

Thomas J. Walsh Dies On Train

Man Named To Cabinet Of Roosevelt Is Stricken By Heart Attack In His Berth

Designated Attorney-General, Famed Investigator Of Teapot Dome Scandal Was Enroute From Cuba With Bride Of Few Days

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C. (AP)—Senator Thomas J. Walsh of Montana, 73, died suddenly of a heart attack aboard a railroad train near Wilson Thursday, enroute to Washington with his bride, whom he married Saturday at Havana.

Walsh, attorney general-designate in the Roosevelt cabinet, was stricken and died within a few minutes as he lay face downward in a drawing room berth. Mrs. Walsh, her maid, a conductor and porter were present.

The 73-year-old Montanan got up from his berth in the drawing room and staggered to his wife's berth as the train was traveling between Contentnea and Wilson, a distance of six miles.

Physician Arrives As Senator Dies

Mrs. Walsh, alarmed, and handicapped by her inability to speak fluent English summoned her Cuban maid, who occupied a berth in the same car. The maid sent a porter racing the length of seven cars to tell Herbert Weatherspee, the conductor.

The conductor felt the senator's weakening pulse and sent for a physician, Dr. Richard J. Costello, Cambridge, Mass., who was traveling on the train. Before the physician arrived Walsh had died.

"The senator died while I held his hand," Weatherspee said. "Mrs. Walsh was hysterical."

At Wilson a nurse and Dr. M. A. Pittman boarded the train to attend Mrs. Walsh, who was in a highly nervous state.

Walsh will be buried in the clothes in which he was married Saturday to Senora Nieves Perez Chaumont Triffin, widow of a Havana business man.

The body was taken to a funeral home here, embalmed and dressed in the wedding suit. According to present plans, Mrs. Walsh will accompany the body to Washington, arriving Thursday night.

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Roosevelt said the death of Senator Walsh was "a grievous loss not only to the whole country and the incoming administration in which he was to play so prominent and important a part, but in a deep measure to myself personally."

No hint was made of whether Roosevelt would fill the cabinet vacancy before taking office.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The senate immediately adopted resolutions of regret and adjourned as a measure of respect for Senator Walsh.

Uncovered Teapot Dome Scandal

Springing into national prominence almost overnight as the prosecutor in the Teapot Dome scandal in 1924, Thomas J. Walsh became a central figure in a swiftly moving picture of political events that perhaps had no counterpart in the history of the country.

From committee room to the senate floor and back again he delivered attack after attack on the republican administration and was largely instrumental in forcing the resignation of one cabinet officer and bringing about the indictment of Albert B. Fall, a former interior secretary, and Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair on charges of criminal conspiracy in connection with the leasing of the naval oil reserves.

Coming as it did in a national political year, this service brought Senator Walsh instant recognition from the leaders of the democratic party, who selected him as permanent chairman of the turbulent New York convention. The convention would have given him further reward by choosing him for second place on the presidential ticket with John W. Davis, but he would not permit it. He again was permanent chairman of the party convention at Chicago in 1922.

Born at Two Rivers, Wisconsin, on June 12, 1859, Senator Walsh started out to be a school teacher, after receiving his education in the public schools and the University of Wisconsin, but became interested in the law and began practice with his brother, Henry C. Walsh, at Redfield, S. D. in 1884. Six years later he moved to Helena, Mont. Becoming interested in politics these Senator Walsh offered for election to the house of representatives in 1906, but was defeated. He also was defeated for the senate in 1910, but was elected in 1912.

Mr. Walsh had seen ten years of service in the senate when that body decided that the secrecy surrounding the leasing of the oil reserves to Doheny and Sinclair by Fall during the early days of the Harding administration required investigation. He had come to be recognized among his fellows as a learned lawyer, but he was little known to the country.

When it was put underway, the oil inquiry itself created scarcely a ripple, and when weeks of the inquiry had run into months with nothing of the sensational developed it was almost lost sight of. Painstaking examination of vast volumes of the record had convinced Senator Walsh, however, that the transaction had not been wholly in the interest of the government. With this conviction he kept hammering away until Doheny furnished his sensational testimony that at the time of his negotiations with Fall for the lease to the California reserve he had loaned the then interior secretary $100,000, sending the money to Washington in a "little black sack" transported by his son. This testimony, followed by disclosure and as disclosure followed disclosure Senator Walsh found himself one of the most talked-of men in the country.

In the closing days of the inquiry, many of the friends of the senator urged him to become a candidate for the democratic presidential nomination, but he adhered to his original plan to support William G. McAdoo and in a public announcement argued that the bringing of McAdoo's name into the oil inquiry as one of the several former cabinet officers employed by Doheny at one time or another as counsel had in no way impaired his availability as a presidential candidate.

Arbiter in 1924 Fate had it that Senator Walsh should become chairman of the Madison Square Garden convention, a sort of arbiter in the history-making struggle between McAdoo and Alfred E. Smith, the New York governor, and also in the religious and racial row which was bound up in the controversy over a proposed platform plank denouncing the Ku Klux Klan. Like Governor Smith, whom he refused to support, the senator was a Catholic and so no friend of the Klan; but he told the leaders of the warring factions that as presiding officer he could show no favor as counsel to either candidates or policies.

Several times during those three teeming weeks the convention was on the point of a riot, and the senator smashed several gavel in his efforts, frequently vain, to maintain some semblance of order. Many times his own fighting Irish blood was aroused, and once or twice he threatened to clear the galleries of boisterous spectators who made the difficult work of the convention doubly hard.

When McAdoo and Smith finally were eliminated and the convention in the late afternoon of a sweltering July day had nominated John W. Davis, the delegates set up a cry for Walsh for vice president, and they would have stampeded themselves into nominating him forthwith had he not declared the convention adjourned. Later, informally notifying

Steers Can Take Bi-District Title By Defeating Breckenridge Outfit In Game Called For 7:30 Tonight

Only the Breckenridge Buckaroos and one game stand in the way of Big Spring Steers and the final state interscholastic basketball league.

Big Spring has only to win the game tonight to get into the state meet as a representative of this section. The Steers nixed out the Buckaroos Tuesday evening in the Breckenridge gymnasium, 30-20 and are favored to make it two straight and the second bi-district championship within three years.

This is the seventh meeting of the two teams in three seasons, each having won its district for the past three consecutive years. Big Spring took the title in 1931 in two straight games and dropped it 1-2 last season.

Breckenridge is noted for its height this year. Reports declare the Buckaroos make a majority of their points by reaching above the heads of their opponents and battling in follow up shots.

The visiting club will include Dot Brantley, Tom Fambro, Blynn Wilton, Billie Pitzer, Edward Deers, Willis Corley, Troy Northcutt, Vano Carey, Cecil Gibson and Ray Taylor.

George Brown, Steer mentor, will likely start Townsend and Morgan at forwards, Reid at center, Hare and Weldon Woods at guards.

In event Big Spring is unsuccessful tonight, a third and deciding game will be played Saturday in Abilene.

Texans Gather Where Declaration Of State Independence Was Written To Confer On Plans For Centennial

WASHINGTON (Washington Co.) (UP)—On the site where the declaration of Texas Independence was written, a group of Texans gathered Thursday to plan an expedition as a proper and fitting celebration of the Centennial of the declaration.

Today's meeting was the first of a series that will be held in each state senatorial district by the Texas Centennial committee to carry out its educational and organizational plans for the celebration in 1935 of Texas nativity.

More specifically, today's meeting was to dedicate a new auditorium erected on the spot where a group of brave and half-frozen patriots met in open session March 2, 1836, in 30 degrees below zero weather, to defy the Mexican government, to denounce the fall of the Alamo and to declare independence.

This little town of 300 persons, which with an even smaller population in 1836 served as the first capital of Texas, seethed with life today as outsiders swelled its population for the meeting. Small as Washington is, it is a far cry from the tree-sheltered settlement at which the first independent Texas government was organized.

Here, also, General Sam Houston was commissioned to lead the Texans' fight for independence and from this site set out with three hungry and battered aides to surround recruits to avenge the Alamo. The Centennial committee, under supervision of W. H. Mayes, former dean of the School of Journalism at the University of Texas, has set several other tentative meetings in its educational program. One will be held at Gonzales March 18 and one is being arranged for Goliad soon thereafter. Meetings in other senatorial districts will follow.

Mister Debuchi did allow himself something of a loophole this time by tacking on a big UNLESS. He said there would be no invasion UNLESS China threatened the safety of Japanese civilians.

You may recall that was the excuse given for destruction of the Chinese district of Shanghai last year. It is noteworthy Debuchi also promised that would not be done. He likewise promised the Japs would not attack Taitshair, Manchuria and had no designs on Manchuria.

W.T.C.C. Meet To Be Opened In City May 11

Arrangements Started At Conference Of Wednesday Evening

The annual general convention of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce will be held here Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 11, 12 and 13.

The dates were fixed here Wednesday evening at a conference of President Wilbur Hawk, Manager D. A. Bandeen and Assistant Manager Maury Hopkins with members of the board of directors of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. Hopkins will be convention manager and will open headquarters here about six weeks before opening day of the convention. He will work with the local steering committee, which is headed by E. J. Mary and Carl S. Blomshield as co-chairmen.

Agreement upon financial basis of the convention also was reached Wednesday evening.

Mr. Bandeen, noted for his conservative views and the outstanding success he has achieved in handling finances of the W.T.C.C., said that the organization would be able to begin the years work following the convention with 50 to 75 more affiliated towns than were enrolled at the beginning of this fiscal year.

"I sincerely believe we will have one of the largest conventions the organization has ever had, said he.

The conventions of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce have turned more and more toward business and constructive deliberations. This year we have been devoting much time to receiving applications from West Texas counties for employment relief funds, presenting these to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and distributing checks to the various county committees. This we have been able to do without cost to any county directly or indirectly, all cost of handling the applications being paid out of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce treasury.

Mr. Mary and Mr. Blomshield already have begun work. Mr. Hopkins and the local board will convene very soon upon the convention budget, to agree upon proposed expenditures. The conventions are financed by sale of registrations at one dollar apiece. Each person paying the registration fee receives admittance to all convention program attractions.

Hold-Up Brings Charge Against Youth Here

Paul Mitchell, held in Lubbock in connection with the death of Robert Sharp, was charged here in a complaint filed Wednesday by Sheriff Jess Slaughter with the robbery of the High School Grocery.

John Whitmire, proprietor of the grocery, positively identified Mitchell as the man who held up his store October 14. Lubbock officers paused here on their return trip from Kingsville long enough to allow Whitmire to view the suspect.

$60,000 Ransom Paid Shortly Before Denver Man Returned To Home

DENVER (AP)—Sixty thousand dollars ransom was paid shortly before Charles Boettcher, II, was freed here Wednesday night it was revealed Thursday.

Dr. John M. Foster, friend of the kidnaped broker, kept the ransom with abductors on behalf of Boettcher's father, who paid the ransom.

Texas Bank Moratorium Is Declared

AUSTIN, (AP)—Governor Ferguson Thursday afternoon issued a proclamation proclaiming a financial moratorium in Texas for five days and ordering all banks to remain closed until and including March 7.

The governor decided on the action as a means of preventing any disturbed situation resulting from financial difficulties experienced by banks of other states recently.

Federal Crop Production Loan Applications May Be Made Here

Field Representative To Make Local Headquarters At State National—Thurman, Carpenter And Thompson Receive Requests

Regulations for 1933 governing crop production loans have been issued by the Secretary of Agriculture and are now available to farmers in this county upon request to John S. Andrews, field supervisor of the crop production loan office. Mr. Andrews' headquarters will be while in Big Spring, at the State National bank. Mr. Andrews' field headquarters is at Midland.

Ira Thurman and Ben Carpenter of Big Spring and W. J. Jackson of Coahoma, Texas, will take applications for Howard county. Applications will then be reviewed by the county advisory committee, and certified and forwarded to the regional office at Dallas, for final approval and action.

The regulations this year specify that only loans for cotton, sorghum, wheat, rice, soybeans, and other crops are eligible for loans from the $50,000,000 fund authorized by congress. Loans can be used only for crop production, and require the borrower to reduce his acreage of cash crops 30 per cent under last year, unless he does not intend to plant more than 8 acres of cotton, 2 1/2 acres of tobacco, 8 acres of peanuts, 20 acres of corn, 12 acres of sugar beets, 2 1/2 acres of truck crops, 8 acres of potatoes, 30 acres of rice, or 40 acres of wheat.

The maximum permitted to any one borrower this year is $300; or, in the case of tenants, the total of all loans to tenants any one landlord within a single county can not exceed $1200. The actual amount advanced by the authorities will depend upon the borrower's requirements. A first lien or mortgage on the crop will be required. The regulations require that loans be repaid on or before October 31, 1933. Interest at 5 1/2 per cent, deducted in advance, will be charged.

Since the loans call for a first lien on the crop as security, the borrower frequently has to produce waivers from prior mortgages or rights. If the applicant is a tenant, or is farming land under contract for deed or so-called crop contract or has given a prior mortgage on his 1933 crops, the regulations state he must secure the waivers of the actual owners of the land, and or all prior mortgage holders. If the applicant is the owner of the land and farms it with tenants or share croppers, waivers of such tenants or share croppers must be secured. The regulations further specify that the person waiving his prior rights must agree not to dispose of his rent note, mortgage, or other security without first having obtained the written consent of a duly authorized agent of the secretary of agriculture.

The regulations make it unlawful for any person to dispose of or assist in disposing of any crop loan, except for the account of the secretary of agriculture and provide for fine and imprisonment for violation of such regulation. The regulations also require that each borrower agree to plant a garden for his home use and sufficient acreage to furnish feed for his live stock.

The county committee, Ben Carpenter, chairman, W. S. Satterwhite and A. W. Thompson met here Wednesday.

Action Upon R. F. C. Quotas Due Thursday

Howard County Scheduled For Higher Allotment For March, April

Directors of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation were expected to act Thursday on applications of West Texas counties for March and April employment relief funds filed with it by the West Texas Chamber of Commerce.

The handling of applications and distribution of checks to county committees every two months are being handled by the W.T.C.C.

D. A. Bandeen, W.T.C.C. manager, said here Wednesday that he was informed by telephone early Wednesday that the applications would be acted upon and that $12,000 for Howard county had been approved and the application for that amount placed before the corporation directors.

Economy Plan Is Devised By Party Chiefs

WASHINGTON, (AP)—Speaker Garner Thursday told newspapermen advisers of President-Elect Roosevelt had completed an economy program to shave from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 government costs.

The program was drafted by Rep. Douglas of Arizona, Roosevelt's choice for director of the budget, and Swager Shertley.

Garner said that under the treasury-post office department supply bill's provisions were included giving Roosevelt power to reorganize the government and most of the economies would be effected by executive order.

British Earl Visitor Here

Lord Charles Guy Faulke-Greville, bearing the title Earl of Warwick, said to be England's richest bachelor, was a passenger aboard the westbound American Airways plane Wednesday night, arriving at 10:56 with Chief Pilot Lee Wallace and Co-Pilot Harry Gorman at the controls.

During his short stay at the Big Spring airport, the young Britisher, who looked to be not more than 30 years of age, was slow in answering a reporter's questions. He said he had been interviewed no less than fourteen times since his departure from Atlanta in the morning, and had had little sleep since leaving Palm Beach, Fla. several days ago, where he had been wintering.

The Earl said he arrived in New York in early part of January, then went to Florida. He is en route to Los Angeles, on a pleasure jaunt, and will remain there for an indefinite period. This is his first trip across the continent, and he commented on the vastness of this country. "These long hops are unusual—in England the trips by air are shorter and more sippie are made. Aviation in this country compares very favorably to that in our country. Our ships are much larger and more passengers are carried," said the Earl between sips of tea.

Lord Charles is a very good-looking man, tall and dark complexioned with dark eyes and heavy black hair.

Lord Charles Guy Faulke-Greville is the seventh of his direct line to wear the title, Earl of Warwick, which dates back to the fourteenth century. Many of the celebrated warriors and statesmen of Britain have come from the line of Warwick.

Few Federal Jobs
The 25,000 federal jobs in Texas which Jim Ferguson, campaigning last summer, said would go to the party faithful, have diminished to a scant 14. This fact was made known by Senator Connally, who with Senator Sheppard has the privilege of deciding between the candidates for most of the federal jobs in this state.

Unless one has ability in a special line, one is out of luck entirely. Of the fourteen positions open now, four are district attorneyships, four marshals, four customs collectors, and two internal revenue collectors. All other positions in the federal services in Texas will be filled by appointment made by the heads of the respective departments. Senator Connally pointed out. Neither of the senators has any say in the matter.

It is reported that there are thousands of applicants for federal jobs in Texas but as Senator Connally clearly shows only a handful of them can be accommodated on the basis of patronage. The others are for the most part civil service employees who must enter competitive examinations.

"To the victor belongs the spoils."
That is an ancient political axiom, but it clashes with ideals of government. An ideal arrangement would be to have all federal positions divorced absolutely from party control and placed on a strict basis of merit. But that is a dream long delayed. Perhaps this generation will not see it.

Jobs for party workers are important to party discipline and strength. With the destruction of the spoils system, political parties would cease to exist for want of workers, whose hope of reward is a nice, fat federal job at the end of the campaign.

Patrick J. Hurley Declares His Support Of New Administration

Fundamental Readjustments Of Economic System In Favor Of Average Citizen Needed Says
Secretary Of War

By JOSEPH H. BIARD
United Press Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1933, By United Press)

WASHINGTON (UP)—Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley, who stumped the country opposing Franklin D. Roosevelt, declared his wholehearted support of the new administration.

In an exclusive interview with the United Press, Secretary Hurley also laid down what he believes is a basic principle of American economic recovery:

"Fundamental readjustments in the economic system in favor of the average citizen in this country are essential before we can regain prosperity."

He also urged that the U. S.
navy be built up to steady strength.
The interview started with a humorous note. We were talking of the end of the Hoover administration and the personal ties that must be broken.

"Well, the six-foot Oklahoman began with a broad smile, "I believe the prospect is a tremendous responsibility. It is a man-killing job. So I did my best to keep it from falling on the shoulders of a Democrat."

Then, assuming a more serious tone:

"When Mr. Roosevelt takes office, he will be my president. I believe that the success of his administration is essential to the prosperity of this country."

During his four years in the Hoover Cabinet, Secretary Hurley sat through many momentous meetings. The "Hoover moratorium," the reconstruction finance corporation and scores of other weapons for use in the war against depression were fashioned in those conferences.

The general prosperity of any country, he believes, must be based on the welfare of the farmers and laborers rather than the excessive prosperity of a small group.

Hurley said "the army and the civilian component of the national defense are better trained, better housed, better equipped and have a higher degree of proficiency than ever before in time of peace."

He did not advocate an increase in the army.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN
The Roosevelt Cabinet

The Roosevelt Cabinet, like all other Cabinets, does not conform to the first anticipation. Immediately after election the amateur Cabinet makers proceed to make a list of the ten most prominent members of the victorious party and then decide to be disappointed if the Cabinet does not contain nearly all of them. On this principle the Roosevelt Cabinet would have consisted of Newton D. Baker, Alfred E. Smith, Owen D. Young, Carter Glass, Norman H. Davis, John W. Davis, James G. Cox, Albert C. Ritchie, Bernard M. Baruch and, just to be a bit realistic about it, James A. Farley. No President ever selects such a Cabinet. In recent times the largest proportion of celebrities was the original Harding Cabinet, which contained Mr. Hughes and Mr. Hoover. Mr. Mellon was not well known when he was appointed. The one celebrity in the original Wilson Cabinet was William J. Bryan. Under the American party system every Cabinet represents the diverse elements to whom the president owes his victory. The fundamental consideration is not the assembling of superior talents and of impressive names but the consolidation of the political forces aligned with the president. This is inherent in the nature of party government, and in so far as it is a disadvantage it must be weighed against the general advantages of party government.

Mr. Roosevelt's Cabinet does very fairly represent the component parts of the coalition which gave him his victory. The theoretical Cabinet of celebrities would have been made up almost without exception of individuals who were opposed to his nomination and had misgivings about his election. It would thus have been a kind of nullification of the political overturn that took place in the primaries and in the Chicago convention. The Cabinet which Mr. Roosevelt has actually selected is drawn from a list of the most prominent men who prepared his victory in the party and in the nation. If there are lacking the celebrities who opposed him there are lacking also representatives of well advertised factions whose support was as embarrassing as it was temporarily convenient.

For my own part I am prepared to believe that on the whole Mr. Roosevelt has chosen well. His greatest task, as I see it, is to hold the confidence of the people and of the Democratic majority in Congress long enough to carry through a complex program of policies and measures necessary to recovery. This cabinet ought to win that confidence for him. There are men in it who will give the more nervous conservatives the cold shivers. But the Cabinet as a whole should be reassuring to the discontented and disillusioned who are now the great majority. Men who share their feelings about the ability and the disinterestedness of those who have exercised power in politics, in finance, and in industry during the past 12 years predominate in this cabinet. It is composed largely of veterans of the progressive movement, men whose records and affiliations should make them immune from any suspicion that their decisions are dictated by the great banks or the large corporations. This should make the Administration doubly free. It should be free of private pressure and it should be free also of the necessity of leaning over backward to prove that it is free.

In so far as the records of individuals are a clue to their future actions, it may be said, I think that the Cabinet reflects two fairly distinct, though not necessarily conflicting schools of thought. Thus for example, Mr. Walsh, Mr. Ickes and Miss Perkins are chiefly identified with the long struggle to prosecute predatory wealth and to impose social control and social standards upon corporate property. They are in the true line of evolution which began way back in the depression of the seventies, and led to the establishment of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the passage of the Sherman Act, a course of policy in which Bryan and the elder LaFollette, Theodore Roosevelt and Woodrow Wilson, had so conspicuous a part. Appointments like these clearly signify the intention of the Roosevelt Administration to resume the work of the progressive movement after the long conservative pause under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover.

Men like Mr. Hull on the other hand, though they have participated in the progressive movement, are primarily interested in a different set of problems. They inherit the Jeffersonian distrust of bureaucracy and centralization and of elaborate and artificial interference with the course of trade. In the historic meaning of the terms they are Liberals rather than Progressives. By preference they seek to regulate in order to remove the restraints upon liberty arising out of government favors and the concentration of wealth and power rather than to move toward a system of state socialism which requires extensive political direction and management of affairs.

The Democratic platform and Mr. Roosevelt's speeches were a blend not always harmonious, of these two philosophies. The cabinet reflects them both, and it will face many important decisions where the Administration will have to choose between them.

The composition of the Cabinet would seem to confirm what the campaign indicated: That in respect to immediate measures in the crisis the Roosevelt Administration will be liberal rather than inflationist and nationalist. It may be expected to attempt a policy consistent with, let us say, the recommendations of the experts of the world economic conference. Thus it should seek to bring about a rise of commodity prices by a combination of the tariff barriers, commercial agreements, currency stabilization, and the promotion of peace, these measures to be accompanied by a domestic policy based upon the resumption of investment under the stimulus of liberal credit arrangements, a balanced budget, and the reorganization, where necessary, of domestic indebtedness. The appointment of Mr. Hull is certainly not a concession to the nationalist bitter-enders and Mr. Woodin in the Treasury is no encouragement to the currency inflationists. The selection of Congressman Lewis Douglas as Director of the Budget is as good proof as could be offerred that Mr. Roosevelt takes the deficit and its implications seriously. For Mr. Douglas is as knowing as he is courageous.

But the Administration is bound to be concerned not only with recovery but with far-reaching reconstruction. The boom and the crisis have revealed such structural defects and such abuses of power and of trust that a period of reform is bound to follow. It is here that the Progressives will, we may suppose, exercise their great influence, for this is the field of their interests. They have contributed relatively little to the immediate problems of the crisis. They have been concerned with the bad practices of the frenzied finance which preceded the crisis and with plans of reform which might prevent such practices in the future. It is applying the lessons learned in the twenties that the new Progressivism will be needed. For once the crisis is surmounted the conservative disposition will be to let well enough alone. Our history seems to show that the lessons of a crisis are applied in the decade which follows the end of it. This crisis has shown the need of imposing much greater social control upon utilities, industrial corporations and banks, and while there is as yet no accepted Progressive program for accomplishing this purpose, the will to accomplish it is clearly reflected in the personnel of the new Cabinet.

These speculations should be used as mere speculations, remembering that the chief characteristic of these times is that events are more powerful than men. Any forecast must be qualified by the realization that the unexpected can not be discounted. Therefore, in the last analysis the confidence of the country must rest upon its sense of the character of the men who compose the administration, their disinterestedness, their courage, their capacity for the realistic appraisal of new events, and their freedom from entanglements of private interest and of special doctrine. I believe that this Cabinet is entitled to the confidence and that it must have the support of the nation. There is courage, there is ability, there is experience in it, and to a rather exceptional degree. I think it is composed of men who have proved themselves willing to make sacrifices for their consciences' sake. This Cabinet is singularly lacking in ordinary place hunters and in ordinary careerists. Almost all its members have had convictions which they have held to when it was neither profitable nor popular to do so.

Perhaps with courage and sincerity, and a reasonable amount of good luck, they will become celebrities.

FISH HALT TRIAL.
BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—The trial of Gus Walker, who was charged with burglary, can be held any day but Friday and Saturday. When Walker's case came up for trial it was found that Walker was serving time on the county roads on another charge and the case was to be reset. Saturday is an off day to start a trial, and Jim McK. Long, assistant solicitor, asked that Friday be excluded, because all the witnesses work in the fish-house, and Friday is their busy day.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XLV

Afterward when Sheila was in her own room she could still hear Dick's voice as he spoke those words, "I love you. You've got to marry me!"

She had not answered. Dorothy's gay crowd of guests had suddenly descended upon them, interrupting the conversation. There had not been another opportunity for her to speak to Dick alone. Now it was time to dress for dinner.

But Sheila did not want to hurry. She was in a magic mood. She was thinking about Dick who really loved her. Oh, he must love her! She had read it in his eyes, the tone of his voice, his manner. And she would have to give him an answer soon. What would she say?

Jeannette, the maid, had filled the tub for Sheila's bath. It was a luxurious bath, delightfully scented, relaxing. Sheila lingered in the warm, soapy water, realizing that she was tired.

But Jeannette was a creature who believed in promptness. She appeared with huge soft towels over her arm. "Are you ready, Miss?" she asked.

A little later, warm, dry, her body glowing, Sheila sat wrapped in a negligee before the dressing table. It was an elegant dressing table designed in the modernistic manner. There was a huge mirror with low shelves filled with silver and crystal bowls and bottles of beauty preparations.

"Which gown will you wear to-night?" the little maid asked.

"I'm not sure," Sheila told her. "Will there be many at dinner?"

"Not many. Those whom you met at the pool and a few others. About 50 I imagine."

Twenty guests at dinner seemed a large number to Sheila. She thought how the Samper family worked and planned when three or four guests were coming to their home. But Dorothy had only to give a few instructions and the work was done.

Sheila had brought three evening dresses—all of them model gowns of Henri's design. There was a lovely yellow chiffon, lace-trimmed; an apricot satin; and a lavender gown. Sheila preferred the yellow because it was more intricate and smarter. She decided to keep it until the following evening.

"I'll wear the apricot one," she decided.

The maid brought the frock and laid it across the bed. Sheila brushed herself with cosmetics. Cream and powder and a dab of rouge. She used very little make-up. To Sheila make-up was something to use before the footlights, and otherwise to be abandoned.

Her dark hair fell over her shoulders. Jeannette ran the comb through it, exclaimed at its softness and sheen. Then she coiled it in place just as Sheila always wore it. The effect was becoming.

"Will you wear ear rings?" Jeannette asked.

Yes, there were ear rings to accompany the apricot gown. Henri had decided that. But how clever of the maid to understand, just as the designer had, that they were needed to complete the costume.

Jeannette adjusted the dangling crystal drops to Sheila's ear lobes. The apricot gown was slipped over Sheila's head, drawn into place. It was a beautiful dress and the maid stood back, exclaiming in admiration.

Sheila, studying her reflection, had to agree. The dress was a triumph of Henri's art. "But remember," she told herself, "it's the dress, Miss Sheila Shayne! You're exactly the same girl you were an hour ago, though you don't look it."

Just as well to remind herself that all this luxury would come to an end. Monday morning she would be back at work again in the dress shop.

Jeannette interrupted her thoughts. "You are beautiful, Miss Shayne," she said softly.

"It's nice of you to say so."

"Very beautiful, Miss Shayne. And I think I know something else. You are in love."

Sheila laughed, flushing. "Why in the world do you think that?"

"I can tell. I know the signs. It is in your eyes, everything about you. Oh, yes! He will think you lovely tonight."

"Do you really think so?"

"He must."

Immediately, as though afraid that she had said too much, Jeannette became silent, impersonal. Deftly she touched a bit of perfume to Sheila's hair, the palms of her hands. She smoothed back her curls and straightened an ear ring. Then she stepped back, regarding her work with satisfaction.

But in spite of this flattering reassurance Sheila felt rather self-conscious a few minutes later as she went down the broad stairway. Dick was waiting for her at the foot of the stairs. The unconcealed admiration in his eyes brought swift color to her cheeks.

"The others are in the library," he told her, "but let's not join them just now. There are things I want to talk to you about first."

Sheila followed him across the wide hall away from the gay laughter issuing from the farther room. The clock in the hallway told them that fully 15 minutes would elapse before dinner would be served.

Dick led the way into a sort of sun room. The room was in half twilight and a soft breeze reached them through the wide open win-downs. Sheila sat down on a divan and Dick sank beside her.

"You didn't answer me this afternoon," he told her. He was not smiling. Sheila had never seen Dick look so earnest. His hand slipped over hers.

"You don't answer," he went on, "but you're going to marry me. Oh, Sheila, you must! I've waited a long while. I can't stand it any longer. I love you more than anyone in the world. There isn't any one else. There never has been! I'm going to marry you and take care of you. I don't give a damn if you don't love me. I don't give a damn if you love that other fellow. I need you. Sheila! Please—!"

The torrent of words broke off. Dick's head was bent and the girl placed her free hand on his hair.

"I didn't know it meant so much to you, Dick," she said softly. "I didn't know you loved me like that."

"But I've told you! What can I do, Sheila? I'll do anything in the world to make you care for me. I've tried to forget about you by working but you came between me and the paper. I'd see your face whenever I tried to put down a word. Ever since you came to my apartment with Dorothy I've remembered the way you looked there. Standing at the window. Touching the piano. Oh, Sheila—I want you so!"

He raised his eyes to hers. Burning eyes that held the girl's. Sheila's heart was beating swift.

"Dick loved her as she had loved Jerry. Why had she not understood that? But Jerry did not seem to count now. Could it be that she no longer loved Jerry? Had she been mistaken all along? Dick was unhappy just as she had been. Both of them had known suffering. Dick had been trying to forget her at the same time she had been trying to forget Jerry. Together perhaps they could find happiness."

"Dick," she said softly, "I'll marry you."

"Oh, Sheila!"

"I can't promise," she went on, "that I love you the way you love me. I'm not quite sure. But I'll marry you and try to make you happy. You've been the best friend I've ever had and I do care for you. I've made some mistakes, guess. Probably we both have. I'll try to make up to you, Dick, for the way I've hurt you. And I think maybe—I've loved you all along without realizing it—"

His arms swept around her. Sheila raised her lips to Dick's kiss.

The Roosevelt Cabinet Lineup

Cordell Hull
Secretary of State

Cordell Hull, who will be Secretary of State in the Roosevelt cabinet, is a tall, spare, cautious man. He is grave, deliberate, reserved in speech. His speeches are serious, long, full of economic figures and reminders of Thomas Jefferson. He appears to the eye to be a plodding, somber-minded, safety-first man. But that impression is deceptive.

He was the author of the income tax system, the most revolutionary change in the government's method of taxation since the days of Alexander Hamilton. The first federal inheritance tax law of 1916 also was his. Both of these monuments were erected by Hull during his long service as a Representative from Tennessee.

Senator Hull went into the Tennessee legislature at the age of 22, and resigned to join the Spanish war volunteers, returning as a captain. Then came four years on the state bench and in 1907 his first appearance in Congress. Taxation was his specialty, throughout his House service.

After the defeat of the Co-Roosevelt presidential ticket in 1920, Hull, still in Congress, was called in to be chairman of the Democratic National Committee and attempt the rebuilding of the party ruins. He maintained a tiny office in a low-rate office building and with the help of a publicity assistant kept the Democratic party from being entirely forgotten during the Harding period. Often he had to go to friends and beg for the rent, or even dig it up out of his own pocket.

As national chairman it was Hull's job to call to order the historic Madison Square Garden convention in New York in 1924. Sedition has the party gathered in such bitterness and tension as existed there.

Chairman Hull called the convention to order. Cardinal Hayes of New York had been invited to deliver the invocation and Hull, in the flurry of the excitement, presented his eminence as "Cardinal Gibbons."

Hull champions the theory that if the United States wants to sell abroad it must also buy abroad—that traffic cannot be one way across the world's international trade highways. His policy is the reverse of the isolation creed which would buy only at home.

Politically Hull early won favor in the Roosevelt camp by withdrawing as a favorite son of Tennessee. This was in the critical pre-convention stage when the anti-Roosevelt forces were attempting to set up enough favorite son candidates to smother the New York candidate. Hull announced he would not be a candidate.

A year ago at the meeting of the democratic national committee he challenged the prohibition repeal program of John J. Raskob, then chairman and made an open fight against the outright repeal program of the Raskob-Smith-Shouse group. Hull lost in that fight for the democratic national convention declared for repeal. Hull was unhappy and always was critical of that phase of the 1932 democratic policy.

ASLEEP IN THE DEEP
DENVER, Colo.—Glen was not in the habit of playing hooky, so his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lowe, couldn't understand it when the school principal notified them that Glen had not reported to his classes. The police were called and told to be on the lookout for Glen, but they had no luck. That evening Glen's father called the police station and said, "It's all right; we've found him. He's been asleep in the basement all day."

Teachers To Meet At Stephenville

STEPHENVILLE, (UP)—Five university and college presidents are on the program of the Mid-Texas Educational association annual program which opened its meetings here today with an indicated attendance of from 600 to 800 persons.

The meetings are at the John Tarleton Agricultural college and will last throughout Saturday.

Dr. W. B. Bizell, president of the University of Oklahoma, was a speaker at the opening sessions today on the subject "The Challenge of Education."

Other university and college presidents to address the meetings include Dr. H. Y. Benedict, president of the University of Texas; Dr. T. O. Walton of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical college; Dr. Bradford Knapp of Texas Technological college and Dr. H. W. Moorehead of Sul Ross State Teachers' College.

State Superintendent L. A. Woods and H. W. Stillwell, president of the Texas State Teachers' association, are on the program.

General meetings occupied the mornings and afternoon sessions are devoted to sectional discussion groups.

An inspection trip of John Tarleton College campus and demonstration farm was to be made this afternoon by the entire attendance.

The organization includes 22 counties, each having a member on the executive committee. Judge O. L. Sim, ex-officio county superintendent of Concho county schools, is president of the association.

It is understood here that Hearst submitted no suggestion to Roosevelt for Cabinet nominees and that McAdoo's chief preoccupation was over Roper. The California senator threatened to fight Woodin's confirmation. If he could not place John B. Elliott, former West Coast Com. on Intern. Revenue, as Sec. of Interior, he got Roper instead.

The whole list strengthens the impression that Roosevelt intends to be the boss and has deliberately chosen team workers instead of prima donnas. New York will reserve judgment until it sees what his program is. There is some relief from the specter of currency inflation.

Some Auto Owners May Get Licenses On 10-Month Fee

Automobile owners may obtain a license for only a ten months fee provided they have not used their cars since January 1, Tax Collector Loy Acuff said Thursday.

Those who have been using their cars will be required to pay the full twelve months fee. Time for payment of the 1933 license fee without penalty will end midnight March 31, he said.

Like other tax collectors, Acuff reported a practical cessation of payment after the extension was announced. Only buyers of new cars and those making transfers have done business since news of the extension.

Whittington Barely Has Edge On McGinty In Feature Match Of Show

Alabama Cajun Beats Substitute For Pat Adams—Owens And Shade McGinty Mix It Merrily

Red McGinty and Kid Whittington, aspirants to the crown of the local ring, met again Wednesday evening and neither was able to say he won a clean-cut decision.

Perhaps Whittington had the edge, but it was very slight. Through most of the match he carried the fight to McGinty and out-boxed the Snyder red head. But McGinty stuck in some of his famous punches that made Whit stop and think it over. Action was never very furious but the two principals drew cheers from the crowd several times as they swapped long rights and lefts.

Alabama Cajun, scheduled to tangle with Pat Adams, was forced to meet a substitute at the last minute when Adams, who is not in shape due to long working hours, could not enter the ring. Little Willie Gray gave the Cajun ten pounds and a few years, then stopped a left jab and terrific right cross with his button. He bounced off the canvas like a chunk of lead. At the count of seven he struggled to his feet, wobbled back and fourth, and as Referee Simmons backed off Cajun, Willie collapsed and fell like a deflated dirigible.

Sailor Owens and Shade McGinty gave a good four round exhibition. Sailor was the better boxer, but McGinty's punches seemed to be possessed with a bit more of the explosive element.

After taking a beating for two rounds while seeking to straighten Kid Bowser from his crouch, Red Callahan took to his windmill swing and pummeled the Kid about the ring. In the fourth round Red swung more flats than Bowser could well watch. Had the red head one punch remaining he could have finished Bowser. However, the round refreshed them both and they were mixing it evenly afterwards.

Under The Dome At Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 AUSTIN (UP)—What a "government on wheels" costs has been compiled by State Comptroller George W. Sheppard and Editor John T. Smith of the Texas Tax Journal.

Hold your breath. The total of traveling expenses for the last fiscal year will astonish you. It was $713,994!

This does not include the state highway department. The report from that department was omitted because of inability to get segregated items.

Of the total, $101,692 went for rail and bus fares; $363,556 for mileage or personal cars; $106,131 for rooms; $146,981 for meals; $107,431 for gasoline and oil; $12,733 for tires and tubes, and $34,890 for auto washing and repairs.

Commenting on the amounts Editor Smith says:

"Assuming each government employee paid full three cents per mile for his or her transportation, the traveling agents of the government traveled 2,373,933 miles for the one year ending August 31, 1932.

"If an employee of the government owns a car and uses it in the government service, the law allows him or her five cents per mile which includes gasoline, oil, castings and repairs. According to the figures furnished us, the employees owning their own cars traveled 3,269,820 miles. Total miles traveled 8,643,433.

$1,573 Rooms

"On a basis of $2 per room, 51,573 rooms in hotels and rooming houses were paid for by the state last year for government employees.

"On a basis of 50 cents per meal the state paid for 273,594 meals for government employees last year."

Texas eleemosynary institutions will get $7,894,352 for operation the next two years under the appropriation bill drafted by the house appropriations committee.

This compares with $9,841,342 for the preceding two years and $9,092,558 recommended in the state budget.

So persistent is the report that Frank Denison, really took two oaths of office as highway commissioner that reasons are being sought why he should act twice.

He is entitled to his place, if at all, on the contention that his appointment was not to fill a "vacancy." This may answer the question about taking the oath.

He is reported to have taken the oath first early on Feb. 15.

One Johnson, Tyler, whom he will succeed, was seriously ill. Bedside bulletins reported Johnson in bad shape. If Johnson had died before Denison took oath, there would have been a "vacancy" and it could have been filled only with consent of two thirds of the senate.

Photography is about to become a lost art. Texas photographers assert in a preamble to a bill they are asking the Texas legislature to pass. Despite all the startling developments of the movie camera, col sound and long distance transmission, the Texas Photographers Association takes a drab view of the outlook for the profession.

Here are some of its complaints: unskilled photographers are selling imperfect and unpermanent photographs that are to be found faded, discolored and disintegrated though the owners paid for good ones; photographers canvassing from house to house purporting to be representatives of reliable firms and submitting samples, sell coupons which purport to entitle the holders to work at much less than its actual cost.

These solicitors are often importunate, insistent and sometimes abusive in their efforts to sell their wares to a reluctant customer, especially if the potential customer should be the lady of the house," says the association resolution.

The association asks that photographers be licensed. Photographers for newspapers or periodicals and other persons not taking pictures for sale, would be excused

QUIT NEW YORK BANK POSTS

Charles E. Mitchell (left) resigned as chairman of the National City Bank of New York and Hugh B. Baker (right) quit as president of the National City company, an affiliate of the National City bank. Both testified before the senate stock market investigating committee. (Associated Press Photos)

Clarence Ousley, for many years one of the most noted editorial writers in Texas, once told a legislative committee that, though he had followed the writing trade for more than a quarter of a century and pride himself on some knowledge of words and skill in their use, he did not pretend to say what a word meant when put in a law.

So pertinent is this comment, that a large per cent of the laws now being offered in the legislature take no chance with legal construction of the words. Acts open with a miniature dictionary telling what words in them mean.

Punctuation still offers a judge a chance to construe the meaning of a law, but he can no longer fall back on a distinction between "or" and "and." Most of the laws now use conjunctive phrases in duplicate.

Therefore a bill reads like this: "Any person who engages in the business of buying and or selling... Sometimes they write it "and/or," sometimes "and-or," and sometimes "and (or)."

Which suggests the next lexicographer might as well include a new word "and/or."

At present there is a line running from Amsterdam to Sourabaya, and the Dutch are willing to link with Australia at either Korpang or Wymdha Taylor.

Australian National Airways also said to be considering England. This would link an air line connecting with Sydney with London, and would make the trip in fourteen days.

Dr. J. C. Burkett Of Abilene Succumbs

ABILENE—Dr. J. C. Burkett, 74, native Texan and a Baptist minister for fifty years, died at a local hospital Tuesday night. Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Dr. Burkett held pastorates in Taylor, Colorado, Alvin, Calvert, Midland, Del Rio and of three local Baptist congregations. Five children survive. They are O. S. Burkett and Mrs. Bernice Brunson of Abilene, Mrs. L. E. Howard of Kerrville, Mrs. J. Cran Hardin of Dallas, and J. C. Burkett Jr., of Brokenridge. Two sons, Lieut. E. F. Burkett of the naval air service, and Homer Burkett of the United States marine corps, preceded him in death. His first wife, and the mother of his children, died in 1927. He was married a year later to Mrs. Irene Willard, who survives him. He was born in Lavaca county March 4, 1859 and was licensed to preach in 1882.

Kleberg Appreciates Endorsement By Texas Senate For High Post

WASHINGTON, (UP)—Texas senate resolution endorsing Representative Richard Kleberg for ambassador to Mexico was received Wednesday by him.

He expressed gratitude over the action of his friends but indicated unless especially asked to accept the diplomatic post, he preferred to remain in congress.

Apply Unguentine. Quick! It soothes the pain—prevents infection and ugly scars. Ask your druggist for the red-and-yellow tube, 35c day when Floyd Bufford, clerk, was unloading a rifle. The gun went off. The bullet glanced off the ceiling and struck Cowan on the side of the head, piercing the lobe of his ear and lodging in his jawbone.
