CLUB MEMBERS INSPECT KITCHEN

By Mrs. Luther Petty

Several club members and some visitors inspected the kitchen and bathroom of Mrs. C. E. Hunt, cooperator, who has met the goals of the Home Demonstration Club on kitchen work.

Mrs. Hunt has re-papered her kitchen with a lovely designed paper LIONS CLUB TO AWARD carrying out the color scheme of black, ivory and blue. The wood work is done in ivory, trimmed in blue.

White curtains adorn the double windows over the well arranged working center with a sink where there is running water, with cabinets on both sides and below, with a varnished top all across one side of the room.

A new linoleum of block design is laid on the floor, being dark with Neath and Mayor Bill Bratton of the color scheme growing lighter to ceiling, as has been demonstrated by the county agent, Mrs. Julia E. Kelley.

What Will Hughes Do?

OBJECTIONS to the seating of Hugo Black as a justice of the Supreme court on the constitutional ground that the emoluments of the office were raised while Black was senator brought Chief Justice a Hughes back to Washington before his vacation was ended. Associate Justice Brandeis also returned to the capital and he and Hughes were expected to confer on the matter and to examine the objections. Just what Mr. Hughes or any other member of the court could do was un certain. Constitutional lawyers agree that Black could not be denied his seat because he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, but many of them thought the court, if it decides to take jurisdiction, could bar him on constitutional grounds. There was reason to believe this solution of the exceedingly unpleasant matter would suit President Roosevelt. Should the President ask Black to resign, the latter might refuse, and that would be most embarrassing for Mr. Roosevelt.

"A Swim in the Ocean" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

ELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's the story of an adventure that almost ruined a girl's career. That's the way Grace Stoner of New York City looks at it, anyway. And since Grace is the girl in question-wellshe ought to know, hadn't she?

But if you left it up to me, I'd put it a little more strongly than Grace put it. I'd say that adventure came doggone near ruining Grace. I wouldn't say it was only her career she was in danger of losing. It seems to me she stood a mighty good chance of losing her life in that little episode in the harbor at Corinto, Nicaragua, in July, 1922.

Maybe in mentioning her career, Grace was talking about the thing that mattered most. Grace is a dancer, and I've heard it said that dancers take their careers mighty seriously. But the point is that Grace risked her career, and her life, too, for that matter, because a couple of birds made a couple of sneering remarks about her sex.

It Happened in Corinto Harbor.

Grace was off on a cruise when it happened. The ship was enchored in Corinto harbor about a mile from shore. It was late afternoon-just before sundown-and a more peaceful picture you never saw in your life. There wasn't a breath of wind blowing. The sea was like glass. Off in the distance the beach was bathed in shadow and the sun was sinking behind the towering peaks of the Central American Sierras.

A bunch of the young folks aboard the steamer were splashing around in the tiny improvised pool, rigged up out of wooden frame-work and waterproof canvas on the afterdeck. There was a bunch of young Spanish students aboard, going home from the University of California to their homes in Panama and San Salvador. They made up most of the crowd. The rest of it was Grace.

In a nice cool bathing suit, and with half a dozen handsome young fellows around her, Grace ought to have been happy. But the canvas pool was so small you could hardly turn around in it, and Grace was casting longing eyes on the placid, inviting waters of the harbor. It would be swell fun, she thought, to dive right off the deck and swim to shore.

Grace Wouldn't Take a Dare.

Grace mentioned her idea to the young Central American students. And that's what started all the trouble. The boys laughed at her. One of them said: "You? A girl? Why you wouldn't have the nerve to swim ashore." And another one wanted to bet her ten bucks she wouldn't have the nerve to try it.

It made Grace see red. They couldn't talk like that to her just because she was a girl. Without another word she ran to the rail, dived overboard and struck out for shore.

Behind her, the boys crowded to the rail, shouting and gesticulating. Grace wondered what they were making all the fuss about. It was only a mile to shore, and that wasn't much of a swim, even if she was a girl. Grace knew lots of girls who could swim twice that distance. She smiled to herself as she rolled along through the cool, calm water. She'd show those birds what a girl could do.

She was halfway across when she noticed a commotion ashore. A bunch of the people had formed in an excited knot there. They were waving and shouting. Finally, two men in uniforms launched a canoe and began paddling wildly toward her. Now what was the matter with those fellows anyway? Hadn't they ever seen a girl who could swim before? Or were they customs officers, seeing to it that she didn't smuggle any grand pianos into the country in the folds of her bathing suit.

Swimming Toward the Shark.

Grace decided to have some fun with them. When the canoe was about two-hundred yards away she put on a sudden spurt, swerved, and Christ. The question is not "How swam away from it. Cries came from the canoe behind her, but the more they shouted, the faster she swam, And then-she saw it. Ahead of her a dark, triangular fin was cutting the water, coming straight for her. A SHARK! Instantly, all the stories she had ever heard about those man-eating monsters of the pure.' deep flashed through her mind. Here was one of them coming toward herand what was worse, she herself was swimming toward IT. Now she knew the meaning of all the shouting and gesticulating-of the commotion on the beach and the two men in the canoe. Why hadn't she remembered that these weren't the northern waters she was used to swimming in? These were tropical seas, infested with sharks, barracudas, and all sorts of other aquatic dangers.

CHRISTIAN SONSHIP

LESSON TEXT-I John 3:1-6, 18-24. GOLDEN TEXT-But as many as re-ceived him, to them gave he power to be-come the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name. John 1:12. PRIMARY TOPIC-What John Learned trom Jesus

PRIMARY TOPIC—What John Learned from Jesus. JUNIOR TOPIC—John's Way. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC— What Makes Us Children of God? YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC— Christian Sonship.

"Studies in the Christian Life." What an attractive title, and what interesting and instructive studies we are to share during the coming three months!

When setting out on a journey we want to know just where we are going. Just so when we take up a new study we need to define the limits of our subject. We are to study the Christian life-not life in general, not religious life, no, not even life in a Christian land or during the Christian era. It is therefore most appropriate that our first lesson in this series should tell us who the Christian is and how he lives.

I. God's Children-Who They Are (vv. 1-6).

1. They are "Born ones" (v. 1). The Revised Version correctly translates "sons" as "children." We are sons in our position, but we are children by the new birth. A man may attain the legal relationship of a son by adoption, but he can be a child only by birth.

2. They are separated ones (v. 1). The world, that is, unregenerate man, does not belong to this family of God. How hard it is for even church people to understand that fact. They do not appreciate and cannot understand God's children, because they themselves do not know God.

3. They are glorified ones (v. 2). "We shall be like him for we shall see him as he is." What a glorious hope, realized even now by faith in the hearts and lives of God's children. The present difference between God's children and the world is to become even greater, for in that day when Christ "shall appear" (for he is coming again!) God's children shall be like him. Spiritually and morally-yes, and even their bodies shall be transformed. 4. They are purified ones (vv. 3-6). The standard whereby the Christian measures his life is the purity of

President on Constitution

A LL orators on the one hundred fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Constitution were loud in praise of that great document. Presdent Roosevelt, speaking from the foot of the Washington monument, was emphatic in his expression of admiration for and loyalty to the basic law which his opponents have accused him of trying to undermine. But he called it a "layman's constitution" and a "lawyer's contract." He reiterated his assertions that the Constitution was intended by its makers to be a statement of objectives and not a rigid document, and declared democratic government in this country can do all things which "commonsense people, seeing the picture as a whole, have the right to expect."

"I believe that these things can be done under the Constitution without the surrender of a single one of the civil and religious liberties it was intended to safeguard," Mr. Roosevelt continued, "and I am determined that under the Constitution those things shall be done."

Sharply condemning dictatorships abroad, Mr. Roosevelt said there is a crisis in American affairs that threatens our democracy and that if that democracy is to survive, it ust meet the demands of the peoty and improved standards of living. Plutocratic and proletarian dic-tatorships, said he, are equally dan-

For a second or two, Grace was paralyzed with fright. She was closer-much closer-to that shark than to the canoe. And that ominous fin was steadily diminishing the distance between them.

Then, suddenly, Grace collected her wits again. She lit out for that cance with a speed that would have shamed an Olympic champion. No time to look behind-and no reason to. Either she won that race or she didn't. Her life was at stake, but strangely enough it was her career she was thinking of most. What if that shark bit off a leg or two? There just wasn't any such thing as a legless dancer.

One Yard Between Her and Death.

When she reached that canoe, the shark was just ONE YARD behind her. One man hauled her hastily into the boat while the other beat the shark off with a paddle. The passengers and crew were hanging anxiously over the side of the steamer when at last the canoe brought her back, and then there was a first-class brawl. The officers in the canoe bawled out the captain of the ship for allowing Grace to go swimming in the harbor, and then the captain turned around and bawled Grace The only ones who didn't have anything to say were the boys who out. hadn't thought much of a girl's swimming ability, and especially the one who bet her ten bucks she wouldn't have the nerve to try it.

All sin is a disregard of God's law (v. 4). His children do not thus defy Him. They have taken as their Saviour the one "who was manifested to take away sins.' There was no sin in him, and the one who abides in him has victory and does not live in sin. He may fall into some act of sin, but in utter misery and repentance he turns from it to his Deliverer.

II. God's Children-How They Live (vv. 18-24).

Love is the supreme test of Christian profession. "We know we have passed out of death into life, because we love the brethren." says John in v. 14 (R. V.). How far should love go? "We ought to lay down our lives for the brethren' (v. 16)

Such a sacrifice is not often demanded of us, but the writer goes on to say that we may show that spirit in daily service to those in need.

1. In loving and sacrificial serv-ice (v. 18). Words may comfort and strengthen, especially when they are words of love. Love does not stop with words, however, but acts, reflecting the spirit of God, who not only is good, but does good.

2. In the assurance of faith (vv. 19-21). Assurance is the blessed privilege of the child of God. Well may we feel condemned when we measure our lives by his divine tests. But after all, even "if our heart condemn us, God is greater than our heart." Salvation does not depend on either our works or our feelings. It is of God. Does this condone sin? God forbid. We are rather so to walk that "our heart condemn us not."

3. In unquestioning obedience (vv. 22-24). The hallmark of character in a child is obedience. Scripture does not countenance the unfortu nate standards of men on this point. The children of God "keep his com-mandments" which are beautifully summed up in v. 23 as believing in Christ and loving one another.

Charles I remedied matters a lit tle by bringing over a French chef who surprised the king with the delicacy. With the coming of the Civil war, the Frenchman fled back to his na-tive land, taking the secret with him. From that time until the sev-

CHAPTER XVII-Continued

Ever since that nightmare evening up Resurrection when the Chiwaughimis had come so near murdering Craig, she had known that a sinister shadow hung over him. Many nights, before going to bed, she had gone up the little hollow and seen the dim candleglow through his blanketed window and had been reassured. Now, in her anxiety, she slipped back through the dark trees and up toward his cabin, hardly knowing why she was going there or what she intended

As she passed the granite boulder, she was astonished to see the cabin door slightly ajar and a light inside. Her heart leaped with the thought that Craig was back. She flew to the door, looked in

The person was not Craig but Dennis Northup. Over at Craig's work table he was bending down, a flashlight in his hand, carefully examining the floor and a stick of wood near the stove.

She stepped inside. "Dennis! What're you doing here?" Northup whirled around. "Oh!

Why hello, Patricia. Why I, uh"-he snapped off the flash and sauntered over toward her-"I was ust bringing back a coupla books that Craig lent me."

"What were you looking for, there on the floor?" Patricia demanded. Northup backed up to the table, to head her off as she tried to go around him and see for herself.

"Nothing's there, Patricia. I, uh, knocked something off of Craig's table and I was looking to find it. Please, girl-you're excited, imagining things. I don't blame you; this has been a hard day for us all. Let me take you back to your-"

Patricia seized the flash from his hand, snapped it on; and before Northup could stop her she had flipped the spot of light upon the foor where he had been looking. For a horrified moment she stared On the stick of wood down and on the floor near the table leg there were two big splotches of dark red

"All right," Northup said sharply, taking the only sensible course, "now that you've seen a part of it, and the worst part, let's see it all! For heaven's sake don't jump to any crazy conclusion. Give me the and that strong wind this morning flash. Here's a coupla small stains on the table. There's one on the side of the wood-box. And one on the end of that ski staff. "Oh-oo!" Patricia breathed. Northup added, "Unless I miss my guess, Lovett intends to have ot only this field but you too." "To have me?" Patricia echoed. "Look. Suppose I hadn't told you Suppose you'd waited here this. day after day for Craig, not knowing where he was, why he'd dis-appeared, whether he was alive or dead. What would you be doing after a few days of that?"

"I-I'd be driven crazy," Patricia blurted out.

"Well, at any rate you'd be willing to do just about anything to save Craig's life. Lovett knows it. He's going to bargain with you. He's going to force you back to Chicago. don't know the exact terms he'll offer, but I do know he intends to pry you loose from Craig. That's the other barrel of his double-barrel shotgun. Now d'you see what he stands to gain by this kidnaping?" Patricia slowly nodded. Warren's whole deed and purpose were clear to her, after Northup's explanation. Facing defeat, such as she and Craig had faced all winter, Warren had seized a criminal weapon to save himself.

"What're you doing to-to find Craig, Dennis?" she asked, trying hard to keep her voice steady. 'He's in danger-his very life-because of Lupe. We've got to find him, free him."

"I've put out a coupla lines," Northup said. "Over across the river I've got two Tinneh scouts posted, watching Lovett's place. If any messenger comes or goes between him and the Chiwaughimis, I'll know about it, and I can trail the fellow. If one of Lovett's Bellancas leaves the Bay, I'll have Sneddon get into the air, and we'll see where that ship goes.' Those are two bets.

"You don't seem-seem hopeful about them.

"I'm not," Northup admitted candidly. "And I'm not banking very much on Poleon and Sam, either. Lupe's outfit had a four-hour start; blew the trail shut before Sam and Poleon could have followed very far. They probably got an idea of Lupe's general direction, and they're following across country in hopes of running into him. They've got only He kept up a rapid fire of talk, to an outside chance of doing that." "Then what are you counting on He'll finally tell you that he'll free Craig if you do so and so. "I do not know!" Warren insisted, warily refusing to commit himself. They often go away on little trips without consulting me. I presume that they've gone fishing, some-where or other." He finished his tea, set the cup down. "No, no more, thank you. I have to go now."

"Warren, don't! Listen to me!" Patricia pleaded. His stoniness made her frantic. "You've got to help me, Warren! It's a question of saving Craig's life. Those Chiwaughimis are holding him prisoner ahead. His marriage to her, howmight be, would give him a ever it advantage in his battle heavy against Russell Parkes. After that when he had her in Chicago, had the firm in his grasp again, had control of the Wellington interests and her family's fortune-he could just about dictate his terms to her. Patricia caught his arm. She was panicky with defeat. "Warren, please-I haven't refused-I will take it! I promise, here, now-if you'll only send word to Lupe. Won't you do that? Promise me you'll send word to Lupe." "I don't promise anything." He shook Patricia's hand from his arm and started for the door. "If and when you've followed my advice, I might help you, but not before. If you haven't changed your mind by tomorrow morning about going back to Chicago with me, if you're still willing to be married as I suggested, you might come over to my cabin and let me know.'

Moments afterward, Dennis Northup stepped from behind a portiere in the corner where Patricia hung her clothes.

"Damn all," he remarked glum-"that man is a shrewd devil! He actually delivered his ultimatum to you without incriminating himself by one single word."

Patricia did not answer. She had slumped down on the cot and was sobbing at her abject failure to save Craig.

"Don't give up, partner," Northup attempted encouragement. "We'll try Lovett again. We'll get him the next time."

CHAPTER XVIII

A while later Patricia roused herself and wandered out into the cool night air. Her cheeks burned with fever; she felt sick and a little giddy. In the cabin she had cried her heart out over the wreckage of all her plans, all her happy castles; and a numb hopelessness had settled upon her.

Wandering aimlessly in the darkness, she found a pine tree, leaned weakly against it and plucked at its rough bark with her fingers, oblivious to everything except the numbing anguish in her heart.

In a dazed way she realized that she and Craig had lost their long bitter fight, the men had lost this mining field, and Craig's splendid ambition for the years ahead was now only a dead dream. Out of the wreckage there was but one thing which might possibly be salvaged, and that was Craig's very life.

I've been over this cabin three times

He made her sit down in Craig's chair, and drew up another for himself. Patricia was white and shaky. but valiantly she held herself together and forced herself not to look at those sinister stains.

"Last night," Northup said, speaking straight from the shoulder. while Sam was down at the Den and Poleon was with you, those Chiwaughimis had their chance at Craig. They got into this cabin by jimmying that north window over there. Craig kept the door locked. They were inside when he came in. They must have got in while Craig was across the river signing those papers.

"In spite of these splotches, I'm convinced they didn't kill Craig. Lovett hasn't the nerve to go that far. Another reason, Craig saved "Teeste Chiwaughimi's life. With Lupe that wouldn't count for much, but those other four would probably balk at outright murder.

"I'll tell you what did happen here last night. They overpowered 'Craig, after a fight-that'd explain those blood stains; for all we know, it may be Chiwaughimi blood-I say, they overpowered him and trisked him away from the Bay. Warren looked at her through the smoke of his cigarette. "You say you'll 'do anything.' Just how much of that do you really mean?"

Patricia went taut, quivering. She had broken down Warren's indifference! She had drawn him one step toward the trap.

"I mean all of it! If I leave, Lupe won't have any cause to kill Craig. I'll start for Smith tomorrow morning; I'll get back home as fast as a plane can take me-If you'll only send word to Lupe.'

Warren toyed with a spoon, cautiously choosing every word of his reply.

"You may be right, dear, in thinking that the Chiwaughimis abducted Tarlton and are holding him a prisoner somewhere. I don't know. You are surely right in thinking that Lupe hates him because of you. Therefore I should say that the thing for you to do, if you really want to save Tarlton's life, is to convince Lupe absolutely that you've given Tarlton up."

'How can I convince him? Tell

"Shall I advise you, dear?"

"Yes, yes!" Patricia begged. She knew that under cover of that word "advise," Warren was going to deliver his terms.

"I believe," he said, with a wariness that was maddening to her. "that Lupe would not be convinced by any mere promises, especially now that Rosalie is dead and Tarlton is free to marry you. I believe he would demand some absolute guarantee of your sincerity. Your willingness to return to Chicago is all right, as far as it goes, but in this situation it hardly goes far enough. In my opinion"-he dropped his cigarette into his tea dregs-"there is only one earthly way for you to convince Lupe. It's drastic, but then

"What is it? I'll do it!"

Warren said slowly: "Your friend Northup is a magistrate. He can issue a marriage license and perform the ceremony. If you and I should be married, here at the Bay. at once, and then you should go back to Chicago announcedly as Patricia Lovett, I rather believe that Lupe would be entirely satisfied. Nothing short of that would do." Patricia drew back, shocked and incredulous. She had never imagined that Warren would drive so merciless a bargain. Or so preposterous a bargain. Didn't he realize that she would never live with him? That she would divorce him the instant she could? But then she looked deeper into his ultimatum and saw that instead of being preposterous his bargain was a shrewd far-seeing play, based on the blunt realities of the months save even that. She was no match for Warren. Corporal Northup, for all his experience with crime, was entirely outclassed. Except for her surrender to Warren's ultimatum, she had no power left of any sort.

Even if she did give in to that unthinkable bargain, Warren would likely doublecross her. She put no faith in any promise from him. He hated Craig with a primitive jealous hatred.

Through her numbed thoughts ran Warren's sentence of two weeks ago, "The guilt will lie with you!" By a mere word then she could have saved all this disaster. And she had refused. The guilt did lie with her. She should have taken Warren's offer and gone back to Chicago. If Craig should be murdered, because of her refusal It was a horrible thought.

Over at the community house, 30 yards away, the windows and doors had been flung open. For some reason the usual droning hum of con-versation was stilled. Inside, a person was talking. His voice was raised a little, as though he was making some sort of speech to the men.

Occasionally, as he paused, Patricia heard a low rumble from the listeners, a muffled outburst of surprise, or anger, or both; but the noise always died down quickly as the man took up his speech again. The voice sounded to her like Warren's. She stopped plucking at the bark and listened. The voice was Warren's.

Unable to make out what he was saying, she left the pine and stumbled nearer the community house. A few distinguishable words came drifting out to her then: "Tarltonradium lake-disappearance-

In spite of her faintness she knew that Warren was putting across some bold stroke with those prospectors. He must have gone straight | for cake baking. from her cabin to the Den. This must be the "something important" which he had mentioned, with elation in his tones.

The tense quiet of the prospectors sounded ominous to her, but even more ominous were those rumbling outbursts whenever Warren paused. She had heard that same ugly ground-swell once before-on the March night when Phil Kessler betrayed the men and skipped their wrath.

In alarm she started around toward the main door, to find out what Warren's move was and to fight it. (TO BE CONTINUED)

All sorts of plaids are on the autumn fabric list from high-tone dressy plaids of silk velvet and handsome wool weaves down to the most utilitarian, practical, washable types—the kind that go bicycling along dusty roads and then come out "fresh as a daisy" after each tubbing.

Bicycling is a fad so important nowadays designers recognize they must create fashions tuned to the sport. The new sturdy washable plaids are proving most likable for outfits of this sort. The girl on the "bike" as shown in the group illustrated is fashionably and sensibly frocked in a dependable completely shrunk washable plaid that gives THE McLEAN NEWS, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1937

FASHION STRESSES FABRIC ELEGANCE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Fabrics play a most important part this year, and by their richness explain the apparent simplicity of the styles which are the greatest challenge to the dressmaker. Velvets, lames, brocades, laces, tulles are all in the picture.

Lace becomes a happy medium for day dresses, almost severe in their simplicity. These may be re-lieved by rich belts, patent trimmings, etc. Lighter laces in silk or rayon are combined with a colored fabric lining for day dresses or two tones used in combination as Worth has done. Lelong takes a heavy white wool lace for a hip-length top of a dress which ends in a simple black velvet skirt, with four rows of the velvet used at the side front from the high waistline to the hip. Patou offers rosepoint collars, cuff or bodice trim with severe dresses-but real rose point.
