Hundreds Attend Mrs. P. Everett's Birthday Party

An estimated crowd of over 200 people attended a birthday party and covered dish supper honoring the birthday of Mrs. Perry Everett, Tuesday evening.

The party was a complete surprise to Mrs. Everett, as her friends had kept the object of the affair a secret. It was planned to have the supper at the city park, but the shower changed the plans, and it was held at the ward school gymnasium, as no other building would hold the big crowd.

A long table loaded with good things to eat was placed in the center of the gym. In the center of the table was placed a 25-pound three-tiered, nine-layer cake graced with the proper number of candles. Fried chicken, assorted sandwiches, salads, pies, cakes, iced tea, ice cream, etc., etc., was stacked on the table, to which the good humored crowd did full justice.

A number of beautiful presents for Mrs. Everett were displayed at another table.

Games were played preceding the supper, beginning about 7 o'clock, and the happy crowd broke up around 9:30, wishing Mrs. Everett many happy returns of the day.

STATEMENT FROM

Art Hurst

The law enforcement officer, today, finds his duties exceedingly complex. He is called upon to protect life and property, to detect crime and apprehend criminals, to protect the innocent, preserve the peace, and perform a multitude of other tasks relating to public welfare. It is likewise becoming a recognized fact that an important function of a law enforcement agency is crime prevention.

The problems of every community are necessarily different from those of others, but they all have a common problem, that of bringing closer together all officials and citizens in a united front to suppress crime.

The people are beginning to realize more than ever that honesty, integrity, ability, education, courage, and fairness are requisites of the successful peace officer, that these attributes are needed if he is to enforce the law with a wholesome conception of the citizens' rights.

After careful consideration, which every voter should give this as well as all other public offices, if you think I am qualified and worthy, no man will appreciate your support more than I, and it will be my constant aim to justify your confidence in me.

Respectfully,

S. A. "Art" Hurst

Hughes Flies the Atlantic

HOWARD HUGHES, wealthy young sportsman and aviator, with four companions made successfully the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris since Lindbergh's epochal feat in 1927.

The big plane, named "New York World's Fair 1939," appeared over Le Bourget field long before it was expected but Ambassador Bullitt and a big crowd were waiting to greet the daring aviators.

After resting and refueling their plane, the fliers took off on the second leg of their projected flight around the world, reaching Moscow in less than eight hours.

Hughes' big plane, specially rebuilt and equipped with a multitude of gadgets, carried a gross weight of 25,000 pounds.

Huge Wheat Crop

IN ITS first general crop estimate of the year the department of agriculture predicted the second largest wheat crop in American history. The forecast was for 967,412,000 bushels.

The department predicted a corn crop of 2,482,102,000 bushels, an oats production of 1,093,829,000 bushels, a barley crop of 239,375,000 bushels, and a rye crop of 51,327,000 bushels.

Japan Warns of Bombings

REPRESENTATIVES of the United States and other foreign powers at Shanghai were handed notes by the Japanese urging them to evacuate their citizens from half a dozen Yangtze valley cities listed as probable targets for further widespread bombings.

Two previous notes urged that all foreign vessels and foreigners along the Yangtze river in the path of the Japanese advance on Hankow be removed.

The United States gunboat Monocacy and the British gunboat Cockchafer were reported to have moved three miles up the Yangtze from Kiuikiang as Japanese warships shelled Chinese defenses of the city.

BOLIVIA and Paraguay have finally agreed to let their dispute over the Chaco territory be settled by arbitration.

Spruille Braden, young American business man, is given most of the credit for this settlement of the long and bloody quarrel, and it is said in Washington that he will be rewarded by appointment as minister to Colombia.

'Purge' Is Hard Hit

TWO long distance messages came from Manila, from Paul V. McNutt, governor general of the Philippines and reputed boss of the Democrats of Indiana.

Thereupon the New Dealers of the Hoosier state decided they could not win in November unless they renominated Frederick Van Nuys for the senate. That gentleman had been marked for elimination by Tommy Corcoran and his fellow managers of the proposed "purge" of those who had opposed any major New Deal policies and Governor Townsend had publicly announced Van Nuys could not be renominated.

Corcoran's purge appears to have bogged down elsewhere, too. Senator George of Georgia and Senator E. D. Smith of South Carolina seem likely to win renomination. In New York city Tammany decided to support Congressman John J. O'Connor, who led the fight against the reorganization bill, and several other New York members of the lower house whom Corcoran had listed for defeat.

Problem of the South

RE-ESTABLISHING a balanced economic system in the southern states is considered by President Roosevelt the No. 1 problem of the nation and he says it must and can be done. He appealed to 25 southern leaders, assembled in Washington at his request, to draft plans for the economic restoration of their section of the country.

Though he did not comment on the effect that the new wages and hours law may have on southern industry, he did say that one of the great problems in the South is that of labor and employment. He spoke also of problems "growing out of the new industrial era and, again, of absentee ownership of the new industries."

"It is my conviction," the President wrote to Mellett, "that the South presents right now the nation's number one economic problem—the nation's problem, not merely the South's. For we have an economic imbalance in the nation as a whole, due to this very condition of the South."

The purpose of your conference is to produce a restatement of the economic conditions of the South and their relation to the rest of the country that we may do something about it."

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"He Wanted to Live" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY: Today, I've got a swell yarn for you. It's the story of one of the greatest disasters in the history of the Virgin Islands—yes, and it's a lot more than that, too.

It starts in St. Thomas on the Virgin islands in the year 1907, 10 years before the United States acquired that territory from Denmark. Harry's father was a judge under the Danish government. He lived in St. John, but Harry and his brother Ed had gone with the local cricket team to play a match with the team of the St. Thomas high school and were returning on the sloop Sea Gull.

Their Sloop Capsized in the Gale.

In three-quarters of an hour that breeze had become a gale. A few moments later a "spinner" struck the sloop broadside and knocked it completely over.

In less time than it takes to tell it the sloop capsized and sank. Harry was sitting at the stern, and he dived into the water as she went over. He called to his brother who had gone below a few minutes before the spinner struck but he got no answer.

Three Began the Long Swim.

Four miles to shore in a raging gale. Yes, it would be a miracle if thirteen-year-old Harry Ziellian made it. But Harry wanted to live. He turned toward land and began to swim.

He had barely started when he saw his brother Ed and his pal, Jimmy, passing him. He called to them and told them not to swim so fast—to save their energy if they ever expected to get ashore alive.

"For a while," he says, "we could hear yells and cries from people who were still afloat, but after an hour all was still except for the break of the waves as the wind continued to lash the sea to fury. We swam for another hour, then Jimmy began to tire. Soon he was in a bad way.

Harry dived as the sloop went over.

I swam to the windward side of him, the better to protect him from the waves and put my right hand under his left armpit. When I got tired, Ed would relieve me. This went on for quite a while but eventually Jimmy became so tired he couldn't raise his hand. He sank for the first time and grabbed my shirt as he came back to the surface.

Ed kept Harry's head above water, but poor Jimmy went down. He clung to Harry a few seconds and then sank. There was nothing Harry and Ed could do about it. They were lucky to get out alive themselves.

Both boys were tired now—dog tired. BUT THEY WANTED TO LIVE. They kept on swimming. "We had been swimming for at least three hours," Harry says, "and the shore seemed no nearer than before. Suddenly we heard a voice calling and for a time we did not answer for fear it might be a drowning man who would pull us down with him as Jimmy had almost done. But at length we swam in that direction and found Louis, Jimmy's brother, captain of the Sea Gull."

How the Two Lads Saved Louis.

By this time all three of them were all-in—so far gone that they agreed to swim apart so that if one went down he wouldn't try to drag the others with him. They swam for another hour. Then, suddenly they heard Louis calling. "I'm going down," he shouted. "I've got a cramp in my leg!"

Ed and Harry swam to him. One on each side, they held him up until the cramp had passed. Louis kept his head. If he had lost it and fought them, all three would have gone down together. After that they swam on again. They were swimming in a daze, almost dead with fatigue, BUT THEY WANTED TO LIVE!

More hours passed. They kept on swimming. At last they felt bottom under their feet and half-stumbled, half-crawled up on a sandy beach. It was then between two and three o'clock in the morning and they had been swimming for seven or eight hours. Exhausted, they dropped on the beach with the waves lapping their feet, and fell into a dead sleep.

It was morning and the sun was shining brightly when Louis awakened the other two. They walked up the beach in search of other survivors, but there were none. Then they walked to the cabin of a native woman who fed them and got a boat to take them home.

There's a sequel to that story. A month later the H. M. S. Ingolf of the Danish navy steamed into the harbor, and shortly after that the officers of the ship were drawn up before Harry's home while Governor C. M. T. Cold presented Harry and Ed with life saving medals awarded them by the king of Denmark for their rescue of Louis. They wanted to live, those two kids—but they weren't too busy at it to help the other fellow.

Lesson for July 24

GIDEON: FOLLOWING GOD'S PLAN

LESSON TEXT—Judges 7:4-7, 15-23. GOLDEN TEXT—Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage. Joshua 1:9.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Gideon Was. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Lord's Three Hundred. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Wise General.

Who is he? What are his connections? How large an organization does he represent? These are the measures of the greatness of a man which are common in the world. Even in religious circles there is a seeking for the men with "big names" when something is to be done.

Gideon came from an obscure family in a small tribe in Israel—and was astonished when God called him (Judges 6:15). He asked God for several signs to assure him that he was the chosen instrument of the Lord (read Judges 6), but once he was certain he went forward, nothing doubting.

I. An Insignificant Army (vv. 4-7). At first thought it seems almost foolish to comment on this story of repeated reductions in the size of Gideon's army in these hectic days when the nations of the earth are living for but one objective—to create a fighting machine bigger and more fully manned than that of any other nation.

But on second thought it is just the time for such comment, because what the nations are doing is a perfect example of the hopeless philosophy of men, while what Gideon did is a presentation of God's way. These notes are being prepared in a city distant from the writer's home, where he is attending a conference of national leaders in a field of great and international importance. A long session just concluded was addressed by a number of brilliant and capable men and women—and the conclusion they reached was that America was a badly befuddled nation, lost without a sense of direction in a wilderness of incoherent and inherently contradictory theories and about to lose its dearly bought freedom, unless someone points the way out. The only solutions offered were bigger and better human programs, and when a suggestion was made that our need might be spiritual the discussion was promptly directed in another direction.

We need the lesson today that it is by the seemingly insignificant Gideon's band that victory is to be obtained. Take courage, ye 300, rid yourselves of the 22,000 fearful ones, let God sift out the 9,700 who are not alert to the danger of the enemy, and then, under some Gideon who is obedient to the command of God, go forward to victory. You are the hope, and the only hope of our nation. Do not fail God in this crucial hour.

II. Obedience to God's Command (vv. 15-23).

After the Lord had encouraged the heart of Gideon by the account of the dream of the Midianite (vv. 8-14), he and his band are sent forward with strange weapons and even stranger instructions. It is not ours to question "Why?" when God tells us to move forward. When will we learn that He knows more than we do, and that obedience is all we need to render unto Him? "Behold, to obey is better than to sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22).

III. The Sword of the Lord and of Gideon (vv. 18, 20).

While some folk err in counting the Lord out and making everything depend on man, there are a few who make the opposite error and become fatalistic in spirit and relatively useless to both God and man—because they hold an improper view of the manner in which the Lord works through human agencies.

A man who objected to soul-winning efforts, and especially personal work, said that he believed "God could save a man if he were alone on the top of the Alps." Of course He could, but God does not ordinarily work that way. It is the "sword of the Lord"—yes, but do not forget that it is "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon." God has graciously condescended to do His work on earth through human agencies. Let us be ready and subservient instruments for His use, but let us at the same time be alert and active in His service. The two are not at all inconsistent, in fact the one whom God chooses to use is usually the one who is already busy about His work.

THE 49TH STATE

Hawaii, land of tropic skies, pineapples, hula girls, and sunny beaches! Hawaii, the land that has everything!

Everything? Well, perhaps there is just one more thing—the rights of statehood! Shall Hawaii become the 49th state? That question, asked with increasing seriousness in recent months, is currently agitating the land of grass skirt and foaming wave. Keystone of America's Pacific defense, sugar-bowl to millions of American families, oasis for America's rich, Hawaii is daily playing a more and more important role in American life, a role which seems to justify the right of statehood.

Why is Hawaii not a state? The prime reason can be found in the 49% of her population owing allegiance to their mother country, Japan. Picture the key to Pacific defense dominated by a block of citizens owing allegiance to a foreign country, but possessing the right of American citizenship! Picture the military and naval might of Hawaii surrounded by a civil government dominated by Japanese voters!

As long as the clouds of a possible Pacific war hang low over Diamond Head, the Hawaiian Islands, despite their pineapples, sugar, surf-boards, flowers, volcanoes, and Waikiki sands, are destined to remain, at least in the eyes of the federal government, just pawns in a naval chess game. As long as that condition remains,

"No," snapped his wife. "You haven't said anything, but you've been listening in a sassy way, and I'm not going to stand for it!"

There was a desk by the south window, a desk that any antique dealer who knew his business would give much for. It looked to James' discerning eyes like something brought over from England ages ago. A beautiful antique. And sure enough, here was the photograph! No wonder his small namesake hadn't recognized him. This picture was taken when Nora went to college. Here was her husband, too—an enlargement made from a snapshot. Don was just starting for a climb, his rucksack slung over one shoulder.

Recalling the wheel-chair, James Lambert winced, and laying the picture down as if it hurt him, lifted another. The children, of course. His grandchildren! A thrill of pride stirred in the old man's heart. Here was his namesake; an older boy; and baby Iris. A flower indeed! She seemed to resemble faintly that other Iris whom James had loved so dearly that he could forgive the unforgivable, and still think of her with tenderness after all these years. He was glad that Nora had not forgotten her mother. When Ned's first daughter had arrived and he ventured to suggest the name of Iris, Corinne had been appalled. What! call her baby after a woman who had deserted one child and had another by her lover! James smiled tolerantly at this old memory. Best not go back to it. After all, Corinne was a good woman, a good housekeeper, and always invited him to Sunday dinner! If she were inclined to be uncharitable to the erring, well, time was already fixing that—and time and a boy she had spoiled with too much money and too little work.

He wondered, mildly amused at the idea, what Corinne would think of this big room. She would undoubtedly spot the packing boxes and the shabby chair. No such detail ever escaped her. And the famous photographs! Her father-in-law could hear her say: "Photographs! Is it possible that Nora's not aware that photographs of that sort are taboo, save in a bedroom? Why, Father Lambert, it simply isn't done!"

The old man laughed softly at this vivid picture. Often enough he had felt annoyed at Corinne; but now she didn't seem to matter, not in the least. He believed there was something soothing about this room. It was so friendly, as if it bid you to be comfortable. One felt instinctively that those who lived here loved one another and were happy together. The shabby upholstery of the old chair—the worn hangings at the windows, were of no consequence. A healing sense of peace pervaded everything. This was a home. Ah! That was the explanation, James reflected. Stable or palace, this was a real home.

Suddenly his head lifted. His heart quickened. A door had opened—closed again softly. Light footsteps sounded—were coming nearer. He wanted to turn—must turn to face the door, but found he could not. And then a dear remembered voice broke in upon him:

"You wished to see me? I am Mrs. Mason. Jimsy says you are a friend of—Why, Father!"

It was then James turned—stretched out his arms.

He was holding her close, his little Nora. It took him back to that long-gone, tragic day when he had first held her, comforted her, and all unknowing comforted himself. A sense of that same comfort flowed through him now, healing the wound of those ten years without her. And though she wept, as she had wept that other time, all that her father found to say was: "Nora . . . Nora . . ."

"You've been a long time coming, Daddy," she told him when at last she could find words; and looking down into her upturned face, James saw, a quick pang of regret stabbing his heart, all that those years had done to her. A sense of that same comfort flowed through him now, healing the wound of those ten years without her. And though she wept, as she had wept that other time, all that her father found to say was: "Nora . . . Nora . . ."

"You've been a long time coming," she said again; and James responded:

"I've been a stubborn old idiot, my darling. When you stopped writing I told myself that you'd ceased to care—grown tired of a father who had failed you. And yet I worried, Nora—watched for your letters—"

She drew him to the old pew by the fire. Her hands, those hard, brown hands James scarcely recognized, trembled a little.

"How could I write?" she asked as they sat down together. "We needed help too badly—don't you see? You told me, Father—"

He stopped her with an impatient gesture that she remembered.

"Oh, you needn't repeat it! Were you really foolish enough to think I meant that threat? And how was I to know you needed help, dear, when you did not tell me? I didn't dream how things had gone with you, not for a minute."

"But the papers, Father!" Nora's eyes widened with surprise. "The story was there for all the world to read. I thought you'd come when you knew how Don was injured. I thought you'd forgive us. I lay in bed after our little girl was born—so frightfully worried about Don—too weak to go to him, and every time a bell would ring I'd think: 'Perhaps that's Father! He wouldn't leave me to face all this alone. He'll come. He'll see that Don has everything he needs. He will take care of us.' And—and you didn't come, Father. Not that it matters now you're here at last, but—"

"Listen," James interrupted, his voice shaking. "I was sick, dear child, down with pneumonia at the time of that catastrophe. I never read those papers, not one of them. It was no longer front-page stuff when I recovered. To be sure, Ned saw something that made him suspicious; but the name was misspelled and he didn't want to worry me about it then."

"You must forgive him, Nora. The boy was going through troubles of wanted then was to die, Father, to end the struggle; but remembering what I had to face alone, he kept on fighting."

"It was very terrible. I couldn't even run in to cheer him at odd times, for he was in a ward. I couldn't buy him a single flower. For the money was going—melting away so fast it frightened me; yet how could I leave the babies to earn more even if I had known some way to do it? Constance Venable, who would have shared her last crust with us, was far away. I had no one to turn to. I sold some of the trinkets you'd given me; but could not get half their real value and what they brought only staved off the inevitable for a little while."

"And then one night when I was counting the endless hours, it came to me like an inspiration that my diamond was worth money—real money. It saw us through, Dad—kept us going—brought us back home when Don was able to be moved. Such a joy to be where he can watch the sea and feel the wind on his face! Almost from the first minute he started gaining. He's writing again now—a book—but the work goes slowly. You see, there is still much pain; and his nerves aren't steady. But he tries so hard to get the better of them, Dad. He's so courageous . . ."

Her voice died down as if tears threatened again; and James said, his own voice husky with emotion: "See here, Nora. I realize that you can forgive me a great deal because you understand. You know that though I was too stubborn to admit it, I have always loved you—missed you unspcakably. But how will your husband regard me now? In his eyes I have betrayed a trust—let you bear burdens too heavy for your shoulders. Can he forgive me, too, or—"

"In just a moment," broke in

Nora softly, one hand thrown out in an expressive gesture, "I—I think we'll know."

James raised his eyes. The curtains at the door had parted, and standing before them, his hair blown back in the familiar way, stood Don, his boys beside him, his baby daughter clinging to one hand.

Even that first quick glance told much to Nora's father. He saw that the once straight shoulders sagged a little, as if the effort to stand erect was now too great. He saw that the wind-blown hair was white above the temples—the eyes seemed deeper set—the cheekbones higher. But he saw also that the lines on Don's thin, tanned face were born of suffering, not self-pity; and that his head still lifted buoyantly as of old.

Unconquered! The word, so singularly fitting, sprang into James Lambert's mind as he arose. Unconquered! That was Don Mason. Never again could office walls imprison him. He had got beyond them . . .

There was a silence; then Don said gently: "Well, sir?"

Only two words, but to the old man they were a challenge, and he met it generously. Though his eyes smiled, his voice was wholly serious.

"I lay down my sword. The enemy surrenders to the better man."

And then Don laughed, a laugh that seemed to bring the clean, gay spirit of adventure into the room. Impulsively he started forward, but stopped, remembering; while James saw with quick compassion that one foot dragged.

"The enemy?" Don echoed. "I think not, sir." He glanced down, meeting the puzzled young faces that were lifted to him. "Children," he said, "attention! Salute your grandfathers. The old King has come home!"

(THE END.)

"Remembering what I had to face alone, he kept on fighting."

Kissing Ladies' Hands Still One of the Customs of Many European Countries

Kissing ladies on the hand is still one of the customs of many European countries. But ladies' hands to be kissed abroad do not all follow the same rule. In some places it is customary to do that to the married and not to the unmarried or vice versa; it is hard to remember which, observes a writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

In Austria and Rumania you do it to all, old and young. In Austria it is most important to kiss the hand at the end of a dance. Indeed in that hand-kissing land you hand-kiss when you are introduced to a lady and also when you leave and on many other occasions. On the street, however, in Bukharest, the salute is a raising of the hat to all men and women, not a mere English "tipping of the topper," but a wide flourish of the hat.

Hand-kissing, it has been said, deters some of our rough and ready he-men from visiting Europe, as its fine graciousness does not harmonize with our pioneer individualism and wives might misunderstand. But when a European gentleman confers this gracious act on an American woman she usually is delighted.

Customs strange, beautiful and old certainly are one of the strongest attractions of Europe. To meet people whose education and environment has been so different from our own is part of the joy of living.

Americans find titles in Europe equally amusing. In several countries, notably Germany and Scandinavian lands, plain "Mr." seems to have disappeared. Instead the natives attach a high-sounding word to one's name suggestive of what he does for a livelihood. In Austria the waiter in cafe after cafe may address you as "Herr Doktor" or as "Herr Baron."

First Color of French Flag

While it is not usual to associate red with the French monarchy, it was really the first color of the king's flag, called the oriflamme. It is only because red was also adopted by the English king that the French gave it up for blue. It was under the blue flag that Huguenots came to America first as loyal subjects of the king of France. However, the red flag was preserved on the galleys of the Mediterranean fleet where terrible suffering was endured by the unhappy men who could not understand the injustice of the king.

Frosting a Cake for Judges to Sample

A professional cake baker, frosting one of the hundreds of cakes which were made up in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory, maintained by C. Houston Goudiss in New York City, in the course of selecting the winners in his recent Cake Recipe Contest.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

NATURALLY, I am accustomed to seeing exhibits of delicious and interesting foods in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory that I maintain in New York City. But in all the years of its existence, it has never been a busier nor a more inviting place than during the last few weeks when the home economists on my staff have been busily testing and judging the many fine cake recipes submitted by readers of this paper in our recent Cake Recipe Contest.

Imagine, if you can, a big cheerful and colorful kitchen filled with long tables upon which row after row of handsome cakes were arranged—proudly testifying to the skill of the homemakers who cherish the recipes from which they were made.

Every Type of Cake Entered.

A whole tableful of white cakes, with and without icing. Chocolate and cocoa cakes of every possible type. All manner of cakes, fragrant and delicious—spice, ice cream, honey, caramel, maple syrup, nut, date, pineapple, orange, lemon, butterscotch, jam, banana, raisin, oatmeal, coconut and marble cakes. Cakes baked in long sheets, square cakes, round cakes, layer cakes. Old-fashioned cakes from grandmothers' recipe books. Very modern and up-to-date cakes. And even one that was said to have been a favorite with General Robert E. Lee. I've never seen anything to compare with the collection, even at the biggest State Fair!

Do you wonder that the home economists on my staff required several weeks to pick the winners? For with such a wealth of exceptional cakes from which to choose, selecting those for top honors, was indeed difficult.

The cake bakers were trained for their work. They followed the recipes precisely. They measured accurately. They checked oven temperatures. The scoring system was highly scientific. And we can say with conviction that no matter how close the race, the winners definitely outpointed even their closest rivals.

My thanks and my compliments to every homemaker who submitted a recipe. I only regret that everyone who submitted a recipe could not win a prize.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

GREAT-GRANDMOTHER made her own designs for quilts and hooked rugs and many of her most interesting patterns were developed by drawing around pieces of china. The antique rug shown here may be copied either in rags or rug yarn. Great-Grandmother used rags, and her best rugs were always made of woolen materials torn in strips about 3/4-inch wide or narrower.

The foundation of the rug is burlap. The design is drawn on the burlap with a very soft pencil or crayon by tracing part way around a medium sized plate as at A and then a saucer as at B. Allowance should be made for a hem and the plain border. The three colors indicated in the diagram are repeated throughout this rug.

Some hook rug makers stretch the burlap foundation tightly over a wooden frame while they work. Others think they do just as well without a frame. Rug hooks of the general type shown here are for sale in department stores. The strip of material, or yarn, is held under the burlap with the left hand and the loops pulled through to the right side with the hook as shown at C.

HELP KIDNEYS
To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste
Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer sagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

The Yard Beautiful

By R. O. Monosmith, Landscape Architect, Oklahoma A. & M.

Few things get by our five-year-old daughter, particularly in the garden. Recently she was left for a few minutes in full charge of the hose, watering a flower bordered shrub bed. Her duties as gardener were temporarily forgotten when she came running with an upheld hand that held a white flower, gleefully exclaiming: "Look, we have a white balloon."

The addition of the Chinese balloon flower (Platycodon grandiflorum) to our herbaceous perennial border this year, has caused much excitement for our daughter and pleasure for us. The flowers do resemble small blue or white inflated balloons before the flower opens. They have five petals and open out rather flat. These plants are very drought-resistant, producing masses of flowers on twelve to eighteen inch stems from June 15 to frost. It is a splendid perennial border plant and looks good when planted among shrubbery. The flowers can be cut and last well. A fine large-flowered variety is Mariesi, producing flowers nearly three inches across.

If you like blue flowers, get several plants of leadwort (Plumbago lar-pentae) as an edging plant for your flower beds. It is a drought-resisting perennial that grows about 10 or 12 inches high and forms a round, ball-like mass of dark green, glossy foliage which is covered in summer and fall with attractive cobalt-blue flowers on wiry stems. Potted plants of ballon flower and plumbago can be secured and you can enjoy these plants this season. The roots can be divided and planted in late fall or early spring.

Just a few timely hints—cultivate frequently or apply a mulch, water thoroughly, not lightly, and remove diseased or dead plants from the garden. Hollyhocks should be removed as rust develops on the old plants. Infected leaves on the iris plants should be removed to protect the new growth. Follow the practice of thorough sanitation in the garden.

PROTECT SHADE TREES FROM FLAT-HEAD BORERS

Death, boring its way into the heart of friendly shade trees, can be prevented to a large extent, according to F. A. Fenton, Oklahoma A. and M. College entomologist, if methods are used to exterminate the flat-headed apple-tree borer.

To control this insect on young or recently transplanted trees, Fenton advises wrapping of the trees with a strong, weather-resistant, pliable paper.

Stressing the importance of wrapping ailing trees now, Fenton explains that the adult flat-heads are really beetles and at this time are hidden deep in galleries in the wood and are about ready to emerge. They will speedily fly to other trees and start laying eggs in the bark for another crop of borers. When the trees are wrapped they cannot do this.

Starting at the crotch, the tree should be wrapped in a spiral motion downward to about three inches below the ground level. Precautions should be taken to cut away all sharp protruding stubs of branches and twigs so that these will not puncture the paper.

In some cases the wrap will last for two years with slight repairs. This is recommended as it gives the tree that much added protection.

For protection of older and larger shade trees, Mr. Fenton recommends pruning the branches in such a way that the trunk is shaded. The beetles prefer brilliant sunlight and will pay scant attention to a well shaded tree trunk.

RELIGIOUS BELIEFS

Probably most of us have professed religious beliefs that to many other enlightened people appear to be ridiculous and absurd. The editor of this newspaper may be subject to as much criticism in this respect as anybody else. But of all the absurd and non-sensical religious rites that we ever heard of, some of those staged by the Pope and the so-called Catholic Church take the cake. This canonization of dead people—making saints of them—is too utterly foolish for sensible people to pay any attention to. And yet we are told that 150,000 people stood hours in Vatican City in Rome on Sunday, while Pope Pius canonized three persons long since dead; waiting for him to appear on his portable throne and to go through with a lot of ceremonies that they couldn't understand. The canonization ceremonies were attended with all the glitter and pomp of the coronation of an ancient oriental king. The thing that concerns us is that all this ceremonialism flaunting itself in the name of religion, with its un-American retinue of potentates and priests, is gaining a strong foothold in our own country. We cannot believe that the really enlightened and sensible people of this country actually believe in this canonization business, the praying of people out of purgatory, the conversion of bread and wine into the actual flesh and blood of Christ in the sacrament, or the power of the Pope to punish and forgive sins against God. They are captivated with the pomp and the magnificence of Roman ritualism and ceremonialism. So, they join in with the crowd and begin kow-towing to the Pope as a puppy fawns at the feet of his master. And we have men in high position in this country showing a pretended deference and respect to the Pope and his satellites just for political reasons. It's enough to make one sick away down deep in the stomach.—Lynn County News.

To go just a bit further, Bro. Hill, the modern protestant demonomination world is trying to borrow a lot of the Catholic thunder. Take for instance, Easter. They are trying to make a great thing out of that, for weeks before the day arrives, in a religious way, when in fact the word is not used but one time in the Bible, and that is in the King James version. The American Standard revised version does not use the word "Easter" at all, but gives it the right usage, "Passover." There are a number of other things we could mention, Bro. Hill, that are used now, that were undreamed of in New Testament times, but this is a secular and not a religious journal.—Terry County Herald.

We don't think God pays any attention to the formalism often in evidence in our Easter services, to the mere lip services of so-called worshippers, nor to the glitter and the finery of these occasions, for God looks on the heart; but it may be, Jack, that much good comes out of these special occasions, after all. If they have the effect of deepening the spirituality of some worshiper or of turning the thoughts of the wicked toward God, then they have accomplished great good, even though the word Easter may not be found in the Bible, and even though Easter was originally a festival of the German barbarians. Where we err most is in accepting mere formalism and ceremonialism as Christianity.—Lynn County News.

CHURCH PREJUDICE

The Methodist Conference at Birmingham voted in favor of unification. But a minority put up a bitter fight and threatened to withdraw from the church if they cannot block unification in the courts. The courts will probably refuse to dabble in a church row, and so it is likely that the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will continue with a small membership even though a vast majority will go into the union of churches. All of which leads up to the observation that there is nothing so bitter and utterly selfish as a church scrap. Folks will get into a fight while engaged in business, or politics, or row in schools, civic organizations or local government, only to soon, forgive and forget. But when they engage in a church row, the scar continues through a lifetime. Those who are supposed to live a pure and forgiving life will engage in the bitterest of feuds over a matter of religious belief. What a wonderful and changed world this would be if all who profess to be following in the steps of Christ could live the kind of life that Christ mapped out for them to live. After all, religion is nothing more than prejudice to a great many people.—Canyon News.

Wide Brim Hat With Chic Silk Print

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A word about black and pink. As the season advances costume after costume favors this combination. It gives a pretty effect indeed, when the dress of pink and black print is enhanced with pink costume jewelry, perhaps adding a girly sash of soft pink suede with possibly a pink suede bolero.

WINSOME frock of chic silk print that makes you look your prettiest, hat big of brim that brings romance that "does something for you" and it's exactly the type costume that is holding the spotlight in the midsummer fashion scene.

Special emphasis is being placed on the vogue of picturesque hats that have a sentimental air that tumbles in charmingly with the witchery of a brightly colorful, flattering print gown. Which goes to show that there is a trend to dress in lovely-lady fashion. You will find more and more as the summer comes on that the "be pretty" mood prevails throughout the mode.

The trio of charming summer costumes illustrated is convincing as to the "prettiness" of current fashions. The dress to the right interprets a new version of the dirdle in black and pink print silk crepe. It is shirred at each side to give moderate skirt fullness in front with a slim back line. The box shoulders emphasize smallness of waistline, a feature especially indicated in the newer dresses. Wear black accents with this gown for town and change to touches of pink when you go to your country club. The black hair hat posed far back on the head and flaring far up in front is a foremost millinery fashion. Even the new white felt tailored shapes have this upward off-face movement.

A lovely midsummer sheer centers the group. This printed blue and white silk chiffon day dress has the new square neckline. Watch necklines! Designers are giving a lot of attention to them, introducing novelty in lowcut fanciful outlines that impart an entirely new character to the styling of blouses and gowns. Note also the horizontal tucked bodice and the skirt pleats released below the hips. And the big flower-trimmed leghorn hat. Wide brims and colorfully patterned prints play a charming duet in the fashion picture.

For an afternoon ensemble select a bayadere silk chiffon dress in rainbow colors, together with a navy wool full-length unlined coat, such as pictured to the left. Take note of the hatpin on the merry widow black straw hat with its crown of taffeta bows and horse-hair brim.

Speaking of wide brim hats to wear with print silks the latest models are taking on tremendously high crowns that taper toward the top in early Pilgrim fashion. The leghorns of this type are especially attractive. For the most part their trimming is confined to ribbon bands with streamers down the back.

ACCENTS OF SUEDE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Now that designers have sensed the vast possibilities suede offers to the fashion field and now that suede has been so scientifically treated that it is rendered thoroughly fabric-like, there's just no end to the exciting things being done with it. For instance, this lovely silk print summer costume, posed by Lucille Ball, radio player, is greatly enhanced with a girly sash of grape colored suede with streamers of matching suede on the attractive wide-brim hat.

Milliners Are Featuring Button Bonnets Just Now

Milliners are featuring "button bonnets" this season. They are as fashionable for "big sisters" to wear as they are for the tiny members of the family. They are made of pique, sharkskin, printed linens and such. While the new button bonnets are as pretty as a picture and as chic as can be, they are something more than mere eye teasers for they are practical to the nth degree, in that they are made to unbutton at will so as to lay out perfectly flat. Which means you can launder them easily and when buttoned back into shape they look like brand new millinery. Flatten them out by unbuttoning and they pack without taking up room—ideal for week-end trips.

STRAPLESS BRA IS GOOD STYLE NEWS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is good news, it's about the strapless brassiere designed to wear with the very fashionable strapless evening gown. It is made of net or lace with drawstring at the top and is boned just enough to keep it up without the aid of straps over the shoulders. Solves the problem of what to wear under that transparent blouse or dress in the daytime where one must do away with unsightly straps to look well groomed. Try the new strapless bra under your costume slip in the daytime and you will be delighted at the nicety and neatness it affords.

White for "Undies" Latest On Calendar of Fashions

If you are casting about for "undies" that express the ultimate in chic, be style-alert by asking to see the latest creations in white "nighties" and slips or foundation garments and corsetry. A vogue for pure white is down on the calendar of new fashions.

Also there is a sentiment gaining to use fine wash materials, such as choicest of nainsooks and batistes and handkerchief linens, dimities and a whole list of the quaint, beautiful wash fabrics that again have come into their own.

You will have joyous surprises, too, in the styling of the various garments. For instance a dainty bed-jacket is made of white batiste with vertical rows of embroidery beading with the traditional "baby ribbon" run through and val lace edgings for trim.

White rayon satin corsets and foundations that slenderize one to a finish are also in promise.

Terry Cloth Retains Its Popularity on the Beach

The introduction of many new cotton fabrics fails to check the popularity of terry cloth when it comes to beach attire. Coats and capes of the toweling continue to be featured, the most striking version being a two-toned striped pattern. Bold contrasts such as bright navy or black with white present the theme to best advantage. Jacket-like blouses that have been dubbed "night shirts," are made of white terry cloth and take the place of longer coats for beach wear.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK—Several years before Romain Rolland finished "Jean Christophe," Leo Tolstoy called him the warden of the conscience of Europe.

Rolland Comes Home To Die
In his quarter-century exile in Switzerland, he has remained "above the battle," warning of war, decrying hatred, pleading for peace and understanding. His has been a voice crying in the wilderness. His exile ended, he returns to France, "an old man, broken and despairing," as the news dispatches report. The world seems to have little heeded his impassioned appeals. He wants to die in Clamecy, the village where he was born.

The greatest novel of a century, possibly of many centuries, "Jean Christophe" has been called by great critics and multitudes of lesser lights. It was published in 1913. This writer has found few young persons, even those majoring in literature, who have read it.

He has found others who have never heard of Romain Rolland, the Nobel peace prize winner exiled from his country, while Carl von Ossietzky, German Nobel peace prize winner, was impoverished, jailed and hurried to his death in the same "years between." There is in this age swift obsolescence in the spiritual heritage as well as in machines.

But another, even greater teacher, looking sadly down on the multitude from a hill in Jerusalem, was also unheeded: "How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not!" But neither He nor His teaching was altogether forgotten. There will also be those who will remember Romain Rolland.

When he was exiled from France, vast sums of money were offered him if he would go to America, to write and lecture. Publicity, or any form of self-exploitation, is to him profoundly distasteful. He withdrew to a secluded villa near Zurich, Switzerland.

There is one definite attitude in all these post-war writings. He had no faith in "movements," in "ideologies," right or left. He repulsed Henri Barbusse, his clarte group and the various "united fronts," as he did the emissaries of bloody reaction from the right. He knew that the righteous can be as cruel as the wicked, once they find reliance on force.

Like the great German Fichte, whom he esteemed, he believed only in the "inner light"—never in organization or force. But he was not a "political agnostic." He fought, and suffered, to arouse the world conscience, as the dying Tolstoy had enjoined him.

He is a tall, spare, pallid old man, with thinning hair and sad, deepest eyes as he returns to France at the age of seventy-two. Educated in music, at the Ecole Normale, he became a devotee of Wagner, whose genius inspired his life—then of Tolstoy and Shakespeare. He has written many times in the last few years that he sees little hope that the world will escape a last devastating war.

IT WAS reported that Sir John Reith, director general of the British Broadcasting corporation, was badly licked in that international Arabic crooning contest a while back. Virtually all observers gave the decision to Italy. If so, it probably was the only time he ever lost a contest.

Sir John Beaten in Radio Duel
The tall, bald, grim Scotsman is upped to the job of running the Imperial Airways, as a civil arm of rearmament, with a sizeable hike in salary. It is now $50,000 a year, instead of $35,000.

He is an engineer, and in 1916 was here with 600 technicians checking on war material contracts. He didn't like America or Americans but eased up on us later on. Running British radio, he has been exonerated as a tyrant, but he has held to his line and confounded all his adversaries. His views on radio programs were outlined by him as follows: "To set out to give the public what it wants, as the saying is, is a dangerous and fallacious policy."

Practical Advice on How to

Keep Cool With Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

FROM the standpoint of health, the summer months constitute the most important period of the entire year. They should be used to build stamina and vitality that will fortify your body against disease. But to many people, the warm weather means merely a succession of exhausting days and restless nights. And hardly a week passes without reports of heat prostrations.

Meeting the Challenge of Hot Weather

While abnormal heat or humidity may be a secondary cause, the real reason behind much warm-weather suffering is a failure to meet the challenge of summer with a judicious diet.

Automobile owners know that no car is better than its engine, and in warm weather, careful drivers watch the gauge on the dashboard to be sure the engine does not become overheated. But most people give little thought to that most remarkable of all engines—the human digestive machinery.

Compared to the engine in your body, the one in your car is a crude, rough affair that can stand no end of punishment. Moreover, the automobile is driven for a certain length of time and then permitted to rest. But the marvelous mechanism which transforms your food into blood, bone, muscle, and your capacity for thought and action is never wholly at rest.

Importance of the Right Food

If the automobile engine requires special attention, how much more important to stoke your body engine with food suited to the weather!

No one would think of going about in midsummer wearing the same garments that were worn all winter. Yet many women continue to serve the same type of meals which were required to keep the body warm in winter. Such a practice is sure to make you miserable. But more than that, it lowers resistance and may, therefore, lead to illness.

Beating the Heat

There are several factors to bear in mind when planning the hot-weather diet. The first secret of keeping cool is to supply the body machinery with food fuel that can be utilized with the least expenditure of energy.

Warm weather is responsible for muscular relaxation in the digestive tract, as well as other parts of the body. And you run the risk of digestive upsets, with their discomfort and health hazards, unless you make every effort to lessen the work of your digestive system.

Eat lightly of rich fatty meats, pastries, rich cakes, sauces and gravies. At all times, choose easily digestible foods.

When the temperature mounts, fat hinders heat loss. The body temperature of the overweight individual is more likely to rise than that of the thin person, and he is therefore more liable to heat prostration. For greater comfort, better appearance and for improved health, the man or woman who is overweight should send for the reducing bulletin offered free by C. Houston Goudiss, and reduce by the safe and sane method of counting calories.

The bulletin is complete with a chart, showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods and it contains simple menus that you can use as a guide to scientific weight reduction. Just send a postcard to C. Houston Goudiss, at 6 East 39th Street, New York City, asking for his reducing bulletin.

The HOUSEWIFE...

"RESEARCH PROFESSOR OF ECONOMY"

SHE'S not a Ph.D. or an LL.D. She hasn't a diploma or a cap and gown. Her research is not done in the laboratory or the library. As a matter of fact, her findings are made, usually, in the street car, in the subway, in the suburban commuter's train.

She reads the advertisements in this paper with care and consideration. They form her research data. By means of them she makes her purchases so that she well deserves the title of "Research Professor of Economy." She discovers item after item, as the year rolls on, combining high quality with low.

It is clear at once that all who make and keep a home have the same opportunity. With the help of newspaper advertising you, too, can graduate from the school of indiscriminate buying into the faculty of fastidious purchases!

Keep Cool Improve Health

With this Free Bulletin on Planning a Correct Summer Diet

SEND for the free bulletin on "Keeping Cool with Food," offered by C. Houston Goudiss. It outlines the principles of planning a beautiful summer diet, lists "cooling" and "heating" foods and is complete with menu suggestions.

perenced in warm weather. Their research indicates that drinking orange or lemon juice, which are rich in vitamin C, actually helps to mitigate the effect of the heat.

Choose Cold Drinks Carefully

A cold drink is comforting on a hot day. And in addition, sweetened beverages help to relieve fatigue, for their carbohydrate content supplies available energy. Sugar is the least heating of the energy producing foods, for less than one-sixteenth of the energy it supplies to the body is converted into heat. The rest goes into brain and muscle power.

Therefore, one good way to prevent needless fatigue in summer is to take a cool, moderately sweetened drink whenever you feel tired during the day. This will satisfy thirst and ward off exhaustion like a rest by the road after a long hard tramp.

Too highly sweetened beverages, however, may be heating to the body, though they are cooling to the palate. For this reason, it is advisable for homemakers to mix their own cool drinks so that they can control the amount of sweetening used. It is possible to buy inexpensive packaged beverage crystals in a variety of flavors, which make delicious, refreshing and cooling drinks for general family use. One of these contains added vitamin D, and as the sugar is added by the homemaker, you can be the judge of how much to use. This is an excellent idea, especially in households where there are children, for the home-made drink satisfies thirst, provides needed energy and discourages them from buying bottled beverages of doubtful purity.

Liquids Essential

To help you keep cool, the summer diet must include an abundance of liquids. These are necessary to make up for the large amounts of moisture lost from the body through increased perspiration.

Liquids may be taken in the form of milk, fruit juices and cooling drinks made from pure water and packaged beverage crystals containing dextrose, fruit acid, flavoring and coloring.

Hot Weather and Vitamin C

Two European investigators recently found that exposure to high temperatures causes a 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissues. And lowered vitamin C reserves are partially responsible for that tired feeling so often experienced in hot weather.

Cooling Foods

I offer free to readers of this column a new bulletin containing a list of cooling foods, plus practical, specific advice in planning the warm weather diet. There are also menus showing how easily you can KEEP COOL WITH FOOD.

The estimated cost of the palace of the League of Nations is nearly $9,000,000. It is built of stone and covers four acres of Ariana Park, a beautiful hillside overlooking Lake Lemane and Mont Blanc. With the exception of one million dollars given by John D. The Fatted Calf

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary Breeder-Feeder Association

Just because the man in the parable killed the fatted calf when his prodigal son came home hungry, is no warrant for folks who raise calves to do without fresh meat until some occasion for celebration arises. With all due reverence for the spiritual implications of the Bible story, it also teaches a very practical lesson, which is as useful today in America as it was in Palestine two thousand years ago.

The custom of fattening a calf for the home table is an old one and a good one. Abraham and Lot, like other range cattlemen, had to depend on grass-fattened beef, which was sometimes good and most of the time not so good, but when their posterity settled down to farming they were able to fatten a calf or a lamb any time of the year by feeding some of the crops they raised.

The old-fashioned "beef club" in which several families take turns in killing a fat calf and divide the meat into portions of family size is still a good way for country people to have fresh meat every week. They are not as common as they were a generation ago, when nearly every farm had cows and raised their calves, but with auto transportation, a "beef club" can be organized over a much wider territory than formerly, and there is scarcely a community without eight to a dozen families who have calves to fatten.

A Wilson county beef club which has been in operation for many years brings all the animals to George Boehning's farm, where slaughtering facilities have been provided. A blackboard on the wall keeps the record of the different cuts allotted to each family, so that in the long run each gets back an entire beef.

A central slaughtering place is desirable, but not indispensable, if each of the members know how to dress and cut up the carcass in standard portions. With ice or mechanical refrigerators now so common on the farms, a family can use a larger portion of fresh meat than formerly.

The refrigerated locker system is being installed in many ice plants in the Southwest, and farmers can rent a locker for about $1 a month. The carcass is cut up and the cuts wrapped separately in butcher's paper; the temperature in the locker-room is kept well below freezing, and the family withdraws the cuts as wanted enough for the day's cooking, or whatever can be cared for in the household refrigerator. This enables a single family to kill fresh meat any time in the year, reduces the cost of living, and makes a good living better.

Of course, the steam pressure canner also provides a method of saving meat at any time of the year, and thousands of families make a practice of putting up a year's supply of meat in cans. Not long ago the writer dropped into an Oklahoma farm home on washday just before noon. In a few minutes the table served a good dinner from the pan including delicious beef from the fresh-heated in the oven.

After all, the method of handling fresh meat is secondary. The famous recipe for Welsh rabbit was not far wrong when it began with, "Catch your rabbit." Before we can kill the "fatted calf" we must first catch the calf and get him fat.

Maybe, too, if more fatted calves were killed and eaten on the farms where they grow, there would be fewer prodigal sons. A farm ought not to have to go to a meat market in town to learn what the meat tastes like.

REAL PROGRESS ON THE FARM

The debate over the recently enacted farm bill goes on. Its sponsors laud it as a measure which will bring great and lasting prosperity to agriculture.

Time will tell which side is right. In the meantime, however, without talking about it, or making the headlines, progressive farmers are carrying on a sound "farm aid" plan of their own.

Political farm relief comes and goes. Cure-alls are tried and discarded. But the marketing co-op movement moves quietly ahead, gaining new adherents each year, and doing a better work. This is real farm progress.

"Nothing is so important to the welfare of any nation as plenty of work at a reasonable wage for the great mass of citizens who must toil for their living.

"The statistics which show the consumer's income down 13c on the dollar tell their own story of the vital necessity for repeal or amendment of some of our almost consensatory tax laws."

TRADE IN McLEAN

CITY TAX DELINQUENTS

One of the newly appointed members of the city council lately remarked, in a council meeting where tax delinquency was being discussed: "Here I've gone along for years, thinking I had to pay city taxes. It was not until I got on the council that I realized a man could go for several years and then get a big sum lopped off for settlement."

And thereby—as the saying goes—hangs a tale. It is a long tale and, on the whole, a sad one. When all is told, all excuses and explanations made, all parties justified, the man who gets the short end of the stick is that same John Q. Citizen, the average man, who regularly is the loser in all conflicts having to do with the running of the public's business.

There are a certain number of citizens who pay their taxes regularly on time. They are those conscientious people who cannot help obeying tax laws as well as others. Such a citizen, when he is a property owner, takes seriously the warnings of tax collectors that the tax bill will be increased by a penalty when delinquent, and that if both taxes and penalty are not paid pretty soon the sheriff will seize the property and sell it.

Unfortunately for the city's financial arrangements, the record proves not only that there are a great many property owners who do not take these warnings seriously, but that there is actually little reason why anybody should take them seriously. There are some 15,000 names on the city's delinquent property-tax list. Together, they owe several million dollars—of taxes that other property owners have paid. When a city does not collect the taxes of all the property owners it fails, by so much, to effect equal distribution of the burden of carrying the government.

The delinquency list, which has been increasing steadily for years, has grown even more rapidly of late, and at last has reached the point where it is a serious threat to the city's financial solvency as well as a standing challenge to the proposition of equal treatment of all before the law.

The longer the situation continues the more property owners will themselves why they should themselves to pay promptly. Other owners apparently not escape penalty but actually make profit out of delinquency.

The practice of "compromising" delinquencies, by which the city accepts in full settlement a sum considerably smaller than the total taxes and penalties due on the delinquency, reflects a position of weakness. The city cannot possibly hope to delinquency unattractive so long as it continues this practice. What is necessary to put the city in a position where it can "go to the top" with delinquents should be done quickly as possible.—Fort Worth Telegram.
