is the worst thing to do to a golfer, or to go from one hole to another? And here is one who has put to you golfers, to see a golfer but who does not declare at least once in a while "I'm quitting golf"? And you know one to quit? You might be glad to know that you've made up your mind to be serious and get right to work and go to playing golf earnest. Because I've known a golfer who has known a golfer "buggy" until he had had a dozen solemn vows "I'm quitting golf" that never, NEVER, ever play another game and folks, when a man gets into his golf "career" getting somewhere with it. He can go out with determination and positive burning up the fairways, the sand traps, tearing up bunkers and holding out the edge of the green with one coming out at the ninth or under.

You the truth, folks, I've seen Grover to make just as crack as he has made, expected him to have his "p" published in the home paper, but that's conclusive that he's at last determined to be a good golfer. To tell you again, his golf game has been "punk" and I've often when he was ever going to enough advanced to just admit that he couldn't declare that "I'm through." I've really been interested in Grover's future. I've always had the makings of a golfer, and it's worth quite a bit to notice just why he always took his golf. He never just walked the tee box, teed up his ball, haphazard sort of way, raised back and gave his swing, and if he hit the ball right and if he missed it, and he never did notice where it was standing or how. And folks, want to know something, you judge a man's character by the way he plays his golf. For that reason I've been uneasy concerning Grover's golf. But now I'm positively happy and satisfied that in the future I can point with pride and stick out my chest and to my great-grandsons say back yonder I once had a share of playing golf with the greatest golf-playing colossals of all history.

Now folks, we've got a great fore us. We've simply got to fix up our golf grounds and can properly entertain Grover when he pays us another visit. It is to have him visit us unless the roughs properly mowed the sand traps and bunkers of all trash and weeds, and plenty of tees around the holes, and see that Judge Rice good supply of chawing tobacco on up, Grover, and if I beat you, I'll have Old Brindle take you on.

MCCORD WRITES CENTENNIAL SONG

Prof. Walter McCord, who will teach in the Heald school the coming term and who is now teaching a singing school at Liberty, was in McLean Wednesday and presented the News editor with a copy of the Texas Centennial song, "In My Happy Little Home in Texas," written by himself.

Prof. McCord says that a concert will be given at the close of the singing school, either Thursday or Friday night of next week, and they have invited the McLean high school band to take part in the program.

TIGERS PRACTICING TWICE A DAY NOW

By Coach Bill Allen

All boys interested in making the 1936 McLean Tiger football team should be out for practice not later than Monday morning at 8 o'clock. About 20 boys have been practicing twice a day since Monday of this week.

The evening practice is scheduled at 7:30 in order for all boys who have jobs to get to practice and to miss the heat.

Much stress has been put on punting, passing, blocking and running. With a possibility of a light team coming up, speed will be one of the greatest assets that the Tigers have at present.

BEER ELECTION CALLED

The county commissioners have called a special election for Saturday, August 29, to determine whether beer and wine can be legally sold in McLean, following a petition presented the court with 81 names of local citizens.

T. N. Holloway and A. A. Callahan were named as judges for the two precincts here.

A similar election was held last January, when the precinct went dry by a large majority.

Ted Woods, Oldsmobile dealer, announces a free picture show to be given at the Lone Star Theatre Friday afternoon, beginning at 5:30.

This show was scheduled for Friday night in the big advertisement on another page, but later changed to the theatre for the afternoon.

MAY GET ACTION ON STREET WORK

Mayor D. A. Davis, Secretary W. E. Bogan, M. C. Davis and T. A. Landers made a trip to Amarillo Saturday to interview the Works Progress Administration chief in regard to the street work at McLean.

It was brought out that we can expect no pay for the caliche already laid, as the WPA will not pay for anything in advance of a contract. It also developed that the topping is of a type unsuitable for residence streets, entirely too costly, and an adjustment was promised on this.

It was stated that Gray county has a lateral road project approved, and the matter of improving the county line road to Kellerville was favorably spoken of.

The WPA official was very friendly toward any project that is needed here that will keep the unemployed at work.

That night, as usual, Deborah went into Grandmother's room to make sure that she was settled comfortably, and to kiss her good-night. Grandmother was sitting up in her big bed, her silver hair brushed smooth and drawn back into a neat little braid.

"Deborah," "Yes, Grandmother?" "Do you not like these friends of Bryn's, my darling?" Deborah looked up in surprise. "Why, yes, yes, of course. I think they are lovely. Sally is sweet. She is like a talking doll. And she is very kind."

"And Madeline?" "Nobody could help liking Madeline," Deborah replied. "She's charming, isn't she, Grandmother? I love to hear her talk. It's so slow and lazy. It's because she and Simon are from Texas, Sally says. And Madeline is beautiful. Don't you think she's beautiful, Grandmother?"

"Not as beautiful as you are, my child," Grandmother answered fondly. "But she is very attractive." She was silent again. Then, "If you like them, Deborah, and find them pleasant company, what is it that has been troubling you ever since they arrived?"

"Troubling me?" Deborah answered, startled. "But... I am not troubled." "Oh, Deborah," Grandmother said reproachfully. Deborah raised her eyes, and there was a deep, happy smile in them. "I am happy, Grandmother darling," she said.

"And you love Bryn? He loves you, of that I am sure. But of your love for him... sometimes I am not so sure. You admire him? You think him strong and thoughtful and quick, and kind?" "Yes, Grandmother."

"You respect him? You are proud of whatever he does?" "Yes, Grandmother."

"And," she put her hand out gently and lifted Deborah's chin. "Why, you are blushing, child! Surely that ought to be sufficient answer to my next question, but I must have your words, Deborah. Forgive me. But you know your complete happiness means everything to me. Deborah, tell me; when you see him, and he smiles that twinkling smile of his, don't you want to go to him, and caress his cheek, as you are caressing mine, and put your hand on his hair, and touch his shoulder? Isn't that what you'd like to do, Deborah?"

Deborah caught her breath. Her eyes darkened. Her lips quivered faintly. And then, "Yes, Grandmother," she said.

"Of course," Grandmother said happily. "Well, then you love him. You couldn't help loving him. Go, my child. Kiss me good-night, and leave me. I shall rest, tonight. I am happy."

Out in the hall, safely away from the door, Deborah stood and put both her hands over her face. Her brain was whirling. There was a dreadful lump in her throat, and something ached in her breast. Alone in the darkness, she stood, trying to calm herself, trying to be cool and unaring again.

A voice spoke to her. It was Bryn. He was in the hall beside her. He was whispering, so as not to disturb Grandmother.

"Deborah," he was saying anxiously. "Deborah, what has happened?" Deborah did not answer. Instead, she dropped her hands and stared up through the shadows at his face. He drew a quick breath, then put his arms out and held her close to him. His coat was rough under her cheek.

"Deborah, sweetheart," he said brokenly. "What's happened to you? Why are you trembling?" For only a second she lay there, and then she lifted her head and pulled herself away. "Don't touch me," she said in a furious whisper. "Oh, don't you dare to touch me!" and she flew down the stairs and out to the others, sitting talking in the welcome darkness of the veranda.

Deborah sat on the couch before the long balcony window in her own sitting room. The afternoon was very hot. Bryn and Tubby and Simon had gone following the brook, looking for a pool to swim in.

There was a knock at her door. Deborah ran quick fingers over her eyes. Her heart bumped. She scrambled from the couch, preparing to dash into her bedroom before calling out to Bryn that he might go through to his own room. It was not Bryn. Sally's voice floated plaintively through the keyhole. "Deborah! May we come in?"

"Oh," Deborah said limply, and then, "Yes, of course, Sally. Please do. And she tightened her dressing gown around her.

Sally, in floating black chiffon pyjamas and tiny black mules, came through the door, followed by Madeline in dull green. "Were you sleeping?" Sally inquired. "Curl yourself up again, Deborah. Everything about you is like the Sleeping Beauty herself," Sally said.

Deborah looked at Sally. "I think you're sweet, too, Sally," she said shyly. Sally flew up from her chair, flung her arms around Deborah and kissed her. "That was darling," she said. "Wasn't that darling, Madeline?"

Madeline sighed. "Yes," she agreed. "But you don't need it. You've got Simon. You don't have to suffer in silence and alone, as I do."

Sally began to laugh. "You don't exactly go around laughing, you know, idiot," she said.

Madeline sighed. "Not outwardly, perhaps. But inwardly, I suffer."

"Piffle," Sally answered. She turned to Deborah. "Does she look as if she were suffering?"

"Not exactly," Deborah said faintly. "She isn't, either. She knows perfectly well it's all a question of time. And, I must say, Madeline, it looks much more hopeful lately than it ever did. Doesn't it?"

Deborah couldn't stand it any longer. "Does she mean she's... in love... with somebody?" she asked faintly.

"Tubby," Sally answered. "Can you imagine it?"

"Tubby?" "Tubby. Isn't it ridiculous?" "I don't see anything ridiculous about it," Madeline objected. "He may not be what one would call a romantic figure, I admit. He is a number of pounds overweight, but he's very good-tempered. And his hair won't lie flat; but I always liked originality. And I like his dimple and I'm crazy about his lip. I could listen to him forever, if only he'd say a few of the right things. Deborah, honestly now, don't you think Tubby's a dear?"

Deborah was still staring at her. Now she gave a deep sigh and sank back against the couch. "Yes," she said. "Yes, I think he's wonderful. I think he's marvelous. I think he's just as nice as he can be."

CHAPTER VIII

It had been a happy afternoon, the happiest afternoon, Deborah decided, that she had ever known. The four of them, Sally and Simon and she and Bryn, had gone for a walk in the pine woods up on the hill. At first she had walked beside Sally, but Sally had obviously wanted to be with Simon, and Deborah had dropped back and waived with Bryn. He could see how it was, that she wasn't thrusting herself upon him, that it was a matter of necessity, and he didn't seem to mind. As a matter of fact, Deborah said to herself, sitting on the veranda in the twilight, he had seemed to enjoy himself. He had climbed a steep overhanging little cliff once when she had seen a brilliant tiger-lily up in the shadow, and had brought it down to her triumphantly. When he gave it to her their hands had touched, and he had stood for a moment looking down at her with a queer expression that made her heart turn over when she remembered. She had wanted to smile at him then, Deborah recalled, but something had made her draw away hastily, and as she moved, his expression had changed again, and he had begun to talk quickly.

Deborah could not take her eyes from Bryn's. It seemed to her that in his there was a question that she had to answer. She gazed at him, so strong and fine, sitting there against the pillar. A kind of tense look that was constantly in his face during these last few days began to relax. Then he put his hand out slowly and covered hers, lying beside her on the chair.

"No, no," she said in a whisper, but she couldn't draw her hand away, and she didn't know what it was she meant. He lifted her hand gently until it was against his lips; his eyes were still on hers, gentle, compelling. But she was afraid; she drew her hand away swiftly and sprang from her chair. "Isn't that... isn't that the car?" she said breathlessly.

It was Madeline and Tubby had been to town, and when Madeline came up to the veranda Bryn inquired about mail.

"There was a letter for Tubby from Pilar," Madeline replied. Sally stopped dead. She looked up at Madeline in horror. "From Pilar?" she repeated.

"Who is Pilar?" Deborah inquired. "Sally and Madeline looked at each other. Then they both coughed together. "Just a girl," Madeline said nonchalantly, but Sally at the same moment said, "She's a horrible nasty scheming vampire, that's what she is, and I hate her."

OLD CUSTOMER
A film actor gave the name of a clergyman as reference in a business transaction. The merchant phoned the clergyman and asked for particulars concerning the financial standing and reliability of his proposed customer.

"Indeed," said the clergyman, "I can give you no guarantee; I have merely a casual acquaintance with the man."

"That's strange," said the merchant. "He told me that he attended your church pretty regularly."

"He does," returned the clergyman. "He always gets me to marry him!"—Stray Stories Magazine.

This Trick Worked

The chief was always being pestered by beggars. One man came every fortnight and could not be shaken off.

Chief—I ordered you not to let that man in!

Porter—Pardon me, sir, but he will not be refused.

Chief—If you knew what he wanted you would never admit him.

Porter—What does he want?

Chief—Your job.

"Human nature is strangely hopeful," answered Miss Cayenne. "Whenever he brings along a new story you imagine that this time maybe you will catch him telling the truth by accident."

What the Tramp Saw

First Tramp—You wouldn't do with a mad dog what I saw the woman of that house doing with her baby.

Second Tramp—What did you see her doing?

First Tramp—I saw her kissing it.

"Ach, Sandy, the baby's swallowed a penny!"

"Weel, let him ha'e it—tomorrow's his birthday."

Fatal Thrift

"Did you hear about the Scotch gangster getting killed?"

"He lit a bomb and hated to throw it away."

THAT FOR JIM

"I was worrying about you last night, Jim, dear."

"There was no use."

"I know, but I always worry over trifles."

The Restless Mind

"You ought to take a day off and go fishing."

"No," answered the constant toiler; "I'd rather stay in the office and think about fishing than be out in a fishing boat thinking about work."

"Is there any difference in price?"

"None whatever, sir."

JOINT RESOLUTION

An amendment to the Constitution of the State of Texas fixing the salaries of certain officers by amending Section 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas, fixing the salary of the Governor at Twelve Thousand Dollars per annum; amending Section 22 of the Constitution of the State of Texas fixing the salary of the Attorney General at Ten Thousand Dollars per annum; amending Section 23 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas fixing the salary of the Comptroller, Treasurer, and Commissioner of the General Land Office at Six Thousand Dollars per annum; and the salary of the Secretary of State at Six Thousand Dollars per annum.

RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS:

Section 1. That Section 5 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be so amended as to hereinafter set forth:

Section 5. The Governor shall, at the expiration of his term of office, receive as compensation for his services an annual salary of Twelve Thousand Dollars ($12,000.00) Dollars, and shall have no other compensation during his term of office and occupation of the Governor's office, fixtures and furnishings provided that the amendment shall become effective until the first Tuesday in January, 1937.

Section 2. That Section 22 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be so amended as to hereinafter set forth:

Section 22. The Attorney General shall hold office for two years and his successor is duly qualified. He shall represent the State in all suits and pleas in the Supreme Court of the State in which the State may be a party, and shall examine and inquire into the charter of all private corporations, and from time to time, in the name of the State, take such action in the courts as may be proper and necessary to prevent any private corporation from exercising any power or authority not granted by law, or from collecting any species of taxes, tolls, freight or wharfage not authorized by law. He shall also perform such other duties as may be required by law. He shall hold office at the seat of government of this State, and his term of office shall continue until the expiration of his term of office. He shall receive for his services an annual salary of Ten Thousand Dollars ($10,000.00) Dollars, and no more.

Section 3. That Section 23 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be so amended as to hereinafter set forth:

Section 23. The Comptroller of Public Accounts, the Treasurer, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office shall each hold office for the term of two years and until their successors are qualified; receive an annual salary of Six Thousand Dollars ($6,000.00) Dollars, and no more; reside in the Capitol of the State during his term of office, and perform such other duties as may be required by law. They and the Secretary of State shall not receive for their own use any fees, costs or perquisites of office. All fees that may be payable by law for any service performed by any officer specified in this Section, or in his office, shall be paid, when received, into the State Treasury.

Section 4. That Section 21 of Article 4 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be so amended as to hereinafter set forth:

Section 21. There shall be a Secretary of State, who shall be appointed by the Governor, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall continue in office for the term of service of the Governor. He shall authenticate the publication of the laws, and keep a register of all official acts and proceedings of the Governor, and when required, lay the same before the Legislature, or either House thereof, and perform such other duties as may be required of him by law. He shall receive for his services an annual salary of Six Thousand Dollars ($6,000.00) Dollars, and no more.

Section 5. Said proposed Constitutional Amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of this State at the next general election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1936, at which election all voters favoring such proposed Amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots the words:

"For the amendment to the State Constitution fixing the salary of the Governor at Twelve Thousand Dollars per annum; the salary of the Attorney General at Ten Thousand Dollars per annum; the salary of the Comptroller, Treasurer, and Commissioner of the General Land Office at Six Thousand Dollars per annum; and the salary of the Secretary of State at Six Thousand Dollars per annum."

And those voters opposing said proposed Amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots the words:

"Against the amendment to the State Constitution fixing the salary of the Governor at Twelve Thousand Dollars per annum; the salary of the Attorney General at Ten Thousand Dollars per annum; the salary of the Comptroller, Treasurer, and Commissioner of the General Land Office at Six Thousand Dollars per annum; and the salary of the Secretary of State at Six Thousand Dollars per annum."

If it appears from the returns of said election that a majority of the votes cast are in favor of said Amendment, the same shall become a part of the State Constitution.

Section 6. The Governor of the State of Texas is hereby directed to issue the necessary proclamation for said election and to have same published as required by the Constitution and Laws of this State.

Section 7. The sum of Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000.00) Dollars, or so much hereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of the State Treasury to pay for the expense of said publication and election.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an Amendment to Section 26 of Article 3 of the Constitution of Texas, by adding thereto Section 26a, providing that under no apportionment shall any county be entitled to more than seven (7) Representatives unless the population of such county shall exceed seven hundred thousand (700,000) people; providing for the apportionment in counties of more than seven hundred thousand (700,000) people; providing for its admission to the voters as required by the Constitution and making an appropriation therefor.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS:

Section 1. That Section 26 of Article 3 of the Constitution of Texas, be amended by adding thereto Section 26a, as follows:

"Section 26a. Provided, however, that no county shall be entitled to or have under any apportionment more than seven (7) Representatives unless the population of such county shall exceed seven hundred thousand (700,000) people as ascertained by the most recent United States Census, in which event such county shall be entitled to one additional Representative for each one hundred thousand (100,000) population in excess of seven hundred thousand (700,000) population as shown by the latest United States Census; nor shall any district be created which would permit any county to have more than seven (7) Representatives except under the conditions set forth above."

Section 2. The foregoing Constitutional Amendment shall be submitted to a vote of the qualified electors of this State, at the next General Election, to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1936, at which election all voters favoring said proposed Amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots the words:

"For the Amendment to the Constitution of Texas, limiting every county to not more than seven (7) Representatives under any apportionment unless said county shall have a population of more than seven hundred thousand (700,000) people as ascertained by the most recent United States Census, in which event such county shall be entitled to one additional Representative to each one hundred thousand (100,000) population in excess of seven hundred thousand (700,000) population."

And those opposed to said Amendment shall write or have printed on their ballots the words:

"Against the Amendment to the Constitution of Texas, limiting every county to not more than seven (7) Representatives under any apportionment unless said county shall have a population of more than seven hundred thousand (700,000) people as ascertained by the most recent United States Census, in which event such county shall be entitled to one additional Representative to each one hundred thousand (100,000) population in excess of seven hundred thousand (700,000) population."

COLD DRINKS

Cold drinks have become more and more popular of recent years. You would be surprised, if you watched a soda fountain for a half day, to see how many people part with their hard-earned bits of change. Cold drinks are healthful and even nourishing and take the place of solid food. They purge and tone the system and are ideal for the reducer. They are the thing to offer to the guest who drops in on his auto trip or the couple who comes to play cards for an evening. The young people always love them and they just suit hubby when he comes in tired after his day's work. The wise housewife has the makings of cold drinks always in the refrigerator. Sugar goes farther if made into a syrup before adding to cold drinks. This syrup may be kept in a can in the refrigerator for a long time. To make it, boil together sugar and water until it becomes syrupy. Very little is needed to sweeten drinks and none is left undissolved on spoons or in the bottom of the glass. Lemon juice may also be kept "on tap." Squeeze the juice of several lemons and keep it in a closed jar in the refrigerator. A mixture of fruit juices is delightful for cold drinks. The juices left from fruit canning are useful for this purpose. They may be ganned separately or together.

Bad will be the day for every man when he becomes absolutely contented with the life he is living, with the thoughts that he is thinking, with the deeds he is doing, when there is not forever beating at the doors of his soul something larger, which he knows that he was meant and made to do, because he is still, in spite of all, the child of God.—Phillips Brooks in the Optimizer.

ANY ROOM TO DOUBT?

If newspaper advertising did not pay, it is certain that the leading big, successful business firms would not do much of it. It is not philanthropy that prompts them to do it, but just good business sense. A Windsor matron states that advertising pays in a big way. As proof of it, she cites that those big ads extolling the merits of soap chips catch the eye, with the result that a majority of housewives use them, when, as a matter of fact, a 4-cent bar of any common laundry soap will go as far for dish-washing as a 20c or 25c package of soap chips or powder, because there is so much waste to the latter. But because the latter are so highly advertised, they are used in preference.—Windsor Poudre Valley.

You are the fellow who has to decide whether you'll do it or toss it aside; You are the fellow who makes up your mind whether you'll lead or will linger behind— Whether you'll try for the goal that's afar Or be contented to stay where you are. Take it or leave it. There's something to do! Just think it over. It's all up to you.—The Optimizer.

Regular advertisers in this paper do not need to be told of the merits of advertising in the home paper. Others can easily prove the worth to their own business by a short schedule.

The Garden Club is to be congratulated on the improved appearance of McLean homes. Many homes that are not in the contest show the pride their owners take in their homes and the community by the care given their yards.

The continued hot dry weather this summer has saved the town from an epidemic of flies. With the many insanitary cow lots in the city limits, a wet summer would have meant a probable typhoid epidemic spread by flies.

CAUSE OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Apparently the highway is safest when it appears the most dangerous. Statistics released by a large insurance company show that 85% of all the accidents in 1935 occurred in clear weather. Only 2% happened in fog, and about the same number occurred during snow. In spite of or because of the general fear drivers have of slippery roads, only 11% of last year's accidents happened during rain. Statistics further reveal that 75% of all the accidents occurred when the streets and roads were perfectly dry, and only 20% of them were on curves or crooked roads. Neither was there an increase in the number of accidents after dark.—Pathfinder.

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?"

"If it comes that that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together," came defiantly from the witness.

"HELLO, OSCAR" TAKES TEXAS LIKE EPIDEMIC

Austin, Aug. 18.—Hello, Oscar," the fascinating new game that originated in the minds of Texas Centennial Department of Information heads, has spread over Texas like an epidemic almost over night.

The prime purpose of the new game is to make Texans conscious of the great number of out-of-state cars traveling over Texas during Centennial year. The novel pastime is similar to the game children play, known as "stamping horses." The rules are not compulsory but may be altered according to the wishes of the players.

"Hello, Oscar," is a derivative of "Hello, Out-State-Car." As many persons as care may play. The first to spy a car bearing an out-of-state license shouts "Hello, Oscar," and thereby gains one point. If the driver of the car answers his greeting he gains another point. Should a player see two out-of-state cars pass each other he is given five points. Of course, there is a penalty of one point when a player cries "Hello, Oscar," when there is no out-of-state car in sight.

Some opine "Hello, Oscar," is another step toward insanity, but everybody's playing it. It's surprising the number of out-of-state cars to be seen in Texas every day.

"NEWSPAPER ENGLISH"

We give thanks to Dr. Frank M. Vizetelly. This famous lexicographer, world renowned as an authority on the etymology and use of the English language, defends the newspapers of America against the accusation that they add nothing to the vocabularies of their readers and, in fact, offer them a daily fare of poorly written, slovenly composed and even ungrammatical news articles. Dr. Vizetelly not only refutes this charge but says the "newspapers are the father of the language," that they are "powerful factors in increasing the average person's vocabulary" and that each year sees them adding words to our language which eventually are accepted as part of our idiom and are included in our dictionaries.

It has been quite common for some persons outside the profession to adopt a supercilious and condescending attitude toward newspaper writing. They regard it as something done in haste, ground out as part of routine, bereft of every quality of good literature and, hence, of no permanent value to the reader who seeks to improve his mind. We have always resented this notion and to find Dr. Vizetelly as an ally is a distinct pleasure.

In a recent article he reveals that a child of six knows 1,000 words. The average American working man has a vocabulary of 5,000 words, and the average newspaper reader understands and uses from 8,000 to 10,000 words. Lawyers, ministers and physicians know upwards of 25,000 words, or about as many as Shakespeare used. Newspaper editors have an average command of about 50,000 words and every well-read person should be able to define and understand about 40,000 words. Woodrow Wilson used more than 60,000 different words in three of his historical works. Considering that there are approximately 1,000,000 words in the English language, it is quite evident that the best read of us know and use only a few comparatively.

But, as Dr. Vizetelly points out, the average newspaper is not only well written but its repetition of new words gleaned from science, the arts, industry, sports and even the underworld, enriches our language by about 3,000 words a year. "Every year a large army of new words endeavors to find a home in our language," he says, "and most of these are originally brought to our attention by the newspapers. The press has helped to elevate both the tone of thought and speech. The idiom of today, the terminology of the times, frequently becomes the literary word of tomorrow. Our speech is like the tide, ever at ebb and flow, and the newspapers are its masters."

PAINT ROSY PICTURES

In New Mexico and other neighboring states, as well as in states further distant, the sales tax is in effect and in them is painted a rosy picture of (one thing for instance) teachers being well paid and in cash at the end of every month, and other functions of the state government moving along with cash surpluses.

One thing that isn't mentioned is the myriad army of collectors and checkers and spies, who parade up and down the state to see that every man pays off, and to see that he collected off of every customer.

Theoretically, the sales tax is a good thing. Actually, it is bad.

But folks are not dealing in actualities now, any more than they can avoid, and the sales tax will continue to be pushed as a panacea for the state's financial condition.—Floyd Co. Hesperian.

Aye, there's the rub.

Many good plans for benefit of the public fail miserably because of the inexcusable and unbusinesslike manner in which they are administered. Each new plan must have, apparently, an army of employees to execute its provisions. Each one offers a chance for passing out some more political pie. Evidently it has never occurred to the "powers that be" to delegate the functions of a new governmental set-up to any one or more of the innumerable groups of office-holders already lugging at the public pan.

Recent shining examples of such abuses are seen in the national relief program, largely a memory, and the present PWA and WPA.

If private enterprise of the nation lacking the inexhaustible source of income available to political schemes, were conducted on the same extravagant scale as many of the beautiful official bureaus, the country would be bankrupt in 24 hours.—Wheeler Times.

SOWING AND REAPING

Some people are of the opinion that this continued drought, which is destroying crops in many states, is a lesson to teach us that it is a sin to destroy wheat, corn, cotton and other valuable crops which the Lord has given us in the past. It is certainly a sin to destroy valuable crops, or cattle, hogs and other valuable food stuffs which the Supreme Architect of the universe has given to us; to make food and clothing HIGHER IN PRICE for the consumer to pay.

"Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and we are reaping just what we have sown. Destroy the God-given food and clothing which the Lord gives us and we will reap such a reward that none of us appreciate, but must stand for, because we are wilful destroyers of such gifts from nature. God forbid that we should commit such wilful and malicious sins in the future that we have in the past.—Claude News.

A Canadian farmer, John Miles, was probably as surprised as the hare when the animal popped out of a grain reaper neatly bound in a sheaf of wheat. The startled rabbit had leaped into the machine and was whirled quickly through the binding machinery.

CHURCHES MAKE GAINS

Often the statement is made that the world is going to the dogs or some worse place, but the most recent church statistics refute them. The average gain in church membership over the past nine years has been 1.66% as compared to an even 1% increase in population. In 1935, according to Dr. George L. Kieffer, churches and religious bodies showed a gain in membership of 670,800, of which 538,800 were classed as adults—13 years of age or older.—Pathfinder.

After the turmoil and strife Cometh a wondrous peace;
After the doubts and the fears Cometh a sure release;
After the sorrow and tears Cometh a heavenly praise;
After the prayer and praise Cometh His blessing again.

"Two Trains on a Track"
By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

"If I'd been embarking on an expedition into some unexplored jungle," says George Force of New York city, "I might have been ready for anything. But as it happened, adventure came to me on a trip home from the office. A trip I took six days a week, fifty weeks in the year." Well, George, I've been arguing for a long time that that's the way most adventures happen.

It was on January 27, 1903, and George was on a train headed for home, which was then in a small New Jersey suburban town. It was a funny old train—as we know trains now.

The cars were wooden ones. They were heated by coal stoves, one of which was set in the middle of each car. It was a cold, snowy night. The train was rolling along about twenty miles out of New York, and just beyond the town of Westfield.

At the other side of Westfield, the train stopped. The express was coming through and the little local was switched to another track. The railroad dispatchers intended it to stay there until the express had gone by.

Tragic Train Wreck on Winter Night.

But something went wrong with the signals. The big train—the Royal Blue Line Philadelphia Express—doing sixty miles an hour—was on the wrong track. It was coming straight for the rear-end of the local train on which George was riding, but not a man on either train knew it until it was too late. The first George knew of it was when the crash came. It came with a terrible, jarring impact that shook the train from one end to another. Then, as far as George was concerned, the whole world seemed to be coming to an end.

Says George: "I was in the forward part of the third car. The crash, when it came, was so terrific that it pushed our train half a mile along the tracks. The shock of that collision alone killed many people."

But that shock was only the beginning. Jolted half out of his senses, George was dimly conscious of the whole terrible affair. Like a man in a dream he saw the car he was in turn over on its side. As it turned, George went head first through a window, cutting his face, bruising his back. With the whole upper part of his body out of that window, he was dragged along the tracks as the car, lying on its side, still continued to scrape along them.

Express Locomotive Bores Into Wooden Car.

When a thousand things all happen at once, it takes a long time to tell them. Actually, George's whole adventure didn't last more than ten minutes all told. He felt the car turning over almost at the same time as the initial impact. He saw himself going through the window, felt himself being dragged along the rough surface of the roadbed, scarcely a split second after the car had toppled.

That scared him plenty, but the most awesome sight was the one that came just another split second after he fell through the window of that still-moving car.

George was up in the front part of his car. If he hadn't been, he might not have been alive today. For to the rear of the car came a horrible grinding sound. The whole back-end crumpled like match-wood. And into the car—right down its crazily tilted aisle—came the locomotive of the express.

George Describes Scenes of Frightful Horror.

George watched it in a daze of fear as it pushed its steaming head forward. It had gone through two cars already, killing and maiming their passengers. Now it was coming after George. Would that hot, smoking juggernaut get him? George held his breath, certain that it was the end, but half way down the car, the engine stopped.

The car was filled with cries and groans. Injured people were everywhere. The car was burning, as were all the other cars in the trains, set afire by the upended coal stoves that heated them.

Says George: "The scenes I witnessed then were indescribable. The car was a twisted, misshapen mass of ruin. Burning ruin, with the locomotive embedded in its midst. Dead, wounded and helpless humans were lying along its entire length. Passengers from the few cars that were not harmed seemed stunned, and it was the less serious—wounded—some of whom had been in the worst of the wreck—who realized that help must be given to the dead and dying and that something must be done about those pinned in flaming cars."

Wreck Cost the Lives of 30 Passengers.

George himself was one of the latter. He couldn't get out alone, and only did with difficulty when three or four men came to help. When at last they pried him loose, he was still in a state of half-consciousness. His clothes, from his neck to his waist, had been torn completely from his body. They led him away through a scene of the most frightful disorder. Moaning, bleeding, scalded victims lay in rows by the side of the track, and every minute rescuers brought out more.

Every passenger in the rear car was killed outright. Few escaped in the next one. The engineer of the express train died a few minutes after the accident. All told, thirty people were killed and scores were injured.

And George—well—every time he thinks of that wreck, and the way that locomotive came crashing right into the car after him, he counts himself pretty lucky not to have been one of those poor devils in the last car.

Washington's Escape Cited

History tells how Washington, a colonel under General Braddock in the French and Indian war of 1775, was one of the few survivors in the ill-fated ambush of July 9, but there is a sequel which records the wonder of his escape. Years afterward an aged Indian chief came from a long journey to meet him, saying he had a great wish to see the man who was protected by the Great Spirit, and could not be slain in battle, how in that ambush, he had specially singled out Washington, bidding the others to do so also, without any effect, until they were convinced he could not be shot and ceased to aim at him.

Two Kinds of Rabies

There are two kinds of true rabies—first, what is known as dumb rabies and, second, furious or violent rabies. In the first the dog acts as if it has something caught in its throat. Generally behaves abnormally. Lower jaw becomes rigid. Naturally a dog with this type of rabies does little biting. Condition of his lower jaw prevents it. In violent rabies the symptoms are much the same as in the dumb variety, with the evidences of uneasiness or nervousness, and drooling. In violent rabies the dog always snaps at things or people. That is the outstanding difference between the two types.

What Irvin S. Cobb Thinks about

Debunking War's Romance

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—Mrs. "Bud" Lighton, one of the smartest women on this or any other coast, has started a symposium of suggestions for the promotion of national sanity the next time diplomats or politicians, profiteers or professional sword rattlers, or all of these types combined, try to rush a country into futile and uncalled for war—which classification covers most wars.

Her peace formula includes these ideas:

No brass bands whatsoever. No speech-making by stay-at-home orators. No recruiting except by men who have themselves enlisted for active service. No brass buttons. No shiny buckles, no gaudy regalia. Respect for the flag and, if necessary, all proper defense for it, but no cheap waving of it beforehand. No blatant emotional displays being turned off or on like a hydrant. Reason to be invoked rather than mob-steria.

Red Baiters' Field Day

A GENTLEMAN in Iowa, who presumably inquired into the matter, asserts that in this country are upwards of 4,000,000 aliens who entered illegally and that the vast majority of these—over 90 per cent, are on relief. While we're fighting corn borers and tobacco worms and boll weevils with government funds, wouldn't it be a grand idea to turn a lot of G-men loose to round up these smuggled-in human parasites and ship them back where they came from? Locally speaking, I'm told that the average foreign-born agitator, ostensibly seeking to organize the casual workers of this state, is really a red agent spreading communistic doctrines under cover of his seeming activities in the industrial field. In other words, his real aim is not to unionize labor but to disunionize America.

Watson, the fly-swatter and the insect poison—quick!

The League's Big Moment

AT LAST here's a chance for the League of Nations to function. For the poor thing it has been an uphill pull to slide down hill so steadily, with each descending step toward the bottom marked by disappointment and failure. It had almost as tough sledding as a smooth-faced, bearded lady would have trying to get a job in a museum.

But now, the league can punish at least one small nation for persistently breaking the otherwise solid front presented by nearly all the important European powers. Surely, ere long, it will hang some sort of penalty on little, simple-minded Finland for regularly paying installments on her debt to us.

This disruptive thing cannot possibly be permitted to go on forever when the sacred principles of dishonor, ingratitude and repudiation are all at stake!

Paging the Black Legion

IT IS passing strange that the Black Legion is so slow about offering Herr Hitler honorary membership in the mother-lodge up in Michigan. Both parties seem to feel alike on the subject of persons of color.

Meanwhile just so long as they didn't try to stop him from shaking those nimble feet over brown-skinned flying squirrel, Jesse Owens, should worry because a dictator refuses to shake his hand.

With Metcalfe and other dark colleagues helping him pile up so commanding a lead for the American team in the Olympic games, it's almost time for the band to play "All Gawd's Chillun Got Wings."

Synthetic Spanish Hidalgoes

AND the famous Santa Barbara fiesta feasting on every side and yours truly looking as much like a Spanish hidalgo as anybody born in McCracken county, Ky., could be expected to look.

Plenty of other disturbing occurrences, too. Heat wave still hanging on in spots. Fresh European complications on account of the Spanish mess.

Down at his home on the range where seldom is heard a discouraging word—except from Washington, D. C.—we behold Uncle Jack Garner, with his head over the corral bars, beginning to moo plaintively.

And now, on top of all that, it seems we must start worrying about Tommy Manville's next wife or wives, as the case may be—and probably will.

I do wish Tommy could see his way clear to hold off till fall. If memory serves me aright, the fall always was his favorite marrying season, anyhow.

S. S. LESSON

By Rev. Cecil G. Goff
Pastor First Baptist Church

THE GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN

Lesson text, Acts 11:5-18; Romans 1:15-17. Golden text, "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3:16.

Word came to the Christians in Jerusalem that Gentiles had been saved under the ministry of Peter. Up to this time it was thought that only Jews could be saved. The apostles and the Jewish Christians laid heavy charges and accusations against Peter when he returned from Caesarea. It was necessary for him to defend his actions.

Peter had been in Joppa asleep when there appeared to him, three times, all sorts of animals from which he was commanded to kill and eat. He would not because he was not willing to eat anything that was ceremoniously clean. But God had commanded, and Peter's lesson was that what God had cleansed he was not to call unclean. Immediately there came men from Caesarea to call Peter forth to preach to their master. Because of the vision he had experienced, he went with the men.

Peter learned that the man to whom he was going was a Gentile. But God had heard his prayer and had directed him to send for Peter that he might preach the Gospel to him and his household. This was a new experience for Peter. He did not believe that a Gentile could accept the Gospel and be saved. Nevertheless when he heard the story of the man, he began preaching, and the Holy Spirit fell upon those present. They believed, and Peter was obedient enough to accept their salvation—that was he that he should not be obedient to the divine will of God. The story of the incident as he told it to his fellow Christians in Jerusalem fell in fertile hearts and those who had condemned him and demanded an explanation were satisfied and praised God because they recognized the fact that God had extended His grace to the Gentiles also.

We as Christians today are inclined to condemn Peter and many of the Jewish Christians for their attitude in feeling that God meant for His grace to be limited to the Jews. But many of us have not yet been fully willing to admit the universal brotherhood of man. God meant for all men to have the same opportunity. And in so far as God is concerned He made it so that all men might have the same opportunity. Christ died for the sins of all men. And God said that no matter who came to Him, He would in no wise cast out. God did His part and then left the spreading of the message of salvation to those who were Christians. As men hear the Gospel they either must accept or reject it—but the many who never hear, what about them? In Ezekiel 3:17, 18, God definitely tells us that if there are any who are not warned, we are responsible, and their blood remains upon our hands. Again in John 20:21 Jesus told His disciples that He was sending them forth to carry on the same work He had carried on—the establishment and the spread of the Gospel throughout the world.

It would be well if we as His followers could learn that it is His will that every soul be saved. There are many who will not accept His salvation, but that is their individual responsibility. It is our duty to see that every one has the opportunity. If we should accept this responsibility it would create the most substantial universal fellowship and recognized brotherhood of man yet ever established. Most everyone recognizes the fact that there is a tremendous need for fellowship among nations today to keep the ever present threat of war down. But the thing we need to recognize first is that there must be some fundamental basis for that fellowship. There is only one basis that will stand the test of the weakness of men and that is the common salvation of mankind through the blood of Jesus Christ.

The national and personal fellowship that binds the hearts of men and nations together through the blood of Christ is stronger than any treaty between nations. It will last after treaties have been torn to shreds and have become worthless papers, because God is in it, and the Christian brotherhood of men is not a physical thing but a spiritual and eternal reality. Foreign mission efforts have done more to cement the hearts of nations together than all of the diplomatic service ever rendered. Diplomatic relations depend upon the power of the nation behind the diplomat. Christian brotherhood depends on voluntary love between the hearts of men and God.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

proposing an amendment to Section 11 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of Texas, so as to provide for a Board of Pardons and Paroles, composed of three members, whose terms of office shall be for a period of six years, one to be appointed by the Governor, one by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Texas, and one by the presiding Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals, such appointments to be with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate present; and so as to provide that the Governor of the State shall have the power on the recommendation and advice of the majority of the Board of Pardons and Paroles to grant reprieves, commutations of punishment and pardons and to remit fines and forfeitures, and, with the advice and consent of the Legislature, to grant reprieves, commutations of punishment and pardons in cases of treason; and to provide that the Governor shall have the power to grant one reprieve in any capital case not to exceed thirty (30) days; and shall have the power to revoke paroles and conditional pardons; and to provide that the Legislature shall have authority to regulate procedure before the Board and to enact parole laws; and to provide for an election for such proposed constitutional amendment, and to make an appropriation therefor.

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF TEXAS:

Section 1. That Section 11 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended so as to hereafter read as follows:

"Section 11. There is hereby created a Board of Pardons and Paroles to be composed of three members, who shall have been resident citizens of the State of Texas for a period of not less than two years immediately preceding such appointment, each of whom shall hold office for a term of six years; provided that of the members of the first board appointed, one shall serve for two years, one for four years, and one for six years from the first day of February, 1937, and they shall cast lots for their respective terms. One member of said Board shall be appointed by the Governor, one member by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the State of Texas, and one member by the presiding Justice of the Court of Criminal Appeals; the appointment of all members of said Board shall be made with the advice and consent of two-thirds of the Senate present. Each vacancy shall be filled by the respective appointing power that theretofore made the appointment to such position and the appointive power shall have the authority to make recess appointments until the convening of the Senate.

In all criminal cases, except treason and impeachment, the Governor shall have power, after conviction, on the written signed recommendation and advice of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, or a majority thereof, to grant reprieves and commutations of punishment and pardons; and under such rules as the Legislature may prescribe, and upon the written recommendation and advice of a majority of the Board of Pardons and Paroles, he shall have the power to remit fines and forfeitures. The Governor shall have the power to grant one reprieve in any capital case for a period not to exceed thirty (30) days; and he shall have the power to revoke paroles and conditional pardons. With the advice and consent of the Legislature, he may grant reprieves, commutations of punishment and pardons in cases of treason.

The Legislature shall have power to regulate procedure before the Board of Pardons and Paroles and shall require it to keep record of its actions and the reasons therefor, and shall have authority to enact parole laws."

Section 2. The foregoing constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the electors of this State who are qualified to vote on proposed constitutional amendments at the general election to be held on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. D. 1936, at which election each ballot shall have printed thereon the words:

"For the amendment of Section 11 of Article IV of the Constitution of the State of Texas, so as to provide for a Board of Pardons and Paroles, and to make the Governor's pardoning power subject to recommendation of said Board, except in cases of treason the Governor may grant reprieves, commutations and pardons with the advice and consent of the Legislature."

Each voter shall strike out with pen or pencil the clause which does not indicate his desire regarding the above proposed amendment.

Section 3. The Governor is hereby directed to issue the necessary proclamation for said election, and to have the above proposed amendment published in the manner and for the time required by the Constitution and laws of this State.

Section 4. The sum of Five Thousand ($5,000.00) Dollars, or so much hereof as may be necessary, is hereby appropriated out of any funds in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated to pay the expenses of such publication and election.

The above is a true and correct copy.

Democratic Party

Together with three Democrats, one of them representing locally and representing states, gathered in Detroit to tell one another and the world how much and why they disliked the New Deal. After two days of conferring, they organized themselves as the National Jeffersonian Democrats and named Former Senator James A. Reed of Missouri as their national chairman.

They decided to establish headquarters at once in St. Louis to set up an organization in state. Then they gave out a word declaration or platform in which they declared they would not support re-election of the President and vice president and we call upon all loyal sincere Democrats to consider the question of their duty to the country in the approaching election with the same earnestness as we guided our deliberations with us if they feel that our opinions are sound and our anxieties for the future of our party are justified.

When the American Bar association convenes in Boston it will receive two widely differing reports from a special committee named to study the effects of New Deal legislation on the rights and liberties of citizens. They were made public in Washington. The majority report, signed by John D. Clark, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Fred H. Davis, Tallahassee, Fla.; George L. Buist, Charleston, S. C.; and Charles P. Taft II, Cincinnati, Ohio, "deplored" the action of President Roosevelt in reducing Congress to a "rubber stamp" body to carry through his program.

"Novel legislative and governmental trends of the New Deal are not as uncertain today as they were two years ago," the report said. "Laws specifically proposed emergency measures with limited life have been declared by important members of the administration to be the beginning of permanent changes in national policy. There has been a continuing conflict between such officials as to whether a new social and economic order is in the making or the old institutions are being perfected so that they may be preserved."

These findings were challenged by Kenneth Wynne, New Haven, Conn.; Fred L. Williams, St. Louis, Mo.; and James G. McGowan of Jackson, Miss. In their minority report they said: "If the purpose of the resolution creating the special committee was to get the opinion of the American Bar association regarding legislative trends designed to meet changing economic conditions, the report is superficial. It does not deal with the problem that concerns itself with a short range attack on surface trivialities."

Congressman Zioncheck commits suicide. MARION A. ZIONCHECK brought to an end in characteristic manner his checkered career and his life. He leaped to his death from a window of his office in Seattle shortly after he had been re-nominated to the congressional seat he had held for two terms. His friends attributed the suicide to worry over a psychiatrist's advice that he take a long rest from politics. His trouble had been diagnosed as dementia praecox.

Japan captured the most highly prized Olympic championship when Kitei Son, young Korean student, won the marathon race over a very tough course and in the record time of 2 hours 29 minutes 19.2 seconds. The distance was 26 miles and 385 yards.

Commerce Department on Recovery and Public Debt SECRETARY OF COMMERCE ROOPER'S department has just put out a "world economic review" for 1935 which contains many interesting statements. It says, for instance, that future business prospects are conditioned in part upon the possibility of narrowing the gap between government expenditures and receipts. It asserted that "the government deficit springs from the root of unemployment, which is still the major problem confronting the country."

As to "the part played in the recovery to date by the heavy government expenditures," the report said: "This question is not easily answered, but it is certain that such outlays have had an influence in many directions—for example, on retail sales, on farm income, on the growth of bank deposits and on the prevailing level of interest rates."

The latter statements may well be compared with the report of Alfred P. Sloan, president of General Motors, to the stockholders. Business recovery throughout the world—in which the United States has participated—is being generated by a combination of various factors, Mr. Sloan explains. In this country the automobile industry has been helped, he says, by principal influences. Only one of these, he points out, has its roots in the New Deal financial schemes and he finds that particular influence a bad one because it creates a temporary fool's paradise in which sales and earnings are ballooned by extraordinary government expenditures.

Asserting that political extravagance has created a highly undesirable and artificial stimulus, Mr. Sloan urges that such spending be halted before it is too late to stave off disaster.

Oil Men and Companies Accused of Conspiracy CHARGED by the government with conspiracy to violate the anti-trust law by combining to dominate the purchasing of oil in the Texas, Louisiana and Oklahoma fields and to fix prices of gasoline in the Middle West, 58 persons, 23 petroleum concerns and three publishing companies were indicted by a federal grand jury in Madison, Wis. Among the prominent defendants are Edward G. Seubert of Chicago, president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana; Henry M. Dawes of Evanston, Ill., president of the Pure Oil company, and many officials of Standard Oil, Pure Oil, Deep Rock, Socony-Vacuum and various other oil concerns and their subsidiaries. Also in the list are Warren C. Platt of Cleveland, publisher of the National Petroleum News and the Platt's Oilgram; his two publications and the Chicago Journal of Commerce.

The indictment charged that the defendant oil companies formed pools in the east Texas and mid-continent fields for the purpose of purchasing gasoline at artificially high prices from independent producers, and in furtherance of such a scheme were members of associations which included the independents. Further it was charged that independent refiners to aid the plan, had curtailed their production of gasoline.

This, said Mr. Platt, is exactly what the oil companies did with the approval of Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, administrator of the NRA petroleum code, when efforts were being made to limit the production of gasoline, prevent the flow of excess quota oil into market channels, and raise prices in that turbulent industry. "The government's charge turns on whether a practice legally started and carried on under the recent NRA petroleum code was continued in illegal manner after the NRA was killed by the United States Supreme court," Mr. Platt said.

BRISBANE THIS WEEK

Spenders of Yesteryear Gone With Their Billions Paris Hotels Empty England Learns Also

Europe learns that political experiments cost money. England decided to prevent Mussolini taking Ethiopia, camping along the imperial British highway, and controlling Lake Tana, source of Nile water. The attempt failed. England backed out of that situation, hastily, after her war department had assured our so-called war department in Washington that Mussolini could not possibly conquer Ethiopia in less than three years, probably not at all.

When the dust had settled and England, with her chicken-feed assortment of 51 league nations, had apologized to Mussolini and tossed Haile Selassie into the waste-basket, England found her foreign commerce much damaged. She had missed Mussolini, and shot herself in the pocketbook. For a little while she will copy Job: "I will lay mine hand upon my mouth. Once I have spoken, I will not proceed."

Paris, which is France, decided to sing and dance a new carmagnole with Russian dressing; clenched fists raised in air a la Russe; red flag waving; the doleful strains of the Communist hymn, "l'Internationale, and its Communist injunction, "Arise, ye prisoners of starvation," excellently sung from the Arc de Triomphe to the Place de la Bastille.

You can hardly imagine what fire, fury and enthusiasm thousands of young and old French gentlemen put into that hymn, although many of them showed few outward signs of starvation.

There were, and are, manifestations everywhere. Now in the chamber of deputies, Monsieur Gaston Gerard, practical French statesman, asks, "What has become of our foreign tourists and their spending money?"

M. Gerard tells the deputies something must be done. In 1927, 2,125,000 foreigners from all over the world visited France, spending much money. Visitors now number only 700,000; as a rule with little money to spend—oysters containing no pearl; many that come to help sing "l'Internationale bring no money."

Foreign visitors, says M. Gerard, used to give highly paid employment to half a million French men and women; spent 500,000,000 francs for French railroad and steamship tickets; scattered throughout France from 12 to 15 thousand millions of francs.

Fifteen billions, even in francs, are "real money" here. M. Gerard tells the chamber French prices are too high. There is something in that, with the four-cent franc costing six to seven cents in the United States—a comic-opera situation, considering the relative wealth of the two nations.

M. Gerard thinks there should be some cabinet official to look after foreigners, with better propaganda and fewer vexatious taxes on foreigners; there is nothing in that. Foreigners do not voluntarily travel and spend money where they feel they are not wanted. The cosmopolitan, educated Frenchman is as polite and hospitable as ever, but ask him what sort of reception the crowd gives to the foreigner, British especially. It offends the British ear to hear a bas les Anglais—"Down with the British!"

An innocent American automobile, sallied forth on July 14 to help France celebrate the destruction of the Bastille, and perhaps give a few feeble cheers for Lafayette, or Woodrow Wilson, or somebody.

Great crowd in the Champs Elysees, especially around the innocent American car, with new paint, shiny chromium and several cylinders. A polite policeman says monsieur should know better than to appear in a car of "grand luxury" on such a day. Such luxury cars you may see by the thousands and millions on American roads.

Nothing happens to the car of grand luxury; it crosses the Avenue of the Champs Elysees, about 300 feet, in less than twenty minutes. The French, newly self-identified as "prisoners of starvation," are interested in the auto American, which is careful not to bump anybody. The bourgeois, the "rich," an extinct species, although it does not yet know it, are nervous. In a vague way they feel that they are held responsible for all those "prisoners of starvation," with their strong voices, deep chests, powerful fists and pink complexions.

Camping Means Simplified Living, Be It in a Tent or Summer Home

Vegetables and Fruits, Fresh or Canned, Essential to Summer Diet.

Camping time—all along the roads we see the cars filled with vacationers and overflowing with baggage and unless we are ready on our way for an outing with the daily routine behind us, we are envious.

Camping is a very elastic term. It may mean anything from real camping out-of-doors with a tent for shelter and green boughs for beds to a mere change of house where life is lived in as simple fashion as possible. It is supposed to mean vacation for every one and that should include the housekeeper, who, while she must continue to plan and perhaps to prepare the meals, should make everything as easy as possible for herself. It is a very good plan to have an understanding with husband and children in regard to a fair division of labor. Perhaps it is possible for the children to undertake the preparation of meals and apply directly the instruction of the past winter in home economics classes and in boy and girl scout meetings.

Contrary to theoretical conditions fresh fruits and vegetables are often hard to find in the country. There should always be some canned products on hand which will supplement the meal. If you have plenty of room, it is usually easier to take with you a few of the indispensable things; a few cans of soup, vegetables, fruits and milk should certainly start with you. Evaporated, condensed and dried milk may all have their place among your supplies. The last is very satisfactory for drinking purposes if it is well beaten with the water, especially if it can be cooled. For the children, it is always a safe milk, and it is not always possible to be sure of the quality of milk in traveling.

If berries and other local fruits can be obtained, you will use them as much as possible. Oranges and bananas are usually available but the bananas must be perfectly ripe before the children eat them. Dried fruits, such as raisins, prunes and dates should be bought in small quantities and will be very useful. Be wary of green apples eaten raw. There is nothing which upsets a child's digestion more quickly than this fruit which is hardly to be resisted if it is seen in the trees in any condition. Cooked, these green apples make delicious sauce and pies.

Carolina Corn.
½ pound of sliced bacon
3 to 4 eggs
1 can corn
½ cup milk
Salt
Pepper

Fry the bacon to a delicate brown. Remove the strips from the fat and cut in small pieces. Cook in the bacon fat, stirring constantly until set.

Message in Books

This is the age of books. And we should reverence books. Consider! except a living man there is nothing more wonderful than a book—a message to us from the dead, from human souls whom we never saw, who lived perhaps thousands of miles away, and yet in those little sheets of paper speak to us, comfort us, open their hearts to us as brothers.—C. Kingsley.

Passing of the Ballad Lamented; Radio Is Blasted

Ballad singing in America was once a dignified means of entertaining a company. There was singing at social gatherings, in parlors, in the games and dances of young persons, as well as in the chimney nooks of farm houses or by the stove in the cross-roads store, in the cabin, or cornfield, or by the creek. How much less there is of it now, and how much less there will be as time goes on!

Phonographs and the radio have penetrated remote places and they have cheapened as well as multiplied the output of songs. Music is now turned on rather than sung by groups or individuals. And the very multiplicity of new songs—composed for shows or as songs for sound films, or for radio singers and crooners—lowers the quality of those that are produced and impedes their chances of survival. One song has hardly achieved a degree of circulation before others crowd it out. There is little that is memorable in the texts.

Will anyone in the future wish to recover our popular song hits of today and their airs? Perhaps. But I feel no certainty of it.—Louise Pound in The American Scholar.

500-Acre Map

Leningrad school children will soon be learning geography by walking through a delightful park instead of sitting in a schoolroom. In the nearby Koltushi hills, a site of 5,000 acres is being converted by the educational authorities into a natural panorama illustrating all the main features of the world's scenes, with miniature lakes, rivers, mountains, and woodlands which imitate the typical landscape and "relief" features of many nations.

A WAIL FROM THE WEST

The following letter from "Little Muddy," west Missouri Slope, is interesting, to say the least:
Editor, Tribune:

I have the pleasure of writing to you to give a statement of the condition of the crops. There has not been any rain here since the first of June and the crops will be a complete failure. The grasshoppers did considerable damage in the early part of the season, and the drought and hot weather destroyed the balance. Prairie fires are raging in all sections and there are no signs of rain. Cattle men are coming in with herds and looking almost in vain for small patches of grass to cut for the winter, and farmers will cut some of their grain for hay, leaving the remainder in the field.

There was a shooting affray here on the 13th, a half-breed named "Parky" Ward being shot in the mouth with a 38-calibre revolver, the ball lodging in his neck. The shooting was done by Allison, the scout and interpreter, who brought in Sitting Bull.

G. S. BARTLETT,
Little Muddy, Dakota.

If there is any affliction or crime, scourge or contagion which Mr. Bartlett has failed to enumerate, it is hoped he will make the correction at once.

No, the above wasn't written just the other day as one might think. It was written 50 years ago and it appeared in the Bismarck Daily Tribune for Saturday, July 24, 1886.

THE McLEAN NEWS

DAUGHTER

She could swing a six-pound dumb-bell.
She could fence and she could box;
She could row up the river,
She could clamber 'mong the rocks;
She could golf from morn till evening.

And play tennis all day long;
But she couldn't help her mother—
'Cause she wasn't very strong.

THE TRUTH

Mrs. Jones—We are keeping William from returning to college this fall. He is really so young, you know.
Mrs. Brown—Yes, my son flunked, too.

"Knock, knock."
"Who's there?"
"Rexall."
"Rexall who?"
"Rexall go to church tonight."

Witt Springer and Boyd Meador made a trip to Abilene Thursday.

Miss Viola Smith is visiting her parents at Edna.

WE ASK NO MORE

THAN YOU ASK OF YOUR CUSTOMERS

We only ask a trial of our advertising columns; that is no more than the merchant asks of his customers. If either of us cannot make good there can be no kick from anyone.

Conditions are changing every week, as any merchant who keeps in tune with the modern trend knows, and conditions change the same way in the newspaper business. If you have not tried the columns of the home paper this year, you know nothing about the pulling power of newspaper advertising.

Why not try a short schedule and prove to yourself how we can help your business grow, or, if you are entirely Scotch, ask any regular advertiser why he keeps a message before the buying public in our columns each week.

We sell advertising just as any modern merchant sells his wares—strictly on its merits, and we have been in this business too long to depend upon guesswork. We have to know what we are talking about to continue to succeed ourselves.
