, but it seemed to him that the round object had hair on it. "Anyway," says Tony, "I knew darn well it wasn't a cabbage or a coconut. I went up to the captain and told him what I thought—that that fellow had a wrapped-up body that he was getting ready to throw overboard."

The captain told Tony to go back and watch that bird, and he himself phoned for the police. By the time Tony got down on deck again, the Filipino had the bundle on the rail, waiting for his chance to toss it into the river.

"I'd rather have waited until the police came," he says, "but there wasn't time. The Filipino was beginning to look nervous, and I was afraid he'd throw the bundle over the side without waiting for the boat to get under way. So I walked slowly over to the rail at a point a few feet away and began edging toward him."

Davey Jones' Locker Loomed for Tony.

A foot at a time, Tony moved up on his man. He didn't dare be too much of a hurry about it, lest the man notice him and drop his bundle. The water was deep at that spot, and if the bundle was weighted, it might take a lot of diving to get it up again. On the other hand, if it weren't weighted, it might float away in the darkness and never be found.

He edged up until he was within a foot of the man. Then he reached out, grasped the package and pulled it off the railing. In the next instant, the Filipino turned on Tony. He bent low, grabbed him around the knees, and lifted him off his feet.

In a flash, Tony saw his game—to throw him overboard as well as the package. He let out a yell and grabbed at the railing. He caught it—gave a kick or two, and managed to free himself of the Filipino's clutches.

Cops Find It Was a Case of Jealous Murder.

Then, just as the police came running out through the door from the ladies' cabin, he caught the Filipino, put a hammerlock on him, and held him.

The cops opened up that package and found—just what Tony thought they would. It was a woman's body, doubled up like a jackknife and tied with ropes. Her body was still warm.

Tony was a witness at the Filipino's trial—a trial that sent him to the chair. There he got the story of the gruesome tragedy. The Filipino and the girl were servants in the same house. The Filipino had given the girl a diamond engagement ring and the girl, breaking the engagement, had refused to give it back. In a fit of anger, the Filipino killed the girl, and he was trying to get rid of the body when Tony caught him.

Years Soften Sorrow

The sure years reveal the deep remedial force that underlies all sorrowful facts. Crushing losses, which at the time seemed nothing but privation, later assume a different aspect. The breaking up of an occupation or a home allows the formation of others more friendly to the true growth of character, constrains the reception of new influences, hitherto untasted; and he or she who would have remained a sunny garden-flower with no room for its roots, and too much sunshine for its head, by the falling of the walls and the neglect of the gardener is made a banyan of the forest, yielding shade and fruit to wide neighborhoods of men.—Emerson.

Old Scottish Custom

When harvesting time came in Scotland the prettiest girl among the workers on the harvest field was chosen to cut the last sheaf of corn and to decorate it. She was known as the "Hairst Queen," harvest queen. She had to carry the sheaf to the farmhouse to the accompaniment of bagpipes and fiddles, where the sheaf was hung from the rafters in the kitchen and a dance took place in its honor. Sometimes Ceres, the goddess of corn, was represented as a doll. The Hairst queen having cut the final handful of corn would tie it up with ribbons and deck it out in honor of the god dees.

Childhood Tugwell's Little Girl
Holland Buys Planes
Rev. Webber Knows

Childhood lasts longer in Brisbane than in America and it is evident from their letters that the children of the city are enjoying their summer holidays. The children of the city are enjoying their summer holidays. The children of the city are enjoying their summer holidays.

Arthur Brisbane

er than Assistant Secretary Tugwell's intelligent young daughter Marcia, aged twelve, who, in partnership with her friends, Frances Cottrell and Joyce Mick, organized "a laundry washing dogs." They advertised "Small dogs, 30 cents; medium dogs, 35 cents; grown-up dogs washed. Dogs not good must be sent with muzzles, and cannot wash large dogs."

Too bad that parental broke up the dog laundry, announced working hours "10 to 5 p. m. on Saturdays," and "no little girls' only holidays, 2 hours after school on other days."

What a good example for enterprise: the little really meant to work to "and wash" the dogs, not stand around and collect the cents.

Plucky little Holland and wise queen seem to have seen that the 1914 "war to end all wars" did not finish its job. Holland, through the big war safely, and butter, cheese, eggs, not making any bad $10,000,000 loans.

Now Holland is buying 12 bombing planes in Baltimore, spending $1,500,000 for the 12, spending many other millions on other killing machinery.

That means war and wages in Baltimore; it may mean pain and death for some of Baltimore's neighbors.

Foreign countries read thing said about them in America, not that foreign countries care what Americans think, or care about American goods, or care about American raw products, and government changeable and boyish.

Europe, Asia and Africa with equal interest statements to Americans that count and numerous Americans that like feathers in the air.

One simple-minded man pointed with pride to the statement of a clergyman in our United Statesological seminary.

That gentleman, Rev. Charles Webber, has a plan for a better government, not based on the about rendering unto Caesar that which is Caesar's. The big idea is to take away what is Caesar's.

Eight hundred young people were told by Reverend Webber "God, who is not content with things as they are, is a revolutionary Being, constantly seeking to make all things new."

Rev. Webber, "recognizing that about God being a revolutionary has a plan to help God in his efforts; a plan as simple as A, B, C. Capitalism, he says, must be abolished. Rev. Webber wants to planned and planning social economy in the United States. Under the Charles C. Webber plan, people would own and manage things as industry and property, no money would be spent for war and youth would rule.

Those brought up with the fashionable idea of God might say Rev. Webber, respectfully: "If God really is a revolutionary constantly seeking to make all things new, why does He not carry out His will and 'make all things new' every few minutes? Can it be that He needs the help of Rev. Webber and Lenin and Stalin along with that help?"

Also arises this question: If capitalism abolished, who would build the churches, the United Statesological seminaries, and pay salaries to Rev. Webbers for reading the mind of the Divinity? Dean Swift should have known the mind of Rev. Webber when he wrote the tale of a tub.

France calls Paris the "aerial port of Europe," proudly. In America the still prouder title "Chief of the Traffic Port of the Whole World" is claimed by Miami, Los Angeles, San Diego, Chicago, Cleveland, and with a great deal of reason by San Francisco and Oakland, thanks to the magnificent bay, and to the fact that the greatest air line, running from America to Asia, starts from that neighborhood.

"Oh, I don't think so. He took an engineering and they've got a rattling good engineering school. Bryn's family went there. They're part of the Stanford tradition. They always shine in football."

"Bryn's family?" Grandmother repeated slowly. Deborah, sick at heart, caught Tubby's eye. At sight of her face his own slowly lengthened. His mouth fell open. "But surely," Grandmother went on, "surely his family all went to Princeton. I remember quite distinctly. That would be, his father and his uncles. He has no brothers."

"I . . . I was thinking of his mother's family," Tubby said at last, still watching Deborah.

Deborah went across the veranda and rang the little silver bell. "You look tired, dear," she told her grandmother. "You must have some refreshment. Let me take Mr. Forbes away, and you rest for a few minutes before the tea comes."

Grandmother lifted her fan and moved it softly before her face. "I will be glad of some tea, Deborah," she murmured.

The tray came almost as she spoke, and at the same moment came the whine of Bryn's motor up the road. Almost immediately he was down the drive, and had given the group on the veranda one glance. His car stopped; a few seconds later he came around the corner of the house and to the foot of the steps. He walked up them slowly, his face unsmiling, his eyes on Tubby. Tubby put his cup down on the floor and stood buttoning his coat. Bryn stood waiting.

"Ah—er . . . I hope you can give me a few minutes of your time," Tubby began nervously. "It is in a noble cause, worthy sir. I am one whose sole interest is in the welfare of the nation. In other words, I should like to leave with you a small sample of my wares, just a small sample, sir, in forty-seven volumes. Nine dollars down and nine dollars a month till death do us part. This magnificent work . . ."

"Is it a book on etiquette?" Bryn inquired coldly.

"Etiquette? Oh, indeed, nothing of the kind. Although, of course, it contains chapters on etiquette. How to . . . to bathe the baby, and what soup to serve. That is the sort of thing you mean?"

"There should be something about invitations," Bryn answered. "Isn't there anything about not accepting invitations before they are offered? Or any remarks about getting bounced out of places where you haven't been asked?"

"Bryn," Deborah whispered, frantic, using his name almost for the first time. "Bryn, Grandmother thinks you mean it. Tell her."

Bryn turned toward Grandmother. She was leaning back on her pillows pale as death, her hand at her heart. She thought Tubby was an impostor.

But Bryn went across to her. "Are we upsetting you, Grandmother?" he asked, kneeling beside her. "I'm sorry. We don't mean it. The rosy-cheeked person standing so languidly, if there is such a word, before us, is one of my intimates. I have been more than good to him in the past. Many a time and oft I have shared with him my last bite and let him slip at the mosquito. You see how his presence affects me. My tongue goes out at a tangent. Did we frighten you?"

She began to smile at him. "How foolish of me to be upset," she said. "I might have guessed that you were joking. Deborah knew Mr. Forbes at once, and he brought your picture . . . but I thought . . . I was afraid . . ."

Bryn walked slowly, head bent, from the door of Grandmother's room, that night, to the door of his own. He had just helped her upstairs and had seen her to her own rooms with a last cheerful good-night smile. But as her door had closed, his smile faded.

There was a light under his own door. He opened it, went in, and closed it quietly behind him. Tubby sat in the armchair beside the window, waiting for him, a guiltily expectant look on his face.

"For the last two weeks," Bryn said evenly, "I have moved heaven and earth to create a good impression, to make everything go smoothly and comfortably, no questions asked. Give me another two months and you could have come up here and done your damndest. But right now . . . well, you couldn't have chosen a better time. I'm still a new broom."

Tubby frowned. "I didn't know I was putting my foot in it," he said dismally. "She told me herself that you'd explained everything, and she called you Bryn. What difference does it make, she said 'what he's called?' Naturally, I thought you'd done the sensible thing, and confessed."

"Confessed what?"

Tubby was silent.

"What you've succeeded in doing is raising a question at the back of her mind. She doesn't actually mistrust me, even yet, but she wonders a little. I don't know what in the devil you told her, but it was certainly enough. There wasn't a suspicion in her mind as to my identity. Now you've succeeded in giving her something to puzzle over. She never quizzed me about my people before. Tonight she's asked me questions. If Deborah hadn't been there I'd have had to wreck the show."

"Listen," Tubby said desperately.

His face was almost pale. "I didn't know this whole business meant so much to you, Bryn. I thought it was all a lark. You said it was. I knew Deborah was beautiful, and sweet—anybody can see that—and that you . . . well, that you were interested in her. You'd be blind if you weren't . . ."

Bryn interrupted him. "And what did you say about Sally and Madeline? Whatever you said seems to have been adequate. Grandmother gave me a bad half hour, after Deborah was gone, tonight. She got me into her sitting room and quizzed me. She suggested delicately that Deborah's feeling might be quite distinctly hurt at the thought that there had been other girls in my life who had meant so much to me."

There was a long silence.

"Bryn," Tubby broke in on him, "did Grandmother actually expect you and Deborah to fall into each other's arms the moment you met and . . . well, have everything all settled between you?"

"She hoped we would, yes."

Tubby gulped. "I don't quite understand her point of view," he went on. "Here's Deborah . . . she's nothing but a child. She doesn't know anything. She's as . . . fresh as a spring morning, and as unconscious about . . . well, about . . . that is, about . . ."

"You needn't flounder. I am aware of your meaning. In Victorian times a girl was supposed to be pure and entirely ignorant. Deborah doesn't know anything. She may have a few funny little ideas, but she doesn't know. That's one of the present difficulties. She's terrified. Well, a Victorian girl was supposed to have for her prospective husband only such feelings as respect and admiration and perhaps a gentle affection. Deborah was supposed to have those for Stuart Graham. They'd been inculcated in her. So Grandmother hadn't any compunction about handing her over to him."

Bryn's face was contracted. "Poor little kid," he said under his breath.

Tubby began. "Does she think . . . does she expect . . . because if she does . . ."

"She does," Bryn said with bitter ness. "She thinks that a wedding ring is a kind of magic talisman. If she knew that Deborah and I were . . . strangers, she'd die. Marriage is a kind of enclosure, to her. Deborah and I are one forever, she thinks, and the future is safe and secure. If life is smooth and untroubled she may live for years. If she is unhappy, troubled, she will just drift out. And if any thing did happen to her, Deborah would never be happy again. She would always think she'd failed her."

Tubby stood up. He moved across to his friend, and faced him. "Bryn," he said steadily, "I don't want to make any more mistakes. I think I'm sure, but I'd like your word for it. I never saw you like this before. Is it the real thing, Bryn? It's got you, at last? You are in love with Deborah?"

Bryn pulled away. He went across to the window and stood looking out at the stars. He turned and said, "Yes."

Tubby swallowed. Then, "I'm sorry I acted like a fool."

"It's all right, Tubby. Either . . . either it does come out all right, or it doesn't. Nothing you said would make any difference to Deborah, not even if you told her I'd been in love with half a dozen girls. She doesn't care anything about me."

"Listen," Tubby said. "Why don't you just show her how you feel, Bryn? I mean, put your arms around her and, well, kiss her. Can't you do that?"

"No."

"Why?"

"She gave me an opportunity once. I was afraid to. She wouldn't understand. You've got to remember that she doesn't understand anything. To frighten her. She might never give up. If I've got a chance at all, Tubby, it's in letting her get used to me. Once she has confidence in me, really trusts me, once we get to be friends, then perhaps I can . . . oh, touch her hand once in a while. But if I frightened her now—I'm sunk."

"She wouldn't be frightened. I guess you're in love, all right. You're too modest, Bryn. She wouldn't be frightened. She'd find herself returning your kiss. It's more or less an unconscious process anyway, isn't it?"

Bryn stared at him, the gray eye-drearing, far away. They came back to earth. Tubby had a suggestion.

"Why not get Sally and Madeline in here? Oh, Simon too, of course. Sally wouldn't come without him, and he'd be useful. You said Grandmother wanted young company for Deborah. Company now, and such company as my delightful sister, and her delightful husband, and his more than delightful sister . . . the way's been paved by those presents, you see, and my mention of the family relations . . . her mind would be too fully occupied to brood over you. We can th, the kids off. They're all good sports. And, for the deepest part of the plot—you know how Sally trots around at Simon's heels day and night, and kisses him at all the most awkward moments, and how they always hang on each other's arms?"

"Tubby," Bryn said after a moment "you are a fool. Nevertheless . . ."

"Exactly."

Bryn considered, whistling softly. His eyes began to sparkle. Tubby, sitting there, reached across the writing table for paper and a pen. He wrote a note. He sealed it in an envelope. He addressed it to Mrs. Simon Valature, at Hillsborough, California.

"There," he said. "They're dying to come anyway. So are a good many other people, as far as that goes."

"Listen," Tubby said desperately.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

The Fair Sex BOHEMIAN GROVE, CALIF.

—Up here in the Bohemian club's grove where, during the summer encampment, no women are allowed either at large or on the leash, I've been thinking about their little peculiarities.

If two women were cast away on a desert island with just each other for company, and after, let's say, ten or fifteen years, the rescue steamer arrived, they'd both be half way up the gangplank before either remembered the really important things she'd been intending all along to say to her companion; and matter if the tide were falling and the wind rising, they'd stop right there in their tracks and thresh it all out.

If you doubt this, see what happens when a pair of them are swapping good-bys, after an all-day conversation, on finishing a long chatty motor trip together. If they can find a narrow doorway where they'll block traffic, that's where they'll halt, always.

It's a curious sex, any way you take it. But we men keep on taking it and liking it. I don't know whether we're dumb—or numb. Must be one or the other.

Chip Off the Old Block. CELEBRATING his fifth birthday the other day, my small grandson and namesake met another gentleman of like age who bragged that his nurse brought him to the party in a car.

"Can your mama drive a car?" inquired the guest.

"No," answered my descendant, "but I'm going to teach her. All you do is start off and keep going till you have to stop, and then you say, 'Damn those red lights.'"

It would appear that Cobb has been listening to his grandfather.

Praising King Edward. IF HE was a Communist, of a breed who are usually half-baked mentalities, it was only to be expected that his effort to murder King Edward should be—thank heavens—a fizzle.

If he was a lunatic, then he's the kind of lunatic who should spend the rest of his days behind high walls. If he was a deliberate assassin—well, at least he gave a gallant monarch a chance to show how gallantly monarchs can behave in the face of danger.

Any man, given the royal background and an open path to the throne, can be a king, but not every king is a man. This king—he proved it and this part of the world rejoices at the outcome.

The Troubles of Europe. WE MAY have our own troubles, including so many mounting taxes over the land and so much mountain music over the radio, but what with Spain rent by internal war, and France having strikes which almost approximate war, and Poland threatening revolt against Nazi control of what, laughably, is called the "Free" City of Danzig, and the rest of them pretty generally stewing in their respective political casseroles, we're lucky.

In fact I can think of but one thing the European nations have which we could use, but, alas, will never get, needless to say, I refer to the money they owe us.

How the League Performs UNDER the rattle of the machine guns and the shrieks of the victims as civil war flames across Spain, that faint creeping sound which you hear, sounding something like a mouse in the waistcoating, is the League of Nations, taking its customary prompt steps to enforce peace upon this and all other distracted countries whatsoever.

By the way, does anyone remember when, once upon a bygone time, there was a war to end the persistent disease called war, a final war which forevermore would restore true democratic principles and motherly love to rival nations and embittered peoples? To date the result makes one almost despair of ever finding a cure for my dandruff.

Pandas Live in Trees The panda, not to be confused with the giant panda, is a scientific puzzle. In some ways he looks and acts as if he might be a relative of the raccoon. In other ways he seems to be kinfolk to bears. Scientists never have been able to decide this question, so they gave him a family name of his own, Aelurus fulgens. In their native Nepal, pandas live in holes in trees and sometimes slide among the rocks. They are nocturnal creatures, and it is customary for them to have twins. Their cry is a sudden squawl.

Clean Premises, Get Rid of Flies

Eliminate Breeding Places, First Step in Driving Away Pest.

By JOHN A. ARBEY, Extension Specialist, North Carolina State College—WNU Service.

One female fly allowed to live and breed may leave millions of descendants by fall. Don't give them a chance to breed.

Flies are not only carriers of filth and disease, but they are a constant source of annoyance to cattle and livestock. Cows will not give as much milk if continually harassed by flies.

The first step in getting rid of this nuisance is to eliminate breeding places. Manure from stables should be removed daily, if possible.

When practical, it is best to haul the manure direct to the fields where it can be spread over the land. Where this is impractical, at least try not to leave large piles of manure lying around for many days at a time.

Clean up the premises of the house and barnyard. Any filth left exposed will serve as a breeding place for flies.

With the best of care, however, it will be impossible to destroy all flies in the larvae stage. Therefore, it is advisable to use traps, poisons and sprays in fighting this pest.

A good poison can be made by mixing three quarts of skim milk with one-fourth quart of formaldehyde and one-fourth quart of molasses. Place the mixture in shallow containers where the flies are, but where animals and poultry cannot get at it.

A good spray is very effective. Follow the directions given, and good results will be obtained.

Horses Riding in Truck Should Face the Right

When horses are loaded crosswise into an open motor truck they are safer if their heads are toward the outside of the road. Reports to the United States Department of Agriculture tell of horses seriously injured by passing traffic—often another truck—when they are loaded with heads toward the center of the road. The danger is greatest at night.

A common practice when hauling horses in open trucks is to load them half and half, that is, crosswise with every other head toward the center of the road. The length of the average horse from tail to breast is about the same as the width of the average live stock truck. Although horses are loaded conveniently and compactly in this fashion, with the head and neck extended over the side of the truck, it is safer to load them so that all face the outside of the road.

In any event, says the bureau of animal industry, horses in a motor truck should have good footing and be so secured that they are not upset by sudden stops and starts.

Teeth of Horse

The canine, or as they are commonly called the "bride teeth," of a horse come in and are in wear at five years of age. However, according to the Rural New Yorker, mares do not normally have such teeth; they occur commonly or normally only in the gelding and stallion. When mares have such teeth they are usually non-breeders; many call such sterile mares "wolf-teeth mares." The appearance of such teeth in the mare is a symptom rather than a cause of such sterility.

Weeds Here to Stay

Weeds, says a Northwestern university botanist, are here to stay. Prof. Oliver Duggins, after a study of 100 common American weed types, reached these conclusions: Deep roots enable weeds to survive cold winters; they can grow in a wide range of soils; they have long flowering periods and efficient methods of distributing seeds; they drive out neighboring plants, and they are indifferent to climatic conditions.

Fattening Beef Calves

Beef calves may be permitted to run with their dams through the summer and be fed liberally on grains by means of a "creep" and be ready for market at nine months of age, weighing from 500 to 700 pounds, January or February calves may be fat enough to market directly off the cows by fall. Calves born in early spring and when pasture conditions are not favorable, may require full feeding in a dry lot for a couple of months before they are marketed.

Rotation in Pastures

Pasture experiments in Great Britain during the last few years indicate that better results can be secured from a rotation in pastures, and that while there are some lands which are continuously in grass, writes an agriculturist in the Montreal Herald, yet in many cases the laying down of land to permanent pasture is not regarded as good. A system of farming as establishing a rotation of crops including grass.

Captivating Daytime Frocks

This clever dress features a flattering yoke which dips to a point in front and is equipped with twin slashes a few inches below the neckline to accommodate a ribbon bow of any color you wish to use. Most women like several different ones to which they match their accessories. Radiating tucks at the yoke and waist contribute a smooth fit and flattering effect, while center seams in front and back terminate in two kick pleats for reserved fullness where it will do

Unavailing Remorse

WE NEED to be careful how we deal with those about us, for Death carries with it to some small circle of survivors thoughts of so many things forgotten, and so many more which might have been repaired. Such recollections are among the bitterest we can have. There is no remorse so deep as that which is unavailing; if we would be spared its pangs, let us remember in time.—Dickens.

Taste is something quite different from fashion, superior to fashion.—Thackeray.

Cuts Operating Costs In Half
Gets 17 Miles Per Gallon

June 19, 1936

Ford Motor Company, Oklahoma City, Okla.

Gentlemen:

We are having such satisfactory service out of our Ford V-8 car and truck I would like for you to know about it.

We used another make of cars and trucks for more than two years, but the cost of operation was too great. After talking with several of our friends and observing the operation of their V-8 Fords we decided to try them.

To say we are pleased is putting it mildly, for the operating cost is only about half as much, to say nothing of the ease of handling and that feeling of safety.

We get about 17 miles per gallon of gasoline with the new V-8 truck loaded and 18 to 20 with the car. Have never added a drop of oil between changes. The truck has been driven 12,000 miles and only 65¢ has been spent for repairs on it.

Receipts at the local post office for the month of July were higher than for any corresponding period during the past four years. Many local merchants report less business for the month. There might be a text for a little advertising preachment here.

The theory has been advanced by many that the reason for the unprecedented droughts, storms, and things of like character may be caused by the increased use of radio. Man knows very little about electricity, but it is known that there are now great waves of electrical impulses being set off by radio that was not the case a few years ago. The fact might be ascertained by shutting down all radio power for a few weeks but this will probably never be done. It will be up to scientists to discover the truth and invent a way to circumvent the effects of radio waves, if they are found to be guilty.

The first installment of 10 million catalogs is being distributed by a mail order house and another house will increase their catalog distribution from 6 to 7 million copies this fall employing 550 workers the year round for its preparation.

Mail order houses report an increase in business, and the reason is evident. If the small town merchant would use the means at his command he could also report an increase in business, but a small advertisement run just when a man feels like it will not get the job done. A consistent schedule in the home paper is the quickest and cheapest way to reach the prospect, as has been proven numberless times in the past.

NEWSPAPER INFLUENCE

The newspapers have not lost their influence, as the returns in the primary election definitely shows. A group of critics of The News walked the streets of Canyon during the campaign complaining at every recommendation that The News made during the campaign. The opponents of Senator Small were especially bitter against the activities of The News. The only rebuttal necessary is to ask this group to scan the election returns. In those counties where the local newspapers were very active for Senator Small, he won the election; likewise, in those counties where the newspapers were very active for Curtis Douglass, he was the leader. Does that show that the newspapers have lost their influence? Hardly.—Canyon News.

HIGH COST OF LIVING

At a certain college in the north of New England the male students were not permitted to visit the resident lady boarders. One day a student was caught in the act of doing so and was court-martialed.

Said the Dean: "Sir, the penalty for the first offense is 50 cents, for the second $2.50, for the third $5, and so on up to $15."

In solemn tones the treadsacker inquired: "How much would a season ticket cost?"

Mr. and Mrs. Hi Reck were arm in arm in the parlor. Suddenly, there came a rapid knocking at the front door. Mrs. Reck leaped to her feet.

"Quick!" she murmured anxiously. "Hide some place! I think that is my husband!"

He looked at her in amazement. "Just a minute," he said, "I'm your husband."

She relaxed. "Oh," she breathed, "you're a life saver!"

It is estimated that the Democratic National Convention gave Philadelphia $10,000,000 worth of business.

SAUL CONVERTED AND COMMISSIONED

Lesson text, Acts 9:1-9, 17-19; 1 Tim. 1:12-14. Golden text, "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Acts 26:19.

The circumstances studied in the last two Sundays' lessons were the result of the severe persecution that followed the outbreak of Jewish hatred stirred up by the preaching of Stephen. The persecution that resulted was deep and abiding. It found a ready and resourceful leader in the young apostle of Judaism, Saul of Tarsus. He was evidently one of the most able leaders of the Jewish Sanhedrin and highly respected in all Jerusalem.

Saul set his hand to imprison all of the Christians in Jerusalem. Not only did he with his followers apprehend many, but doubtless witnessed against numbers of them so that they met their death for the crime of being followers of Christ. Most of the Christians left Jerusalem to escape the persecution. Saul then prepared to follow them. He had gone many places with varying results, it is to be supposed. But Damascus promised rich reward in arrests. Many of the Christians had gone there, and thither Saul started with orders to bind and return all Jews who were Christians to Jerusalem. Back in Jerusalem their fate would have been possible death or long imprisonment and torture at the best.

On the way to Damascus there appeared one day when the journey was almost completed, a bright light brighter than the noon-day sun. It was so strong that Saul fell to the ground. The others with him may have also fallen. A voice spoke quietly, asking why the man was persecuting Him. Saul with great reverence asked who it was that spoke. Jesus answered that it was Jesus whom he was persecuting. Saul had thought this Jesus the Christians worshiped to be dead and buried as all other dead men. But here was that same Jesus appearing to him in majesty and glory. There was no dead Christ there; He was very much living, powerful and glorified.

This was too much for Saul. He could not fight against one who had actually been raised from the dead and was standing before him pleading with him. Saul surrendered his will to the will of Christ and asked the Master what He would have him to do. That surrender constituted the conversion of Saul, for from that moment he did what was within his power to carry out the will of Christ. After the remainder of the journey and three days of blindness, God sent a faithful servant, Ananias, to break the spell of blindness and direct Saul to be baptized.

God had for Saul a task, that was the evangelization of the civilized world. Never has there been a more faithful or successful missionary in the service of the Master. The secret lies in the words of Paul when he said, "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision." Therein may be found the secret for successful spiritual lives for each of us. God sends to us spiritual direction but we, unlike Paul, are not willing to follow it. We say we would follow too, were God to "knock us down" with a light from heaven. But usually a saved man who will not follow his Master in the small things of life would not follow Him in the greater things which called for greater sacrifice of time and effort.

If one will run through his imagination, the supposition that Paul had not answered the call of God and there had been no one else to take the lead in the missionary work of the Master, he will see the ruin of the spread of the Gospel in that generation, and the increased difficulty in mission work after the lapse of a generation. But there would have resulted no more disastrous circumstances under such conditions than result today under similar circumstances. When one of us refuses to do the will of the Master, however small, the result is disastrous. The attitude most Christians are taking concerning foreign missions today and through the past generation may be the means of the destruction of the entire modern civilization in the next great war. A Christian world might avert a terrific conflict because of Christian brotherhood. We have not extended the hand of the brotherhood, therefore greater armaments and their probable results in the flow of blood. Let us with Saul become obedient to the heavenly directions that are ours.

Billy—Don't hand me that. You told me yourself that your mother is out of town.

Text: "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what He hath done for my soul."—Psalms 66:16.

TESTIMONIALS

How often do we thank God for all of His blessings and benefits which He gives to us? When in need we pray to the Lord. But when we are enjoying His pleasure do we not often forget? The Psalmist David exhorted others to praise God by setting an example. He said: "Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what He hath done for my soul." David was willing to tell others of his blessings and thus extol and magnify the name of the Lord. He then gave a testimonial to his hearers: "I cried unto Him with my mouth, and He was extolled with my tongue." Psalm 66:17.

We are to give testimonials and praise God even during adverse and trying times as we may see from the following example: "The hymn 'Now Thank We All Our God' was written by Martin Rinckart, who was born at Ellenburg, Germany, in April, 1586, forty years after Martin Luther's death. His hymn has been called the German Te Deum and is considered by many as second only, among German hymns, to the Reformer's magnificent 'A Mighty Fortress Is Our God.' Rinckart was minister of the Gospel in Ellenburg during the terrible Thirty Years' War. Germany was then devastated by the hosts of Tilly, Wallenstein, and Gustavus Adolphus. Ellenburg was a walled town and therefore a place of refuge for thousands who had lost their all in the war. The overcrowded situation of the city, as a natural result brought on famine and pestilence. At times, Rinckart was the only minister in the city. To minister to thousands suffering from hunger and lying from disease was a Herculean task. Often he read the burial service for from forty to fifty persons a day. At last the number of deaths each day was so great that it became impossible to bury them singly and they were interred in groups in trenches. Altogether 8,000 persons died in Ellenburg during this time including Rinckart's wife. At the same time Rinckart suffered several financial losses and failed to receive the proper consideration at the hands of the authorities of the city in spite of his unselfish and tireless efforts in behalf of the sick and the dying. And yet he wrote during this time that wonderful hymn of praise and 'thanksgiving to the Lord.' (Prof. W. G. Polack).

As David and other God-fearing men gave testimonials of thanks and praise to the Lord we also should feel duty-bound to do likewise. Common decency requires that we thank our friends for their favors and courtesies. So much the more does decency require that we thank our heavenly Father for temporal and spiritual blessings.

proposing an Amendment to Section 26 of Article 3, of the Constitution of Texas, by adding thereto Section 26a, providing that under no apportionment shall any county be entitled to more than seven (7) Representatives unless the population of such county shall exceed seven hundred thousand (700,000) people; providing for the apportionment in counties of more than seven hundred thousand (700,000) people; providing for its admission to the voters as required by the Constitution and making an appropriation therefor.

BAKING BREAD

No poet, but a homemaker who is an artist at heart and who loves her job of homemaking, is Margaret W. Jackson. In her column in the Inland Foultry Journal she writes thus of the pleasure of bread baking:

"Of all the jobs a woman can do there is none which so repays in satisfaction and intensity, as baking bread. Of course there are other jobs around the house which bring a reward and satisfaction all out of proportion to the actual value of the work—a row of glasses of new bright jelly, a shelf-full of preserves, a job of sewing finished and satisfactory, a line-full of clean clothes spanking in the breeze—all these are medicine to the soul. But bread! As I turned out my pans, last Monday, and the golden brown loaves came cleanly out, smelling of heaven of delicious fragrance, I felt that I knew how the beggar felt, in the old story—the beggar who kissed the bread given to him, before he ate it. Bread is the symbol of housewifery. It is the symbol of life itself, of plenty, of sustenance. To have mixed it, and molded it, and set it to rise, and baked it in the oven—to have the fragrant, rich loaves stored away for the family's food—well, parties may be fun, and new clothes a satisfaction, but baking bread beats them all. And when we think of bread and butter, it is to think, in the same breath, of hungry little children growing, energetic, and eager, to whom nothing in the world tastes so good as their bread."

INSULTING INFANTS

I often wonder how small children endure the fatuity of adults. Grown-up people ask children and babies just beginning to prattle, some of the most insane questions conceivable. Questions that are actually an insult to the average infant's intelligence. Such as these: "Who's that, Junior?" (speaking of Aunt Mirama). "Now who's that over there?" "Who's your daddy, Junior?" (How should he know?) "What are you doing?" (When it is very obvious that he is building bridges in the sand). "Where do you live?" (And you've known him since the first day he was subjected to his present plight). "What do you think of that girl over there?" (A question you wouldn't ask an adult).—And so on.

Then when the urchin goes into a tantrum everybody thinks he is an incorrigible little brat. Whereas, if we were asked such rapid questions every day we would probably not only go into a tantrum, but throw in a few extra kicks punctuated by severe raucous shrieks for good measure!—Jean Suits in Lockney Beacon.

for High Style Sports Wear

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

WIDSUMMER means sports, and this year sportswear in fashion picture means silks, every outdoor activity from swimming or just lazing out.

The smart golfer, this season, wears a simple shirtwaist frock of washable end-to-end or striped silk or of classic silk crepe of marvelous quality or some one or other of the new linenlike silks, if not silk shantung. These smart practical silk shirtmaker dresses often have fly fronts, tucked bosoms and pockets for our golf tees as the model centered in the picture display. Blue silk crepe fashions this stylish and practical frock.

Very feminine and graceful for tennis are short dresses of soft silk weaves such as silk jacquards or Chinese silk damasks which are light, cool and comfortable. They are usually cut short, with sun-back décolletage, offering a refreshing contrast on the courts to the shorts and slacks that are so commonly worn. New for the tennis enthusiast is a white jacquard silk crepe frock cut on princess lines with a gored handling, the jacquard patterning showing lively little tennis-playing figures. See a model of this description to the left in the illustration. Note it has a squared décolletage and wide shoulder straps. Culottes are also a practical choice for tennis dresses.

For beach and bathing very smart women are wearing silk. The newest mode going is the little dressmaker suits fashioned whimsically of plain or printed silk crepes, silk shantung and other novelty silks. Kind to the figure are they, being made in one piece effects with pleated or flared shorts. The most practical are matching jackets reaching just to the bottom of the suits as you see pictured to the right in the group. This model is of daisy-printed, dependably washable silk crepe. The shorts are pleated and the loose, matching swagger jacket has a youthful Peter Pan collar.

For the girl with a perfect figure there are also the silk lastex suits which fit the body like a glove and have touches of dressmaker detail at the bosom. The newest trick is to wear them with one's jewels. There is such a variety in silk bathing and beach suits this summer that you can have two or three entirely different types in your outgoing wardrobe.

Pajamas are a "must have" for a vacation outfit, whether they are elaborate models that must stay on the beach or in the cabana, or the womanlike strictly tailored types that can safely receive guests in your own home or go out to call informally at an intimate friend's. They are made in tailored silk linens, silk shantung, novelty sports silks, silk crepes.

Bathing suits with halter bodices and wrap-around skirts made of print silks in gay peasant design are also very good-looking, and add infinitely to the picturesque beach panorama.

The craze for prints increases rather than languishes. It seems to be prints for everything and instead of growing weary of them there is that in them that intrigues more and more as the season progresses. If the entire costume be not of print then fashion offers a compromise in the way of accessories of vivid silk print. Such accents as belt, triangle scarf and bag of colorful silk print enliven many costumes.

SAILOR SUITS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fashions for girls are playing up nautical themes. It is said that "back to school" clothes will adopt such details as lacings and marine insignia. The sailor suit in navy and white of linen or light wool is an immediate favorite and will remain important throughout fall. The "gob" beret in white felt or pique with sprightly ribbon ends over the half at back is ever so smart to wear with the new sailor-inspired dresses.

BRAIDED ELASTIC MAKES DANDY BELT

Golf is a game where enthusiasts are offered more accessories a season than can be squeezed into a dozen clubroom lockers. All are intended to improve a duffer's game, but most of them turn out to be gadgets that fail their purpose.

One really successful accessory, however, that will be very much in evidence on the golf course this summer, is a belt made of braided, silk-covered, elastic cord. The belt looks like one of the corded belts so popular this season for sports wear. The rubber cord supplies the extra "give" that every sportsman seeks, and makes for maximum playing comfort.

The belts come in the leading summer colors, including black and white combination, polar bear, marine blue and plain white.

Blue Jeans Sportswear Is Popular With Young Folks

Of particular interest to young people is the blue jeans sportswear worn by many of the debutantes. With these navy blue jeans are worn shirts of every shade popular this year, with contrasting ascots and scarves. A popular head dress is the halo in various colors and materials, which keeps the hair from blowing in the eyes, and is very attractive. For the very active amusements, sneakers are popular, with navy and white the predominant colors.

The tailored suit for week-end trips is much in evidence, as are culottes, tennis dresses and the highly practical three-piece dresses with shirts, shorts and skirts.

TRADING JOBS

The navigator and the chief engineer had an argument as to who was the most indispensable in operating the ship; whereupon the navigator agreed to take a try at the engineer officer's job and the engineer officer agreed to take the bridge.

After about half an hour's running, the ship stopped and the navigator crawled out of the engine-room hatch. His clothing was wet from perspiration, and his features were covered with grease and grime.

"It's no use," said the navigator. "I can't seem to make the darned thing go again."

"Certainly not," said the chief engineer. "We're aground."—The Shipmate.

KNOWS HIS TASTES

Kid—Do you exchange goods that ain't wanted?

Druggist—Certainly. We like to please our customers.

Kid—Well, I've got fifteen cents' worth of castor oil we bought here. I want to exchange it for a chocolate sundae.

Playing in Luck

Muriel—And you're sure you've read through all the list of sweep-winners?

Milicent—Every blessed one.

Muriel—And you mean to say we haven't even got a tiny consolation prize?

Milicent—Not even a teeny share in one.

Muriel—I say, isn't it lucky I didn't buy any tickets!—Stray Stories Magazine.

Secured Good Evidence

The magistrate fixed the policeman with an inquiring eye.

"And what caused you to think the prisoner was under the influence of drink?" he asked.

"Well, Your Honor, I found him in Trafalgar square throwing his walking-stick into a fountain and urging the lions on Nelson's Column to go in and fetch it!"—Stray Stories Magazine.

Absent-Minded

Physician's Wife—Now, my dear, you must positively forget shop if you are going into society with me.

Her Hubby—What have I done? Physician's Wife—Why, you feel the pulse of every one who extends a hand.

TO GET EVEN

"Why is your father so glad to get city boarders?"

"Well, yo' see, one of 'em sold him the Empire building last winter."

Not Tactful

"Don't you think my new dress is exquisite?"

"O, lovely! I think that dress-maker of yours could make a clothes-prop look graceful!"—Stray Stories Magazine.

At the Bank

Timid Soul—I would like to cash this check, please.

Chastier—What denomination, madam?

Timid Soul—Oh, I belong to the Corner Church.

Ostentation of Wealth

"Ostentation of wealth is something which good taste always avoids."

"Especially," said Senator Sorgnum, "when the subject under discussion happens to be a campaign fund."

Who's Lifetime?

"But you guaranteed that this watch would last me a lifetime."

"I know—but you didn't look very healthy the day you bought it."—Lewiston Journal.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

© Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.

The films of travel, which carry the vision around the world and back again, have vastly broadened the horizons of millions of people, and in that respect have proved to be of high value.

The opportunities of most people for seeing the world are very limited.

The average person in small towns and country places has a very dim idea of the length and breadth of the world, or of the people who live in places remote from him.

Today almost every boy and girl can tell you of the Taj Mahal, or of the Desert of Sahara, or the peaks of the Andes, or of life in remote cities like London, Paris and Constantinople.

Mr. Shakespeare informs us that "home-keeping youth have ever homely wits."

But "homely wits" hardly exist when practically all the people of all the civilized countries of the world can, by paying a small price for a seat in a cinema theater look "round the world and back again."

The camera man has completely replaced the men who used to go forth and view the world and bring home pictures of it to be thrown on a still screen.

From your seat in a theater you can view the Eskimo catching a seal which will provide him with his supper and an overcoat, with a good clear glance at the peaks of the Alps or the Andes, or at "Elephants a pilin' teak" in Burmah.

Minds feed on what the eyes see.

Wherever there is anything worth seeing the camera goes.

Loving their work, and eager to bring home pictures of all the known world, these daredevils of the films are never daunted by obstacles, or by dangers.

To me it has always been astonishing that every school room in every city and village and town has not long ago been provided with cameras and screens to aid the children in their work.

Not only would they vastly broaden the view of many sections of the world, but they could, I should think, be tremendously useful in teaching such subjects as biology and zoology.

An intelligent teacher provided with a moving picture projector and a stock of films would never lack the earnest attention of her pupils.

Even pictures which only incidentally show the streets of foreign cities would be valuable. What they would do if wisely used would prove a marvel.

A Veiled Figure

THE heart of man resembles a secret chamber wherein stands—like the block of white unewn marble set in the studio of a sculptor—a veiled figure. Though the man may not so much as lift the corner of the veil, yet he forever and in secret works to fashion and form the figure that lies beneath.

And the figure is the Soul of the man, and the unveiling thereof is called death; and until the figure be unveiled, the man scarce knoweth what manner of man he is.—Coulson Kernahan.

MUSIC

 article was limited to the fundamental educational values relative to the study of instrumental music. Let us conclude this discussion by quoting from Dr. Charles W. Elliot, one-time president of Harvard University:
 "Therefore, I would propose as a superstructure to the fundamental three R's of 'Readin', 'Ritin' and 'Rithmetic' . . . the three M's of music . . . for manual, mental and moral development." Or, expressed in another way by Dr Otto Messner: "Music contributes directly to the three-fold training of the child because it, more than any other study, develops hand, head and heart—body, mind and soul."

ANTS MAY BE GASSED

An ant may be a symbol of industry but when his industry turns to swarming over lawns and doorkills it becomes very annoying. Common ants may be conquered by pouring a tablespoon of carbon bisulfide into a hole extending eight to 12 inches into the colonies, closing the opening with soil, also a damp blanket if one is handy. One treatment is usually sufficient. A highly refined carbon bisulfide is not necessary, the "technical" grade being good enough, and will not harm the soil. This fumigant should be used out of doors only and extreme care should be used in handling it as it is highly inflammable.

A RULE OF THREE

Three things to govern—temper, tongue and conduct.
 Three things to cultivate—courage, affection and gentleness.
 Three things to command—thrift, industry and promptness.
 Three things to wish for—health, friends and contentment.
 Three things to give—alms to the needy, comfort to the sad and appreciation to the worthy.
