Cryer Reports International Lions Clubs

A. Cryer, president of the McLean Lions Club, and delegate to the international convention of Lions at San Francisco, Calif., reported the convention activities at the regular week-long luncheon of the local club held Monday.

President Cryer said the international convention was on a high plane, being semi-religious in nature. Two jokes were told by the speakers in the 4-day session, and were acceptable to anyone.

The convention was democratic in nature, and delegates from the different nations represented wore their own dress.

Reports showed some 400 new clubs organized the past year, with 12,000 members, bringing the total membership to over 105,000.

The master parade staged by delegates required five hours to pass a point.

President Cryer showed that "Lionism" is a state of mind and gave proof of the benefits derived from Lionism. The Bas Lion made committee assignments for the present fiscal year, and Lion Tamer Joe Dowlin showed five club visitors.

VARIETY NEEDED IN SUMMER DIET

By Vera Martin, HS-FSA

Part of diet advice these days is—"Eat plenty of vegetables, and get as wide a variety as you can." For vegetables are among our most important foods and they please the appetite and are valuable sources of certain necessary vitamins and minerals.

At this time of year, of course, it is easier to get both "plenty" and a "variety" of vegetables. For during the summer most home gardens swell the supply of vegetables that are produced commercially the year round.

But no matter how the crops may come and go the homemaker has always the same responsibility towards vegetables in the kitchen. There she writes the final chapter in the life history of the cabbage and the spinach. And for any vegetables there can be no better climax than for it to be served up in a nourishing and appetizing dish.

Naturally, how nourishing a cooked food will be depends upon the method of cooking—how well it conserves the vitamins and minerals. Some of the vitamins are destroyed in food when it is heated in the presence of air. Or they may dissolve in the cooking water and be lost if that is thrown away. Heat does not destroy mineral salts. But they, too, dissolve and are lost if the cooking water goes down the sink.

Simple rule for cooking vegetables to save food value is—"cook in as short a time as possible, using the least water that is practical." Both help to conserve vitamins. And using little water leaves none or very little when the cooking is done.

Since we ordinarily eat foods because they "look," "smell" and "taste" good, other important cooking points concern flavor, texture, and color. Of all these in vegetables, probably color is the trickiest of all to deal with.

Vegetables fall into four color classes—the yellow, the white, the green, and the red. Yellow vegetables give the cook little trouble; white vegetables create few cooking problems. But the greens and the reds need special attention.

Cook in an uncovered pan—that's the main thing to remember when you cook green vegetables.

For the reds, such as beets, cook in a covered pan. If necessary, add a little dilute acid to the cooking water. The color pigment in these vegetables stays red in acid, starts to fade in alkaline waters.

White vegetables go through no such dramatic changes. They stay white in water that is slightly acid and become yellow or greenish in alkaline waters. So cook white vegetables much the same as the red.

As to flavor, vegetables are divided into three camps—strong, medium and mild. Cabbage is considered one of the first group. In cooking it you must take care not to develop the flavor by cooking in a closed kettle for a long time. This makes it an unappetizing, brownish vegetable, with an undesirable odor and flavor.

For mild vegetables such as delicately flavored June peas, use a minimum of water. Cook until just tender. By that time the water should be condensed to be just enough to serve with the vegetable. Adding salt brings out the natural flavor of all vegetables.

"Do not overcook"—that's the negative rule that must be observed if vegetables are to have a pleasing texture. Vegetables are done when they are tender but not soft and they are flabby. Also having the vegetables of uniform size and keeping the cooking time down by starting the vegetables in boiling water also helps in getting pleasing texture.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Rice of Lubbock visited relatives here last week end.

Oscar (Bubby) Lochridge, Jr., of Iowa Park visited in the E. J. Windom home over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Roberts of Cebello, N. M., visited their aunt, Mrs. J. W. Kibler, over the week end.

THE RIVER of SKULLS

SYNOPSIS

Alan Cameron, young trapper, Noel, his Indian partner, and Rough, husky Ungava sled dog, look in vain for the Montagnais trappers' camp in the desolate Big River country of Northern Canada.

"Who were you expecting," demanded Alan, suddenly determined to make an end to this mystery.

Slowly the somber face of McCord relaxed in a smile of amused interest at the dark insinuation.

"I'll get the dogs. I need them for myself, anyway," cried the excited boy, finally burning the bridges of his doubt.

And so, on the white shell of the river, as the crusted barren to the east flushed in the afterglow of the smothered sun and the fingers of the frost clamped hard on the desolate valley, the pact was made.

One gray April day, two weeks later, Alan and Noel reached the mouth of the open river and saw in the distance, on the island, the straggling buildings of the Revillon Freres and the Northern Trading Company and, below them, the old Hudson's Bay post of Fort George.

"See the old place, Rough!" cried Alan to the dog who labored in the wet snow, sinking above his knees at each step.

Tired and stiff from the long race against the spring break-up, the boys followed the high north shore of the river, running with broken tidal ice, the sticky snow weighing down their shoes like lead.

"What do you know about this fellow, Alan?" Alan Cameron slowly shook his head while he waited to hear whether McCord's men had deserted him or had started back with the dogs and supplies they had been sent for.

"Well," continued McNab, "the joke is on this trader McCord for the Indians took his dogs and money and headed down the coast for Moose. Now he's stranded in there alone, with what do you think? A girl—his daughter. Fancy taking one's daughter into that wild bush!"

Alan followed the other's announcement with an expression of well-earned surprise on his dark features. So, after all, McCord had been deserted by his men as he had thought.

"Pretty tough on a girl," he agreed. "How does he hope to trade in there without help?"

"He can't. He'll be showing up down here this summer trying to hire it."

The cloud-masked ball of April sun was buried in the drifting fogs of the bay when Alan opened the heavy slab door of the Revillon Freres trade-house, a mile above the Hudson's Bay settlement.

"Ba-gosh! Alan Cameron! What you do here de las' of April?" cried a tall Frenchman, turning from the huge stove in the middle of the room and seizing the grinning Alan by the shoulders.

"Hello, Duncan! You haven't grown a day older since I saw you in the summer," laughed Alan, as the surprised clerk gripped their hands, searching the wind-burned faces for signs of starvation that drove men in to the fur-posts in early spring.

"Do we look it? We've come from the headwaters in fifteen days. That's why we look like caribou in fly time."

"But what drove you off your trap-lines then?"

"De carcajou," explained Noel. "He get to our cache."

"Oh-ho! Wolverine, eh? And you came down on the crust before your grub gave out? Did you bring much fur, lads?" added the always business-like Scotchman.

"Better hunt than last year. I've got some black marten and fox that'll make your mouth water, Duncan. What's the news from outside?" asked Alan, usually, anxious to learn what the Indians of John McCord had told of East Main.

"Aye, lad, there's plenty of news," answered the clerk. "Some Indians came out at East Main in December with a pretty tale."

"What about? Starvation at Nichicun, again?"

"Naw. It seems there ain't enough traders already on this coast. There's another one—in on the headwaters."

"What do you mean—a trader—on the headwaters?"

"He went in last summer by way of Rupert. He located somewhere beyond Nichicun, on these headwaters."

"Did you hear that, Noel?" demanded Alan of the Indian who lounged against the counter, running his eyes over the trade-goods on the shelves while he listened intently to the conversation.

"Ah-hah!" Noel's dark face was as bare of expression as though carved from wood. "Ver' strange 'ting!"

"You didn't run into any hunters winter we talk about you, together."

Alan's face was stained with color. "How is she?" he asked.

"Oh, purtee as evair—but dis Arsene," Pierre shrugged his heavy shoulders as his face registered an expression of contempt, "he bodder her."

Rivard! Alan felt cold at the thought. Arsene Rivard had had all the long winter to make love to Dessane's eldest daughter. It was what he had feared.

"Shush!" Pierre warned, as the door opened and three men entered the trade-room stamping the wet snow from their moccasins.

"Allo, Cameron! I heard that you had come in today." A dark young man wearing a small moustache on his sleek, round face approached Alan with extended hand.

Without comment on the misfortune which might have meant death Rivard turned to the two men who had followed him into the room.

"This is the man Dessane told you about," he said. "He hunts the James McQueen. Shake hands with Tom Slade, my partner. We want to have a talk with you."

Surprised by the situation which had so swiftly developed, Alan stared hard at the men who stood before him.

"When can you start back with us?" abruptly demanded McQueen. Alan's eye caught Noel's inscrutable look as he yawned, shrugged his wide shoulders and retorted: "Mr. McQueen, I'm not starting back with you."

McQueen turned and engaged Rivard and Slade in conversation while Alan walked to the trade-counter where his friend Pierre awaited him with a wink of approval. Alan asked for tobacco. As he opened his skin pouch to hold the plug, a folded five-dollar bill slipped to the floor.

In a flash, Alan's moccasin covered it. Dropping the plug beside his moccasin, he bent over and scooped bill and tobacco from the floor with the same movement of the hand and put them in his pouch.

A folded five-dollar bill slipped to the floor.

headwaters; he'll take you there."

Alan's back stiffened. The blood leaped to his face at the insolence of the remark. "How d'you know what I'll do, Rivard?" he rasped.

"What—'you're Cameron?" demanded the elder of the strangers, a powerfully built man of forty with pale blue eyes, closely set beneath dark, shaggy brows. The network of fine lines about the eyes and the seamed face gave the impression of one who had lived hard. To the other man, the taller of the two, with light hair and nondescript features, Alan gave but a fleeting glance. The older man evidently was the dominant personality.

As his eyes swept the two men Alan was thinking hard. Why did these men wish to go to the headwaters?

"Dessane says you're just the man we want, but we didn't expect to see you for weeks yet," the stranger was saying, as he shook Alan's hand. "My name is McQueen,

But his body shook with the pounding of his heart.

Had the bill been seen by Rivard and the others standing in whispered conversation at the door? Noel should know. Alan, leaning on the trade-counter, answering in monosyllables as the voluble Pierre chattered, heard the door close behind him.

"Are these people going to supper with Rivard at Dessane's?" he asked Pierre.

"Yes."

"Then I can't see Berthe until they are through?"

"No. Wait until dey come back here aftair dey eat, den you can see yer alone, eh? She help her modder and de cook, now."

"That will make us late to eat with you."

Checkers Ranks First Among the Games OK'd by Pupils of Michigan High School

And what is the favorite game of modern youth—bridge, badminton, ping pong, hockey or loop tennis?

It's none of those if the interests of Baldwin junior high school students are an accurate indication. It's still that old favorite of the era of the general store and its open cracker barrel. Checkers is right, states a Birmingham correspondent in the Detroit Free Press.

About 75 per cent of the students of Baldwin high school belong to clubs of some type but there is only one game club and that was organized by checker addicts. It has 50 members, although its membership is restricted to junior high school students.

It ranks among the leaders in student interest.

Dramatics hold the interest of the biggest percentage of the students with 95 enrolled in the senior dramatics club and 26 in the junior. Interest in the Camera club has grown rapidly in the last two years and its membership has had to be restricted to 57.

The Knit, Sew and Chatter club draws 71 and the Girls' club is one of the bigger organizations. It offers instruction in first aid, health and social hygiene.

The Science club, with 89 members, built a public-address system for the school, sponsored purchase of a talking picture machine, and carries on considerable study of conservation practice.

"Students get an activity credit for participation in the clubs and although membership is voluntary, most of them belong to some club at some time," Principal R. H. Bechtold says. "Probably many get more benefit from these clubs than from some of their academic courses."

Wood Used for Caduceus

The caduceus originated in the prehistoric times in Greece. Hermes or Mercury, in Greek and Roman mythology, was the messenger of the gods, and the patron of commerce and of peace. His staff was of olive wood, with two serpents coiled about it and with two wings at the top. According to some legends the serpent was sacred to Asclepius and Hygiea as a symbol of health, apparently because it changes its skin periodically and so is an emblem of renewed vitality.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Food Value of Ice Cream

Nationally Known Food Authority Describes Its Place in the Diet

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

ONE of the most significant contributions of modern nutritional science was the discovery of the importance of the protective foods—milk, eggs, fresh fruits and vegetables.

These foods abound in the minerals and vitamins that help to insure normal growth and health, and safeguard against the deficiency diseases.

In this group, milk and dairy products made from it assume a commanding position because milk is the best and most practical source of calcium and vitamins A and G.

These substances should be consumed in much greater proportions than at present if we are to increase health and efficiency and improve our chances for longevity.

The first rule in providing adequate amounts of the protective foods is to allow daily a quart of milk for every child and at least a pint for each adult.

This amount of milk need not always be consumed as a beverage, however. It may be used in cooked dishes or eaten in the form of cheese and ice cream.

Composition of Ice Cream

Ice cream is often regarded as a confection, but it deserves to be classed among our most nutritious foods.

It is composed of varying proportions of cream, milk, sugar, flavoring and frequently a binder or stabilizer such as gelatin.

The composition varies somewhat between the home-made and the commercial product and the commercial product differs in various states.

That is because standards governing the butter fat content differ widely so that the requirement ranges from 8 to 14 per cent. Most large commercial companies produce an ice cream with about 12 per cent fat.

Guard Against Contamination

Some states require the pasteurization of the milk or cream used in manufacturing ice cream; others stipulate that the entire mix must be pasteurized before freezing.

These measures are desirable, as ice cream requires the same scrupulous care that should be given to milk and cream.

Because of the possibilities for contamination, several precautions should be observed in buying ice cream. Choose cream manufactured by a reputable concern. Be sure to buy from a dealer who keeps it well frozen, for ice cream that has been melted and refrozen again may be dangerous, owing to the opportunity for the multiplication of bacteria while it was melted. See to it also that the dealer uses sanitary methods in dispensing.

Home-Made Ice Cream

An easy way to make certain of the purity of the ice cream you serve is to make this delicious dessert at home.

Motor-driven freezers are available, as well as those that are manually operated. And the homemaker with an automatic refrigerator finds it easier to make ice cream than to prepare many less interesting and nutritious desserts.

Ice cream powders which simplify the preparation of home-made ice cream, can be obtained unflavored, or in a variety of flavors, including lemon and maple, in addition to the popular vanilla, chocolate and strawberry. The ice cream powders may be used with milk or a combination of milk and cream to produce a healthful dessert suitable for every member of the family. They also may be used for less rich but equally refreshing milk or buttermilk sherbet.

A canned freezing mix is likewise available and is especially nice in a fruit flavor as it contains pieces of the whole fruit.

A Comparison With Milk

If we regard one-sixth of a quart of ice cream as an average serving, and compare it with one cup of milk, we make the interesting discovery that there is a close relation between the two. The ice cream provides about 24 more calories and only a trifle less protein, calcium, phosphorus, iron and vitamin A. There is considerably less vitamin G, but ice cream nevertheless considered an excellent source of this important vitamin.

A Healthful Food

It then becomes apparent why ice cream is considered as an excellent food, not only for adults but for children and convalescents, and why one outstanding authority urges the liberal use of ice cream as a means of increasing the vitamin A content of the diet.

Plain ice cream may be used interchangeably with simple milk puddings. Rich mixtures, such as those filled with nuts and crystallized fruits, rank with the best of light desserts and should follow a lighter meal.

Ice cream is so rich in nourishment that it should not be consumed indiscriminately between meals, but should always be considered as part of the day's ration. When that is done, one of the beneficial effects can hardly be overestimated.

Effect on Digestion

One frequently hears the question, "Doesn't the eating of ice cream retard the digestion of other foods consumed at the same time?" The answer is that it slows up slightly the emptying of the stomach but this delay without significance and is more than compensated for by the important nutrients it provides.

Many people believe that it is injurious to follow ice cream with hot coffee. But it has been demonstrated that just the opposite is true. The coffee raises the temperature of the food in the stomach and thus modifies the effect of the ice cream.

Another common question concerns the effect of cake or pie made. Experiments indicate that eating ice cream with cake or pie produces a more satisfactory gastric juice than when one of these foods is eaten alone. One must take into consideration, however, that cake or pie is a much richer combination and plan to eat a remainder of the meal accordingly.

Use More Ice Cream

It has been estimated that 1 billion pounds of milk are produced each year in the production of commercial ice cream, which provides about three gallons of cream per capita. The amount of ice cream made at home raises this figure somewhat, but the amount consumed may be further increased, because when properly made from the ingredients, ice cream does not rank with other dairy products among our most wholesome nourishing foods.

"RELIEF BUMS"

A news item, says the Industrial News Review, tells of a negro taxi driver who was unable to work for a time because of illness. He obtained $50 from a government relief agency to tide him over. Now he is back at work, and is trying to return to him that he was not legally obligated to do this, he observed. "That was the way I was raised—and that's the way I'm raising my child."

A great many other Americans can learn a lesson from this negro taxi driver. One of the most ominous portents on the horizon is the fact that thousands of people have apparently come to look on relief as a "profession." They plan to make it their "life work."

Productive jobs in private industry hold no attraction for them, when they can take it easy at the taxpayer's expense. They figure someone owes them a living.

This isn't a criticism of those people who have turned to relief as a last resort, and are eager to get off the rolls as soon as opportunity for a real job comes along. Nor is it a criticism of relief perse. The hungry must be fed, the homeless sheltered, the clothed clothed. Honest beneficiaries of relief aggressively seek relief employment. Professional "relief bums" are a new menace to democratic government.

The negro's statement was news because his attitude was so unusual today. It should be printed on every relief check and public grant. That writer does the most, who gives his readers the most knowledge and takes from them the least time.—C. C. Cotton.

Weekly News Review Failure of Democratic Purge Gives Republicans New Fear

Politics If Franklin Roosevelt ever planned to "purge" his Democratic party of undesirables, he now knows the purge has failed.

News of purge failure has recently sent the most conservative into ecstasies. For once, it appears, Franklin Roosevelt's domination over the party is at ebb tide.

Is purge failure helping untangle badly twisted United States political lines? Decidedly the contrary. Is purge failure eliminating Franklin Roosevelt as a third term? Probably not.

Originally the purge idea sought to transform the Democrat party into an instrument of coherent liberalism, implying formation of an equally coherent conservative party on the other side.

Deeply tanned from his 20-day fishing trip to tropical Pacific waters, Franklin Roosevelt was back in his 48 states last week, still mum about third term rumors that have kept newsmen busy since he left.

Of all rumors, most thought-provoking was that purge failure robs the President of party control, robs him also of the right to name a successor in 1940.

Enthusiastic New Dealer Roosevelt would rather run himself than pass the mantle to a less ardent New Dealer.

Blue Grass politics was red hot as Kentucky prepared to choose a Democratic senator. At Jackson, Former Sheriff Lee Combs and his brother attended a rally for their own faction, then walked brazenly into a rally of opposition forces.

When the smoke cleared, Lee Combs was shot dead. A few minutes later his father organized kinfolk to search for William Combs, who was no relative but the alleged slayer.

KENTUCKY'S ALBEN BARKLEY It was surely a fine day.

Said Police Chief A. S. Sizmore: "I'm a Republican so I'm not on either side. They were all het up from politician."

Two days later Kentucky went to the polls. At Versailles, Gov. A. B. "Happy" Chandler muttered, "Down the hatch" as he chivalrously voted for his opponent, Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley.

By midnight it appeared that Happy Chandler should have voted for himself. "Dear Alben," with presidential blessing, was renominated and political theorists tried to figure out what it meant.

Foreign Since 1931, when Japan marched into Manchuria, Tokyo and Moscow have been "on the brink of war." Last week they appeared to be fighting two wars: In one, at the isolated Russian-Manchurian-Korean frontier nobody knew who was winning.

Amidst a barrage of incidents, communiques and curt notes, Asia's two powers were attempting to settle ownership of a shell-pocked hill near the village of Changkufeng.

Russia-Jap hostilities in this sector date back to 1931 when Japan marched into Manchuria and looked longingly at land patrolled by Russia's autonomous Siberian army.

Already tired of one war (see below), Japan was anxious to avoid another. Finally Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu at Moscow received word to open peace negotiations. Last week it appeared proud, stubborn Japan would have to eat crow if she wanted peace with prouder, more stubborn Russia.

MAXIM LITVINOV "The time has come..."

to terminate these endless incidents." Foreign Minister Litvinov matched Tokyo's proposals with an even better set:

(1) Immediate cessation of hostilities with mutual withdrawal behind a fixed line.

(2) That line to be determined by the Russ-China treaty of June 26, 1886.

(3) Appointment of a bilateral commission, two Russians, one Manchukuan, one Jap, to negotiate for redemarcation of the line on basis of the 1886 treaty.

While Japan boasted after two weeks that 1,500 Russ soldiers had been killed and wounded against 180 on her own side, two tattered Soviet deserters walked into her Siberian camp to air their grievances against Moscow.

They deserted because their fathers, well-to-do Kulak farmers, had been heavily taxed, heavily oppressed in the Soviet drive for collective agriculture.

"Our slogan is defend the fatherland of liberty," one said, "but how can we soldiers defend such a system when the cows, horses and even their barns are taken away."

To Japan it looked like Russia's poor Siberian administration was her ally.

Last week weary Japanese troops were still more than 100 miles down the flooded Yangtze river from their goal, Nanking, long since deserted by the Chinese government.

While defending troops claimed the invaders had been repelled in battle after battle, crafty Japs were evidently resorting to brains instead of brawn to capture another part of China.

In the past Manchuria and Peking governments were undermined by palm-rubbing Tokyo agents and disgruntled Chinese officials. Result in each case has been a puppet state, completely divorced from China.

Last week at peaceful Canton, only a few miles from Britain's Hongkong, came reports of secret negotiations to sway South China from the central government.

Promising to prevent recurrence of disastrous bombings which left Canton a bloody shambles last month, Jap agents would set up an independent government closely allied to Tokyo.

Meanwhile Japan refused to stop her bombing attacks on Canton. For two successive days last week war planes swooped down with their cargoes of death, finally striking within 400 yards of the foreign settlement where thousands had taken refuge.

Next day Canton's Catholic cathedral was struck while hundreds covered in terror within.

Miscellany Back to London last week from darkest Africa came Missionary John Harris with a strange tale. His story: In Bechuanaland lives Ramonlwana Senan, believed to be 140 years old yet still in good health and boasting all but one tooth.

He has a son more than 100 years old, and a daughter 16.

Twenty thousand bathers at New York's Rockaway beach sought relief from sticky weather last week. In the distance were unimportant rumblings of thunder. Suddenly the air was splintered by a bolt of lightning that zig-zagged 300 feet down the beach, killing three, felling hundreds. Next day investigators wondered if a huge steel bridge, passing almost immediately over the beach, might have drawn the freak bolt.

When she was first launched, England's proud Queen Mary was also queen of the Atlantic. Then came the French Normandie to set a westward passage record of 3 days, 22 hours, 52 minutes. Last week her powerful engines churned the Queen Mary to a new record, clipping 1 hour, 14 minutes off the Normandie's mark.

Fondled like the museum piece it is, Douglas (Wrong Way) Corrigan's $900 transatlantic airplane was unloaded in Manhattan last week.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for August 21 HANNAH: GODLY MOTHERHOOD

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel 1:9-18; 2:1-5. GOLDEN TEXT—Her children arise up, and call her blessed. Proverbs 31:28.

"Godly Motherhood"—All the power and grace of the infinite God working in and through the most tender and at the same time most potent human relationship—motherhood! There indeed is the solution of many of our national and social problems.

For the hand that rocks the cradle is the hand that rules the world. Hannah was the mother of Samuel, who became one of Israel's outstanding leaders—a priest, a prophet, and "the maker of kings."

Our study for today will be topical rather than textual and extended to related portions in chapters 1 and 2. We consider Hannah a mother who was spiritual and sacrificial, but at the same time practical in her daily life and service.

I. Spiritual. Many are the tributes offered to mothers, but none has deeper significance than the testimony of a boy or girl that their mother has led them both by precept and example, to have faith in God.

Though other advantages may be beyond the reach even of the most self-denying mother, this most important of all benefits she may bring her children, but only if she herself is an earnest and faithful follower of the Lord.

1. Hannah trusted God in her hour of trial and sorrow (1:10). Although her husband was a man of good qualities, he had followed the custom of his times and taken a second wife. Hannah, childless in the presence of Peninnah and her children, was in deep sorrow.

2. She prayed—fervently and effectively (1:17, 18, compare James 5:16b). Mother's prayers have followed many a wayward boy and girl and brought them back to God.

When every other influence for good had been swept aside, they have been unable to forget mother's prayers. One wonders what will happen to boys and girls who go out to face a wicked and bewildering world, with the memory of a prayerless, worldly mother to blight rather than to bless them.

3. She recognized children as a gift of God (1:11). And surely they are. Christian men and women should protest by both word and deed against the vicious modern theory that children are a sort of biological accident to be avoided.

II. Sacrificial. The most precious possession a woman can have is a child of her own. It was, then, the deepest and finest sacrifice of a noble mother-heart when she

1. Dedicated her boy to God, even before his birth (1:11). Yet this act so fine and commendable was in reality only an intelligent recognition of the fact that children are a gift of God. Your children and mine belong to God. Let us not stand in His way (or their way) as He graciously leads them out into service for Him.

2. She kept her promise (1:24-28). Many parents have solemnly dedicated their children to God before their birth, and then later the prospect of separation from them has been too much for the parents, and the promise to God has been thrust aside.

3. She recognized children as a gift of God (1:11). And surely they are. Christian men and women should protest by both word and deed against the vicious modern theory that children are a sort of biological accident to be avoided.

III. Practical. Hannah not only promised her boy to God; she made the completion of that promise certain.

1. By guiding her boy in the right way (1:24). As a matter of fact, she went with him to the temple. A mother who "sends" her boy to Sunday school or church will never help him like the mother of whom it may be said "she brought him unto the house of the Lord."

2. By providing for her boy (2:18, 19). There is no more tender and meaningful story in all literature than that of Hannah bringing her boy his "little coat." It is still true that the best "support" is a missionary of the Cross can have is a home that "stands by."

The story is told of a missionary candidate who had no "board" of help but the "washboard" of a godly mother, and who made a valiant and useful servant in the foreign field. Such an arrangement may not be the most desirable and it really should not be necessary if God's people would give, but it has its glorious advantages.

Such a mother as Hannah would have such a son as Samuel of whom it is said that he "was in favour both with the Lord, and also with men" (2:26).

HOUSEHOLD QUESTIONS

When Cooking Rice.—Try adding a few drops of lemon juice to rice the next time you are cooking it. It makes it beautifully white and keeps the grains whole.

Onion Absorbs Paint Odor.—If an onion is cut in halves and placed in a room that has been newly painted it will absorb the odor of paint in a few hours.

Napkins From Tablecloths.—When tablecloths wear thin in the center, cut up the outside into 12 or 16-inch squares and hemstitch them. These make napkins which will wear for some time.

Don't Soak Brushes.—If clothes and hair brushes become very dirty wash with water in which a little borax has been mixed. Dip brushes into water and wash with another brush covered with a light coating of soap. Never soak in water.

'Lost World' Waterfall

A waterfall more than half-a-mile high has been discovered in British Guiana by a Harvard professor, Dr. Paul Zahl. It is by far the highest known waterfall in the world.

Dr. Zahl was flying over the Karanang river, eight miles from Mount Roraima (Conan Doyle's "Lost World") when the clouds parted and below he saw what he described as "a ribbon-like streak, dropping as it were from the clouds."

Niagara falls, the most famous in the world although by no means the highest, are only 165 feet high. New Zealand has falls 1,900 feet high at Sutherland, and Natal 1,800 feet high at Tugola. The Ribbon falls, in California, are 1,600 feet high, while France has falls at Gavarnie which are 1,400 feet high. The famous Victoria falls are a mere 415 feet.

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 35 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Finckh's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany changes of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!
Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure.
When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.
Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance.
The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

The man who gains much usually has to concede a little.

Most of us who pretend to love justice want to see it meted out to the other fellow.

A wishbone is a fine thing, but it takes a backbone to make it worth anything.

The man who is not ashamed to admit he has been in the wrong is only saying that he is wiser today than he was yesterday.

It would be a popular move for some people if the government could devise some way to pay a fellow for plowing up his wild oat crop.

Getting yourself talked about may be poor advice for some people, but the man who has goods or services to sell must keep people talking about him if he is to succeed. The best way to keep people making complimentary remarks about your business is to advertise in the home paper each week.
Your weekly messages become part of the weekly reading of hundreds of sympathetic people who appreciate your efforts toward better business and a better community.

Most any man in McLean can tell just what is wrong with local conditions, but when it comes to doing anything about it, the other fellow ought to do it. It is perhaps a just accusation that some organizations and some men do not do all that could be done toward bettering conditions, but at the same time there is nothing holding anyone back from starting something. Most of us are ready to assist in any constructive plan for the home town.

-AND THAT'S THAT!

Then, somewhere in West Texas during the campaign, a candidate for sheriff was passing his cards in a crowd.

One voter refused to take the proffered pasteboard, with the remark,
"I'm going to vote for O'Daniel."
"But," replied the candidate, "O'
Daniel is running for governor, and I am asking your vote for sheriff."
"That's all right," replied the voter.
"I still don't want your card. If O'Daniel wants a sheriff in this county, I reckon he'll appoint one."

PINCHED

Following the O'Daniel landslide, the News began to wonder if it had made a mistake by not climbing onto the "flour wagon." Maybe O'Daniel will rescue Texas from the lion's den of politicians, we thought.
Then we ran across a little item in the Fort Worth Star Telegram, the substance of which was that Frank H. Rawlings of that city is W. Lee O'Daniel's political advisor. Great horses and little fishes! Frank H.
Rawlings! Do you know who that boy is? Why, he's the Texas state senator who has led the fight in the legislature for legalized gambling. He's the senator who fought tooth and tongue for horse racing. And he's long been the leader in the fight for repeal of liquor laws. Rawlings wants to put wide-open saloons, gambling dens, and race horse gambling in Tahoka and every other town in Texas. We certainly hope the Star-Telegram story is incorrect, or that our governor-elect does not follow advice given him by Mr. Rawlings.—

"Playing With Dynamite"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

The old phrase, "Playing with dynamite" has come to mean about the same thing as doing something foolhardy. That's the figurative meaning of the expression. But literally speaking, the man who monkeys around with high explosives is usually one of the unsung heroes of our age.

Over in France, twenty years ago, millions of men were playing with dynamite, and T. N. T. and just about every other explosive known. We didn't call those fellows foolhardy. In those days, it was generally considered that they were doing a brave and noble thing. This is a story of another such lad who toyed with danger in a good cause.

Herman Beaver of Chicago wasn't juggling explosives in and out of some sort of firearms over in France. He was taking an even longer chance with the dangerous stuff. On a hot day in July, 1917, he was working in a munitions plant on the northern outskirts of Milwaukee, Wis., on the banks of the upper Milwaukee river.

Grinding Salvaged Powder.

Over in France, millions of men were crouching in trenches, avoiding the explosives that the enemy was hurling at them, but Herman Beaver had no way to avoid the explosive that he was dealing with. His job was to handle the stuff—and to handle it roughly, too. He was grinding salvaged powder that came in to him in chunks and long tubes that looked like spaghetti—grinding it in a machine that looked a lot like an old-fashioned, hand-operated coffee grinder. That powder, when it had been reduced to bits, would be used to load rifle grenades.

In only one way did that machine differ from a coffee grinder. Between the handle that he turned continuously and the hopper into which he fed the unground powder, was a steel plate fixed so as to shield his body in case anything happened while he was grinding. On this day, while Herman ground away, his eyes wandered out the window and down the row of a dozen or more wooden buildings where the work of loading the grenades was going on.

They were little better than shacks, about twenty-five by fifty feet, built about fifty feet apart, in among trees, so as to obscure the plant's position from the air. Even in those days they were concerned about airplanes. Those shacks were filled with men and women, and even boys and girls—all taking long chances, to supply our soldiers with ammunition.

Blast and Deadly Flames.

But Herman wasn't thinking about the chances. The view from the window was pleasant. The trees outside swayed in a gentle breeze. "I was at peace with the world," says Herman. And then—

Without warning, there was a deafening blast. Acrid choking smoke filled the air and fire bit into Herman's flesh. He felt the earth rack beneath his feet—felt a terrible concussion that threw him backward. It happened so fast that only when he was on the floor did he realize what had happened. The powder that he was grinding had exploded. Behind him were benches covered with pans of powder. In rapid succession they were catching fire. Then Herman saw that his own clothing, heavily saturated with powder dust, was afire too. If they had been soaked with gasoline they couldn't have burned any more furiously. "The flames shot many feet above my head," he says. "I was a living torch."

He was stunned for a moment, but he managed to stagger to his feet. His whole body one mass of flame, he ran to the door—and out of it.

By that time people were pouring out of all the buildings in the group. Herman dashed out of the door and kept right on running. He had lost all power of reasoning. All that moved him now was a blind, gripping panic. He wanted to run, and keep right on running until he dropped. And in his terror he was headed for another building—a building that was filled with powder.

"Lie Down and Roll."

If he had run into that building, this story might never have been written.

But suddenly, through his panic, he heard a voice. Out of all the shouts and yells of that mob of screaming humanity that was watching his plight, that one voice, and that alone, penetrated his consciousness. "Roll," it was shrieking. "Lie down and roll!"

Suddenly, Herman remembered. That was what he should be doing. That was the only way to save himself. He dropped to the ground and began rolling. The pain was unbearable, as burned, smarting flesh came in contact with the hard earth. He rolled over once—twice—and then he stopped. It was all he could stand. A workman ran over and tried to beat out the flames.

His apron caught fire and he stopped to tear it off. Then the superintendent ran up. He ordered the crowd back, and he himself began rolling Herman over and over. He burned his hands severely, but he stuck to the job until the fire stopped blazing.

When the flames were out, Herman's clothing—what was left of it—glowed and smoldered like one large, live coal. They rushed him into one of the shacks, sat him down on a box, and began tearing the charred bits off his body.

"That shack was filled with powder," Herman says, "but in their excitement they never thought of that.

"There was powder in the very box I was sitting on. The Lord only knows why the whole place didn't blow up. I know I don't. And I have large scars, one on my right hip and one on the front of my left leg. Nobody will ever know how that explosion started, but Herman thinks the percussion cap might have found its way into the powder he was grinding. "I was working with the lid of the grinder open," he says. "If it had fastened down when the explosion occurred, the whole machine would have shattered to bits—and I don't believe I'd be here to tell the story."

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—The playing fields of Elton have been given due credit for Britain's power and durability. We seem to have overlooked the playing fields of West Point. A sweeping technical reorganization of the army is news this week. It might not have come off had it not been for a certain incident on the West Point football field. Gen. Malin Craig, chief of staff, is the reorganizer. He is preparing the army for the open game—swiftness, mobility, adaptiveness, as in modern football.

It was an instant of inspired open football, back in the juggernaut days of the guards back and the side-line buck, that saved young Malin Craig for the army and the current reordering of tactics and equipment.

Army to Ape Strategy of Football

Just before the game with Trinity college in 1897, the West Point scholastic command had decided to retire Cadet Craig. Of an ancient army line, with many relatives in the service, he had been visiting around army posts. His marks had suffered. The ax was to fall just after the game.

Craig was a brilliant backfield player, but somewhat given to unplanned maneuvers. Carrying the ball at a critical turn of the game, he lost his interference in a broken field. He shook off several tacklers, but, somewhere around the 35-yard line, a stone wall of Trinity players loomed ahead.

Ducking a hurtling body, scarcely checking his stride, he booted a perfect field goal—winning the game, with appropriate trimmings. Of course, the faculty couldn't fire a hero. The ax was put away, a tutor was found, and Cadet Craig finished creditably—to establish the open game in the American army.

He was a baseball star, also, and old Pop Anson tried to sign him for the Chicago National team. Born in St. Joseph, Mo., he was the grandson of a Civil war general. His father was a major and he has a son recently out of West Point.

In the Spanish-American war, the Philippines, France and in minor mixups, he was a quick thinker and a self-starter, heavily garlanded from the first and known as a "progressive" tactician.

A FEW years ago, Richard Strauss was in trouble with the Nazis. The libretto of his opera, "The Silent Woman," had been written by Stefan Zweig, a "non-Aryan." The opera was a flop and Herr Strauss was ousted as president of the Reich Culture chamber and chairman of the Federation of German Composers. He is now restored to official favor.

His librettist for his new opera, "Der Fridentag," is a certified Aryan, Joseph Gregor, a Viennese poet, and its world premier at Munich is a brilliant success, with new garlands for the seventy-five-year-old composer.

So apparently all is forgiven, and the traditional rebel of the musical world is rebelling no longer. He had decided to save the world at any cost, but turning sixty, he concluded he was doing well enough by merely keeping out of jail.

When "Salome" was presented in 1905, puritanical New York was shocked, and the mere idea of its being given here caused a row. Its presentation in New York in 1921 was taken calmly. "Murky Psychographies," as the critics called them, didn't bring any riot calls. These muddly phantasmagorias of his earlier years got him into many battles, but he settled down to writing and—being a good business man—to money making. Once, when he was quarreling with Berlin, he was asked if he would play there. "I would play on a manure pile if they pay me for it," he said.

Strauss Is Restored to Nazi Favor

He is no kin of the famous waltz family of Vienna. In melodic and beery old Bavaria, his father was a horn-blower and his mother a brewer's daughter. He has prospered through his later years, the owner of a castle in Vienna and an estate in Bavaria.

In 1930, German cities were fighting for him as their leading citizen, with chambers of commerce competing and making offers. Then came the brief eclipse over the "non-Aryan" associations, and now the full effulgence of his restored career.

AT EVENING TIME

By Madeline A. Chaffee

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

The "Briny Toyshop" was closed for the day. Its tiny show window still displayed an enticing array of delightful playthings, but the latch was hard down on the door, and its little lady proprietress had retired to her favorite low rocker by a rear window facing the sea.

The most persistent youth in the small sea-faring village rattled the door, but in vain. Miss Matilda Bell did not even hear.

There seemed more than ordinary magic in the glowing spell cast by the sun at this close of day. The old-fashioned garden sloping to the rocky shore seemed a fairy place. The sea was many-hued, dusky, wondrous, and its melody came pleasantly to Miss Matilda. There were dreams in Miss Matilda's eyes as she watched; not the happy, hopeful dreams of youth, but the deeper, sadder dreams of one who has lived long.

Miss Matilda was so much a part of her surroundings that she had ceased to notice them in detail. Her mind had flown back nearly 50 years, to the time when she had not the faintest thought of ever being a little, elderly, sweet-faced lady sitting by herself in the twilight.

To the time when she was a young, adventurous girl pledging her troth to a dashing young naval officer. Even now her eyes grew dim as the memories came drifting in on the breeze. Dream pictures blotted out the garden, the rocks, the sea itself, and Miss Matilda felt herself in the arms of her young lover, so tender, so dear—

And he had sailed away, full of hope and happy anticipations of the day when he should return to make her his wife. Miss Matilda's eyes blurred. That day had never come. There had been a fire aboard the ship—and the young officer, who belonged heart and soul to Matilda Bell, had given his life for another.

Years had taken away that first tragic grief, but Miss Matilda had loved too deeply to forget. How she wished she had been with him! Sometimes he seemed to speak to her in the voice of the sea, and she would say that she was coming—some day soon, very soon—coming to be with him.

On the rocks below Miss Matilda's cottage two figures were silhouetted against the dull red sky.

"But, dear girl"—the man's voice was tender, serious—"you don't know what the life is. I do—and I wouldn't condemn any woman to it, least of all—you. It will be a torture without you—but it wouldn't be fair to take you."

The girl's straight, sweet gaze held his steadily.

"But, Tom, don't you see I want to go? It may be years before you come back. Our marriage—that-is-to-be is going to be

Wise and Otherwise

"A child must have a chance to express its ideas," says a psychologist. Yes, but not on plain wallpaper!

"Girls were quicker in their movements eighty years ago," says a writer. They got a bustle on then.

"And they call America the land of free speech," said the disgruntled Scot when the telephone operator told him to put a nickel in the box.

true partnership, Tommy boy, and it must begin by my going to South America with you now. I can face anything—with you!"

The two silhouettes suddenly converged into one as Tom said huskily:

"Bless you, sweetheart, you're coming with me. We'll play the game of life squarely—together."

And up in the little dusky window above the garden, with the sea still crooning a low love song, Miss Matilda had come into her own.

(A true story by James E. Clifford, reprinted by request).

Regan Wyche, the county auditor, wanted a story. I promised him one. And even though he has promised me some things that I did not receive, I have tried to keep my promise to him.

The place was barren of both merchandise and customers. Kate sat in a corner half drunk with a far away look in her eyes. She glared at me as I sat at the stool and ordered a beer.

"I came here under the coat of a swell gal," said bottle number one. "She had a good husband but she thought more of me than she did him, until now he is divorcing her."

"Yeah," said bottle number two. "I saw that dame lay you down here. She was a swell gal all right, but did you see the young fellow that brought me in here?"

"I was awakened from my thoughts by a crash. And there on the floor broken in a million pieces by a fall from the counter was . . . the two bottles—The Record."

Walking Into Trouble

In an interesting analysis of the hows, whys and whens of automobile accidents in 1937, some revealing figures relating to pedestrian deaths has been published.

Nearly 28% of the deaths, the figures indicate, resulted from the obviously unsafe habit many walkers have of crossing in the middle of the block.

Of the 27.5%, or a total of 4,450 pedestrians killed while crossing at intersections, only 280 met death while crossing, as they should, with the signal.

LET'S TRY IT—IT COSTS NOTHING

It is generally understood that Sunday is the day that produces the greatest number of mishaps in which the motor car takes a prominent part.

Leaving out the drinking driver, the accidents due to the use of automobiles are reaching numbers that make it certain that something will and must be done about them very soon.

We need a change in our mental attitude toward such things. We must begin to see in the reckless and incapable driver not only a person who cares nothing for the law, but one whose actions constitute a grave danger to the rights of the rest of us.

Nothing—no psychological test of character analysis—reveals one's true inwardness more quickly and with greater certainty than the motor car. What a difference it makes! And how few survive the trial which proclaims gentlemen or roaming inconceivables who, enthroned behind the steering wheel and feeling an eager engine beneath their feet, become inebriated with speed, poisoned with the mania of haste, stripped of the thin veneer of everyday courtesy and civilized conduct!

Nothing will make the fool driver a more sincere convert to the Golden Rule than the exhibition of uniform courtesy on the part of his brother motorist. This, more than anything else, will reduce automobile slaughter to a minimum.

Let's try it anyhow. It costs nothing.

POLITE?

Solicitor—I think it best that you should just ask him to refund the money. You know, just a polite little note.

Client—That's a good idea. How do you spell 'souldrel'?"

killed while crossing diagonally in the intersection or while crossing at intersections where there was no signal.

Other leading causes of pedestrian deaths, in order of their importance, were: walking on rural highways, children playing in the street, coming into the street from behind a parked car, men at work in the roadway, and hitchhiking.

WHAT I OWE

By Rev. E. Worcester "If I were hungry, I would not tell thee: for the world is mine, and the fulness thereof."—Psalm 50:12.

When we speak of debts we generally think of them in terms of money; but our most important obligations can never be estimated in dollars and cents. No matter how much money I may owe, it forms but a small part of my indebtedness.

First of all I should ever bear in mind that I own nothing, and never can own anything except in the sense of legal possession and the privilege of enjoying and controlling it to some degree during my life.

God claims the whole world and everything in it, for He created it and sustains it all. So our first and greatest debt is, and always will be, to Him in whom we live and move and have our being.

If in some time of special stress these neighbors of mine give me some help I sorely need, let me never, never forget it and be ungrateful. Rather let me watch continually for opportunities to express my appreciation by trying to be a still better neighbor and pass on the help to others in need.

USING THE NEWSPAPER

The Eagle Democrat is a community voice, a lone medium of effective publicity in this trade area. As such, its columns are at the service of the community.

The Eagle Democrat is a business enterprise, the product of a manufacturing plant in Warren. As such, its columns must be under the control of its management.

Often the biggest problem confronting the men behind your newspaper is the reconciliation of those first two paragraphs. To please everyone means to forget that here is a business to conduct. And to conscientiously consider publication as a business, one that has to be learned through long experience and conducted wisely in order to make any success of it, means that once in a while, at least, somebody who wants to use the paper's columns must be refused, or put off until a later issue.

A newspaper man who really loves his publication, and he won't get far unless he does, actually gets more satisfaction than money from the work he does. The pride he takes in his paper is greater than individual friendship, too. He would lose a friend rather than cheapen his paper by catering to some individual wish, such as a price was the forfeit. If his judgment tells him a piece of publicity is truly good for his community, he'll not have to be asked twice to find space for it.

FARMER "ROOSTS" WITH TURKEYS

A. H. Peevey of Brinkman, Okla., tells a story concerning the raising of turkeys which is interesting as well as amusing. It seems that for the past few years Mrs. Peevey has taken care of the herding of their turkeys rather than put young poult with hens.

This year the Peeveys bought 300 baby turkeys. From the beginning a cow bell was rung before the turkeys were fed. When the time came to turn them out of the brooder they had already begun to ring the cow bell. Now, each time they are taken out on the range the herder wears the cow bell around his neck and the turkeys will follow anyone wearing the bell.

When the time came to lead young turkeys to go to a roost at night, Mr. Peevey made several attempts at putting them on the roost by lighting on his shoulders and climbing around his feet. Finally, he immediately the turkeys came after him. If he got down, the roost until dark and slipped quietly without disturbing them.
