FURNITURE REFINISHING SUBJECT CLUB DISCUSSION

Mrs. Julia E. Kelley, county agent, was guest speaker Friday afternoon at the Enclave Club meeting in the home of Mrs. J. M. Zeigler.

Mrs. Kelley stated that old furniture or woodwork may be given the appearance of new by properly refinishing. The method outlined by the speaker was to first apply a coat of waste made by adding water to gold dust, letting it stand until the old varnish or paint softens so that it can be scraped off, then wipe or wash clean and allow to dry. Then smooth it with sandpaper and apply one or two coats of varnish and a coat of wax. The wax causes the varnish to remain in good condition. If there are cracks or holes, use a crack filler.

Mrs. Kelley said: "Many beautiful pieces of wood have been covered that should have been left natural. If this is desired, after removing old finish, apply a coat of hot linseed oil and allow it to dry. Repeat three times. If paint is to be used it is not necessary to remove the old finish; just sandpaper it and then paint." She also discussed different types of walltex and upholsteries.

Mrs. H. M. Roth, club president, conducted a business session and read a report of the last council meeting.

Mrs. Lathier Petty discussed the articles from demonstration clubs as given in the Farmer's Banner. Plans were made for entertaining members of another club at the next meeting. Mesdames A. L. Morgan, J. H. Wade and C. A. Myatt were appointed as a refreshment committee.

The club cake was brought by Mrs. J. F. Ledbetter. Mrs. F. E. Hambright will be responsible for the next club cake.

The following were visitors: Mrs. Anna Killingsworth of Erick, Okla., Mrs. Kelley and Miss Leona Lewis of Pampa, Miss Imogene Myatt of Lubbock, Misses Oma Lee Hardin, Betty Roth, Nora Isabel and Zora Isabel Petty.

The next meeting will be a social in the home of Mrs. J. F. Ledbetter.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY JOSEPH W. LaBINE

U. S. Rupture of Japan Treaty Seen as Isolationist Decision In Wake of British Surrender

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

INTERNATIONAL: Focus on Japan

The word "defeat" laid heavily on Neville Chamberlain's brow. In Tokyo, his British Ambassador Sir Robert Leslie Craigie had signed peace terms with Japan in which Mr. Chamberlain's government promised not to obstruct the Japanese army in its war with China.

AMBASSADOR HORINOUCHI More bad news is coming.

commerce, which protested vehemently. Mr. Chamberlain gave an explanation something like this: The U. S. was to blame, since she refused to raise a finger to protect occidental influence in China against Jap aggression.

But were they? Critics warned Mr. Chamberlain that U. S. isolation might result from this unprecedented surrender. That very thing looked possible a few days later when Cordell Hull flatly terminated the 28-year "treaty of general commerce and friendship" with Japan.

As for Britain, there was growing opinion in Washington that Neville Chamberlain is to be trusted no more than Japan. Having sold British interests in China down the river, having violated both the nine-power and Kellogg pact, he probably winced at the next news: Japan got an inch and took a mile, announcing all foreign shipping would be banned from Canton.

POLITICS: Rift

Interesting to Republican politicians was the announcement that Ohio's Gov. John W. Bricker would seek another term, and not run for the G. O. P. presidential nomination.

COTTON

IN NEW YORK: Since Britain agreed in her Anglo-American barter plan to take additional cotton for whatever subsidy was established, the 1 1/2 cents per pound rate recently announced will give her roughly 100,000 additional bales, or a total of 700,000 bales.

IN MEMPHIS: Pres. Oscar Johnston of the National Cotton Council planned a conference with Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace to improve consumption and price of cottonseed, thus averting "threatened disaster."

field to plump for Ohio's Sen. Robert A. Taft, who simultaneously notified his supporters to start digging up Taft-pledged delegates.

But Democratic politicians had even more interesting—if more puzzling—news about 1940. Off to Europe (on the same boat with G. O. P. Chairman John D. M. Hamilton) sailed Postmaster General James A. Farley after a mystifying conference at Hyde Park with President Roosevelt.

But everyone knew the subject of 1940's presidential election had been broached, most observers thought Jim Farley had pressed his boss for an announcement regarding his third-term candidacy, and a few thought there was a definite rift between the two men which will not break into headlines until October or later.

Reasons: Mr. Farley is a potential candidate who cannot risk an announcement until after the President himself speaks. Otherwise he would lose much New Deal support. Even so, bad blood began simmering during the Supreme court fight, boiled during last year's "purge" and boiled even harder when Farley's enemy, Paul McNutt, got a fat administrative job.

ENGLAND: Irish Wit

Commuters at London's King's Cross and Victoria stations shuddered as bombs exploded. Forty were hurt, one killed. At Liverpool the Mount Pleasant post office and a wooden bridge were blown up. Wreckage blocked the Liverpool-Leeds canal and parliament shivered when someone discovered its historic building might be blown up next.

MEDICINE: Victory

Last summer Trust Buster Thurman Arnold obtained indictments against the American Medical Association, three other lesser medical groups, and 21 physicians on the ground that they had conspired to restrain trade under the Sherman anti-trust act.

Best guesses last summer held the indictments were a weapon over A. M. A.'s head to force modification of its Gibraltar-like stand against socialized medicine. A few weeks later A. M. A.'s board of governors actually did modify this stand and observers thought the case would be dropped.

A. M. A.'S FISHBEIN No program, no need of it.

Late July found A. M. A. scoring a victory. At Washington's District of Columbia federal court, Justice James M. Proctor dismissed the proceedings on ground that the practice of medicine is a profession, not a trade, therefore does not fall under the Sherman act.

While Wendell Berge, Mr. Arnold's assistant, told reporters that a government appeal "seems to me a foregone conclusion," A. M. A.'s Journal editor smiled over his victory at headquarters in Chicago. Said he, expansively: The A. M. A.'s principles and policies neither forbid nor ever have contemplated any opposition to a well-considered expanded program of medical service, when the need can be established.

PUZZLERS

Do you know your news? Answer all five and your mark is 100; four, 80; three, 60; two, 40; one, 20; none, 0!

- 1. Why is south polar area between twentieth and sixty-eighth meridian (shown on map) now in the news?
2. True or False: The Rev. Gerould Golden, Ohio prisoner kidnaped by Arabs, was released after kissing each of his captors on both cheeks.
3. Choice: An unprecedented drought recently hit the (north-west) (southeast) (southwest) (northeast) section of the U. S.
4. What nationally important event is scheduled to happen August 15 in St. Joseph and Marshall counties, Ind.?
5. What "boner" did R. S. Hudson, British secretary for overseas trade, pull during his recent talk with Germany's Helmut Wohlfat?

CONGRESS: 'Splending'

By the time it reached the senate floor, President Roosevelt's $2,400,000,000 spend-lead bill had become a personal headache to Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley, a scorn-center of scoffing Republicans (who called it "splending") and a catch-all reservoir into which were dumped such irrelevant riders as that of Montana's Democratic Sen. James E. Murray, who sought to restore old prevailing WPA wages.

SENATOR BARKLEY He took plenty of scorn.

ble obstacle to passage by the time-honored method of modification. By this time it was a matter of face-saving, for any sort of a bill at all would be better than utter defeat. Major modification was elimination of the toll provision on the projected $500,000,000 road-building program.

Mr. Barkley also took scorn from Michigan's Sen. Arthur Vandenberg ("Another tug at boot-strap lifting") from Virginia's Harry Byrd ("The whole scheme is devised to evade the debt limit") and from Georgia's Walter F. George ("A palpable fraud on its face"). Besides the public debt issue, opposition centered around the impossibility of hiking bonded indebtedness in already hard-pressed states and cities.

Also in congress: Passed by the senate, the general transportation bill of Montana's Sen. Burton K. Wheeler was shelved for this session because the house made so many changes that immediate compromise was impossible.
Nomination of Francis B. Sayre, undersecretary of state, as high commissioner to the Philippines was received from the White House.
Middle-west congressmen sought discussions with Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace on a proposal to barter land to Germany in exchange for products now on the U. S. tariff free list.

- Answers to Puzzlers
1. Argentina claims sovereignty over this land, disputing U. S. and British claims, especially those to be made by Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd in forthcoming U. S. Antarctic expedition.
2. True: Reverend Golden and his captors kissed and swore "eternal friendship."
3. Northwest.
4. Questions to be asked in 1940 census will be tested there.
5. Made unauthorized offer of huge loan to "buy" peace from Germany.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Death in the Eeltrap"

HELLO, EVERYBODY: A fisherman takes his living out of the water, and at times the water is pretty generous. But it's a treacherous element when it wants to be, and there are times when it takes back more than it has given.

Judd O'Rourke, of Hartford, Conn., made his living for eight or nine months by wheeling it from the Saco river in Maine. Judd didn't take any too much from the river. Darned little more than he needed to live on. But when the river came around to collect, it wanted Judd's life in payment for those few months of subsistence.

It was in the spring of 1929 when Judd started to wrest a living from the river. He was digging clams and fishing for eels, down at the mouth of the stream. Eel fishing took quite a bit of equipment. One set line alone cost about eight dollars for material and a day's work putting it together.

A set line is a long rope, with weights on it every 20 feet to keep it down at the bottom of the river, and three or four hundred shorter lines attached to it at intervals. The shorter lines are baited to catch the eels which swim along near the bottom of the stream on their way out to sea with the ebbing tide.

Set Line Anchored by Concrete Blocks. Judd's set line stretched clear across the river. It was anchored by concrete blocks a few feet out from either shore, and at one end there was a float that told Judd where he could find it when he wanted it. You never take a set line entirely out of the water. When you want to gather your catch, you haul the line up at the buoy and work your way along it in a rowboat, pulling the line up in front of you and letting it fall back in the water behind.

All through April and May, Judd made his living digging clams and tending his set lines. And then, on the morning of June 7, Old Man River presented him with a bill for what he had taken. The bill was for one human life, and Old Man River didn't pull his punches when he started collecting them.

That morning, Judd and his friend, George Croft, were rowing out to some mud flats for bait. On their way, they passed one of Judd's set lines and stopped to see if there was a stray eel or two on it. Judd caught the line at the buoy, pulled it up, and started working along it toward the other side of the river. He worked along until he was about half way across, and then the line stuck.

George was hauling him down—not up!

Judd figured it was caught on a snag on the river bottom. Try as he would, he couldn't pull it up, so the two men gave up and rowed on to get their bait. But on the way back, Judd began thinking that he didn't want to lose a new eight dollar set line and decided to have a try at diving for it.

The river was only about 14 feet deep at low tide, and all the clothes Judd had on were his boots and a pair of old pants with legs cut off at the knees. He took off his boots, and then tied the boat's anchor rope to his waist and gave the other end to George Croft to hold. That rope was for safety's sake. The waters on the Maine coast are ice cold, even in June, and if Judd got a cramp he wanted George to be able to haul him up. But sometimes the contraptions we rig up for our safety are the things that do us the most harm.

Judd Finds Where His Line Is Snagged.

Judd dived. He found his line and began working his way toward where it was snagged. He found the place. An old water-logged tree stump, rolled downstream by the current, had lodged on top of it. Judd couldn't budge the stump. His lungs were bursting, so he rose to the surface. The only thing he could do now was to cut the line on each side of the stump and save as much of it as possible. Taking his fishing knife he dived again.

He reached the bottom, cut the line on one side, and then, after rising to the surface for another breath of air, he went down again. But this time, he miscalculated his distance. He reached bottom on the wrong side of the stump and had to work his way around it. "That took a few precious seconds," says Judd, "because now the current was becoming stronger and it was getting increasingly hard to hold my feet on the bottom. But at last I found the line. I cut it quickly, doubled my knees under me and shot toward the surface."

Anchor Rope Caught on Bottom.

But Judd didn't reach the surface. He shot up about five feet, and then stopped with a jerk that took the air out of his lungs. That jerk scared Judd. "The first thing I thought," he says, "was that a large squid had me. To this day I don't know why I should have thought that. Then I looked down and saw that it was the anchor rope, tied to my waist, that was holding me. I knew it must be caught on the bottom, so I grasped it and hauled myself downward, hand over hand."

Judd's lungs were aching now. The air was gone out of them, and he knew it would be a long time before he could untangle that rope and get to the surface. Would he make it? Well—he was doing his best. That 10 feet of rope seemed like 500. His heart was beating and his head was spinning. At last he reached the point where the rope was snagged, and then—calamity!

As he reached the snag, the rope suddenly tightened, drawing him up close against the stump. Up in the boat, George Croft had picked that moment to become alarmed and try to haul Judd out of the water. And with the rope caught in the snag, George was hauling him down instead of up—down to his death!

Judd began to struggle. But the rope only pulled him closer to the stump. It was so tight that Judd couldn't possibly free it from the snag, and there weren't many more seconds left in which he'd be able to free it. His lungs were bursting and his stomach felt as if it were turning inside out. He began swallowing water—and at that moment he thought of the knife he had brought down to cut the set line. It was in his belt. He got it out, cut the rope—and that was the last Judd remembered.

When Judd woke up, he was lying in the bottom of the boat, and George was giving him artificial respiration. George had had the scare of his life when the rope suddenly went slack and Judd's body had come out with a gaff and then worked over him until he brought him around again.

FARMER IMPORTANT IN GAME PROGRAM

Aid Sportsmen With Wild Life Restoration Plan.

By JAY N. DARLING

The key figure in any program of wildlife restoration in the United States is the farmer.

The farmer controls that portion of the outdoors sought by the great majority of small-game hunters of the United States. Without a mutually beneficial relationship between farmer and sportsman, all conservation endeavor devoted to the increase of upland game fails of its prime object—the guarantee of sport to the general public.

It is true that the farmer has been the victim of the hoodlum type of hunter, and it is up to organized sportsmen to combat the evil of trespass on cultivated lands.

Excessive clearing and grazing have, at times, worked to the injury of the farmer through cutting down the supply of helpful wildlife. The drainage shark has promoted schemes that have impoverished the soil, lowered the water-table and wrecked the hopes of many a settler as well as destroying vast sources of wealth in fur, fish and wild fowl.

Man's ceaseless war against insect pests would be lost were it not for the help given by birds. Rodent pests are kept down by birds of prey. In certain areas the skunk, a heavy insect feeder and one of the few enemies of burrowing grubs, is highly important to agriculture. Other mammals—at times listed as "vermin" may be vastly more helpful than harmful to the farmers.

The assembling of source-material for education, in schools and colleges, in the basic principles of conservation is the function of a committee established by the National Wildlife federation.

Crop Rotation Kills Many Insect Pests

When one sees the annual loss to crops and property caused by insects, he is inclined to think that crop pests are getting more numerous and destructive from year to year. It is a fortunate farmer who has not experienced a loss from these six-footed animals. The Hessian fly takes a yearly toll of millions from American farmers. The chinch bug has ravaged our corn and wheat the past 50 years to the extent of several hundred millions of dollars. Figures in this state on codling moth, sugar beet web-worm and grasshoppers would be equally staggering. Moreover, several human diseases are carried only by insects. All can testify that gnats, flies, mosquitoes, etc., are an annoyance.

Where large acreages of one kind of crop are grown, one can naturally look for increased insect injury from year to year unless preventive and remedial measures are taken. The number of species that attack one plant is often large. About 200 attack clover, 200 affect corn, and 400 the apple. The first year the crop is grown, a person may assume that a few injurious insects will find their way into the field and do practically no injury. The insects will hibernate or pass the winter near by, and find conditions unusually favorable for development the next year should the same crop remain on the land. Each succeeding year the injury can be expected to increase.

On the other hand, where crops are changed the insects will emerge from winter quarters and find no food at hand. This will necessitate a search for it and only a few of the insects that successfully pass the winter will find their way into the new field. This is especially true of insects that pass the winter in the larval or worm stage and are not able to travel far. Of course all insects cannot be controlled by crop rotation.

The genius of a local man had coaxed him to big success in business without the aid of education.
He was asked to distribute the prizes a school, and made the usual speech of good counsel!

"Now, boys," he said, "always remember that education is a great thing. There's nothing like education. Take arithmetic. We learn that twice two makes four, that twice six makes twelve, that seven sevens make—and then there's geography."

"If your nose is close to the grindstone rough, and you hold it down there long enough, in time you'll say there's no such thing as brooks that babble and birds that sing. These three will all your world compose: Just you, the stone, and your darned old nose."

Hot Dish Mats Easy to Make of Cable Cord

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
SO MANY requests for copies of these directions have been received, they are being printed again to accommodate those who neglected to clip and save them when they appeared before.

The mat is made of heavy white cotton cable cord such as you buy at the notion counter for seams and trimmings.

Follow the directions in the sketch, making the circles in paper, using No. 40 cotton thread to sew them. Braid three cords together and then sew the braided strip around and around to make the center of the mat. Sew a row of the circles to the edge of this center part; then add another braided row, being careful to "ease in" the inside edge just enough to keep the mat flat. Continue adding alternate rows of circles and braiding until the mat is size desired. To join the ends of the braided rows, pull one end through the braiding to the wrong side of the mat; then trim the ends and sew them flat.

NOTICE: Every Homemaker should have copies of the two books containing 96 How to Sew articles. You may secure SEWING, For the Home Decorator; and Gifts, Novelties and Embroideries; both for 25 cents; and your choice of the Patchwork Quilt Leaflet showing 36 authentic stitches; or the Rag Rug Leaflet FREE, while the supply lasts. Don't delay, as the offer of both books at this low price will be withdrawn soon. Send your order at once to Mrs. Spears, 210 S. Desplaines St., Chicago, Ill.

HOT WEATHER BILIOUSNESS

Have you noticed that in hot weather your digestion and elimination seem to become torpid or lazy? Your food sours, forms gas, and causes belching, heartburn, and a feeling of restlessness and irritability. Your tongue may be coated, your complexion bilious, and your bowels action sluggish or insufficient.

These are some of the symptoms of biliousness or so-called "torpid liver," so prevalent in hot climates. They call for calomel, or better still, Calotabs, the naturalness calomel compound tablets that make calomel-taking a pleasure.

Calotabs give you the effects of calomel and salts combined, helping Nature to expel the sour, stagnant bile and washing it out of the system. One or two Calotabs at bedtime with a glass of water—that's all. Next morning your system feels clean and refreshed, your head is clear, your spirit bright, and you are feeling fine with a hearty appetite for breakfast. Eat what you wish and go about your work or pleasure.

Genuine Calotabs are sold only in checker-board (black and white) packages bearing the trade mark "Calotabs." Refuse imitations. Trial package only ten cents; family packs twenty-five cents, at your dealer's (Adv.)

Chic Fur Ingeniously Trims Gorgeous Woolens for Fall

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AN INGENUOUS and out-of-the-ordinary use of fur trimmings is in prospect for fall. As a matter of fact, the vogue has not really been held back until the arrival of cool days, for during the summer, suits and ensembles of daintiest, sheerest wools in rapturous pastels highlighted with touches of delicately toned fox have held high favor with women who pride themselves on keeping pace with the mode.

Then, too, "coming events cast their shadows before" in advance midseason collections which include many fascinating ensembles done in alluring wools that are enhanced with lovely, lightsome fur after the manner of the stunning costume illustrated. Gaston of Paris designed this handsome beige wool crepe ensemble trimming it with exquisite color-matched fox.

From beginnings such as evidenced in this fascinating ensemble the vogue for fur trimmings is rapidly developing into a passion for unique and highly decorative treatments that will manifest itself in full force as the autumn and winter style program unfolds.

Preparatory to the coming call for fur trims that are distinctively new and out of the ordinary, designers have put on their thinking caps in order to play up the idea in ingenious ways for it is said that emphasis will be placed on unique touches of fur that have dramatic appeal. For instance, such intriguing effects will be worked as bow-knot appliques of fur, bands of fur that outline the fronts of jackets forming pockets in cunningly eccentric ways. The cuff-muff idea is a cute trick that cuffs bishop sleeves in fur flared from a tight wrist. The cuffs form a muff when the hands are clasped together. Then again the fur yoke, front or back, is worked in varied ways.

Cloth sleeves that are patterned all-over with applied huge polka dots of fur present an attractive new note. Then there are bindings and borderings galore together with swatches here and there in unexpected places that make for decorative and amusing fur fantasies.

However, not by any means does all the glory go to the furs that trim. They tell but half the story of the enchanting fashions under way for the new season. It's the perfect teamwork that carries on 50-50 between luxurious wool weaves plus dramatic fur trimmings.

That the forthcoming is going to be a season of luxuriant fabric there is no doubt and the new vintage of woolen materials gives emphasis to this forecast. It is said that plaids will be more conspicuously in the mode than ever, and when we say plaids as now are it means as resplendent an array as eye has seen. For the girl going away to school the cape costume pictured in the inset panel is enough to excite the envy of every sorority sister on the campus. The cape is fashioned of a strikingly handsome wool plaid. It tops a two-piece navy wool suit. The suit can be worn alone and the cape with other costumes. The fur that collars it adds chic and charm to a high degree.

In regard to the grand and glorious woolens that will feature for fall and winter it is said that vertical stripes in raised effects or contrasts of yarn are scheduled among weaves that will prove foremost in fashion. There are many mossy, worsted crepes too that are highly attractive in the new wool fabric showings. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—One day, a long time ago, a 17-year-old girl, Janet Roper, was walking along Hanover street in Boston, a place where you meet seafaring men from all ports of the civilized world. Attracted by a hymn tune, she stopped before a building, listened to the music of a melodeon, the lusty chorus of men's voices, and, at length, drawn by a power greater than her girlish timidity, she mounted the steps and so entered the headquarters of the Boston Seamen's Friends society. Thus destiny took hold of Janet's life and showed her the way to go.

Now Janet Roper, house mother of the Seamen's Church institute on South street, New York, is observing the fiftieth anniversary of her work among sailors, and there is hardly a forecastle from the Cape of Good Hope to Cairo, from John O'Groats to the Ambrose Light which does not contain at least one shellback beholden to her in any one of an infinite variety of ways.

She is slender, almost frail of physique. There are only a few traces of gray in her hair for all her 66 years, and her eyes snap with intelligence, vitality and kindly humor.

Several years ago Mother Roper devised the idea of publishing lists of missing seamen, copies being sent to seamen's homes throughout the world for display upon bulletin boards. The service has obtained extraordinary results. Sailors out of touch with their families for years have been located and contacts restored, brothers have been reunited in far-flung ports; all sorts of happy things have been effected. In all, to date, 5,327 sailors were supposedly swallowed in the sea or forever merged in the melting pots of alien ports, have been recovered from oblivion.

While in Boston, Mother Roper met and subsequently married a Congregational clergyman, engaged in similar service. They worked together in Gloucester, in Canada and in Oregon until her husband's death in 1915, when she came to the Seamen's institute on South street. She has no illusions about sailors, holding them to be no better and no worse than other men. Her work, and her three daughters, living with her in Brooklyn, comprise her enthusiasms.

JUDGE MANLEY O. HUDSON of the Permanent Court of International Peace at The Hague, recently arrived here, is, characteristically, spending his vacation at Cambridge, Mass., looking into things of international juridical import. He was once Bemis professor of international law at Harvard, a post he took, somewhat in discouragement, when his career was diverted by the refusal in 1928 of the United States to join the League of Nations.

The world's leading authority on all questions pertaining to comity among nations, this world to him is no abstract thing, no matter of geographical division. Human affairs and relationships are his passion. A Missourian—he was born in St. Peters in 1886—he reverses an attributed reaction of citizens of his commonwealth in that far from asking to be shown, he is at all times willing, nay eager, to demonstrate.

Genial, incurably optimistic, mentally brilliant, he enjoys nothing so much as to stand at bay in intellectual combat, indulging with D'Arctagnan's ardor in sword-play, in thrust and riposte, until his opponents are either convinced or, at any rate, silenced. He will plunge into contest, or, if no struggle is waging, he is very likely to start one.

Now 52 years old, Judge Hudson entered the League of Nations secretariat with its origin in 1919, and ever since he has been attached to it. Two years earlier, he was with the inquiry and peace terms commission established by the state department and later, in Paris, was a member of the international law division of the committee to negotiate peace. Work then begun led directly to the World court bench when the league assembly gave him the second highest vote—48 out of 50—ever received by a candidate.

William Sewell college, Liberty, Mo., is his alma mater and Harvard, where he took post-graduate courses, his alter mater. (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

YOUNG PSYCHOLOGIST

An employee of the public library has just reported a conversation she overheard between a progressive schoolboy and a non-progressive pal. Evidently the progressive scholar was trying to explain the difference between an inferiority complex and a superiority complex to his unlightened contemporary. "Suppose," he said, "I asked you if you could jump ten feet and you said sure. Then you'd have a superiority complex. But if you said no, then you'd have an inferiority complex." "What would I have," the other boy inquired, "if I said maybe I could and maybe I couldn't?" The progressive boy pondered. "I guess," he remarked, "you'd have a split personality."

LAUGHS AT HOME

"Do you go to many amusements these days, Bill?"

"No. Don't have to now. My son's gone to wearing Oxford bags and cretonne vests."

Why Not 'Crepe de Chine'?

A man and his wife decided to dine at a tearoom or cafeteria on Sundays. Recently some very delicious lemon chiffon pie was served to them. The next Sunday after church services Mrs. Green inquired:

"Where shall we eat today, John?"

To her amusement her husband answered:

"Let's go where they have that good georgette pie."

Moving De Luxe

The J family was moving across the city. When the moving men came, the small family kitten was nowhere to be found. Donnie burst into tears but a neighbor promised to keep the kitten when it appeared and let Mr. J pick it up the next day. When the family arrived at their new home, however, and mother opened the cabinet to get a dish towel, there was the kitten fast asleep on the pile of towels.

Five Year Plan

It was during the empanelling of a jury; the following colloquy occurred:

"You are a property-holder?"

"Yes, your honor."

"Married or single?"

"I have been married for five years, your honor."

"Have you formed or expressed an opinion?"

"Not for five years, your honor."

SUN STROKE

"How did he get a sun-stroke?"

"Jimmy Sunfish bumped into him."

Kept Out

"If time hangs heavily on your hands, why don't you go into politics?"

"A man as rich as I am," answered Mr. Dustin Stax, "doesn't dare go into politics. He is considered lucky if they let him shove a card under the door with a check attached to it."

Turn About

"Gracious!" exclaimed Mrs. Filipp. "The baby has eaten a lot of that dog biscuit!"

"Never mind, dear," said a caller, "it just serves Fido right. He's often stolen the baby's food—haven't you, Fido?"

By Comparison

Diner (after a long wait)—Waiter, have you ever visited the zoo?

Waiter—No, sir, I haven't.

Diner—Well, you ought to—you wouldn't half enjoy watching the tortoise whiz past.

Quick Thought

The nurse came into the library to proclaim the good news. "It's a little boy," she announced.

"What?" asked the absent-minded professor. "Oh, yes, just ask him what he wants."

MILK STILL RATES AS PERFECT FOOD

Nutrition Studies Disclose High Vitamin Content.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

In the last quarter century the field of nutrition has advanced more than in all the previous centuries of mankind. In that advance milk has held its place as the most nearly perfect food. From the point of view of protein and of fat, of mineral salts and of vitamins, it stands supreme. True, milk is somewhat deficient in vitamin C, in vitamin D, and in iron, but these values are easily supplied and no other food gives as much as milk for the money.

If there is any other highly important fact which our studies have revealed, it is that ordinarily we do not consume as much milk as we should, being led frequently by improper advice to other foods not nearly as efficient in human nutrition. Yet one-fifth of the food budget of the average American family is used for milk and milk products.

So important is milk for the human being that the health section of the League of Nations has recently made available a study of this product by a committee with representatives from Denmark, Holland, England, and France. It may surprise many Americans to realize that the milk supply in most foreign countries does not approximate in its general safety the average milk supply of the United States.

In many countries it has been customary to gloss over the unsatisfactory contents of the milk supply with the assurance that the benefits to health resulting from increased consumption will outweigh the danger of drinking milk that is not hygienic. In this country we know that the development of a good milk supply begins back on the farm with the cows and the quality of feed given to the cows.

Farmers Should Study Tractor Operating Cost

Two factors are important in tractor costs. One is the number of hours used, the other, economical loading. The first entails a study of the machine's varied uses, and of the possibility of increasing these uses. The latter necessitates a study of the draft requirement of different implements, and the ways and means of devising tractor hook-ups.

An example will help to make this point clear. A 14-inch moldboard plow at a certain depth will have a draft of 600 pounds. A one-way plow 14 inches wide would require a pull of about 250 pounds, while that width of spike-tooth harrow has a draft of only slightly more than 50 pounds.

Such a variation is true of all field implements and to load a tractor of a certain size economically, the operator must know the approximate draft of each tool.

Tractor engineers and farm management experts agree that each tractor owner should make a study of his machine to determine what will be an economical load, and then eliminate as much as possible the application of hitches with lower draft requirements. Manufacturers of tractors can furnish approximate figures on draft for each machine.

Milk for Diet

Although milk is considered by scientists as nature's "most nearly" perfect food, it can supply the nutritive requirements of a mature body for a long period of time without other supplement. The proof of this is well illustrated in the case of John Flaherty, a tailor in Niles, Ohio, whose diet for the past 20 years consisted only of milk. Mr. Flaherty recently died at the ripe old age of 75 years. He began the "all milk" diet in 1917 as a result of a stricture of the esophagus, which he contributed to an overdose of serum in inoculation during the war. From 1917 until his death he drank only a quart of milk a day.

Farm Facts

Each year about $150,000,000 worth of fuel comes from farm woodlands throughout the United States.

With a radio ownership of 69 per cent, farm families trail city cousins by 13 per cent, but farmers listen more, a recent survey of 14,000 rural families revealed.

A good cow under the most favorable conditions is able to consume about 150 pounds of green pasture herbage in a day. This task is done with a "mowing" apparatus about three inches wide.

Good crop rotations protect the soil, provide enough roughage for live stock, supply grain, distribute labor requirements, provide several sources of income, and assure a fair annual income unless uncontrollable economic conditions make this impossible.

DOAN'S PILLS

Lace-Top Dress

One of the most attractive fashions on the current style program is that of the lace-top dress. The model pictured shown at a revue held by the Style Creators of Chicago is proving to be one of the big successes of the season. It is liked particularly, for worn with a jacket, it will carry on through midseason into fall. It is navy for the corselet shirt with white for the lace top. The idea of the lace top admits versatile interpretations.

Warm Honey Beige Smart Tan Shade

The "look pretty" edict this season extends to headgear, footgear and makeup. Though some well-tanned skins are seen (treated this year with a new bright vivid rouge), the most talked-of tan tint is a warm honey beige, made up with a little rouge, mat powder and colorful lipstick.

Heads are topped with peaked hoods attached to suits, wide hats and fishnet turbans caught with two big colored hairpins. Cork clogs and raffia sandals are seen on smart feet. Beach bags are bigger than ever, and can be liberally equipped with makeup to insure that pretty look.

Fetching Costume In White and Blue

White and deep blue linen are combined for a natty costume from Bruyere, the blue making the deep sailor on the jacket and the bodice of the dress. On the shoulder of the dress is a white anchor, embroidered, and the anchor on the jacket sleeve is blue outlined in red. The buttons are flat, of mother-of-pearl.

Gray Woolens High Style

Gray wool weaves that blend to gray furs will be featured this fall. The coming coats and suits stress the gray vogue.

Half of Stars

Small fabric stars captured between layers of maline are the imaginative creation of a French hat designer.

Some people make howling successes of their lives—to hear them tell it.

Many a man builds a smoke screen of good advice to hide his real character.

Governor O'Daniel makes a radio address asking that people attend local budget meetings and keep eyes on elected officials, and then turns around and closes the door of the Automatic Tax Board, for the first time in history, to representatives of the press. The governor promised during the campaign to cut taxes, but the announcement from the tax board will mean that the taxpayers of the state will have to pay nine million dollars more next year.

Dr. M. E. Heard, of Texas Tech suggests that instead of the usual prize offered for the first bale of cotton ginned in each community, the prize be given for the best bale ginned during the season. This is a good suggestion that should be heeded by each community. There is no particular virtue in bringing in the first bale, and the old prize custom serves nothing from a community standpoint, while raising the best bale would stimulate better production and better staple.

A community can ill afford to lose an outstanding man, but McLean suffers that loss this week. A man who has contributed much to the success of his church, school, and the community at large, C. H. Leeds will be missed in McLean. His unassuming character, his high education, and his willingness to do anything requested to help things along, are seldom to be found in one man. Men of much less learning might object to doing anything but what they are paid for, and strive for recognition in planes that they could not fill acceptably, but not so with Mr. Leeds. We are, perhaps, too close to his work here to be properly appreciative at this time, but we predict that as time goes on we will come more and more to see the unselfish service rendered by this good man. The best wishes of the whole community go with him and his family as he leaves to further his education in the higher branches of learning.

Highways are planned nowadays, not by dream, but to meet modern requirements of traffic movement, safety and economy. Trips of 100 miles or more are still the exception, and such trips account for less than 2% of all highway traffic. Recent highway surveys show that on an average, only about 300 automobiles a day on all main east-west highways are making transcontinental trips. The average motor trip is around 30 miles.

These facts are evidenced by the thinning out of highway traffic less than 20 miles from any city limits. Most people use their cars for getting out of town and back again, and engineers are more and more turning their attention to lateral roads, as feeders to highways. Motor travel, for obvious reason, will probably always be largely local.

AMERICAN BOY MAGAZINE COMPANION TO THOUSANDS

Hundreds of thousands of boys and young men read THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine every month and consider it more as a living companion than as a magazine.

"It's as much a buddy to me as my neighborhood chum," writes one high school senior. "THE AMERICAN BOY seems to understand a boy's problems and considers them in such a sympathetic and helpful way. It gives advice and entertaining reading on every subject in which a young fellow is interested. It is particularly helpful in sports. I made our school basketball team because of playing tips I read in THE AMERICAN BOY."

Many famous athletes in all sports credit much of their success to helpful suggestions received from sports articles carried in THE AMERICAN BOY Magazine. Virtually every issue offers advice from a famous coach or player. Football, basketball, track tennis, in fact every major sport is covered in fiction and fact articles.

Teachers, librarians, parents and leaders of boys' clubs also recommend THE AMERICAN BOY enthusiastically. They have found that as a general rule regular readers of THE AMERICAN BOY advance more rapidly and develop more worthwhile characteristics than do boys who do not read it.

Trained writers and artists, famous coaches and athletes, explorers, scientists and men successful in business and industry join with an experienced staff to produce in THE AMERICAN BOY the sort of reading matter boys like best.

THE AMERICAN BOY sells on most newsstands at 15c a copy. Subscription prices are $1.50 for one year or $3.00 for three years. Foreign rates 50c a year extra. To subscribe simply send your name, address and remittance direct to THE AMERICAN BOY, 7430 Second Blvd., Detroit, Michigan.

CHAPTER IX—Continued

Mr. Forrest answered Kay's unspoken question. He said, almost apologetically, "We were just driving by . . . and then went on to explain that he had been compelled to make a trip to some tiny cross-roads hamlet to straighten out the family tree of a deceased gentleman who had left considerable property. "Like all these swamp angels," smiled Mr. Forrest ruefully, "they never seem to remember all their relatives. Andy drove me out this afternoon and I've been talking to uncles and aunts and cousins for hours."

She conversed nervously. She wanted them to go, to go quickly. She was afraid all over again—afraid that Kirk might come while they were with her.

Actually, they remained at the house less than 20 minutes . . . but it seemed like that many hours. And when they told her good night and walked off toward the parking place under the live oaks some 200 yards back of the house, Kay dropped onto a chair and sat staring. She was trembling with nervous reaction.

Margaret came downstairs first. She crossed the room and put her hand on Kay's shoulder. She said, "You've got to pull yourself together, Kay."

"Yes, I know . . . But I was so afraid that Kirk might walk in on them . . ."

"But he didn't. And now I'm going to say my last word on this. I'm pretty fond of you, and I'm older. I think you're making a mistake."

"You don't understand."

"No?" The voice of the slim, blonde girl was gentle. "I wonder if you do?"

"Yes . . ."

"Then you've got to play it as you see it. I just wanted you to remember that we all want to help."

"I know you do."

"And any time you'll let us in on the secret . . ."

Mrs. Hamilton joined them. The three women tried to talk. Time dragged. Then the front door opened and Barney came in. His face was white and stern and he said, "You still here?"

"Kirk hasn't shown up."

"I see. And you haven't changed your mind?"

"No, Barney."

He fidgeted uncomfortably. "Think I'll run along upstairs."

Kay noticed that he walked heavily. She was dreadfully sorry for him. She was glad when Jim Owenby returned. At least there were two men in the house now. Jim settled his big figure on the arm of Margaret's chair, and Margaret whispered to him that they had heard nothing from Kirk.

Jim's dark face was grave. He said, "He'd have phoned if he'd changed his mind."

"You think so?"

"Sure. I know that lad."

Kay's nerves were jumpy. She fought against a crazy impulse to laugh; not mirthfully, but with hysteria. Anything, she felt, would be better than this: sitting around waiting for a ghastly inevitability.

At 11 o'clock Kay felt that she could stand it no longer. She said, "Kirk's had time to get here a dozen times over. I'm going to 'phone the hotel."

She went to the telephone on the landing halfway between the first and second floor. She called the White Star Hotel and asked for Mr. Reynolds' room. A man's voice at the other end said, "Hello."

She said, "I'd like to speak to Mr. Reynolds."

"Who is it wants him?"

"This is Kay Forrest."

"Oh!" The tone changed. "I'm Dan Creedon. I work for him."

"Yes, I know."

"Kirk ain't here."

"Do you know where he is?"

"No'm. He said he'd be back before 10 o'clock at the latest. Shall I tell him to call you?"

"Yes, please."

Again they settled into the awkward tedium of waiting. Conversation lagged. Even for persons like these, it was not easy to simulate interest in ordinary things.

Eleven-thirty. Midnight . . . with the ancient grandfather's clock tolling the hour with nerve-racking slowness. They were exhausted with the strain of it. At one o'clock Margaret said, "He evidently changed his mind."

"And you still feel that you can't trust even me?"

"I know I can't. It would mean danger to everyone. To Dad . . . and to Barney."

Mrs. Hamilton smiled gently. "Barney's a pretty lucky boy . . . to have you caring for him that way."

Kay tried to shake off the horrible oppression. "Thanks, Mrs. Hamilton. And anyway, it seems as though I've got another night to think it over."

"Yes, dear. But you must try to sleep."

Not until four o'clock did she sleep, and then her slumber was mocked by evil dreams. At seven-thirty Flagrant, the overly buxom cook, rapped on the bedroom door and then entered bearing a breakfast tray: crisp waffles and butter and maple syrup, poached eggs and bacon, orange juice and a pot of steaming coffee.

"Goodness goodness Miss Agnes!" exclaimed Flagrant as she deposited the tray on the bed—"You sho' looks peaked this mawnin', Miss Kay."

"I—I didn't sleep very well."

"Shuh! When I was yo' age—sleepin' is the most thing I always do good."

Kay heard sounds from the parking place. Tourists arriving. She heard them calling to one another, heard them pass the house on the way to the lagoon where the little boats nuzzled against the bank. It seemed so normal, so gay, so bright . . . the sun was so clear and warm.

The tourists were early this morning. Lots of them. There was a thin little man and his angular wife, Mrs. Parkes was insisting loudly that the Gardens were divine, exquisite, superb.

Mr. and Mrs. Parkes went to the edge of the lagoon and seated themselves in a tiny craft which was propelled by a very black Negro who announced that his name was Joshua. He followed the regular sight-seeing route, and the stupendous beauty of the place eventually silenced even the loquacious Mrs. Parkes. Only occasionally did she feel called upon to voice her approval of Nature, only occasionally did she remember to chide her nervous husband for his inarticulateness.

And then suddenly the morning air was split by a shriek from the throat of Joshua. He screamed, "Oh! my Gawd!"

Mr. Parkes jumped and almost overturned the bateau. Mrs. Parkes, who was made of sterner stuff, swung on Joshua. The boatman's face was ashen. His craft had ceased to move and he was sitting in rigid horror, mouth agape, eyes popping. One palsied finger was pointing downward, into the shallow water.

"Ooooh Gawd . . . Ooooh Gawd . . ."

The passengers followed the direction of his eyes. They saw something which made them ill.

They saw, just below the ebony surface of the water, the body of a man. It was Kirk Reynolds.

It wasn't pretty, that scene at the edge of the lagoon after they had dragged Kirk Reynolds' body from the black, shallow water and stretched it out on the grass near the wisteria-covered log-cabin where the Negro boatmen lounged during their hours of unemployment.

The white boatmen stood and stared. Tourists crowded around in fascinated horror. They said that it was terrible and that they weren't going through the Gardens any more that day. But they didn't return to Beverly, either. Not immediately.

They were too impressed by this sight of stark tragedy against a setting so unbelievably beautiful, as though a generous nature had provided the flowers for Kirk Reynolds' passing.

And so he lay alone on the grass, and Barney looked down at him and spoke to the tourists, and tried to comfort Mrs. Parkes, who had helped discover the body and was indulging in violent hysterics; and Mr. Parkes, who was silent and frightened and bewildered. Barney's face was pallid, and he tried to keep himself under control, but it wasn't easy. He insisted on escorting Mrs. Parkes and her husband to the house, where he bestowed them in the living-room. Mrs. Hamilton produced smelling-salts and aromatic spirits of ammonia and then joined the group on the veranda. Barney and Kay and Margaret. She said, "I just telephoned Sheriff Griffin. He's coming right out."

"Did you tell him what happened?"

"No. I said there had been an accident . . . He's coming alone."

Kay Forrest had been standing rigidly, staring at the group which hovered over the body of Kirk Reynolds. She was trying to think. Then words came through dry lips.

"How could he have drowned in that shallow water?"

Margaret glanced swiftly at her brother and hastened to answer. She said, "He didn't drown. He had been stabbed."

Back of the house a car whirled into the parking place and Jim Owenby got out. He moved toward the lagoon and met Zero, the house-keeper. Zero's face was livid. He said, "Golla! Mistuh, Jim, I sho' is glad to see you."

Jim frowned. "What's wrong?"

"Plenty wrong, Mistuh Jim. They jist found Mistuh Kirk Reynolds lyin' daid in the lagoon."

"Drowned?"

"Drowned an' stobbed. Stobbed right thoo the neck."

"Where's Miss Margaret?"

"Standin' on the front po'ch, suh. Jist standin' there lookin' skeered."

Jim circled the house and approached the group on the veranda. Margaret saw him coming and moved forward to meet him. She put her hand on his arm. "What are you doing here, Jim?"

"I was worried."

Fear was in her eyes. Fear and doubt. She spoke in a whisper. "Kirk Reynolds is dead."

"I know."

"How do you know?"

"Just met Zero. He told me."

"You didn't . . . ?" She had started to ask, "You didn't know before?" but she bit the words back. She said, "What were you worried about?"

"Kay. I wondered what happened after I left last night."

"What made you think anything happened?"

He answered carefully. "I telephoned the hotel this morning and asked for Kirk. Got that fellow Creedon on the 'phone. He said Kirk hadn't showed up."

"Why didn't you 'phone here?"

"I thought I'd better come."

She looked up into his eyes. They were black and grim. His lips were grim, too. Margaret didn't like his expression. It frightened her—frightened her more than the mere fact of Kirk's death. There were a hundred questions she wanted to ask, a hundred doubts she desired to voice.

Jim Owenby nodded to the others and walked down to the lagoon. They made way for him and he looked down upon the body of the man who had murdered his best friend. It wasn't a pleasant sight, but Jim's face gave no hint of his inner feelings. He did not touch the body, simply looked. He saw the narrow, deep gash in the throat. He saw a cut under the right eye. A cut and a bruise, as though it had been caused by the impact of a fist. Unimportant, that bruise. The knife wound in the throat had caused Kirk's death.

Jim Owenby turned away abruptly. He rejoined the others, and with them greeted Sheriff Griffin. The sheriff was short and broad and stocky. He had keen gray eyes and spoke with a pronounced drawl. He talked with them for a minute and then went to view the body.

"Plumb daid," he announced calmly. "Somebody hit him an' then stabbed him with a knife. Anybody found the knife yet?"

They said no, they hadn't heard of anybody's finding the knife. Griffin's bright eyes scrutinized their faces.

"How come him to be heah last night?"

Kay said, "He came for me."

"Fo' you? What you mean by that, Miss Kay?"

"He telephoned me about half-past eight. Said I had to go to town with him."

He paused long enough to rub his hands on a large, red handkerchief. He asked, "What happened when Reynolds got here last night?"

Mrs. Hamilton answered. "We never saw him."

"Mmm-hmm! I reckon I do." The sheriff paused briefly. "Didn't happen to run across him, did you?"

"No."

"I see . . . Anybody else leave the house?"

"I did," said Jim Owenby. "Twice. Once to make a trip through the Gardens and the second time to go home."

"What times was them trips, Jim?"

"The first about nine-thirty. I didn't go home until after one-thirty."

"Didn't see Reynolds nowhere, did you?"

"No."

The sheriff blinked. "Anybody else drop in durin' the evenin'?"

"Friends or anybody?"

They looked at Kay. Her face was chalky, but she answered firmly. "Dad was here. With Andy."

"So? 'Bout what time, Miss Kay?"

"Around half-past nine. Maybe ten o'clock. I'm not sure."

"Did you tell them about Kirk telephonin'?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"Because . . . well, because . . ."

"Kind of 'fraid, eh?"

"Well, not exactly . . ."

"Sho' you was. And I don't blame you. Now le's see, Kirk could have got heah any time after nine, couldn't he?"

"I suppose so."

"And there was four men here who wasn't very fond of him. And this mawnin' he's daid." Sheriff Griffin gestured. "Me—I still say it's good riddance."

Barney spoke tensely. "What are you going to do about it, Sheriff?"

"Me? Shuh! Son—I ain't fixin' to do nothin'. Not now, anyway." He chuckled. "I don't hardly reckon you-all are fixin' to run off."

He moved toward the lagoon. Kay touched Barney's hand.

"I want to talk to you," she said.

"Alone."

"Right."

They moved off together. Her deep hazel eyes were wide with fear. She said, "Tell me the truth, Barney—did you meet Kirk in the Gardens last night?"

His gaze was level. He said, "No."

"If you had met him . . . if there had been trouble . . . wouldn't you be saying just what you're saying now?"

"I don't know."

"But you might lie to me, mightn't you?"

ELISHA: A LIFE OF HELPFULNESS

LESSON TEXT—II Kings 5:1-16, 14. GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another.—Ephesians 4:32.

"Loving kindness and tender mercies" (Ps. 103:4) are among the glorious attributes of our God, and consequently characteristic of those who love and serve Him. The world has all but forgotten these virtues, for in its brutal determination to achieve results there is only an outward veneer of courtesy and consideration which extends itself primarily to those from whom some advantage may be obtained or who are highly regarded because of their wealth or position. The poor and needy, the aged and afflicted are quickly brushed aside as unfortunate hindrances in the path of progress.

In all times God's people have been those most considerate of others. It is they who have given time and effort and means to help those in need. The life of Elisha is well characterized as a life of helpfulness. It is surprising to find how many of his miracles were for the purpose of helping others. God's servants are called to be leaders and to be preachers, but they are nonetheless called to carry on a life of helpful service. Elisha's experience with Naaman suggests how we may exercise such a ministry. Without seeking to designate verses in the text, shall we observe that we must

I. Find the One in Need.

It is not always that the one with the deepest need makes himself known. In fact, it is commonly true that those who have the greatest need and are possibly the most worthy of help keep their sorrows to themselves. Certainly it is true that those afflicted with the leprosy of sin do not often come to church. We must go out and seek them and bring them in.

One of the weaknesses of many churches today is that they go through their regular services, which may include preaching the gospel, and then they lament the fact that sinners do not come to the services to hear and be saved. Let us be reminded that it is our business to go out into the highways and the byways to find those in need. Naaman's experience illustrates how the simple word of a little slave girl was instrumental in bringing the leper in touch with the man of God. Had she failed in her responsibility, the prophet would have missed his opportunity to minister. Even the humblest believer has his important work, seeking out the lost and needy, and may thus be the means of bringing about great blessing.

II. Locate and Diagnose the Condition.

Naaman knew that he had leprosy, but he did not know that he had a blight of soul called pride. The prophet, acting under the guidance and control of God, struck right at the heart of things when he directed Naaman to crush his pride and to show his faith by obeying God's command to wash seven times in the Jordan.

The story has many important applications. Let us be sure that in our efforts to help people physically or socially, we get through to their real need, the need of Christ. Let us also be careful not to modify or change God's requirement. There is one way of salvation—through faith in Christ; there is no other remedy for sin. A man "must be born again" or "he cannot enter the kingdom of God" (see John 3:3-7). If men are too proud to go that way, they cannot be saved. Observe also that there was no respect of persons on the part of Elisha. Naaman was a great and distinguished man, ready to bestow rich gifts, but the man of God had no interest in those things. He wanted only to give God's message.

III. Apply the Remedy.

One would be quick to condemn the trained physician who, having found his patient and having given his attention to his need, made a careful and accurate diagnosis and then sent him away without applying the cure which was in his possession. As the servants of Christ the great Physician, engaged in the cure of souls, we need to be equally wise. It is commendable to engage in a discussion of the problems of needy men and women, expressing our heart interest in that need. It is desirable that we clarify our knowledge of their need and accurately understand the truth of the gospel which meets that need. However, all of these things are quite meaningless unless they result in the bringing of the gospel to bear on the lives of the unconverted.

Solitude

An hour of solitude, passed in sincere and earnest prayer or conflict with, and conquest over, a single passion or subtle bosom sin, will teach us more of thought, will more effectively awaken the faculty and form the habit of reflection than a year's study in the schools without them.—Coleridge.

Economy Costs Money

Yes, strange as it may seem, economy costs money when it causes you to cut down on your expenditures for things that are necessary for your comfort or welfare. And it is doubly expensive when it causes you to save on expenditures that, if wisely made, would return to you with a handsome profit added. Short-sighted saving has kept lots of people in the rut of toilsome grind and put many a business on the road to a bankrupt's court. Prudence must, of course, be exercised at all times in financial matters, but too much caution in personal and business affairs is often worse than foolhardy squandering.

An advertisement in The News doesn't cost a great deal of money, but it will return big dividends in the way of increased business and multiplied profits. Don't be niggardly in the amount of money you set aside for advertising—you can't afford to be.

An advertisement in The News delivers your sales message to hundreds of prospective buyers residing in this community, while your window displays are seen by only the few who pass your store windows.

The News carries to its hundreds of readers not only the news of the vicinity, but the sales messages of its merchants and business men as well. If you have anything to sell, you cannot afford not to be represented in the pages of The News. Your economy would be too expensive—it wouldn't be good business.

We'll help you prepare your copy.
