1-MINUTE SAFETY TALKS

By Don Herold

SAFETY SLACKERS

I know a man who violated a traffic ordinance—who got a ticket—and who got it "fixed."

In my opinion, that man is worse than any Grover Bergdoll who ever lived.

Under certain circumstances there may be such a thing as conscientious objection to war. There may be people who have such deep-seated fervor for peace that they will die for their pacifistic ideals. They may be silly sentimentalists, but they are not cowards.

There is, however, no such thing as justifiable conscientious objection to the war on automobile accidents.

There is no excuse for sympathy with our common national enemy, Carelessness, which kills and maims more of our people than War. (From 1922 through 1935, deaths from automobile accidents have aggregated 380,000, which exceeds by 55% the record of those killed in action, or who died of wounds in all the wars in which this country participated.)

A man who regards a traffic ticket as a scrap of paper is a modern Benedict Arnold.

Even if there may be a slight measure of injustice in his ticket (and we always feel that there is don't we?) he should be glad to lean over backwards TO TAKE HIS MEDICINE.

Traffic discipline may not always be fair, but traffic discipline has been established for your own good, and for the safety of your children.

Submit to this discipline graciously. Take what's coming to you. Don't try to cheat the traffic game. (It's your game). Don't cheat or tudge. Don't try to get your ticket "fixed." In short, don't be a Safety Slacker.

New Members Are Admitted at Lions Luncheon

M. H. Lasater and Cecil Dyer were presented as new members at the Lions Club luncheon held at the Meador Cafe Tuesday.

L. R. Blevins was presented as a club entertainer, with a reading, "Armistice Day."

The club voted to finish the Red Cross roll call with each member requested to sell two or three memberships in order to reach the community's quota.

Tall Twister Cryer went beyond the constitutional limit in fining members for absenting themselves from last week's meeting, as well as other infractions of the tall twister's rules.

A meeting of the club directors was held immediately following the luncheon, at which time several names were proposed for membership.

BAPTIST CONFERENCE HELD HERE TUESDAY

The regular monthly workers conference of the North Fork Baptist Association met with the McLean church Tuesday, with the following program:

Song service—Rev. J. E. Burkham. Devotional—Rev. W. O. Cooley. Special music—McLean.

The Fields Are White—Mrs. Lem Hodges.

Message—Rev. Lem Hodges.

Mission Sermon—Rev. I. J. Lloyd.

Associational chart—Rev. Cecil G. Goff.

Quartet—Lela.

Sermon—Rev. L. T. Field.

Lunch was served at noon, followed by the W. M. U. and board meeting.

NO SALE TUESDAY

Carl Hefner, manager of the Community Sales, says that there will be no sale next Tuesday on account of the Thanksgiving holidays. He says that the sales will begin again the following Tuesday, and a big sale will be held on Dec. 15.

Mrs. D. C. Regal and little daughter, Janet Lorene, of Amarillo visited their parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sparks, Wednesday. They were accompanied by Mrs. John Gilliam.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Harlan and daughter, Mrs. Alma Turman, have returned from a visit to Dallas and Fort Worth.

Mr. and Mrs. Rollin Cannon of Borger visited the lady's father, J. Lee Turner, the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Allison Cash visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Cash, at Shamrock Friday.

Stores Will Close Here Thanksgiving

At a meeting of the board of city development, called for Wednesday afternoon, it was voted to ask the mayor to issue a proclamation asking that all stores close, as far as practicable, on Thanksgiving Day.

A change was made in the Christmas trades day plan, and it was voted to buy material for the Christmas street lights.

L. E. Ward, Earl Stubblefield and J. A. Meador were appointed to contact the directors of the American National Bank to see if the exchange charges on out of town checks can be reduced, or dispensed with. Discussion showed that the present plan is working a hardship on the merchant and causing some discrimination against the community.

METHODISTS ELECT OFFICERS MONDAY

The first meeting of the pastor and board of stewards of the First Methodist Church for the ensuing conference year, was held Monday night, and the following were elected to the board: A. B. Christian, chairman; H. C. Rippey, secretary-treasurer; F. C. Brooks, D. A. Davis, J. B. Pettit, J. H. Bodine, Clifford Allison, Cecil Dyer, Creed Bogan, Bryan Roby, Roger Powers and W. W. Boyd. C. O. Grene, church school superintendent, will represent the Sunday school on the board, Miss Margaret Hess the young people, and Mrs. J. L. Andrews the women's work.

Reports from last year showed approximately $4500 raised for all causes, with the largest pastor's salary paid in many years.

Pastor J. H. Sharp says that one of the finest annual programs yet attempted was outlined for this year.

Mrs. H. H. Neill is visiting her son, N. L. Neill, at Mineral Wells.

Church Leaders Meet to Discuss Common Problems

A meeting of church officials was held at the First Methodist Church Tuesday evening, with Rev. J. H. Sharp, Methodist pastor, in charge. The meeting opened with Rev. Sharp leading the song service with Mrs. Willie T. Boyett at the piano.

Rev. Cecil G. Goff, Baptist pastor, gave the invocation, and Rev. W. A. Erwin, Presbyterian minister, led the devotional service, reading from Acts 4:23-34.

Reports showed that last Sunday's attendance at church schools totaled 362 for Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Pentecostal, according to representatives from the four churches present.

It is estimated that there are about 100 church officers in McLean, some 45 being present at the meeting. Estimated statistics showed that less than one-third of the church membership attends Sunday school, and that less than one-fifth of the total population of the community is being reached by the churches.

Sunday school and church attendance among the young people is strictly an adult problem, according to speakers present.

Various church problems were discussed by speakers from the churches represented; however, no action of any kind was taken or suggested by the group.

Following the meeting the crowd was invited to the basement for a social hour, when the Methodist ladies served refreshments.

SYNOPSIS

Dr. Greeding, a wealthy and talented middle aged surgeon, is possessed of seemingly supernatural powers. He is able to anticipate what people say before they utter a word; occasionally he can wish for something extraordinary to happen and have the wish fulfilled. Greeding meets Ira Jerrell, a wealthy business friend of his own age, who tells him he loves his daughter Nancy and would like to marry her. Dr. Greeding is pleased and tells Jerrell he has a clear field. Nancy, however, is in love with Dan Carlisle, an assistant professor at the University who has little means.

CHAPTER I—Continued

"It was terrible," she assured him, smiling through tears. "I thought I'd die! Nothing ever did hurt so. Please be sorry for me."

"Sorry? Honey, I'd— He hesitated, and his eyes clouded, and he released her. He said awkwardly: "I'll get your coat. You'll be chilled."

"I'll never be cold again, darling," she vowed.

But he left her while he fetched her coat and his sweater. She looked ruefully at the red blaze on her knee.

"That's going to be black and blue," she told him, when he returned.

"And red, and orange, and yellow," he predicted. You let your father look at it. It might need something.

"I think it's grand," she said, smiling at him as he knelt beside her, drawing him near. "I hope it stays that way for days and days."

And a moment later she said: "If I'd known it took that to make you do this, I'd have let a ball hit me long ago!"

He frowned miserably. "Nancy, I shouldn't have—kissed you."

"Why not?" she demanded. "I liked it. I think you should do it again."

He protested: "You know darned well—I can't, darling."

"Why can't you?" she challenged.

"It's just a matter of common sense," he urged. "You know what your father and mother—"

"Is it them you want to marry?" she demanded hotly. "Dan, you make me tired!"

"I know," he said. "And I'm sorry. But—my salary is less than your dress-allowance. And it will never be much larger. I'll be a professor, eventually, of course; but you know what that means. It might be years before we could even manage to keep a cook!"

"Will you please get it through your thick head," she insisted, "that I want to marry you. Do you think I'm afraid of working, of being poor, or anything, as long as I have you?"

"It isn't what you think, sweet," he said. "It's your mother and father!"

She said after a moment, seriously: "Mother's all right. I can count on her. She knows you, your people—knows how fine you are. But father might be unreasonable."

Her brow furrowed. "I've never felt that I—know father very well," she confessed. "He's given me everything, done everything for me; and I know he's proud of me. But I always have a feeling it's a sort of impersonal, possessive pride. Sometimes I'm—afraid of him!"

"Nonsense," he urged. "He's a mighty able man, and a fine man. I don't blame him; but Nancy, from his point of view, you rate some one a lot better than me!"

She drew the coat more snugly around her shoulders. "He sha'n't interfere," she said, a faint desperation in her tones; and suddenly she clung to him. "Dan, Dan, I want you. I want you."

He held her close and tenderly; and when he spoke, his head was high. "All right, Nancy," he said simply. "I don't know how we'll manage it, but what you want is what it's going to be. We'll work it out, somehow. I'll see your father."

He saw her eyes shadow with faint fear. "Not yet," she objected. "Let's not tell anyone yet."

He chuckled reassuringly. "Whatever you say," he assented. "Now run along and get that shower! Good-by."

When, an hour or so later, Doctor Greeding came home, he alighted from the car at the side door, and came into the house while Thomas took the car to the garage. But in the small side hall, he paused, attentive, and stood for a moment motionless, almost as though he were listening; but there was nothing to hear. Yet his posture suggested that he heard something, or sensed something.

And this was in fact the case. After an instant he saw the rackets and balls where Dan had laid them down; and he crossed and picked up a ball, and then a racket, and held them in his hands. He frowned faintly, and looked right and left. The question in his mind was answered now, and the answer was unwelcome.

He put down the tennis gear and ascended the stairs. Nancy's room was opposite the head of the stairs; he hesitated, then knocked on her door. She called sleepily: "Who is it?"

"Mother home, Nancy?" he asked.

"I don't think so. I don't know. I've been asleep."

"All afternoon?" he protested, without opening the door. "On a fine day like this?"

After a moment she replied. "No," she said. "I played tennis for a while."

"Who with?" he asked, carefully casual.

Again it was an instant before her answer came. "Judith Plank came over," she replied at last.

At that word, the man's brows drew together, and a surge of unaccustomed anger swept him; but without comment, he went on toward his own room. He closed the door behind him and stood alone there, his head bent, his thoughts racing. For he knew that Nancy had lied; and that his daughter should lie to him, since it implied a criticism of himself, woke in the man a fretful rage.

It was a moment before he perceived in her mendacity the further implication that she was fond of Dan Carlisle; and Doctor Greeding's eyes flickered at the thought, as heat lightning on a sultry day flickers along distant hills.

He saw that the door into Mrs. Greeding's dressing-room was open, and crossed to the door and spoke her name; but she was not here.

He stood in the doorway, looking around this room furnished in a fashion so distasteful to him. The black-and-white chairs, the gaudy draperies, that hideous, ridiculous malformed chunk of marble, shapeless, meaningless. All the anger aroused in him by the knowledge that Nancy had lied, and what her lie implied, concentrated suddenly upon this ugly marble.

He crossed and picked it up in his hands, turning it over and over, hating it. He wished to break it into bits, smash it to dust. He abhorred this harmless chunk of marble with an unreasoning venom. It was the scapegoat upon which he poured out his wrath.

And while he stood thus, holding the marble in his hand, a strange thing occurred: Suddenly the statuette was no longer in his grasp. Rather, it was snatched away from him as though by an invisible force. The thing left his hands, and for an instant, while time stood still, it seemed to waver in the air.

Then it fell to the floor. The fall was no more than a few feet; yet the solid marble, even before that impact, appeared to burst apart in midair. It lay in a litter of shards and dusty fragments.

Doctor Greeding's eyes distended with an incredulous astonishment, with something like dismay. He stood for a long time looking down at this rubbish. Then he wiped his brow and went softly back into his own room.

CHAPTER II

Doctor Greeding closed the door behind him, as uneasy as a guilty small boy. Mrs. Greeding, he knew, treasured that absurd statuette; she would be when she saw it broken, querulous and angry. But this in itself was not enough to account for the inward disturbance which shook him.

It was incredible that a fall of three or four feet upon a hardwood floor should have shattered that solid chunk of marble into a hundred pieces; yet it had! Another man would have dismissed the incident as casual mischance; but Doctor Greeding even in this moment suspected that something within himself, something violent and explosive, had struck the statuette and shivered it to dust. He rejected the thought with all the power of his logical and scientific mind; yet it persisted.

And he had, too, that sensation common to every man: the certainty that somewhere, somehow, this had happened to him before. He was even able presently to identify this memory. As a boy on the farm he had been whipped one day, and sent to his room to reflect upon his sins. There a lamp, at which he was staring unseeingly through a mist of angry tears, somehow toppled off the table beside him and fell and was broken. Accused, he denied—in honest sincerity—that he had touched either table or lamp, and was whipped again for his denial. His father, between strokes of the strap, said vehemently:

"One thing I can't stand is a lying young one, Ned! I'll take it out of you!"

And Doctor Greeding remembered that hour now. That day, sent to his room, he had been in a brooding fury at the thrashing he had just received. This day likewise he was filled with a tempestuous rage. After his conversation with Ira Jerrell, the discovery that Nancy had been playing tennis with Dan Carlisle was enough in itself to disturb him. Dan, from Doctor Greeding's point of view, was a penniless instructor, with no prospects worth considering—and no discoverable ambition likely to lead to financial success. Certainly he was not equipped to rival Ira Jerrell.

Yet he was young, and even Doctor Greeding could perceive a certain charm in him. So, finding that Dan and Nancy had been this day together, the man was quick to a jealous alarm. When Nancy lied to him, his uneasiness became anger—which, translated and focused upon a material object, had shattered solid marble into dust!

Doctor Greeding contemplated these facts in silence, conscious of strange stirrings in himself. Presently he pressed the bell. Ruth, the second maid, answered. She was a thin, pale, black-haired woman, who habitually wore an expression of pained disapproval. She and Margaret, the fat cook, had served Doctor and Mrs. Greeding loyally for many years.

"Fetch me a cocktail," Doctor Greeding directed.

"A cocktail?" Ruth echoed, in protesting astonishment; for Doctor Greeding was an abstemious man, not given to drinking alone.

"Certainly," he said crisply. Then with a cautious feeling that some explanation was necessary: "I'm tired. I'll lie down awhile. Are we dining at home?"

"No sir," she told him. "At the Jordans'" And she disappeared.

He had removed his outer garments and put on a dressing-gown before she returned with the shaker and a glass upon a tray. She set them grudgingly on his table and withdrew; and he drank two or three cocktails, quickly, standing at the window where he might watch for Mrs. Greeding's return. There was a deep impatience in him; and when his wife's open roadster presently turned in from the street, he swung about toward her dressing-room, waiting for her to come upstairs.

He could hear her in the hall below giving some instruction to Ruth; and he resented the delay. Then he heard her come up the stairs, heard her open the door of her dressing-room, next his own; and then her instant cry of consternation, and then her call:

"Ruth! Ruth!"

The maid came hurriedly up the stairs, and Mrs. Greeding demanded: "What happened to my statuette, Ruth? Look at it!"

The Doctor stood by the closed door between their rooms, listening.

"I don't know, Mrs. Greeding," Ruth indignantly protested. "I didn't know anything about it. I haven't been in the room since just after you left."

"Who's been here?" Mrs. Greeding demanded. "Who's been upstairs?" It couldn't be full; and even if it did, it wouldn't break all to bits like that! That statuette was valuable, Ruth. If you did it, you might as well tell the truth."

"I didn't, Mrs. Greeding," the woman insisted stiffly.

And Mrs. Greeding said apologetically: "Of course not. I didn't mean to seem to doubt you. But who else has been upstairs?"

"Only Miss Greeding, and the Doctor," Ruth returned.

Then Doctor Greeding opened the door between the two rooms. "Hello, Myra," he said casually.

"What's the trouble?"

Mrs. Greeding turned toward him. She was a large, fair woman, with hair a little too insistently yellow.

"Ned!" she cried. "Some one's broken my statuette! See!"

"Probably fell off the stand," he suggested.

"Nonsense!" she cried indignantly. "A fall might have cracked it; but it's just ground to bits. Look!"

"It must have been an accident, Myra," he urged impatiently. "Never mind that now. You can get another. I want to talk to you!"

He looked toward Ruth, and the woman grimly disappeared.

"Another?" Mrs. Greeding cried indignantly. "Another indeed! Ned, don't you realize that works of art don't come by the dozen! That statuette was unique! It was one of Payson's things, and he's practically my discoverer, and that would have been priceless when he became known. Another! Ned, sometimes you're the most irritating man!"

Doctor Greeding fought to keep his voice under control. The affair of the statuette was disquieting enough, certainly; but there were other matters better worth discussing. He managed a smile.

"I'm sorry, Myra. Perhaps if you subsidize Payson sufficiently, he'll do you a copy. I expect he'll be glad of the commission."

"But he can't, Ned! Works of art—"

Doctor Greeding said sharply: "Tosh, Myra! Drop it, can't you?"

"But it looks as though some one had just pounded it and pounded it," she urged, in an increasing mystification. "It couldn't possibly break all up that way just by falling."

He said irascibly: "Will you be still! Forget the fool thing. It isn't worth all this talk, surely!"

She stared at him shrewdly.

"Ned, you've been drinking!" she cried. "I can always tell. Your eyes are red. Whatever has happened to upset you? It isn't like you to come home and get drunk and—"

He cried in a deep exasperation: "Stop it, Myra!"

She was, suddenly, pale. "Why, of course, Ned," she said placatingly. "I didn't mean—"

She seemed puzzled, incredulous. She came to him, kissed him. "I'm sorry, Ned. I didn't mean to bother you. Had a hard day?"

"No," he barked.

"Then you're worrying about one of your patients?"

He shook his head, patted her shoulder roughly. "Not at all," he insisted. "I'm a little tired, nothing more." He released her, and she turned back to the dressing-table. "We must dress now," she said. "We're dining at the Jordans', you know."

"Ruth told me," he assented.

She began to undress. "You'd better hurry, or you'll be late," she said.

He hesitated, but the time was in fact short; and in such matters he was punctilious. He went to his own room, to the shower. But presently, fitting his studs, he came to the door between their rooms again, and saw that she was brushing her hair; he asked in a tone carefully casual:

"Nancy going with us?"

"No," Mrs. Greeding told him. "She's going somewhere with Judith."

His collar pinched his neck as he fumbled with the button; he made a wry face. "Not alone, surely," he protested. His tone was light, amused. "I don't suppose two girls as pretty as Nancy and Judith are likely to go anywhere alone."

"I don't know," she admitted. "I didn't ask! Ford Minick, maybe, or Ethan, or Pete Master, or some of that crowd."

"Nancy doesn't seem particularly interested in any special young man," he remarked. "Or at least, if she is, she conceals the fact from the paternal eye."

"Probably there will be, by and by," his wife agreed. "Nancy'll tell us when she's ready."

The Doctor was conscious of a reservation in her words.

"How about Dan Carlisle?" he asked bluntly.

"Oh, Dan hasn't the money to play with their crowd," she said, after a moment. "Of course, Nancy knows him."

"I've seen him here once or twice," he assented scornfully. "He seems a pleasant youngster; but I can't imagine any man worth his salt deliberately taking to teaching as a profession."

"I've heard Professor Carlisle lecture," she commented. "He's a charming old man!"

"No doubt," the Doctor agreed in a dry tone; but he said then roughly, impatient of indirection: "Yet the Professor's charm does not justify Nancy's imagining herself in love with Dan!"

He saw her eyes widen, and recognized that she had known about Dan, and had wished him not to know; and his face congested with anger at the thought. She saw his countenance in the mirror, and turned pale; but she said nothing.

"You knew she was?" he said in a low voice, accusingly.

"Nancy's never spoken to me about it, Ned," she urged defensively. "I've only—guessed. I've seen no more than you. It's only that I'm perhaps a little closer to Nancy—understand her better—"

"Closer?" he ejaculated, in a rising wrath.

"She's afraid of you, I think, Ned," she confessed. "You do act, sometimes, as though you owned her, you know."

"Afraid of me?" His cheek was purple. "Why should my daughter be afraid of me? I'm no ogre!"

"No, you're not," she assented honestly. "You've been generous with Nancy, given her everything; and you're always calm, and kind. But—you've always had your own way. I've worried, sometimes, about what you might be like if things didn't go to suit you."

There were twisting snakes of fury in the man. He tried to laugh. "Is this some sudden discovery on your part, Myra? This sinister side of my character?"

She rose and came toward him. "Ned dear, please," she said. "I'm sorry! You're upset today, different." She smiled. "I suppose all fathers are furious when they discover that their daughters are beginning to love some one else. Some other man. But you'll have to get used to it, Ned. Nancy's a woman now, you know."

She would have put her arms around him, but he rebuffed her. "Never mind that," he said sharply. "I came home this afternoon and—found that Nancy had been playing tennis with this young Carlisle. I asked her about it, and she said she had played with Judith—didn't mention him. She lied to me!"

She looked at him thoughtfully. "You're so sure of things, sometimes, Ned. Was Dan here when you came? How can you be sure?"

"What difference does that make?" he exclaimed, twitching at his tie.

She returned to her dressing-table. "None, of course," she agreed soothingly. "But for that matter, Ned, what difference does it make if Dan did play tennis with Nancy?"

"I don't object to that," he retorted. "I object to her lying to me!"

She said wisely: "That is—significant, of course. A girl's instinct to conceal, to be secretive, is one of the first—symptoms." He saw her smile wistfully, tenderly, at her own thoughts. "I've realized for some time that Nancy was thinking a good deal about Dan," she admitted.

He said flatly: "It is not going any farther. It is going to stop right here."

"But why?" she protested. "Dan's a nice boy."

Worn Teeth in Predmost Skulls Puzzle to Scientists Who Welcome Suggestions

What the ancient men of Predmost, in Moravia, carried in their mouths to wear down their teeth is puzzling European archeologists. As far back as 1871 fossil bones were found at this little hill not far from the modern university city of Brno. Fifty years ago a Moravian schoolmaster named K. J. Maska discovered bones of 20 or more human beings apparently buried in a common grave and enough like each other to make experts regard them all as members of the same family group.

Bones of the extinct elephant called the mammoth disclose the Predmost dwellers as hunters of this beast. Skillfully carved objects of bone and other artistic remains, as well as the prevailing large size of the Predmost skulls, prove the people to have been one branch of the famous Cro-Magnon race. Recently Dr. Jirich Matiegka, of the University of Prague, reported a new study of all human skulls found at the Predmost site.

Like the skulls of all primitive people, these show much wear of the teeth, usually blamed on sand and grit in food. Among the Predmost adults, however, the right upper jaw shows a special kind of molar tooth. Tobacco was unknown in Predmost days so one cannot imagine this wear caused by stems of pipes, recently stated the Baltimore Sun. A habit of carrying pebbles in the mouth has been suggested but there seems no special reason for this.

The climate was not dry enough to cause much thirst. Perhaps blow pipes of some sort were used but no remains of such pipes have been found. Dr. Matiegka and other Czechoslovakian archeologists will welcome any reasonable suggestion.

Text: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth."—John 4:24.

WHAT IS GOD?

As mentioned by believers and unbelievers. His holy name is misused and uttered by blasphemers. It will consider what the Holy Spirit of God.

"God is a Spirit; and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." Here we see God is a Spirit Who is worshipped. This is the God whom we worship in their homes.

1. 2: "Lord, Thou hast dwelt in the mountains, or ever Thou hadst earth and the world, even before Thou wast made." This passage shows us that God existed before anyone else existed. He is God for ever and ever.

2: "Thou art the same." This change. He is always the same and will remain so. We are living in a changing world, but God is unchanging.

23: 24: "Am I a God at Bethel, and not a God in Jerusalem?" Can any hide himself in secret that I shall not see him? Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord. He is present everywhere.

My Favorite Recipe by Ginger Rogers

Fudge Brownies
4 eggs
2 cups sugar
1 cup butter
4 squares chocolate
2 cups flour
1 cup chopped nuts
2 teaspoons vanilla

Beat the eggs and add the sugar. Melt the butter and chocolate together. Combine the mixtures, beating them thoroughly. Add the flour, nuts and flavoring. Bake in a shallow pan for about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Cut in squares or novel bridge-card shapes before removing from the pan.

It is important not to bake brownies too long. Their delightful quality depends on their being a bit "crusty" on the outside and moist in the center. Any kind of nuts may be used, although English walnuts are usually preferred.

When You Want to Alkalize Stomach Fast

Try This Amazing Fast Way - The "Phillips" Way Millions Are Adopting

On every side today people are being urged to alkalinize their stomach. And thus ease symptoms of "acid indigestion," nausea and stomach upsets. To gain quick alkalization, just do this: Take two teaspoons of PHILLIPS' MILK OF MAGNESIA 30 minutes after eating. OR - take two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets.

Relief comes almost at once - usually in a few minutes. Nausea, "gas" - fullness after eating and "acid indigestion" pains leave. You feel like a new person.

Try this way. Get either the liquid "Phillips" or the remarkable, new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Each one equals a teaspoon of the liquid. Only 25¢ a box at all drug stores.

Current Events IN REVIEW by Edward W. Pickard

"New Imperialist War" Coming, Says Voroshiloff THAT a new "imperialist" war is coming soon was the opinion expressed by Soviet Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff in an address at the 19th annual celebration of the Russian revolution, and he declared Russia would be ready to defend itself adequately in the conflict.

Voroshiloff

"The worst enemies of the toilers - imperialists of every shade and denomination - are continuing frenzied preparations for new pillage and usurpations," Voroshiloff said, "and the implacable enemies are preparing to attack Russia."

"The soviet union is firmly determined that its Red army be prepared to rout the enemy on whatever territory they may dare to appear."

"While defending the cause of peace, the soviet government is working ceaselessly to strengthen its defense power. Never will the enemies and incendiaries of war succeed in crossing the sacred and inviolate borders of the land of the soviets."

"The people of the U. S. S. R. now are more than prepared to deliver a crushing blow at all who may dare to encroach on the independence, wealth and honor of our state."

Spanish Government Flees From Madrid

WHILE the Fascist insurgents were smashing their way into Madrid and hurling shells among its chief buildings, the Socialist government of Spain, headed by Premier Francisco Largo Caballero, fled from the capital and set itself up in Valencia on the Mediterranean coast. The capture of Madrid by the rebels seemed certain and this, it was believed, would be followed by recognition of the Fascist government by several powers, including Portugal and Italy and perhaps Germany.

It is not to be assumed that this would end the civil war, immediately or soon. Caballero, it was reported, believed the loyalists could best continue the struggle from the south, and it was claimed they had strong concentrations at Valencia, Cartagena, Alicante and Albacete. Moreover, there were indications that they would soon receive open aid from Russia and perhaps France. Leon Blum, the French premier, told a Socialist meeting that he was ready to scrap the non-intervention pact and help Caballero if Great Britain would join in such action. This caused consternation among the British statesmen.

Fighting in the suburbs of Madrid was continuous and bloody. The casualties on both sides were heavy, and the Fascist bombardment by artillery and planes killed and wounded hundreds in the center of the city. The Socialist defenders had been ordered to hold their posts regardless of losses, and they fought bravely and stubbornly.

IT WAS officially announced in Amsterdam that Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands and Prince Bernhard zu Lippe-Biesterfeld will be married on January 7. There will be a civil ceremony in the town hall of The Hague followed by a church ceremony in the cathedral of St. James.

Navy and Army Growth Noted in Reports

SECRETARY of the Navy Claude Swanson, who it is believed may retire from the cabinet, made his annual report to the President showing that the navy had made considerable progress in its program to build up to full treaty strength.

At the end of the 1936 fiscal year last June 30, the secretary said, the navy had under construction 79 vessels. Further, the 1937 appropriations act provided for the building of 18 vessels as replacements for over-age ships and for the beginning of construction in 1937 of two battleships. The capital ships are to be built only in the event battleships replacement construction is commenced by great Britain or Japan the other signatories to the London treaty of 1930.

The secretary emphasized the need for auxiliary vessels, which service and supply combat vessels, as necessary to the maximum efficiency of the fleet. Present auxiliary vessels are old and unfit and should be replaced with modern craft, he said.

Chief of Staff Malin Craig reported to Secretary of War Woodring that the army in the second year of its five-year rebuilding program had gained ground toward its objective—a defense establishment up to the minimum needs of the nation.

"Our military establishment is of a type that—conforming strictly to our national policy—is designed for defense and is unsuitable for aggression," Craig said. "This fact may not be clearly understood by our people. Our establishment is of a character exclusively its own, essentially distinct from the military establishments maintained abroad and now in the course of vast expansion."

Ship Workers' Strike May Be Settled

THROUGH the efforts of Edward F. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor and the department's chief conciliator, the strike of maritime workers that tied up a large part of the shipping on the Pacific, Atlantic and Gulf coasts may be settled amicably. Negotiations between the shipowners and the union leaders were resumed in San Francisco, and in Washington Secretary E. F. McGrady was hopeful that a just agreement would be reached.

E. F. McGrady

On the Pacific coast the strikers had already consented to ease the plight of stranded passengers and release perishable cargoes. The joint strike committee recommended that their membership return strike-bound vessels to home ports. This promised relief for 600 stranded passengers and 900 strikers in Honolulu as well as for hundreds of maritime men idle in Atlantic and gulf ports.

Rear Admiral Harry G. Hamlet of the federal maritime commission had been compelled to postpone twice his fact finding inquiry but finally got it started.

Peace Move in Labor Federation Fails

FOR a day or two it seemed that the two factions in the American Federation of Labor might get together before the convention opening in Tampa on November 16. But plans for a conference between President William Green and John L. Lewis, leader of the C. I. O., fell through when the former said he had no power to reinstate the suspended unions. Lewis and his chief supporters held a two day meeting in Pittsburgh, after which he said:

"The convention will determine the future of the C. I. O. If it supports the arbitrary and insolent attitude of the executive council, that will be one thing. If it shows a disposition to give consideration of the fixed principles of the C. I. O., that will be another thing."

Mr. Lewis didn't say so explicitly, but "another thing" will be a war for domination of American labor.

Wage Increases and Dividends Declared

MAJOR producers of steel, led by the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, largest subsidiary of United States Steel, and the Columbia Steel company, west coast member of the same group, announced wage increases averaging 10 per cent and in some cases running as high as 25 per cent, which will add about $80,000,000 a year to the industry's payroll. In most instances the increases were to take effect November 16. According to compilations of the American Iron and Steel institute they will affect 528,700 employees throughout the country.

Committees acting for employees at more than a dozen plants rejected the offer, demanding higher pay. Negotiations in these cases are therefore continued.

Directors of numerous big corporations authorized special dividends to stockholders and wage bonuses to workers that will release many millions of dollars. This is in pursuance of the policy of avoiding so far as possible the stiff levies imposed on undistributed profits under the revenue act of 1936; and also, in most cases, in recognition of improved business.

Edmund E. Day Elected President of Cornell

CORNELL university at Ithaca, N. Y., is to have a new president in the person of Dr. Edmund E. Day, an internationally known social scientist and economist. He will assume office June 30 next on the retirement of Dr. Livingston Farrand. Doctor Day, who is 53 years old, is a graduate of Dartmouth and has taught there and at Harvard and the University of Michigan. He is best known to the educational world as the director for the social sciences of the Rockefeller Foundation and director for general education of the general education board.

what Irvin S. Cobb thinks about:

Saluting the President SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—S Top of the morning to you, Mr. President Elect! Many happy returns! But you've already seen the happy returns, haven't you?

We've been behind you right along. At times, some of us may have been so far behind you we couldn't seem to see you, at all. But why bring that up now?

As for those who voted the opposition ticket—well, Americans may be greedy to win, but they're sporty losers. Besides, it'll soon be hard to find anybody who was against you. Among the multitude, the patriot who actually opposed you—except maybe in a whimsical spirit—will be as lonesome as an honest bone in the average beauty-contest promoter's body.

Synthetic Napoleon Brandy

I WILL now tell about Napoleon brandy, Napoleon brandy is any brandy more than four years old, if poured from a dark bottle with an "N" on it and decorated with cobwebs applied by an expert cobweb-twiner before being served; price $1.50 to $3 per slug at your favorite robbers' cave.

More genuine guaranteed Napoleon brandy is sold every month in New York night clubs alone than all of the regular Napoleons, numbered, respectively, I, II and III, ever saw.

What brought these interesting statistics to mind was running into a collector of Napoleon brandies. Why, some of his specimens must date back as far as 1914.

But my aim is to collect the pistols carried by Jesse James and the handcuffs worn by Billy the Kid. It's a great ambition, but may run into money because it will take a large hall to contain all the Jesse James six-shooters and all the Billy the Kid handcuffs I've seen.

Hurrying to Get Nowhere

WHEN I see a motorman burning up the road and feel confident that, ninety-nine times out of a hundred, there's no earthly need for his hurry, I think of a Japanese gentleman who visited a typical New York go-getter.

They started downtown. The guide hurried his guest aboard a subway local, yanked him off at Times Square, jammed him on a packed express, pulled him out of the express further down and violently inserted him into another overflowing local. When they emerged at a way-station, the Japanese was badly bruised, rumpled and trampled.

He limped to his host's office, where they sat down with practically nothing to do except relax. So he asked why they'd changed cars so often when the original train would have brought them along.

"Oh," said the New Yorker, "doing that, we save six minutes."

The oriental sucked in his breath politely and did some pondering. "And what," he murmured then, "what were you going to do with the six minutes?"

Cobb's Pet Annoyances

SOMEBODY writes in, demanding to know what my pet loathings are. Well, let's see:

Is it the fellow who, having heard every blamed word you said, waits until you're all through and then says, "What?"

Or the barber who, having finished the job, grabs up a towel and dabbles you with ninety hundred and seventy-four separate and distinct dabs?

Or the clerk who, when you go in for a pair of socks, tries to sell you everything in the store, including some pajamas that you wouldn't be caught dead in?

Or the orator who says "one last word" and buries that last word under about five thousand other words?

Or the solicitor who begins by asking for just a minute and hangs on until you begin to figure the present Christian era must be approaching its close?

Stage and Stock Market IT'S curious that two of the most fascinating and envied professions—financing and acting—do not necessarily call for intelligence. Not that there aren't brilliant persons aplenty engaged in both lines.

But the mimetic quality, the knack of rendering other people's lines, perhaps without ever understanding them, may be but a sublimated emotional instinct, just as sometimes the ability to make great gobs of money has nothing to do with brains, or rather brains have nothing to do with it. A certain man can smell out a hidden dollar exactly as a rat terrier sniffs behind the wanscooting rat which another dog would pass unnoticed. There are young ladies capably interpreting classic roles who probably think Salome is the name of an Italian sausage.

Delightful, Modish Models

MATRON, miss, or tiny maid—you'll find here the answer to your wardrobe needs. These three delightful and modish models, specially designed for those who sew at home, cover a wide range of sizes and take high honors for style and economy combined.

Pattern 1818, an unusually graceful and flattering double duty frock for the mature figure, features a softly draped collar in contrast and set in skirt panels topped with pockets. Appropriate for any of a wide range of fabrics, it will serve with equal grace as a morning or daytime frock, can be cut twice for double wear.

Pattern 1910, the adorable apron, is an early reminder that Christmas is just around the corner and it's time to start now as the frocks you are planning to make for your baby daughter of a favorite niece. This clever little apron and pantie set will slide through your machine in a jiffy (just six pieces for both apron and pantie) and your selection of materials is unlimited—percale, gingham or pique or pongee or shantung or linen. Designed for sizes 2, 4, 6, and 8 years, the pattern in size 4 requires just 4 1/2 yards of 32 or 35 inch fabric.

All patterns include illustrative sewing charts to guide you every step of the way. You'll find making them a joy. Send for yours today.

Send for the Barbara Bell Pattern Book containing 100 well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Exclusive fashions for children, young women, and matrons. Send 15 cents (in coins) for your copy. LAST GAME FOR MIHS

Friday evening, Nov. 20, the football team probably played their last game of the season. And for the following boys will play for old McLean high school...

WOMEN GO "TACKY"

Senior class was entertained by tacky party Nov. 10 in the gym. No one was admitted who was dressed tacky. Billie received the prize for being the best girl, and Vester Lett for the boys. The student games and were served refreshments and hot dogs, cookies and cake, by their room mothers...

AND WILL TAKE PART

Friday night of this week the football team will play in the game by the ward school in the school auditorium.

ELL DINNER FOR JESSIE MAE LYNCH

Friday, Nov. 15, at noon, friends of Jessie Mae Lynch gave her a surprise dinner in the sewing room at the high school building. The tables were artistically arranged and decorated with pot plants. Thanksgiving motif, and there was served plate lunch style. Menu included baked chicken, "fixins", program included readings by Miss Kennedy. A program was presented by Paris Hess on behalf of those present. Those present were: Georgia Colebank, Louelle Cobb, Lorraine Hodges, Ruth Thacker, Wanda Helen Sharp, Marietta Young, Johnston, Leta Mae Phillips, Mann, Dorothy Sitter, Mabel Young, Miss Humphreys, Miss Ken- neth Mallow, Mrs. J. R. Phillips, and others.

JUSTICE PROGRAM GIVEN

On Nov. 11, the high school justice program was given. The band gave a concert, during which they played songs that were popular during the war. Rev. Erwin brought a message to the assembly. Before the dismissal, everybody prayed for a short period.

TY PROGRAM PRESENTED

Last Thursday afternoon a group presented a novelty program in the high school auditorium. Proceeds went to help pay for football equipment. The troupe represented five countries both in lecture and music. They were a lady from Holland, a gentleman from England, and a boy from Venezuela. An unusual member was a girl from Louisiana. To conclude the program, the lady, a mind reader, answered questions from some of the students, and although the answers caused much laughter, the opinion was that she was reading the questions underneath the sheet which was placed over her.

GRETTIES LOSE MEMBER

Tigerette club regrets to announce the loss of Jessie Mae Lynch, a faithful member. Iona Hale, a member, has been chosen to fill the place.

INTERESTING PERSONS

Ramah Lou Rippey has been attending McLean high school since her sophomore year. At that time she was a candidate for sophomore to fall queen. She is now sixteen years of age, has red hair, blue eyes, is five feet five inches tall, and weighs 95 pounds. Her hobby is riding horse back, favorite sport, football; favorite song, "A Melody from the Skies." Her secret ambition is to be a good stenographer. She plans to attend a business college after her graduation from high school next spring.

AGRICULTURE MEET IN MIAMI

A meeting of the Pampa district of vocational agriculture teachers was held in Miami Saturday.

Mr. Howell, agriculture instructor of White Deer, put on a shop demonstration, and Mr. Van Zandt of Tulsa discussed and demonstrated how the plant contest was held in Lubbock for the West Texas agriculture judging teams.

The Miami department held a poultry show. It was unusually good being one of the best poultry shows ever held in this section. The birds were of outstanding quality.

A poultry and dairy judging contest was held for the judging teams. With several alternates judging, the McLean teams placed extra well, being third with a score of 1142. Claude was first with 1158 points, and Tulla second with 1148. Boys from McLean judging were E. M. Gossett, Albert Overton and Maurice Wilkins. Other teams taking part in the contest were Pampa, Panhandle, Perryton, Childress and Wheeler.

JUNIORS ENTERTAINED

The junior class had a party Tuesday night, Nov. 10, in the band hall. The room was decorated in red, white and blue, to carry out the Armistice motif. A game called "cootie" was played, with D. V. Nicholson receiving high score. Refreshments of sandwiches, cookies, fruit and chewing gum were served to the following: Leta Mae Phillips, Shirley Johnston, Leona Humphreys, Alice Dowell, Eva Dowell, Mary Louise Brawley, Stanton Gardner, Jesse Dean Cobb, Bill Webb, D. V. Nicholson, Albert Overton, Wanda Estes, Jeff Coffey, George Watson, L. E. Flowers, Edwin St. John, Louise Biggers, Juanita Hancock, Paris Hess, Molita Turman, Margaret Kennedy, Helen Rigdon, Frankie Mullen, R. L. Floyd, Lavoy Donaldson, Harry Barnes, Viola Clemmons, Julia McCarty, Irene Pettis, Olive Louise Atwood, Fred Wayne Harris and Miss McCarty. Room mothers present were Mrs. Johnston and Mrs. Phillips.

HOMEMAKING CLUB MEETS

The Homemaking Club met last Tuesday at noon. Each member brought lunch and all ate together. A program and several musical numbers were given in the auditorium. A manicure set was given Jessie Mae Lynch as a token of remembrance. The club regret her leaving, but know it is our loss and Clarendon's gain. So good luck, Jessie Mae. The contest closed and Jessie Mae's group won with the addition of 18 new members. The Dutch luncheon will be continued and will convene every fourth Tuesday. This helps to solve the problem of girls who ride the buses.

THE HOSTESS

The hostess was Leta Mae Phillips. Everyone reported a nice time. The second year girls entertained 29 guests Thursday evening with a mother-daughter banquet. A program was given by members of both classes. A reading given by Vada Appling. Jessie Mae Lynch was mistress of ceremonies. Green and yellow were the outstanding colors in the color scheme, and were carried out through the entire menu. Left-hand table service was used by the waitresses, Billie Moon, Laura Ellen Kunkel, Wilma Holmes, Georgia Colebank and Naomi Weeks.

THE MENU

The menu was as follows: pineapple juice cocktail, consommé, smacks, baked chicken, dressing, giblet gravy, potato balls, green beans, hot rolls, butter, ice cream, cake, cocoa and nuts.

THE PARTY

There were 22 mothers present, four hostesses and four invited guests.

The hostesses were Chloe Hanes, Naomi Gunn, Una Howard and Willie Louelle Cobb.

We were sorry that all mothers could not be present, but as it was impossible for some, we extended our welcome to those whom we felt were interested in the work of the Future Homemakers. A nice time was reported by all.

THANKFUL FOR VACATION

The time for six weeks exams has come and that makes us freshmen look more anxiously forward to the Thanksgiving vacation. At least we will be thankful for the vacation and that the exams are over. But we should be very thankful for more than that. Not only does this include freshmen, but the whole school as well.

TIGER TEAM CRIPPLED

According to Coach Bill Allen, it is highly probable that at least two of the fighting Tigers will be compelled to remain on the side line next Friday night when the team meets Shamrock. Both Braxton and "Wild Man" Bogan are disabled by injuries received earlier in the season.

Watson, Barnes, Norman, Overton and Dwight have been absent from classes on account of having influenza. They are expected to be recovered in time to meet the Irishmen on Friday night.

SHERLOCK SNOOPINGS

Paris Hess looked rather worried and downcast and sleepy Sunday night. We wonder why.

Orville Williams spent last week end at his home in Amarillo.

Oh, my goodness, this is six-weeks examination week!

Some complaints have been made about Mr. Cryer's standing too close to the edge of the platform during pep rally. Some people seem to be afraid that he might get excited and take a tumble while the students are "beating Shamrock."

We wonder why Julia was carrying Ray's trousers around last Monday.

Paul a prisoner in Jerusalem. For two years he remained a prisoner in different cities within a radius of a hundred miles of Jerusalem. Finally he appealed to Caesar and was taken to Rome. We well recall the victory of the trying journey. The shipwreck may have been by the providence of God. It is likely that there were documents to the Roman government on the ship that would have made the coming trial of Paul difficult. As it was, these documents, if they existed, were lost at sea. Then Paul endeared himself to the people, especially the officers and soldiers on board. As a result of this endeavor, brought about by Paul's close walk with God and his assistance in hours of need, was of great advantage to Paul when he reached Rome. On arriving, the soldiers took their prisoners and turned them over to the captain of the Roman guard. But it was recommended that the prisoner Paul be allowed to have his own house with a soldier to guard him. He had proved himself such a friend and so true that this courtesy was given him. This was an exception for the Roman soldiers. And for two years Paul had his own rented house with a soldier to remain chained to him continually, day and night. There is a legend that says that the Romans soldiers soon came to seek the duty of being the guard over the Jewish prisoner. They liked his kindness and further enjoyed his discourses on the heorism of a life to the service of a Savior Who loved all men.

Paul was careful to call the Jews of Rome the first thing. They came and heard his message. Some believed and some turned away. But for the first time there was no cry raised from them against the man. Probably that was because of the fact that he was already a prisoner. They likely felt that he would never be able to come out from Nero's court without being condemned to die. Another thing is that they were Jews a long way from Jerusalem, and any Jew looked better than no Jew at all. Again they were all business men and likely more interested in their business than their religion anyway, aside from a mere ritualistic standpoint.

To complete the story: after two years Paul was brought before the Caesar, Nero. There were no charges against him. If there had been they had been dashed to pieces by the ravages of a mad sea. The woman in the immediate favor of Nero, his wife, was a Jewess. It may have been that she had some influence over the situation. Paul was freed. Where he went after we was freed is mere conjecture. Many think he went back through Eastern Europe and Asia Minor, visiting the churches he had organized. Others think that he went to Spain. In one of his writings he had expressed a desire to go on west beyond Rome. And knowing Paul as we know him, would it not be natural for him to attempt a still greater scope in the spreading of the Gospel. After some years, two or more, he was again arrested for his preaching. He either appealed to Caesar or was arrested under conditions that it was necessary for him to appear before the throne. He was condemned to death and died a martyr to the cause of Jesus Christ.

There was no sacrifice ever made for the Master that even approached the sacrifice He made Himself. It is true that all sacrifices together that have ever been made by men have not equalled the one eternal sacrifice the Son of God made upon the cross for the sake of mankind. Therefore, there is nothing too great or difficult for a man to do for the Christ who died for him. The man who is willing to accept the sacrifice of the Master for his eternal good, and yet who is unwilling to make what little sacrifice that can be made by a man in this world, may be willing to accept the sacrifice of God but he hasn't done it. To accept God's sacrifice for him. This is a Him in turn. The man who does not sacrifice for God has not accepted God's sacrifice for him. This is a truth that men of the modern world need to learn. There are all too many of us who prove to the world and to God if not to ourselves that we have never accepted the sacrifice of Jesus for us in that we have no willingness to make personal sacrifices.

The hypocrite fools nobody but himself.

The man who boasts of his goodness is seldom taken at his own valuation.

Only one more football game and then we can turn our attention to our Christmas buying.

It is strange how some people become so steeped in their own opinions that they state them as facts.

It has been interesting to read the comments on the recent national election. They range from the fanatics who think there was Divine inspiration, to those who only hope for the best. Maybe there is a place for all of us somewhere between the two extremes.

There has been a better spirit of sportsmanship shown by football teams and fans alike this season than for some time. The game is a total loss unless the idea of good sportsmanship is stressed. There is no such thing as being a winner all the time. Life is not made up that way; we must learn to take our losses along with our winnings.

The man who would pick up a hitch hiker today is brave indeed, with all the murders reported each year by innocent looking college boys and the like who have extended thumbs along the highways. That motorists are becoming more cautious can be attested by any driver who has had car trouble and has tried to stop a car. The best plan is to ignore all strangers who try to mooch rides, for too many of them take the car and money, and many times the life of the driver.

EDITORIAL

The world is looking for a person it can depend upon. Anyone can take a job and stay with it as long as things are running smoothly, but it takes a man, woman, boy or girl with the real stuff, as one might say, to stay with something in the face of difficulties. The business men of the world are looking for people of the latter group. Some children are the best of students until some difficulty pops up and they quit and will not even try. The teachers often wonder if such actions are not a reflection on the home training. Make your children finish the jobs they start and they will receive something that will stay with them all through life and be the biggest asset to their success and happiness in this world.

ARMISTICE DAY PROGRAM

The assembly hall of the ward school was patriotically decorated for the Armistice Day program. The group gathered in the auditorium at 11 o'clock, and Miss Heath led in songs until the band arrived from high school.

The program proper started with a prayer and scripture reading by Rev. Erwin. The entire group was led in singing America by Miss Heath.

The band entertained with several patriotic numbers. "Flanders Field" was read by Mrs. Jim Back. C. O. Greene, Legionaire, gave a short talk on the meaning of Armistice Day, the bravery of men, and how we should strive for peace. C. A. Cryer was in charge of the program, and several incidents of the war were related by him. The program closed with "Taps" after the group had stood for a minute in silent prayer.

SCHOOL PROFITS FROM PROGRAMS LAST WEEK

The ward school profited by two programs held here last week. Two hundred five children visited the museum, and the ward school received $2.04 of the proceeds. A program sponsored by a high school group was attended by 23 pupils and the school received $1.11, making a total of $3.15 for the ward school treasury collected last week.

BOYS CLEAN UP GROUNDS

Some of the seventh grade boys are cleaning up the rocks on the little children's side of the play ground. Rocks are being raked up around the swings, slides and giant strides. The rocks are to be screened and used in making a cement floor for the new book room.

LOWER SEED BEING COLLECTED

The ward school is collecting flower seeds to be used in flower gardens next spring. Any and all kinds of seeds will be appreciated. Help the children to beautify their playground. Send the seeds to Mr. Sam Branch.

HOLIDAY NOTES

The ward school teachers plan various trips for the Thanksgiving vacation. The Texas State Teachers Convention is being held in Fort Worth, and many will attend it and see the Centennial, also.

Mrs. Marie Vogle will visit in Snyder.

Miss Mildred Bessire will visit her parents in Canyon.

Miss Frances Noel has not decided what she will do.

Mrs. John Harris will visit in Clarendon.

Miss Helen Heath, Miss Ima Nelle Still and Miss Idabel Newman will attend the convention and Centennial at Fort Worth.

Mr. Murdock will visit his parents in Albuquerque, N. M., and he has room for some passengers.

Mrs. Jim Back is anticipating the return of her son, J. D., from John Tarleton, and they are going to celebrate his birthday and Thanksgiving in McLean.

Mr. Dotson will spend the vacation in McLean.

Mr. Branch plans to attend the teachers convention in Fort Worth and try to see the Centennial on the side.

PERSONALS

Mrs. Back—Give me three collective nouns.

Inez Stanley—Flypaper, waste baskets and a vacuum cleaner.

Thelma Jean Dishman and her mother are planning to visit her grandmother in Oklahoma City.

Marvin Grigsby is moving to Littlefield.

Enoree Hodges is visiting in Childress.

J. D. Angle has moved to California.

Worley Pugh has moved out of town.

There are seventeen absent from the 4 B2 room for various reasons.

Gaylon Dorsey and Glen Tedder have returned to school after missing for cotton picking.

Charles Carrel has moved to Magic City.

Glen Chilton visited his grandmother in Wheeler county last week end.

Paul Guynes visited in Shamrock last week end.

and they accompanied their parents to the funeral.

L. E. Carter's aunt has been ill, so he went to see her.

Dorothalene Roachell has returned to school after being absent for a long time.

SCHOOL PROGRAM TONIGHT

The ward school is having a program tonight (Thursday) at the high school auditorium, beginning at 7:30. The proceeds will be used on school expenses, admission being 25c for adults and high school students and 15c for ward school children.

The program is very novel and will be entertaining for those interested in children. The majority of the entertainment will be by children in the grade school.

The program has been changed a little, and the revised program is as follows:

Music—McLean band.
Music Rhythm band.
Readings—Miss Kennedy's pupils.
Play, "Frank Glynn's Wife," directed by Mr. Branch.
Music—The Texas Hill Billies.
Rope tap dance—The Jumping Beans.

Acrobatic dance—Wedad Bayouth.
Tap dance—Third graders.
Music—Mrs. Boyett's pupils.
Play, "Mistletoe and Moonlight," directed by Mrs. Jim Back.

The Texas Hill Billies will be the only part on the program not by grade school children.

MRS. THACKER ENTERTAINS

The 4 B1 room received a candy shower from Mrs. Amos Thacker last week. The class enjoyed the candy very much and the secretary was instructed to write a letter of thanks to Mrs. Thacker, and all the children signed it.

SECOND GRADE RHYTHM BAND

The rhythm band that is to appear on the ward school program tonight is made up of the following (there are a few first graders in this group also): Bobby Black, director; Wanda Campbell, Bonita Chilton, Edna Mae Bennett, Alta Holt, Erma Ruth Fulbright and Betty Jo Jones, tambourines; Orine Humphreys, Billie Joyce Thacker, Peggy Ledbetter, Mary Lee Stevens, Jorene Evans and Geraldine Evans, triangles; Johnnie Mae Boyd, Margaret Sue Glenn, Mildred Edney, Thelma Griffin, Rosie Leo Jones and Lucille Smith, bells; Gary Burrows, J. D. Rowe, Calvin McAdams and Norman Grigsby, cymbals; Charlie Wehba and Wayne Mantooth, wood blocks; Bill Mounce, drum; W. N. Bowen, Charles Gene Bell, Dele Massey, Jewel Parrish, Mary Ruth Wood, Rudene Smith, Dorothy McDaniel, Mary June Bayouth, Velma Griffin, Johnnie Pauline Moore and Della A Me Green, clog jingles; Ray Mills, Harmon Jones, Roy Rigdon, John Clay McClellan, J. Frank Ruff, Kathryn Money, Roy Lowe, Junior Terry, Billy Terrell, Cecil Jones and Curtis Roachell, rhythm sticks; Gloria Jean Gunn, xylophone.

RHYTHM BAND CAPES

The home economics department of the high school made the rhythm band capes. There were not enough capes for the band this year, so 25 new capes were made. The children and the faculty of the ward school wish to thank the girls that helped in making the capes, as well as Miss Mallow, the supervisor.

BOY SCOUT NEWS

Several boys have joined troop 25. Among the new members are DeRoy Beasley, Willis Ledbetter, Earl Green, Billy Riddle, Watson Mitchell and Gene Lowe. These boys are making exceptionally good progress and the troop is growing rapidly.

PTA TUESDAY AFTERNOON

The ward school PTA will meet Tuesday, Nov. 24, at 3:30, in the ward school auditorium. The change was made because of so many conflicting arrangements that had been made.

The program is as follows:
Topic, "The Family Shares in the School."

Devotional—Mrs. Jim Back.
Music—First grade rhythm band.
Reading, "Thanksgiving" — Mary Kathryn Brooks.
"The Home Background for the School"—Rev. W. A. Erwin.

JUNIOR MUSIC CLUB

The junior music club met Nov. 12. Honor points were counted and it was found that Patsy O'Rourke was first with 403 points, Jimmy Batson second with 379, and Mary Evelyn Foster third with 377.

The best players in the 6th and 7th group were Patsy O'Rourke first, and Jimmy Batson second. For the higher grades, John Kirby was first, while Doris Nell Wilson took second.

The refreshment committee made up of Mary Lee Abbott and Mary Evelyn Foster, served sandwiches, cookies and cocoa. The visitors were Mrs. Homer Abbott, Mrs. Wheeler Foster, Mrs. H. E. Franks and Mrs. Tom O'Rourke.

WILL MEN BE INSULTED?

By Rev. J. H. Sharp, Pastor
First Methodist Church

Have you ever noticed that there are men in the community whom no one ever asks to help in any worthy cause? There are men on the staffs of most churches that no one wants or will ask to support the church. In other words, they will not ask them to pay their obligation. They fuss and take a keen delight in saying something mean and little about the church or some of its members.

Some men take it as an insult to be asked to pay a debt, when in reality they should thank the man for the compliment. No man will go to the trouble to see a man about a bill if he knows he is so mean and honery that he will not pay what he owes. Therefore, the man who brings you a bill shows his confidence in you. He believes you will pay if you can and he deserves fair treatment. It is impossible for you to pay him let him know the real reason. Sometimes he shows his confidence in you to the extent that he says to himself, "He will pay me as soon as he gets it," and never says a word to you about it. Can you afford to destroy that confidence?

Some men take the position that they give to the church. No man gives to the church. Everyone who lives in a community where there is a church has an obligation to that church. He has not given a thing until he has fulfilled a full obligation. An obligation to the church is just as much a moral obligation as a grocery, drug, dry goods bill or a bank note. A man has as much right to say he will not pay his account at a grocery store or at the bank because he does not like the manager or one of the clerks, as he has to say he will not pay into the preacher or some member of the church, or the way the church is run.

A man has as much to charge his extra bills up to his grocery store, dry goods or bank as he has to charge it up to the church. There are people who, if they have any extra expense, make the church pay at least part if not all that they are due the church.

There is not a man in McLean, I am sure, who would be willing for all the churches to close and go out of business, yet they never support them by their presence or means. It is not an insult to be asked to support the church. No man should feel that he gives to the church, for he is not. He is paying an honest debt. Let us get away from that old idea that the church is a charity institution and that we give to its support. If the church is a charity institution, then charity marries you young, buries your dead, rears members for your lodges, cares for your children, and helps your schools. You give to charity—you pay your debts. The church is to give charity, not to receive it. The church is expected to pay her debts and if so she has a right to expect people to pay their debts to her. Of course there are people who demand charity from the church. They want her to never pay one thing toward the maintenance of the church.

HOW OFTEN CAN YOU KISS AND MAKE UP?

Few husbands can understand why a wife should turn from a pleasant companion into a shrew for one whole week in every month.
You can say "I'm sorry" and kiss and make up easier before marriage than after. If you're wise and if you want to hold your husband, you won't be a three-quarter wife.
For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three ordeals of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."
Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and go "smiling through."

EDITORIALLY SPEAKING

Development of correct speech habits cannot be developed through mechanical drill in school. Most children are exposed to an environment that dinst incorrect expressions into their ears. They practice wrong habits both in school and out. It is obvious, therefore, that any attempt to establish correct speech habits through the mere repetition of right expressions in school is doomed to failure from the outset.

Any person who has ever overcome bad speech habits has done so thru applying correct principles to his own speech and writing. The principles were the means by which he slowly and finally reached the goal of correct speech. He succeeded because he had the desire to speak and write correctly and the will to accomplish his purpose.

EXAMINATIONS

This week is examination week, and it should not be dreaded. It should be looked forward to as a day of learning and knowing. The questions may seem hard, but if you try, you might answer them. If they are studied, there should be no trouble in answering them. These words have been quoted many times: "I dread examination week." Think it over and see if you do.

FIRST GRADE

The first grade is very much pleased for Miss Legg has a new supply of gold stars to give the best readers. It looks as if Wylie and Leon Harris, Betty Kinard, Betty Lou Jones, Nadine Jones, J. B. Smith, Marjite West, Barbara Marshall, David Muldrew, Wayne Smith, Helen Cox and Wanda Barfield will get a gold star every day, but everyone is going to try to see how many they can get before Christmas, and then the one that receives the most stars will get a prize.

The weaving looms for weaving rugs for the doll house have also arrived this week.

Miss Legg and Mrs. R. L. Carter and children spent Sunday with Mrs. Wheeler Carter and mother of Pampa.

FOURTH GRADE

We are very happy to have the Ware children back in school; also Maudie Bell Jones and Mildred Marshall.

The fourth grade has organized its own language club with the following students holding their respective offices: Zelda Marie West, president; Ina Lee Russell, vice president; Ruby Cummings, secretary; Etzel Skipwith, chairman Safety First committee; Russell Blackerby, chairman Good Maners committee; Emma Lee Muldrew, chairman Character Study committee; Etta Sue Berkley, chairman Thrift committee.

Misses Emma Lee and Velma Muldrew visited friends and relatives in Oklahoma last week end.

Ernest West was complimented with a birthday party given Saturday morning from 9 to 10 o'clock, by his mother, Mrs. E. C. West.

Misses Ina Lee Bidwell and Peggy Ruth Mashburn visited in Shamrock over the week end.

Miss Doris Cecil visited in Lefors Saturday and Sunday.

The fourth grade had three charming visitors last Monday morning: Misses Roberta Sargent, Ina Lois Ware and Anna Lois Cummings. We hope they'll come again soon.

FIFTH GRADE

John Carter visited in Pampa Sunday.

Frank Kendall visited in Shamrock Sunday.

Ernest West had a birthday party Saturday, Nov. 14. Many games were played, the leading one being shinny. Ernest received several nice gifts, and everyone reported a good time.

The fifth grade is very happy to have Dale and Marion Ware back in school.

SIXTH GRADE

The sixth grade class had a program in chapel Monday, on Columbus. The characters were: King Ferdinand, R. L. Gilmore; Queen Isabella, Virginia Blackerby; Columbus, Robert Batson; The Monk, Charles Carter; The Moor, Vergal Ray Smith; First Soldier, Sherman Shoop; Second Soldier, Clayton Mullins; a Page, R. W. Osborn. The play came from the sixth grade English book. Miss Robinson is the English teacher. Maxine White visited in Oklahoma Sunday. Mildred Durrett visited in Tucumcari, N. M., over the week end. Flint Berlin visited in Shamrock Sunday.

The sixth grade arithmetic class had a contest Friday evening and Maxine White proved to be the best mathematician.

SEVENTH GRADE

Clifford and Kenneth Young moved away Saturday.

The seventh grade took an examination in history and civics Friday.

Harley Cumble has been working for several days. He is now in school.

The seventh grade Citizenship Club elected Safety First officers Friday. T. J. Saye was elected.

HONK VS. HONK

Pasquale Mariacci of Syracuse, N. Y., pedestrian, had patiently endured the honking of motorists. Whatever wrath he felt had been frustrated. One day, however, after a loud blast from a motorist, he was startled, his cane skidded, emitted a fearsome noise in the process, and the motorist was startled, too. That was the birth of THE IDEA, for Mariacci, last week in Washington patented a new device—a horn on a cane, so that pedestrians, too, may honk.

Announcing THE FORD V-8 FOR 1937 The Quality Car in the Low-price Field

V-8 85 HORSEPOWER Maximum Performance with Good Economy
Two Engine Sizes - One Wheelbase AND A NEW LOW PRICE

THE New Ford V-8 for 1937 is the most beautiful Ford car ever offered. It is built in only one size—one standard of roomy comfort and modern appearance. But you may have either the improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum performance—or the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum economy. The smaller engine makes possible a lighter car—lower operating costs—and a lower price. When you drive the 1937 Ford with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine, you are master of a power plant that gives everything you can possibly demand in speed and acceleration. Today, improved carburetion enables it to deliver its thrilling performance with unusually low gasoline consumption. The new 60-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness—even at speeds up to 70 miles an hour—with gasoline mileage so high that it creates an entirely new standard of economy in modern motor car operation.

"The Thing That Could Not Be"

By FLOYD GIBBONS.

THEY say that if you work around insane asylums long enough you're liable to become insane yourself—just from association with demented people. To my mind, that would be one of the most ghastly things that could happen to anyone, but Gladys Beeson of Englewood, N. J., can tell you a lot more about it than I can. Gladys was once a nurse in one of the largest insane asylums in London. And there came a day when Gladys' eyes began seeing the impossible—a day when the doctors had her seized, and confined, and held under observation. And when Gladys told them they were making a mistake, her tone lacked conviction because—well—Gladys wasn't any too sure, herself, that the doctors weren't right.

It all came about over the strange affair of patient No. 8. She was in Ward 20, of which Gladys had charge. No. 8 was a middle-aged woman, a homicidal case who slept, as did all the other patients, in a separate cell, just off the ward. She was ill, and Gladys was keeping a close watch over her. But on October 11, 1896, she took a turn for the worse.

Gladys paid several visits to her room that evening. Shortly before midnight, her face turned the color of clay, and Gladys called the doctor. He said she was sinking rapidly, gave her emergency remedies, and left saying he would return shortly. He paid another visit at 1 a. m. and pronounced the patient dead.

Body Was Limp for Surprising Time.

Following the usual custom, Gladys called in the nurse from the adjoining ward to help prepare the body for the mortuary. Margaret—the other nurse—was a timid, frightened girl, scared to death at the idea of such close proximity to a corpse.

It was an hour since No. 8 had been pronounced dead, and as she put on the shroud, Gladys remarked that it was unusual for a body to be so limp that long after death. The two nurses went on to finish their work. Gladys attached the death card to the front of the shroud—a tag reading: "Hester Rose. Chargeable to the Parish of Whitechapel, London, E. C." That finished the business, and Margaret asked Gladys to watch her ward while she tidied up. She went out to the washroom, and Gladys, leaving the door open in defiance of the rules so that Margaret could get back in, sat down at her desk.

She Saw the Dead Woman in Her Shroud.

In a few moments she heard a low shuffle behind her. She looked up—and stifled a scream. For there, over her shoulder, she saw No. 8—THE DEAD WOMAN—IN HER SHROUD, just as she'd been laid out—the death tag still hanging from her bosom where Gladys had pinned it!

Gladys Thought She Was Going Mad.

"I tried to speak," says Gladys, "but I couldn't utter a sound. Was I suffering from hallucinations? Was I going insane myself? In dumb amazement I watched No. 8 walk down the ward and out of the door—the door I had left open for Margaret. After No. 8 was out of sight I still sat there—sat there until I was roused by a piercing shriek and a heavy crash. Then I leaped to my feet and rushed down the hall.

"In the wash room I found Margaret—lying senseless on the floor, with an overturned fire bucket by her head. I knelt down beside her and raised her head. Her face was covered with blood that streamed from a deep gash made when she had struck against the bucket in falling.

"The blood covered my uniform, adding to my terror. I grabbed my emergency whistle and blew it loud and long. Its shrill note seemed to come distantly to my ears. The affair was taking on the quality of a bad dream. Was I dreaming it? Was all this just the mad invention of a disordered mind? Was I going crazy?"

Doctors and nurses came rushing on the scene. Among them was the doctor who had certified to the death of Hester Rose. Gladys pointed at him and screamed, "No. 8 isn't dead. She's out in the corridor."

The doctor she was pointing at gave her a curious look—a look that took in Margaret lying on the floor and the blood on Gladys' clothes. The same question was in his mind as was in Gladys' own. Was she insane? It didn't take the doctor long to decide. He mentioned to the nurses and two of them grabbed Gladys' arms. "LOCK HER UP," he said, "and keep her under observation."

The nurses hustled Gladys off to a cell like the one from which she had taken the "body" of Hester Rose. And then—in the midst of the confusion—walked the night watchman. He was supporting a hobbling woman on his arm—and the woman was No. 8!

Watchman Solved the Grisly Mystery.

"She gave me a bit of a shock," Gladys heard him say. "She must have rigged herself up like this and sneaked out. I found her taking a walk down the corridor."

That made a big difference. Instead of being an object of suspicion, Gladys became an object of sympathy. And it made a lot more difference to Gladys to know that other people could see that queer, shuffling figure of No. 8, too—that it wasn't an hallucination.

"I needed all the sympathy I got," says Gladys, "for I was very young then, and the shock of that deathly apparition and the sight of Margaret covered with blood had so unnerved me that I had to take a vacation, and didn't entirely get over the affair for several weeks."

But there were other people who fared worse than Gladys. Margaret was ill for a long time, and was disfigured for life. And Hester Rose really did die three weeks and two days after her brief masquerade into the realm of eternity.

"But fortunately for me," said Gladys, "I wasn't on duty at the time."

Founded Cleveland

Cleveland, Ohio, was founded in July, 1796, by surveyors from Connecticut, who represented a land company, which had bought a strip of land along Lake Erie. This land had been claimed by Connecticut by right of its old British charter, but it had relinquished rule over it to the federal government and had sold the land to the Connecticut Land company. The company, in turn, resold farms and town lots to people in Connecticut, New York and elsewhere, and these settled in the city and the region around it.

California's Capital

When California was a province of Mexico Monterey was the capital, and it was the capital of the territory from 1846 until the state constitution was adopted in 1849. The flag of the United States was raised over Monterey for a day in 1842 and permanently on July 7, 1846. The first state legislature convened in San Jose December 13, 1849, and that was the seat of government until May 1, 1851. The legislature met at Sacramento in 1852, and in 1854 it was chosen the permanent seat of government.

On Congeniality—

Companionship Plus Adjustments
Is Far Better Than Loneliness

IN EVERY family, whether little or large, and however small or spacious the dwelling may be, there are times when conflicts arise because of unwanted contacts. Some special place may be desired above all others by one, or possibly two, in conference and a second or a third person coming in and wanting that particular room also is a cause of dissension. There may be no lack of affection between the people, but a temporary ruffling of personalities which is disturbing. When living quarters are congested, these occasions arise frequently, but they are not limited to such conditions. There are these discordances, regardless of space, or the lack of it, and numbers of persons, or the fewness of them. It would appear to be partly a similarity of tastes as well as the popularity of the spot, whatever it is, that was an element of the magnetic force drawing the people together.

Transient Dissension.

It is true that instances are rare in which such trouble is more than a passing dissension. But this is enough to set the persons in bad humors for a few moments anyway, unless one or more of them has enough understanding of the situation to smooth others, or has a keen sense of humor, which sense is like oil to machinery in keeping things running without friction.

Congeniality.

It should be remembered that congeniality is one cause for this convergence of persons. The same things are liked, the same impulses are present, and enjoyment and discord are both caused by much the same things. Each of these persons is drawn to the same things and to the same places, and so naturally meet in the same room in the home, or the identical spot. If there is the desire to be alone, resentment is stirred by the presence of another. It is at such times that tact and kindness are needed. I am assuming that love is not lacking. Without this essential element in home life, there will be discord anywhere and at any time, if not, indeed, at all times.

Loneliness.

When harmony is desired, and clashes of temperaments of those caused by such things as are under discussion today, exist, it is well to bring oneself up with a round turn by thinking of the loneliness that would be felt if we did not have our family about us. During absences from home, or when one is left there when others are away, the realization of what it means to be alone and also together, creeps into the mind and it is warmed by the very thought of companionship of dear ones.

Left-Handers

Dr. H. H. Newman of Chicago university, biologist, studied the hands of 100 students—50 of each sex—and found first that there are all grades of left-handedness and second that left-handers not only can use their right hand better than right-handers can use their left, but that the palm and finger prints on left-handers are more like their right than the left of right-handers is like their right.

BACK TO PROHIBITION

The man who flung his hat in the air and gave three cheers when the eighteenth amendment was repealed ought to be leading a campaign in these days to rid the roads of drunken motorists. For if there is one thing that could conceivably restore national prohibition, it is the deadly mixture of alcohol and gasoline.

Anyone who thinks that the American people will put up with this menace indefinitely is crazy. Traffic is dangerous enough even when all hands are stone sober. Add to this those half wits who don't see anything wrong in getting behind the wheel after they have had a few drinks, and you create an intolerable situation.

Continue that situation long enough and you will find a new sentiment of prohibition, just as surely as night follows day.

Here's an example. In Ohio the other day some 80 young members of a church organization hired a wagon and a team of horses and went out for an old-fashioned "hay ride" along a country highway. The wagon was adequately lighted with lanterns fore and aft. The night was clear.

Up from behind came an automobile. There was plenty of room to pass, but the driver apparently never saw the wagon. He smashed into it, knocking it off in the ditch, where it overturned and pinned the young people beneath the splintered wreckage. One lad was killed and 14 others were severely hurt.

The driver of the auto admitted that he had had "two beers and two highballs" before starting out to drive. Police said bluntly that he was drunk.

Now if you would go around among the survivors of that accident, and among their families, you might find a surprising amount of sentiment in favor of a restoration of prohibition. —Amarillo Globe.

EDITORIAL CRITICISM

A few days ago a reader of the editorial page of the Advocate remarked that the criticisms appearing now and then in these columns were not calculated to make friends. Since friendship is among the most important of human relations, it would certainly be a mistaken policy to antagonize any potential members of "this great fraternity." But the question demands to be asked: Why is a newspaper? Primarily, no doubt, for the dissemination of news. But there must be something more than this if a paper is to have any individuality, any character or any distinction. Were this not true, the position of editor would be among the lost occupations.

A carping attitude is deplorable. No less so is one of passive complacency. But honest criticism is something quite different. Calling attention to a public matter focuses public thought upon it, and thought will result in opinions which will be expressed; and this will eventuate in public sentiment. And public sentiment is, or should be, the motive force that runs the country.—Newark (Ohio) Advocate.

DISTAFF SIDE

Harry E. Wheat of Los Angeles doesn't mind housework. He had been doing it for a year and a half, in addition to taking care of three children and cooking the meals, while his wife, Helen, worked in an office. But now Harry is asking a divorce and maintenance of the children and himself. He stated in court that his wife criticized his cooking and his housework, became angry because he sometimes forgot to darn her clothes, and that she refused to take him to places of amusement.

STORY'S END

In 1911, Dan, a horse, wearing "Sunday harness," took a couple to their wedding ceremony. With the advent of the automobile Dan was sold. The couple, Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Rice of Fort Worth, searched for him ever since. Recently while Mrs. Rice was visiting a sister in Lubbock, she saw Dan pulling a garbage wagon, bought him back, and Dan, now 30 years old, returned in a special truck to spend his declining days in leisure at a farm near Fort Worth.

REWARD

At the opening of school at East Pembroke, N. J., Principal L. B. Lane announced that every pupil having an attendance record of 98% or better would get a half day off a month. The end of the month found 189 boys and girls getting the reward. One hundred and eighty-nine is the number of the entire student body.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Burrows and children of Ramsdell visited in McLean Sunday.

CAGLE HUNT HONORED

Cagle Hunt of McLean became a member of Alpha Chi, national scholarship society, recently, when the Hardin-Simmons University chapter at Abilene selected fourteen new members to the group for the 1936-37 school year.

Students were selected from the upper 10% of the junior and senior classes and were given individual oral examinations to qualify them for membership in the society.

Mr. Hunt and the thirteen other new members were guests in Dean Olsen's home for the informal initiation service.

DOGHOUSE, INC.

For men who have incurred the disfavor of their wives and seek solace in the similar misery of their fellows a new organization has been formed in Baltimore, Md., known as Doghouse, Inc. It is described as a bachelor club for married men who can manage to get out for an evening. The head of National Kennel No. 1 is Al W. Johnson, Great Dane. The next ranking officer is Clarence Ninen, Grand Shepherd.
