305,000 Unemployed Got Jobs During March

NO ONE knows how many unemployed persons there are in the country, the estimates ranging from about 9,000,000, by Secretary Perkins, to less than 3,000,000. However, according to Madame Perkins, the number was reduced by 305,000 during March. If the appropriate committee will allow this bill to come to the floor for full and open discussion by senators, he predicted, other bills of this nature, providing for substantial savings, are sure to follow.

REDERICK PRESNOILE of New York city walks away with the blue ribbon today, with a yarn that will curdle your blood, make your hair stand up, and bring you up out of bed in dent look Hollywood the middle of the night in a cold sweat. And Fred's adventure is another one of those yarns that goes to show how the real hot adventures don't come to the birds you'd expect them to come to.

Fred served as a soldier with the British army in France and Belgium. He got himself into many a tight spot during the war. But the big adventure of his career came to him while he was working at the comparatively peaceful job of medical technician.

It was on September 9, 1932, that Fred received a call from a prominent physician summoning him to a case in an apartment building on Park avenue. When Fred got there he was met by a woman, the widow of a wealthy New York merchant, who told him that her son had been suffering from a mental disorder and needed to be taken care of.

Patient Had Homicidal Tendencies.

The woman took Fred to her son's room. He was sitting by a window, looking out at the street. He paid no attention to Fred, and when Fred spoke to him he got no reply but a vague mumble and a furtive look. Fred pretended to be interested in things around the room. He sort of hoped the young fellow might respond to that sort of treatment. But the lad just sat in his chair and sulked, and paid no attention to Fred

About six-thirty that evening the doctor arrived. He looked over his patient, and then he warned Fred to watch him closely. "He's developing homicidal tendencies," the Doc said, "and it's hard to tell what But he may become dangerous at any minute." So Fred bors-yes! decided he'd have to watch his step that night.

The evening wore on-and still the young fellow sulked. About midnight Fred persuaded him to go to bed. A cot had been set up in the room for Fred, but before he lay down on it he locked the door from the inside and put the key in his pocket. He waited until he was sure his patient was asleep, and then he lay down himself.

That Doze Was Almost Fatal.

Says Fred: "I was very tired, having just finished a strenuous case that same morning, and I must have dozed off. That doze nearly cost me my life. I awoke suddenly with a nameless feeling that all was in Hades. not well, and there, not two feet from the foot of my cot, creeping toward me, was my patient.

* Fred says no words that he knows could describe the demoniacal fury of the young lad's distorted features. "And," he says, "in his right hand they couldn't possibly upset a home was an OPEN RAZOR. To say that I went cold with horror wouldn't so much as one overstuffed husband. be telling the half of it. But that feeling only lasted a second or two. Then I managed to pull myself together again.

"The young fellow must have sensed that I was awake, for with a bound he was at my side. His arm went up and started to come down again. He meant to decapitate me with that razor, But my left hand shot out and seized his right, and I got a death grip on his wrist to stop the murderous swing."

But now the madman's left hand was reaching for Fred's throat, still all excited over the achieve-F RANCISCO FRANCO is well on and there in that locked room began a terrible battle. The young fellow fought with all of a maniac's superhuman strength. He was armed with a razor, and Fred thought that sure enough this was going to be his finish. after years of concentrated enough turned out a 500,000-word novel with-

Emitting a grunting sound like a woodchopper swinging an axe on a block of wood he brought that razor down to split me in two.

And then, something else happened. Fred says it's a strange thing, the way a man's mind and body will co-ordinate in a moment of stress. He put every ounce of strength he had into one great effort of pitching himself awayout from under that descending razor. He rolled violently to one side, and as he did, his right hand landed on one of his shoes.

Fred doesn't even remember thinking his next move out. He thinks he must have acted almost entirely by instinct. But he clutched at the shoe as a drowning man would a straw, sprang to his feet, whirled around and swung the heel at the mad young fellow's temple.

He did that all in one motion—and did it so swiftly that it was all over great event in history and then he did that any before his mind half caught up with what he was doing. The heel of the promptly forget all about the thing shoe landed-right where Fred wanted it to land. The young fellow slumped to the floor, and lay still.

Fred struck him again with that shoe. He looked as though the first blow had knocked him unconscious, but he might have been playing possum, and Fred wasn't taking any chances. And then the fight was over: Fred stripped the sheets from the young fellow's bed and tied him hand and foot. He unlocked the door, and there, outside were the young lad's mother and the maid, both of them almost frantie. They had heard the sounds of the struggle but couldn't get through the locked door. They took the young fellow to a sanitarium the next day. Fred never

Early Pueblo People Had Their Balanced Rations

At a time when our own Nordic ancestors were living chiefly on half-cooked or raw meat, ignoring the necessity of eating plenty of spinach and fresh fruit to make them red-blooded and strong, the Pueblo people knew all about bal-anced rations and were thriving on a variety of delicious foods, de-clares a writer in the New York

Yellow corn was the staple diet; yucca fruit was utilized, wild honey and sweet saps were excellent sub stitutes for sugar, and beans were so important as a ration that the Spanish name for bean, "frijoles," persists today in the name given to one of the most famous cliff-dweller ruins of New Mexico — Frijoles Canyon, in Bandelier National Monument, some seventy miles beyond Santa Fe. There were also squashes, edible gourds, bulbs of the Mariposa lily, and other roots; berries, pinon nuts, and the seeds of certain grasses which were ground into meal in the stone metates, or grinding beains of hollowed atone, pounded with a stone peetle or manos.

Ideals of a Nation

The strength and greatness of a nation do not lie in the sinews of its people, nor in the money bags of its traders, nor in the glibness of its orators, but in the devotion of its citizens to a lofty ideal of public and private duty, in the love for all that is true and good and beautiful, and the hatred of all that is false, evil, mean and ugly; in their strenuous pursuit of knowledge, and their readiness to apply it to the making of life larger, fuller and Holding World's Fairs.

IT'S customary, before launching a world's fair or an exposition or whatever they may call it, to that the show is supposed to commemorate in the excitement of flocking to see Sally Rand unveiled as the real main attraction.

F'rinstance, the big celebration in New York in 1939 ostensibly will mark George Washington's inauguration as President 150 years before, and it may be, just as a matter of form, that Washington will be mentioned in the opening ceremonials. But the real interest will center in whether Billy Rose or Earl Carroll or the Minsky brothers succeed in thinking up some new form of peach-peeling art to entertain the customers, or have to fall back once more on such reliable standbys as fan dancers and strip-teasers.

Coronation Souvenirs. SINCE previous engagements prevented me from going over to the coronation, I trust some friend will bring me back a specimen of that new variety of pygmy fish which some patriotic and enterprising Englishman has imported from Africa as an appropriate living souvenir of the occasion. It's a fish having a red tail, a white stomach, and a blue back, thus effectively combining the colors of the Union Jack. And it's selling like hot cakes, the dispatches say.

Now if only this engaging little creature could be trained to stand on its tail when the band plays God Save the King" what an addition it would make for any household in the British domain! (Note-Households in the south of Ireland excepted.)

GROCERY and MARKET

THE SCARLET CORD HANGS FROM THE WALL

OF JERICHO

A newsboy shouts "paper!" A grocer puts out a price-tag on a barrel of potatoes. A ticket broker advises you that he sells "the best seats for the ball game." . . . These are all forms of advertising.

Along the highways the motorist reads as he goes, "Fresh Eggs," or "Dahlias and Gladoli," or "Newly Picked Raspberries." ... These are all forms of advertising.

Few Englishmen of the Middle Ages could read, but each one knew a goat from a bull, and all could therefore pick their favorite hosterly by the sign it displayed. By the costumes of the attendant priests a Roman could tell whether he was entering the temple of Adonis or Pallas Athene. Some hundreds of years before that a man named Joshua, the leader of a tribe of Jews, knew where to storm the city of Jericho because a scarlet cord hung from a window in the wall . . . These are all forms of advertising.

In each of these cases a sign of some sort told people what they wanted to know, where they could buy something, where they could get some special sort of information, where they could avail themselves of some special type of service.

The advertising in this newspaper tells you exactly these same things. But advertising is also a business force. It has been organized. Its results have been tested. Its value is known.

To the consumer it means shopping news. To the consumer it offers information of pleasant, agreeable ways to live. To both consumer and merchant alike it is a civilizer, because it spreads information.

Advertising is as much a part of your life as your telephone, your food, your business or your family . . . indeed, most of these things are possible, partly because of advertising!

The scarlet cord still hangs from the wall of Jericho.

Mr. Vaughn was examining a bamboo rod which had been broken and mended. Jim laughed. "I'm afraid I'm guilty of the mending,' "The day I came here he said. Susan was fishing in the brook. I startled her. She fell off the bridge and broke the rod. I had to make an attempt to repair the damage since it was partly my fault."

"Not a bad job." Mr. Vaughn was in too high a state of anticipation to be annoyed by a broken rod. "So that's how you wormed your way into Susan's esteem. Is that a pun?" He twinkled at Jim. "I suppose it is. Funny," he added, laying aside the bamboc rod, 'she's the only one of the children who seems to have inherited my passion for fishing. I'll have to take her with me some time. She had had that shining look of happiness whenever, since then, Jim had had a glimpse of her. He told himself that he was glad she and Jeremy had adjusted their difficulties. It was possible to believe that during the busy working day when pressing duties crowded out thought and speculation. It was more difficult at night. Alone in his new quarters, attempting to read or check over bills, sitting alone in the movies, riding the one horse alpurchased for the stable along the infrequently traveled back country roads, even on the one or two occasions when, breaking his resolve, he stopped in at the drug-store to talk to Dolly, his thoughts, never far from the subject, returned to the evening he and Cecily had gone to Dutch's.

She had been troubled that evening. She had questioned her relationship with Jeremy. She had never done that before. He had felt very close to her. Had she thought again of what he had told her? Probably not. His symbolism had been inept. He probably hadn't gotten his meaning across. She had defended him in thoughts. "I don't suppose you really liked picking beans and changing tires." Late in the afternoon following Mr. Vaughn's departure, Jim drove get the doctors' permission to to the station to inquire for the he said, tenderly unjointing package which he was to readdress.

The expressman told him that it had been delivered at "Meadowbrook" earlier in the afternoon. Jim drove out to the estate, parked his car at the side entrance of the house and went into the hall.

A low voice murmuring in the living-room attracted his attention. He walked to the door and stood looking in, smiling at what he saw. Susan was, apparently, putting herself through a dress rehearsal for some impending ceremony. She wore a pale peach-colored frock, tight-waisted, quaintly ruffled, with sash of a deeper tone and a matching ribbon binding her taffycolored hair. She stood before a long mirror, practicing a curtsey, murmuring unintelligible words, casting an occasional glance at her feet festive in peach-colored socks and white slippers tied with bows.

"Hello!" Jim said. She whirled around from the mirror, a guilty flush staining her

"What's the idea?" Jim asked. smiling. "Are you going to be pre-sented at court?"

"I'm going to be in the wedding tomorrow," Susan replied. "Mary Lillian's mother invited me. I'm going to hold a white satin ribbon when the wedding comes up the aisle. We practiced this afternoon." 'You look awfully nice.

He saw that he had pleased her. Jim laughed. "You're growing up, Sue. Did the expressman leave a package here this afternoon? "It's out on the kitchen porch. I heard Nora tell Miss Parker. She went out to the porch with him, walking demurely, amusingly conscious of her wedding frills. Jim found the package lying on a bench and prepared to mark it with the address of the camp in Maine. "Look, Jim!" Susan said in a bright interested voice. "There's Jerry Clyde!"

Jim's eyes turned to follow her frankly pointing finger. Looking out between vines, he saw Jeremy scated on the narrow rim around the reflection in the water.

'Narcissus," Jim observed. Susan was too deeply interested in the news she had to impart to demand an explanation. "He's mad," she said cheerfully.

'He and Cecily had a fight this "A fight!" Jim whittled a point black crayon he had brought

"Well, they didn't hit each other or throw anything," Susan continued, perching herself carefully on the end of the bench. "They were mad, though—he was, anyway, and Cecily was, too, after a while. "I think you'd better go take off those clothes before you ruin them and upset the wedding."

"I guess I'd better." Susan slipped off the bench. "Are you going to stay here this evening?" she asked, lingering on the porch. "No," Jim replied. "I'm going back to the riding academy after

Daddy's away and Miss Parker is going to a card party in the village and Cecily will be at the Pattons' and it's Nora's day off and I think Tommy has a date because he gave Rose a quarter to press his pants. "I'm a swell cook," Jim boasted. Amazing how light-hearted he felt this evening for no reason at all. 'At any rate, it isn't forever. I'm coming back here to stay when I've found a stable man. I heard of one today. He used to work at the Fox Run stables. If he'll come for the money we can pay, I think he's our

They talked, then, of the riding academy and the progress that had been made. After supper Jim sat, for a time, on the veranda with MacPherson. When he rose to leave it was getting dark. Twilight came early now that autumn was approaching, autumn with a lingering breath of summer in the still, mellow air.

Jim walked back to his car parked in the drive. He must not forget to take Mr. Vaughn's parcel to the express-office in the morning. Passing the kitchen porch he heard Susan talking to Rose and glanced up. One crystal star shone in the darkening sky. Tomorrow would be fair. Fine weather for the wedding. He'd like to see Cecily in her bridesmaid's dress. No. There was battle in the atmosphere at "Meadowbrook." He'd better keep away.

He set his car in motion. As he drove past the house he saw a solitary figure pacing back and forth across the terrace. Tommy? No-Jeremy Clyde. His gait appeared to be steady. If he meant to carry out his threat of getting tight, Jim thought with fleeting amusement, it was obvious that he had not yet made a start.

CHAPTER XI

Jim flung his arm over the side of the chair in unconscious protest at being roused from sleep. The knocking was repeated. He made an effort to struggle up to the surface of consciousness through the gray tide that dragged at his senses. A voice was calling urgently, a little hoarsely.

"Who is it?" Jim answered, not yet fully awake. Words came to him which, for a moment, had no meaning or impor-"Smash-up - side-roadhurry!" Jim shifted his position in the chair. What time was it? He glanced at his watch. Only a little past midnight. He couldn't have slept long. Strange how real that dream had seemed. Was it a dream? He pulled himself up from the chair, crossed the room, opened the door.

No one was there. Puzzled, not yet convinced of the reality of the voice which had called, Jim walked out into the drive. The night air, cool and crisp, blew away the last blurring cobwebs of sleep. Someone had knocked at the door.

ICE CUBES

In selecting a new refrigerator in 1937, more than ever, one needs to be careful about freezing speeds because the demand for ice cubes in the average home has increased tremendously during recent years.

Except for coffee in the morning, nearly all beverages served now-a-days contain three or four ice cubes it each serving, and it is annoying, especially in hot weather, when all available ice cubes are used at lunch and you find there is not sufficient freezing capacity to produce a new supply before supper time.

You can assure yourself on this point in talking with your Electric Refrigerator Dealer, as most electric dealers will ers will readily agree to guarantee their refrigerators to produce at least three full freezings of ice cubes between breakfast and supper, even in the hottest

At any rate this is proving an utstanding season for the tailored uit and all that goes with it in the way of chic accessories. The ew woolens are as an intriguing lot as ever launched forth on a fashion career. While most any length jack et is accepted this year as good style, yet when it comes to topotch swank the fashion-wise are entering their interest about the aunty short-jacket types.

The suit to the left in the picture ombines nubby wool sheer tweed vith even nubbier knit and you know that the nubbier the smarter is the ord this season for woolens. The short fitted jacket in brown and ige tweed has three half-moon pockets lined with the brown knit of the skirt. There's a brown knit ascot, a belt and buttons that are amusing in their oddity. By the way, you can add to the lure of a costume like this by wearing a blouse that lastens with fruit or vegetable buttons. Seeing is believing in regard to these whimsical buttons, some of which are miniature strawberries or perhaps wee apples or peaches. If you prefer oblong buttons ask for the lilliputian bananas they are displaying this season or the teenyweeny ears of corn, each and all in the realistic colorings of Nature. The two-piece suit of pin-checked wool tweed on the seated figure is beige flecked with white, according to Schiaparelli's fabric version. Such an exciting color theme as beige has grown to be this season! It's beige for your suit, for your furs, for your monotone crepe afternoon gown and for accessories with your navy or black suit beige is a most important message. The diamond shaped composition buttons that fasten this jacket are decidedly novel and therefore impart the exclusive look. Panels form ingenious breast pockets. A navy blouse peeps from under the stand-up collar. Check and double check! Here you see the game played in the suit to the right in the group. A navy and white box-swagger coatee in soft wool with large patch pockets and rounded lapels over a single breasted jacket to match makes this one of the smartest and most practical suits of the season. A navy monotone tweed skirt in simple lines is a pleasing variation from the check of the jacket. Wear with this costume a white baku breton sailor with roll brim faced in patent leather, for you must know that patent leather touches are ace-high chic.

The checked swagger-and-jacket suit just described is a good example of the fashion now prevailing for ensembles that are that composite they furnish quite a complete wardrobe in themselves. The present scheme of costume design that includes several items such as skirt, jacket, roomy topcoat and often an added cape denotes a very practical turn of affairs. These are so related in color and technique that, combine them as you will, they never fail to form a perfect unified outfit.

GLASS SLIPPERS ARE LATEST FOOT MAGIC

Glass slippers for the modern Cinderella are the latest word in foot-magic from Paris. To show that they are a 1937 vogue and won't actually disappear at midnight they are trimmed in gold kid and show bright nail lacquer gleaming

Another version of the Cinderella slipper is created of woven strands of crystal. This, too, is semi-transparent. Other more practical types of footwear for spring indicate the growing importance of the pedicure as a fashion requisite. Tipped-toe shoes (with just the tip cut out at front), sports and evening slippers made of twisted bands of printed linen-all reveal lace-tipped stockings and brightly lacquered toes. Rust and ruby-red and burgundy are especially popular, usually worn a tone deeper than the fingernails. Roman sandals and flat-heeled gold evening slippers with tiny strappings will be particularly popular with the "tall and willowy. Printed slippers made from the same material as the evening gown and colored kid sandals are also high in favor.

ABRAHAM A MAN OF PRAYER

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 18:17-32. GOLDEN TEXT—The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. PRIMARY TOPIC-Abraham Praying for His Neighbors.

JUNIOR TOPIC-A Great Man's Prayer INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC-

Praying for Others.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC-

Prayer-how many are the books that have been written on that subject and the sermons preached, and yet how little it is actually practiced. One can attract an audience to hear it discussed, but only a handful will come to pray. We as Christians agree that it is God's appointed way of blessing. We put up mottoes such as "Prayer changes things," or "More things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of," and then (may God forgive us!) we try to change things ourselves. We struggle with problems when we ought to pray.

The lesson of today, from the life of that great hero of faith, Abraham, stresses the importance of intercessory prayer, that is, the giving of ourselves to pray for the temporal and spiritual welfare of others. In an age characterized by a grasping spirit of acquisition for personal advantage it is like a breath from heaven to read of this man's prayer for others.

I. The Nature of Intercessory

It is a Privilege. Abraham had been honored by a visit from God. The covenant had been renewed, a son had been promised. The three visitors looked out toward Sodom. God who had thus appeared to Abraham in visible form and had shared the hospitality of his home now extends to him the privilege of sharing in God's purpose. How glorious to be on such terms of confidence with God, to know him and to know his will and purpose!

2. It is a Responsibility. "Abraham stood yet before the Lord"why? To pray for Sodom and Gomorrah. Privilege and responsibility go together. Those who have audience with the King of kings are there to carry the blessed burden of prayer for others. Are we praying for our children, our families, our church, our nation? If not, who will pray?

3. It is Objective, not Subjective. Some modern "religious" leaders would devitalize prayer by making it a sort of spiritual exercise which has only the value of developing our own soul. The prayer room is to them a sort of spiritual gymnasium where the soul develops its strength and a spiritual sense of well-being floods the soul.

Undoubtedly the very fellowship with God which is inherent in prayer is spiritually beneficial, but prayer actually deals with such things as cities, men, sin, sorrow. It concerns men's physical well-being, their material prosperity, as well as their spiritual welfare. It is the means designated by God for the release of his power on behall of the object for which we pray.

II. Characteristics of Intercessory

Unselfish. Abraham already had his promise and his blessing. The cities of the plain were wicked, yet he prayed for them. Those who know the spirit of God are not selfish in prayer.

2. Courageous. Note the reverent boldness with which Abraham pleaded the cause of the condemned cities. The Bible reveals that God honored men who had a holy courage. History tells the same story. We celebrate this year the centenary of one who prayed boldly-and believed, and labored-Dwight L

3. Persistent. No one likes a "quit-Christ spoke of a man who ter." was heard for his importunity (Luke 11:8). See also Luke 18:1-8. Some one has said that when we pray we are all too often like the mischievous boy who rings the doorbell and runs away without waiting for an answer.

III. Results of Intercessory Prayer.

The cities were destroyed, but the righteous were saved. God hears and answers prayer. This is the testimony of His Word, of count less Christian men and women of all ages, yes, of the men and women of our day. We know by experience that it is true—"I cried; he answered." He says to you and to me, "Call unto Me and I will answered. swer thee and show thee great and mighty things, which thou knowest not" (Jer. 33:3).

No Reason for Anxiety Anxiety is the poison of life; the parent of many sins and of more miseries. Why, then, allow it, wher we know that all the future is guid ed by a Father's hand!-Blair.

Real Reverence

THIS is the thing which I know and which, if you labor faithfully you shall know also; that in reverence is the chief joy and power in life. He Remains "Dead"-"Strangled" by Red Tape

John Kachnycz, of Pittsburgh, Pa., officially recorded as murdered seven years ago, and therefore legally dead, is now at work on a farm. But in the eyes of the law he just doesn't exist.

In 1929. Kachnycz left home to work in the country, and later was identified by a friend, as a man killed in a street fight. His relatives even collected the insurance money on his life-and a man was tried for the murder but acquitted

Now, after trying to come back to life in the legal sense, but finding the technicalities too great, he has given it up and remains dead in the eyes of the law.

Newspaper Advertising

Is Purely a Business Matter

Shrewd business men do not "run an ad" because they like or dislike a newspaper's editorial policy-nor because they want to favor a personal friend.

Newspapers do not ask "support." They do not pass the hat. Advertising is a business matter just as surely as the matter of fire insurance or the matter of your store lease or the purchase of goods from wholesalers to be resold at retail.

Advertising is more essential when business is quiet and when money is tight than at any other time. Your payroll expense, your insurance, your rent, and other fixed expenses remain about the same. The most economical way of adjusting expenses in proportion to the amount of business is by the stimulation of sales through consistent advertising.

We have the necessary illustrations, copy, and advertising specialists to help make your advertising effective.

When you buy advertising you do it for a special, specific purpose. A friendly discussion of the whole subject does not entail any obligation, and in such a discussion some business facts may be brought to light which may be of great interest to you.
