NEW WADING POOL RULING IS MADE

A recent action of the city council prohibits anyone over the age of 10 years from wading in the pool at the city park.

Children from the ages of 12 to 15 years have been crowding the little ones out at the pool, is the cause for the ruling. The old age limit was 12, but hereafter local peace officers have been instructed to see that no child over the age of 10 is allowed in the pool.

Signs will be erected in the park and a notice will be found in our advertising columns.

The pool was built and donated to the city by the Lions Club several years ago.

A swimming party at Sand Spur Lake was enjoyed Wednesday, the boys being allowed to swim in age groups, and not over 10 at one time, in order that proper supervision could be maintained.

A hike or swim is planned for one day each week, and on Fridays a tournament is held, with some 10 or 15 games being played.

The program is absolutely free to all who want to take part. There are no dues or fees to be paid now, or later, and it is hoped that every boy in the community will take part.

MRS. BUSKIRK HOSTESS EASTSIDE CLUB

The Eastside Home Demonstration Club met Friday in the home of Mrs. R. L. Buskirk in McLean for a study on attractive arrangement of flowers in attractive vases. Various members contributed vases of wild and garden flowers.

Mrs. A. L. Morgan discussed vases, both poor and good, bringing out the idea that containers in the kitchen may be used as flower vases. "The vase should be chosen for the bouquet," said Mrs. Morgan, "tall ones for long varieties, placed on reading or console table; trailing or medium height for mantles or chests; low flat arrangements for low end tables. Avoid crowding and having stems all same length, and do not use highly decorated vases."

Mrs. H. M. Roth spoke on line and center of interest in bouquets, saying one must consider harmony, balance and rhythm in making up bouquets. Mrs. Olen Davis spoke on mass and color in bouquets, stating that the same care should be used as provided in nature.

Mrs. Buskirk closed the program by demonstrating various vases and bouquets, some of the vases being her own hand-made clay ones. Another was an antique belonging to Mrs. Petty, and being about 100 years old. Mrs. Buskirk said the Japanese allow the honored guest to arrange the flowers in the home, each having some significance. She also said that an arrangement of white and yellow flowers will take the place of two windows for light. She said: "Avoid crowding, do not cross lines, and use an odd number of flowers or foliage. If flowers are withered they may be freshened by dipping stems in boiling water. Dip water lily stems in boiling water to keep fresh, and split ends of woody types. Bleeding stems should be burned, and all stems cut on a slant."

Mrs. Roth, president, presided during the business session. The Petting girls gave a play, "At the Theatre," for the recreational period.

The club cake brought by Mrs. Floyd Lively was served with lemonade and iced tea.

Visitors present were: Mesdames Eulema Lively, Nora Isabel and Zora Isabel Petty. Members: Miss Hettie Burr, Mesdames Roth, Davis, Morgan, Petty, Buskirk, Jess Ledbetter, C. A. Myatt, J. H. Wade, Floyd Lively, Buster Stokes and Bill Tate.

SOME HAVE MEAT AND CAN EAT

By T. C. Richardson, Secretary
Breeder-Feeder Association

"When I get tired of eating chicken I come in and get some steaks and ribs," T. Hail Brown recently told the writer at the Plains Cooperative where freezer-lockers keep meat fresh until used up. Mr. Brown and a neighbor divided a 1,000 pound fat beef, the Co-Op cut and packaged according to instructions for a small charge, and the individual locker which rents for $8 a year, held each man's share of the beef.

Another man living twenty miles away came in, opened his locker, and took out several packages. "We have a bottled gas refrigerator to keep several days' supply," he said, "and our family gets twice as much fresh meat as we did before locker service was available." He was a dairy farmer and his beef was a fat calf of his own raising.

The Plainsview Co-Op has 132 lockers and they are in such demand that more will soon have to be installed. A number of other freezer-locker plants are in operation in the Southwest, with new ones being built rapidly, and they make it possible for farm families to have their own supply of fresh meat at a very low cost; if a locker is anywhere in a two-hour drive they no longer have to eat only cured meat—and chicken.

Fresh meat is essential to a wholesome diet, and farmers and their families can have it with little cash outlay, while town folks often do without because it costs more than they can afford. Enough feed goes to waste—grass and weeds in fence corners and fields, stalks and grain left in the field, or eaten by rats after it is stored—to raise and fatten all the beef, mutton and pork the average family could eat.

Of course the steam pressure canner has made it possible for farm families to eat a great deal more of their own product than formerly, and now the freezer-locker and the home refrigerator offer another method of preserving fresh meat with all its unadulterated flavors.

The Plainsview plant is also being used to store dressed chickens, turkeys and vegetables and fruits as well as beef, lamb and pork. Farmers who raise and fatten their own can say with the Scotch bard, Bobbie Burns:

"Some ha'e meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we ha'e meat and we can eat,
And aae the Lord be thankit."

The Lord, however, provides only the opportunities, not the meat, and before we can truthfully use the famous "Seikirk grace" just quoted, a great many Southwestern farms will have to use their opportunities to hatch, breed, raise and fatten their fowls and animals to supply their own tables.

Hog killing time, with its spare-ribs, back-bones and fresh sausage, is entirely too rare a feast nowadays and the delicious home-cured hams and bacon are unknown to entirely too many farm families. Maybe the crude methods of curing and the superior flavor of packer products had something to do with the abandonment of the farm smokehouse, but the principal excuse offered by many is that "I can buy it cheaper than I can raise it."

If this were ever true, which it wasn't, the fact remains that few farm families who depend on buying all their meat with cotton or wheat money ever have as much meat as their appetite calls for or as often as a good wholesome diet demands. Poor methods of curing, producing a dry, excessively salty product, need no longer be used. For those who do not know the better methods the information is available through their county agent, and the hams and bacon cured by modern processes have a flavor and richness commercial packers cannot match.

"Henry," said Mrs. Jones, "I must give you credit for one thing. In all our married life you have never spoken an unkind word to me."

"No, Henrietta," agreed the gratified husband.

"What I am wondering," added his wife, "is whether to give you credit for a lovely disposition or mere lack of courage."

THE "FAMILY BUS"

Automobiles are the most widely-owned and used of modern conveniences, contrary to popular opinion. The average person might list electricity, running water and telephones but actual studies reveal the automobile to be the most universal.

City families enjoy the advantages of running water, electricity and telephones. Most farm families do not. Running water and electricity are luxuries to many farm families. The automobile is a necessity. In fact, automobile ownership is distributed more evenly between the cities and the farms even than home ownership.

Farmers now own approximately 17.9% of all automobiles in the United States, and 26.6% of the trucks. These forms of motor vehicles are the medium of direct contact with farm markets. Consequently when gasoline taxes are increased, or highway revenues are diverted, the farmer sustains the largest single loss.

THERE'S A REASON

Orders have gone out to keep service stations spic and span. Most of them have been spic and span, but it looks as if they'll have to be even more so! And the boys at the gasoline pumps are to wear bow ties and shave daily.

There's a reason. The ladies are at the wheel! In fact, researchers say that every third steering wheel is in the hands of a woman driver who knows what she likes, and either she gets it—or she drives on!

It has been discovered that the domain driver will return to a service station if driveways are well-groomed, attendants are neat, service is prompt and courteous, signs properly placed so that she is caused no embarrassment, rest rooms are clean and completely furnished, and a comfortable waiting room is available during servicing jobs.

ANYTHING BUT THAT

Cherished among the many legends of the Spanish-American people of New Mexico is the story of San Ysidro.

It seems that San Ysidro was plowing his garden one spring day, when an angel appeared and said to him, "The Lord wants to see you, San Ysidro. Come with me."

Ysidro plowed on. "I can't go," he answered. "You tell the Lord that I'm late in getting my garden planned and that I'll see Him when I've finished."

The angel nodded and disappeared. Soon another messenger hovered over San Ysidro's plow. "The Lord wants to see you right now," he said. "And if you don't come at once, the Lord says He'll send hot winds and drought to wither your garden."

Ysidro paused only long enough to wipe the sweat from his brow. "I've got hot winds and droughts before they don't bother me," he said, "I can carry water from the river. Tell the Lord I can't come now, but I'll see Him when I have my corn sowed."

But that angel, too, vanished. A few moments later a third, larger angel, stronger than the other two, stepped San Ysidro on the shoulder. "The Lord doesn't like your attitude," he said. "Heavenly courier said, 'He says you don't come with me right now. I'll send a plague of locusts to devour your crop from the tap and a plague of cutworms to eat the roots.' That doesn't frighten me," answered San Ysidro, turning his plow and starting back. "I've had plagues before, and with fires and hoing and work, I've saved my corn. You tell the Lord I'll see Him tomorrow," and so the third angel flew away and San Ysidro had plowed several rows before the fourth messenger appeared to earth.

The Lord isn't going to argue any more," the angel announced, flapping wings hard to keep up with the stubborn plowman. "He simply said, 'If you don't come right away, I'll send you a bad neighbor.'"

Instantly San Ysidro stopped his plow and wrapped the reins around his neck. For the first time he was afraid in his eyes.

"Bad neighbor!" he shouted. "No! I can stand hot winds and drought, locusts and cutworms—I can stand anything but a bad neighbor. Go with you right now!"—Morning News.

WHO'S ZOO?

No need for the oil man to visit a menagerie when his own industry is so full of tamed and trained specimens! The modern who's who of the petroleum "zoo" reads something like this:

Wildcat—oil well in undeveloped territory.

Bull rope—2 1/2-inch power carrier to bull wheels which handle cable tool drilling lines.

Mud hogs—pumps circulating muddy fluid through drill stem to prevent walls from sloughing.

Fish—anything lost down a well.

Bull dog spears—steel spears for recovering "fish."

Donkey pumps—small pumps, once mulish in performance, used for odd jobs of pumping.

Spiders—steel rings holding drill pipe.

Grasshoppers—counterbalances on a pumping well.

Goose-necks—crooked joints on the drill-pipe driving joints to which mud-circulating hose is attached.

Pig tails—coils in refinery pipe for condensing of vapors.

Worms—ditto.

Bull weevil—new worker who doesn't know his who's who!

Mouse traps—poles with catches used to fish sucker rods.

Dog house—clothing locker.

A salesman once managed to talk Mrs. Coolidge into buying a large medical volume for family use. She did not tell her husband anything about it, because she came to feel that she had paid too much for the book.

Some time later, she thought she would pick up the tome and glance through it. Upon opening it she read the following on the fly leaf:

"Don't see any recipes for curing suckers.—Calvin Coolidge."

Free transportation afforded some 10% of the school pupils in this country costs $62,652,-571 annually. Thus do we progress from the 3-R's of a few years ago when nothing was thought of walking several miles to school.

There are some 60,000 needy children in Texas that have been seemingly forgotten during the old-age pension discussions. Maybe it is because they do not have votes, but their need is just as real and must be met in some way.

With state insane asylums already overcrowded, a gain of 28% in new admissions was made last year. This is a situation that deserves the best study of authorities, for a continued increase presents a real menace to society.

Every college graduate in Germany is called a doctor. It is almost as bad in this country where men in so many different professions call themselves doctor. And in many cases they do not have to have a college degree, or anything but the adoption of the title.

A speaker at the Lions Club Monday mentioned feeding 15,000 people with 5,000 plates at the free barbecue, as somewhat of a record. This is nothing to what a good chamber of commerce writer could do a few years ago when juggling attendance figures at such celebrations.

If all poor golf players followed the example of Lee Nelson of Indianapolis, Ind., there would be a sudden increase in the population of Florida. Mr. Nelson disappeared and was declared legally dead, but after ten years turned up at home, saying that he "went to Florida for a rest," hiding his true name "because my golf was so rotten."

Criticism that was rife when the shelterbelt plantings were begun in 1935 has practically ceased, as the benefits of the belts become more and more apparent. The trees have survived two severe droughts, and more losses have occurred from lack of cultivation, rodents and insects than from dry weather. Belts in the McLean community are in much better shape than last year, as farmers learn how to take care of the young trees.

Capt. Tappe of the Texas Safety Council says that leading as the cause of fatal and near-fatal automobile accidents is the drinking driver; and this does not mean the drunken driver. "The driver with two drinks, or two bottles of beer, is a more dangerous driver than the one who would come under the classification of drunk," says the captain. It is facts like these that have caused the highway department to erect the roadside signs reading "Think, Drive, and Die."

According to Dr. Rainey, president of the University of Texas, 65% of today's jobs require no vocational training of any sort, and 20 to 25% can be filled after technical training in short term courses. Yet in spite of these figures, schools are requiring more and more education in preparing for jobs, with little chance of the graduate finding the job. Institutions of learning will have to meet this problem in some way, but to date little seems to have been done. The changes due to the machine age are coming fast, and the educators will have to continue their own education in order to keep step.

Field and Garden

By J. Lee Brown
 Landscape Architect

WHICH IS YOUR HOME?

A few days ago I had the privilege of visiting a large private estate in a nearby town, in company with a landscape architect and my neighbor, Tom West. We approached the estate house through a wrought iron gate along a broad, curved drive flanked by masses of trees and shrubs which led the eye toward the grey stone mansion. As we emerged on the opposite side of the house we saw through a stone arch a magnificent vista lined with rows of cedars, and terminating in a summer house of classic design. Through another door we saw a flagstone terrace, overlooking a great expanse of smooth lawn. The terrain sloped downward across a valley, and up again on the opposite side. In the margin of the distant woodland was the dome of a Grecian temple, reminiscent of the Renaissance gardens of England, and the paintings of Claude Lorraine.

At our feet was a bronze tablet, set on the terrace wall on which were inscribed the name of the architect and of the landscape architect who had created this masterpiece of stone and garden plants. Both names rank high in their fields throughout the country.

Our landscape architect companion pointed to the splendid specimens of magnolia, box and blue spruce, marvelling at the skill of the gardener who had made these plants grow so well in Oklahoma.

"Some day," he said, "I'll do a job like this. I'll show the oil barons of Oklahoma they don't have to go to Eastern cities to find men who can design magnificent gardens."

My neighbor, Tom West, was impressed, but strangely silent. On the way home we took a short route along a country road. Suddenly Tom, who was driving, stopped the car and got out. What had attracted him was a log cabin of ancient vintage, half covered with blooming trumpet vine (Campsis radicans).

"This is what I've been looking for," he exclaimed. "I built a little picnic shelter at the end of my garden last winter, but I've never been satisfied with it. This little cabin has just the atmosphere I want, and the trumpet vine is the plant I need to get it."

Which home is yours? Did its inspiration come from the princely estate, or from the field and the humble pioneer cabin?

STRANGE PERFORMANCES

The charming little word ethics, with its simple good meaning, is being used by organizations as a camouflage for a code to secure a monopoly in their particular line of business. For example, it is generally said to be unethical now to cut prices in many commercial lines of business. Doctors used to say that it was unethical for members of their profession to advertise. But now the doctors have found many new ways around, and it is perfectly ethical for them to advertise smallpox scares all over the front pages of the daily papers and everywhere. And when they get all of the business they can out of the smallpox ad, then they may advertise a diphtheria or scarlet fever epidemic.

When people are threatened with police force to compel them to be vaccinated, it is time for the public to look where we are "headin'." Must human beings be compelled by force of arms and driven like cattle and hogs to be marked and branded? Reminiscent of the Dark Ages, when people were forced to accept the theories of mighty and powerful religious sects.

So long as the doctor himself is subject to human limitations and until the organized medical profession can and does insure to cure and not to injure the patient in any way, they should be limited (by law if necessary) in their demands on the public. We don't have to be a faith healer, or any competitor in healing of the sick, to feel the pressure of medical oppression.—F. F. Anderson, in Dallas News.

Look Pretty as a Picture in Frocks of Dainty Silk Sheer

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SO LITTLE MISSY and Miss Sweet Sixteen are dated up for just one party after another this summer? Hearts set all a flutter as to delectable gowns that will make young moderns look pretty as a picture? Which leads up to the why and wherefore of the accompanying illustration. This group of adorable party frocks conveys an all-important style message in regard to summertime party frocks, namely that of the supremacy of the silken sheer fabrics in the mode.

The weaves in the category of silk sheers that are favored most include silk organdies in white or pastels, marisettes, mousseline de soies, also either soft or starched silk chiffons, frothy white silk tulle, silk nets and of course the loveliness of silk laces is not ignored. Not a sheer in the above mentioned list but that works like magic in accenting the endearing young charms of party-going young daughters this season.

The outstanding characteristic of the new sheer frocks is a quaintness that reminisces of Civil war fashions. To give the ultra-feminine look and the coy simplicity that present styling implies, designers are indulging freely in such fetching details as flounces, dainty ruffles, bow-knot or flower appliques, and the newest gesture is the revival of gay ribbons (supposed to change the color of your ribbons to tune to your mood) run through yards and yards of beading, just like in the old-fashioned days.

The majority of party frocks look very bouffant with their wide skirts, and the most ultra models have ruffled-in waistlines like heirloom daguerotypes portray, for the trend at present is more and more to wasp waist silhouettes. The flounce that flourished in Civil war times have returned.

Sometimes just one knee-deep flounce gives added fullness about the hemline. Then again flounces are tiered one above another. The old-fashioned way of heading the flounce with lace or embroidery beading, through which colorful beading has been run, adds to the quaintness of present day styling.

In the lovely girlish frock to the left the bow-knot applique done in ribbon enhances the full skirt. The little girl in the background has her silk organdy dress similarly fashioned, thus carrying out the popular idea of sister fashions. Frocks of this type are equally lovely fashioned of either white or pastel chiffons or silk organdies.

The little girls in the foreground are charmingly gowned. The diminutive lace jacket worn, as shown centered in the picture, is enough to delight any little girl's heart.

Very prettily styled is the other little girl's dress. It is made all of lace with flutings of self lace adorning the bodice top and outlining the waistline.

A styling trend very noticeable in the smartest new gowns is that of the all-over shirred waist. The new sheers yield to this treatment very pleasingly. The shirring can be easily done by the home dressmaker, by loosening the tension of one's sewing machine and lengthening the stitch. Then when the machine stitching is done pull the top thread and even shirring will result. Thin paper placed under chiffon while stitching keeps material flat. It tears away easily.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lumber-Jacket Top

The lumber-jacket influence continues throughout summer fashions. So much so many of the daintiest sheer lingerie blouses are now made with belts (some worked with lace insertion and edging) that fasten over the skirt. Printed silk sheers such as pictured proclaim the new trend in this youthful lumber-jacket blouse that has come in on the heels of the widely heralded "little girl" vogue. Note how its belt buttons over the skirt. The remarkable thing about the silk that fashions this dress is that it is the new santon type, treated with process that acts as a deodorant.

Flare for Rubber Flowers Growing

The idea of wearing the new rubber flowers as a corsage or boutonniere elsewhere than on the beach is gaining. These lovely flowers are too attractive to confine within a limited realm. Then, too, they are eminently practical, for soap and water will keep them fresh-looking indefinitely.

Natural colors, grace of design and true reproduction of nature marks these corsages as outstanding. Anemones in pastel colors enliven a swim suit with true artistry. Deep pink camellias are lovely to wear in an evening coiffure. Roses of realistically colored rubber and dahlias in colors true on sport jackets are ever so effective and outstanding.

Stripes Back in Fashion Picture

The cycle of fashions continues to revolve and now the indicator stops at 1915, the era of the Castle walk and, from the sartorial standpoint, of stripes.

But striped materials in the hands of the modern designer have a spiciness wholly different from those recorded in the fashion books of almost a quarter of a century ago. One of their paramount virtues is that they are slimming. However, their chief charm is that they lend themselves to such varied and exciting adaptations.

Flowers and Snoods
A charming evening headdress, if you wear your hair long enough to use a snood, is the combination of snood and flowers.

REHOBOAM: A MAN WHO MADE A FOOLISH CHOICE

LESSON TEXT—1 Kings 12:1-5, 12-17, 20. GOLDEN TEXT—"A man's pride shall bring him low."—Proverbs 29:23.

"He did evil because he prepared not his heart to seek the Lord"—this is the divine epitome of the life of Rehoboam as given in II Chronicles 12:14.

Life is full of choices, and the decisions we make determine our destiny both in this life and in the life to come. Since the great issues of our life may hinge on the simplest of choices, it is obvious that we need guidance at every point and in every moment of life. The counsel of men, the right impulses which are born of good breeding, the light of knowledge—all these may help us to make right choices. But since there is only One who has all the knowledge, who can see the end from the beginning, who has all the power to make His decisions effective, it is obviously folly of the highest degree to do without His holy guidance, especially since God is willing to give it without money and without price even to the humblest believer.

Men and women, let us not follow the foolishness of Rehoboam. Let us seek first God's kingdom and His righteousness, and then we are assured that everything else shall be added unto us (Matt. 6:33).

The picture before us is astonishingly up-to-date. People were crying for relief from tax burdens. One group of leaders counseled moderation; another group, said in effect, tax them all you can and keep on spending. The king, who in a monarchy had the final decree in his power, replied to the plea of the people with the 900 B. C. equivalent of our modern slang expression, "Oh, yeah?" and the ten tribes promptly revolted.

I. A Reasonable Request (vv. 1-5).

Governments exist for the people, not the people for the government. Political leaders seem to forget this axiom and begin to rule as though they need not listen to the reasonable pleas of the people. Tax burdens rise, regimentation of the life of the nation takes place, and sooner or later the people rise to overthrow the government. It happened in Rome, it was back of the French Revolution, it brought an uprising of the serfs of Russia, it can and will happen elsewhere if men who rule do not listen to reason.

Rehoboam made at least one wise decision—to wait three days before speaking and to seek counsel. He needed this, for having been brought up in the palace of Solomon, without proper training for his place as king, he was quite unable to make immediate answer to their request. Incidentally, we note that much of the folly of Rehoboam is chargeable to the neglect of his father to rear him properly. May that terrible thing never be said about you and me regarding our children.

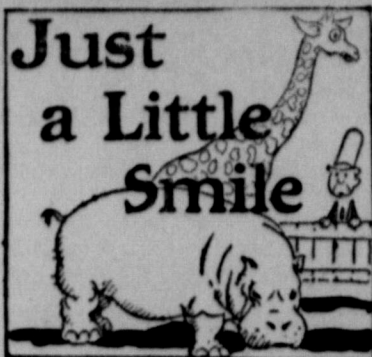

II. An Unreasonable Refusal (vv. 12-15).

The picture of the two groups of advisers is a most graphic one and should afford the teacher an excellent opportunity to show young people especially, how important it is to heed the counsel of their elders. Even so youth stands today at the fork of the road. Let us in all kindness, love, and tact seek to help them choose the right way.

III. The Inevitable Revolt (vv. 16, 17, 20).

The people, long submissive and apparently servile, ultimately come to the point where they think, and when they do, dictatorial rulers tumble from their self-made thrones. Would that the people of the earth realized the power which they have and that they would use it for the glory of God. Rehoboam felt the power of the people who revolted, others have followed him, for it is still true in the world that the rulers "do evil" because "they prepare not their hearts to seek the Lord."

Rehoboam, who had awaited the arrival of this crucial hour in anticipation of taking his place as the king of the ten tribes, was ready, and was at once chosen as the leader of those who withdrew from the rule of the house of David. Rehoboam's sin brought this about, but it was also in the counsels of God (v. 15). As Alexander Maclaren expresses it, "the historian draws back the curtain. On earth stand the insolent king and mutinous people, each driving at their ends, and neither free of sin and selfishness. A stormy sea of people, without thought of God, rages below, and above sits the Lord, working His great purpose by men's sin. That divine control does not in the least affect the freedom or the responsibility of the actors. Rehoboam's disregard of the people's terms was a thing brought about of the Lord," but it was Rehoboam's sin none the less."

ALL THAT MATTERED

Family pride in an athletic son can reach great heights, but it was equalled by the partisanship of one father for the local team in which his son played scrum-half.

When an important match was being played some distance from home, he asked his son to wire the result.

That evening the telegram came, bearing the curt message: "Collar bone and one rib broken." "Yes, yes," exclaimed the father, impatiently, "but he doesn't say who won?"

A Versatile Offender

"I knowed it would go worse wit me," said Meandering Mike, "but I couldn't help it. I've got such a merry disposition."

"You wouldn't be out yet if de judge could have kep' you in," commented his comrade.

"No. He says to me dat what I needs is refinement. An' I says, 'Judge, I've had it. Two months ago I was fined for loiterin', an' last month I was re-fined, an' dat's what prejudiced me case.'"

BIG BUSINESS

"I was in love with a girl down here last year, I understand she married a broker."

"Surely no broker than you are."

Her Complaint

The old lady was being visited by the vicar. She said: "I wish you would offer prayers in the church for me, Vicar."

"Certainly I will."

"I wish you would mention what is the matter with me—I have a floating kidney."

"I can't very well do that."

"I don't see why not," protested the old lady. "I've often heard you praying for loose livers."—Stray Stories.

Free Advice

The woman who found herself seated next to an eminent doctor at the dinner party thought she would make the most of her luck.

"Do you know, doctor," she said, "sometimes I feel so tired that I can scarcely walk to do my morning shopping. Is there anything you could recommend me to take?"

"Certainly," the doctor replied, genially; "take a taxi."

Balance of Nature

"Nature," explained the lecturer, "always tries to make compensation. For instance, if one eye is lost the other becomes stronger, and if a person is deaf in one ear the hearing of the other is more acute."

"Faith," said Pat, "and I believe you're right, for I've noticed that when a man has one leg shorter the other is always longer."

Too Late Anyway

Patient (pessimistically) — Oh, why was I born?
Pretty Nurse—Now, please let's not talk shop.

RARE FISHFOOD

First Fish—What did they have for dessert at the banquet?
Second Fish—Why, Jellyfish, of course!

Message From Dad

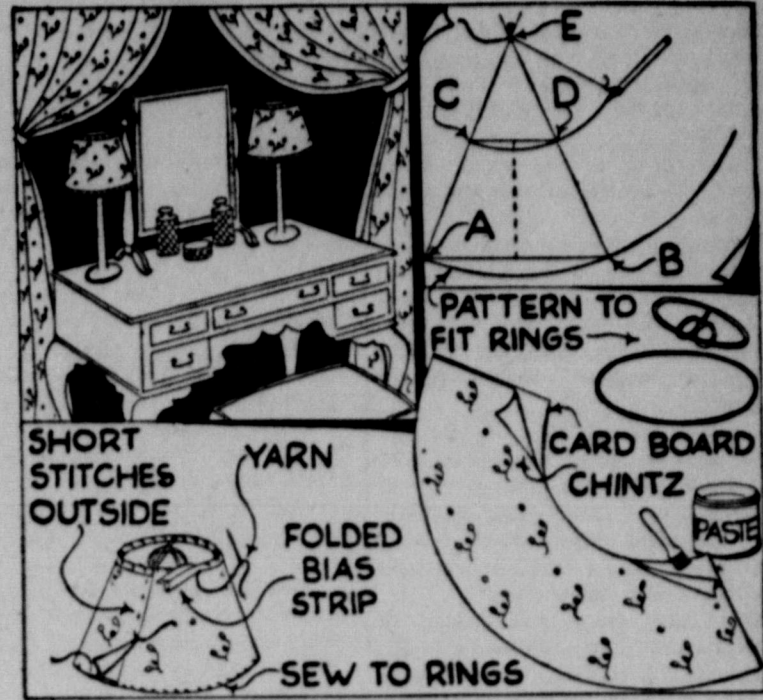

Eloping Bride—Here's a telegram from father:
Eloping Groom—What does he say?
Eloping Bride—Don't come home and all will be forgiven.

Flowery Speech

Miss Manchester—If you really love a girl why not say it with flowers?
Mr. Hardfax—Now, that's a good idea. It wouldn't be nearly as binding as a letter.

Make a pattern for chintz-covered lamp shades.

"DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I have a pair of lamps for my dressing table, and I would like to use some of my curtain material to cover plain shades. Can you tell me how this is done? C. H."

Here is a method that is shown for a living room lamp in Book 1. It may be used for a shade of any size. You will need the top and bottom rings from an old lamp shade. A cardboard foundation is cut to fit these, and the chintz or other fabric is pasted to the edge of this.

The AB line in the pattern diagram is as long as the diameter of the bottom ring. The dotted vertical line is approximately as long as the depth of the shade. The CD line is as long as the diameter of the top ring. Draw the diagonal lines to touch the ends of the AB and CD lines. Place a tack where they meet at E. Place a pencil through a loop in a string, as shown, and draw the bottom line of the shade making it as long as the measurement around the bottom ring plus a half inch. Shorten the string and draw the top to fit the top ring allowing for a half inch lap.

CONSERVE MOISTURE WITH SOIL MULCH

The other morning while I was doing some hoeing in the shrub bed before breakfast, Neighbor Jones came out onto his back porch with a newspaper and a pipe and prepared to settle down in a deck chair. When he saw me he leaned over the porch rail and spoke.

"I thought you advised me the other day to stay out of the garden after a heavy rain. But here you are, at it again, just when I've convinced myself that I can enjoy my morning newspaper without neglecting my garden."

"Yes," I replied, "I told you last week, the day after the heavy rain that working the wet soil would pack it tightly, and cause clods to form. But since then several days of sunshine have dried out the surface layer so it can be worked."

"But isn't there still plenty of moisture below the surface?"

"Exactly," I replied, "and I intend to keep it there as long as possible. Do you remember two weeks ago when we were wishing for rain, the soil in your flower bed was a network of cracks half an inch wide and several inches deep? Practically all the soil moisture to a depth of six inches evaporated through those cracks, and was lost to the plants. This clay soil shrinks when it loses moisture rapidly through evaporation. As it shrinks, it cracks open, thus exposing deeper soil to the sun. Unless I do something about it, the same thing will happen again, and all of the rain water we just got will be lost."

"It looks to me like you are loosening the soil so it will dry out all the more," Jones objected. "This Oklahoma wind gets pretty dry on hot days. It seems logical that it will take water from a loose soil faster than a tight one."

"You're right in a way," I replied. "This loose top layer does get dry. But a thin, loose layer of dry soil will not crack open. Instead, it will serve as a mulch to protect the deeper soil from evaporation. Even after a rather severe dry spell, when plants on other soils are beginning to wilt, there will be plenty of moisture here under the soil mulch."

"During the driest period this summer, I will save the clippings from the lawn and spread them in a thin layer over the beds to provide an additional mulch."

"You win," said Neighbor Jones. "Guess I'll have to start taking the evening edition of the Daily Trumpet. I'm beginning to believe that the leisure time of a gardener is not his own until after dark."

FEDERAL AID—STATES' RIGHTS

It has seemed strange that the South, with its traditional regard for the doctrine of States' Rights, has so largely overlooked the dangers to that principle involved in the acceptance of federal subsidies and largess. But recently an editorial comment appeared in the Asheville (N. C.) Times which is very encouraging as an indication of the awakening of our Southern Press to some of the inescapable implications involved in current and proposed offederal grants to the states.

This comment quoted a statement of Dr. George D. Strayer of Columbia University, New York City, in which he stated as a reason for the opposition to federal aid to the public schools that:

"Our decentralized system of management and control of schools is the one absolutely reliable antidote to the easy capture of schools by the propagandists of an economic, social or political cult."

The Times, approving Dr. Strayer's statement, commented as follows:

"None of us can know what schools of political, economic or social thought are coming into authority in Washington from time to time in the years ahead. But we all know, because we have seen it vastly expanding in our own day, that the federal power every day waxes more strong, and that it possesses abundant resources for making its will prevail, even in the smallest village."

"Much of this overshadowing federalism is inevitable. But if we are to remain not only free but equipped to maintain freedom against encroachment, we must preserve free schools, a free church, a free press."

VOTER APATHY

A proposed city-county bond issue providing for $6,500,000 worth of civic improvements such as schools, parks and other projects, in Atlanta, Ga., failed because an insufficient number of voters went to the polls. The mayor of Atlanta isn't sure whether the result was due to apathy or sit-down opposition.

Those voting approved overwhelmingly of the proposed public expenditures, but a required majority of qualified voters failed to go to the polls.

But it is evident that if a mere majority had balloted so as to carry the bond issue, the increase in the tax burden and the improvements would still have been authorized by a minority of the citizenship. Two dangers are latent in bond and other popular elections where only a few people go to the polls. One is possible minority control of government, since a small total vote by no means is always a representative cross section of public sentiment. The other is that popular apathy shown toward the franchise promises the same indifference of the people toward the functioning of government itself later.

When thousands of voters turn out on election day merely because their emotions have been stirred up by the excitement of a campaign among candidates, and when, at another time, only a few hundred express themselves on the question of public expenditures and improvements, a challenge is offered to the current democratic system of popular election. There is evidence of misplaced responsibility for government in those who lack responsibility. No one need challenge the fiction of popular election when it is exposed so fully in the process itself. Merely because other systems are worse, the American method persists.

The results of the Atlanta election are typical of the entire country. The fundamental trouble with American voting is that it is more a popular sport than an exercise of citizenship.—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

PREMIUM ON LAWLESSNESS?

While pension bills and the fair trades act occupied the headlines and received the bulk of attention at the recently closed session of the Texas Legislature, it appears that other measures of great importance to the people of Texas slipped by unnoticed and unheralded.

One of these was House Bill 988, which received virtually unanimous approval in House and Senate, and has been signed by Governor O'Daniel.

The measure is brought to light for the first time, according to our observation, in a recent editorial in the Wichita Falls Daily Times. "The bill provides," according to the Times, "that in criminal cases a defendant may enter a plea of temporary insanity if it is shown that he had been drinking or using narcotics. Such a plea may be offered in mitigation of his offense."

"The effect," the Times comments, "is to penalize abstinence and sobriety on the defendant's part. . . . The measure opens the way to numerous abuses, puts a premium on bad habits and gives the law-breaker a new loop-hole."

How any group of supposedly intelligent and public-spirited men, entrusted with the affairs of a great state, could have passed approval on any such measure, is beyond comprehension. The kindest thing which might be said of them is that they were unaware of the provisions for which they were voting, and that, at best, is criminal negligence.

If a man is to be condoned for a crime committed while he is voluntarily under the influence of narcotics or alcohol, a condition which is in itself contrary to the laws of the state, then there is no justice.

The measure, supposedly designed to clarify the terms of an old law (Article 36 of the Penal Code), merely opens a wider loop-hole for the law-breaker and allows a greater contempt for the already much-abused insanity plea. It adds one more black mark to the badly-tarnished record of the 46th Legislature, and deals another blow to Texas justice.—Memphis Democrat.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW
—THE PRINTER'S
AND THE CUSTOMER'S

There are two angles from which to view any piece of printing:

First: As a mechanical product which involves the use of paper, ink, type, plates, printing presses and other machinery. This is the point of view of the ordinary printer.

Second: As a means to an end. What is its merit as an advertising piece, or as a purely utilitarian piece of printed matter? This is ordinarily the purchaser's point of view.

But The News has two points of view—the printer's and the purchaser's. We view every order, whether the simplest form or the most elaborate selling piece, in relation to the final task it must accomplish. We study the purpose for which it is to be used, and furnish something that will exactly fill the bill. Nothing is overdone and nothing is left undone.
