Morgan Speaks at Luncheon, Lions, Tuesday

Roy B. Morgan of the Forest Service, with headquarters at Shamrock, was the principal speaker at the regular Lions luncheon held Tuesday noon.

Mr. Morgan displayed a map of Gray county showing the shelterbelt strips completed, and urged cooperation with next year's planting program. "Farmers should sign now for next season's planting, if the program is to be continued," said Mr. Morgan.

"The shelterbelt program is now effective in six states, from the Canada line to Lubbock, Texas. The belt is about 100 miles in width and the program is now in its third year," said the speaker. "Some 1,100 miles of trees 10 rows wide have been planted in Texas, 450 of them being in this district."

"The forest service is working for the good of the whole community and we must have a connected planting if we are to receive maximum benefits under the shelterbelt plan. The benefits to be derived from a shelterbelt planting is no longer a theory, but a practical plan. The ideal protection program comes from 10 rows of trees on the north, west and south, each half-mile, and intermediate plantings of three rows each one-quarter mile."

Mr. Morgan stressed the fact that the continuance of the program depends entirely upon the number of signers secured before this fall. The shelterbelt program is planned to stop soil blowing and loss of moisture.

Mr. Morgan was introduced by Don Meador member of the Lions program committee.

Lion Tamer W. E. Bogan presented Dick Pepin, Phil Baugh, John E. Nutting, W. A. Crawford, Ralph Irving and Marvin W. Dabbs, of the McClellan lake project, as visitors. These men, with Lee Brewster, project manager, compose the Blue force now in McLean.

"REFORM" BILL PASSED

Measure Giving President Vast Powers Squeezes Through Senate . . . May Die in House

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the senate finance committee, is here seen telling members of the press what his committee had done and proposed to do to the revenue measure so that it would be less objectionable to business and to the country in general. It already had made radical changes in the bill as it was passed by the house.

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Wide Powers for President

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S reorganization bill squeezed through the senate by the close vote of 49 to 42, after a fierce fight. A motion to recommit, which would have virtually killed the measure, was defeated by a vote of 48 to 43.

Opponents of this bill are convinced that it paves the way for a dictatorship in the United States. The measure was sent on to the house, which already has passed bills covering some of its features.

There is no certainty, however, that the senate measure will ever be brought to a vote in the house. Chairman O'Connor of the rules committee said it should be allowed to slumber peacefully in some pigeonhole.

The bill authorizes the President, by executive order, to transfer, regroup, co-ordinate, consolidate, segregate the whole or any part of or abolish any of the 135 bureaus, agencies, and divisions of government.

Excepted from this section, however, are the federal reserve board, the corps of engineers of the United States army and the independent, quasi-judicial and regulatory establishments, such as the board of tax appeals, the communications commission, the federal trade commission, the interstate commerce commission, and the national labor relations board.

It abolishes the civil service commission as now constituted, and the general accounting office. It creates a new "department of welfare," and it authorizes six more $10,000 a year assistants to the President.

Ten Men to Probe TVA

FIVE senators and five representatives will do the investigating of the Tennessee Valley authority, for the resolution for a joint committee inquiry was adopted by the senate without a dissenting vote, and appeared certain of passage by the house.

The resolution was introduced by Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky, majority leader. It calls for investigation of charges of malfeasance and dishonesty made by the ousted chairman, A. E. Morgan, and includes eight of the twenty-three charges originally made by Senators Bridges and King in their first resolution for a congressional inquiry. It also calls for a "fishing expedition" into the activities of private utility companies and their injunction suits against the TVA.

Sen. H. Styles Bridges, the New Hampshire Republican, in a radio debate declared the administration was trying to obscure the charges of scandal within the TVA by forcing the inquiry to cover the private utility angle. "The administration's strategy has been to cover up TVA dirt by a phoney counter-attack," he said.

He was answered vigorously by Sen. Lister B. Hill of Alabama. Legality of President Roosevelt's action in ousting Chairman Morgan from the TVA board is still a matter that the courts probably will be called on to settle. Mr. Roosevelt "removed" Morgan after receiving from Acting Attorney General Jackson an opinion that he possessed the required authority. He reported the action to congress and said he had named Harcourt Morgan chairman.

Reasons for the removal of A. E. Morgan as given by the President were that he had made grave and libelous charges against his colleagues and refused to substantiate them at the White House hearings.

Sen. H. Styles Bridges, the New Hampshire Republican, in a radio debate declared the administration was trying to obscure the charges of scandal within the TVA by forcing the inquiry to cover the private utility angle.

Japan's Regime in China

JAPAN announced officially the inauguration of the "reformed Government of the Republic of China" in Nanking. This puppet state is intended to replace the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and is headed by Liang Hung-Tze as chairman of the new executive yuan, a position equivalent to premier.

The Chinese were still fighting the invaders desperately along the Peiping-Hankow railway and claimed the Japanese were suffering heavy losses.

Profits Tax Out

PAT HARRISON meant what he said about altering the revenue bill that was passed by the house. His senate finance committee is making the changes. By a vote of 17 to 4 it eliminated from the measure the undistributed profits tax principle, substituting therefor a flat corporation income tax of 18 per cent.

As a further means of stimulating business and investment the committee adopted a provision drastically modifying the capital gains and losses tax. The committee removed capital gains on assets held for more than 18 months from the income tax category and substituted instead a flat rate of 15 per cent, which was what business and industry wanted.

In an effort to clear the way for speedy enactment of the tax relief legislation, the committee rejected a system of processing taxes on wheat, corn, cotton, tobacco, and rice, which the administration desires to finance proposed additional bounties to farmers amounting to $200,000,000 a year.

Jews Must Quit Vienna

THERE are 300,000 Jews in Vienna, and all of them must leave that city within four years. This was announced in the Austrian capital by Field Marshal Goering, Hitler's right-hand man, who set forth a program for the economic reconstruction of Austria.

He said: "Vienna must again become a German city. No city with 300,000 Jews has a right to call itself a German city. Vienna has to fulfill economic and cultural tasks, and this is impossible with Jews. Therefore, they must leave."

Goering said he had entrusted the task of removing the Jews to Seys-Inquart and that it must be accomplished quietly and mercifully by legal means.

There was great rejoicing throughout Germany when Cardinal Innitzer, archbishop of Vienna, issued a solemn declaration urging the people of Austria, most of whom are Catholics, to vote for the union with Germany at the plebiscite on April 10. The document was read in all Catholic churches. It warmly praised the Nazi rulers and pledged allegiance to Germany. This stand of the Catholic hierarchy made certain an overwhelming victory for Hitler in the plebiscite. It also led the Nazi chiefs to hope for a new accord with the Vatican.

Britain Ready to Fight

GREAT BRITAIN will not flatly pledge herself to fight to save Czechoslovakia from German aggression. But she will use her armaments to fulfill her treaty obligations to France and Belgium, and is ready to go to war in their defense if they are unjustly attacked.

That was the warning to Hitler uttered by Prime Minister Chamberlain in the house of commons, in the most important statement of British foreign policy since the world war.

Declaring his belief that peace will be maintained, Chamberlain said: "I cannot imagine any events in Europe which would change the fundamental basis of British foreign policy, which is the maintenance and preservation of peace. However, that does not mean that nothing would make us fight."

Cheers greeted this declaration. Though he said central Europe was not an area where vital British interests are at stake, he gave plain warning that if German aggression should result in war there, Britain might be forced into it.

He flatly turned down Soviet Russia's call for consultation against aggressor nations.

Wheat Crop Estimates

PREDICTION by the bureau of agricultural economics of the Department of Agriculture is that this year's wheat crop will be 830,000,000 bushels, or 160,000,000 bushels in excess of the 1932-36 average. The survey estimates that the wheat carry-over in 1939 will be around 300,000,000 bushels.

The record wheat crop is based on the following factors: If farmers seed the acreage indicated in the prospective-planting report, and if average yields are obtained, this year's spring wheat crop, including durum, will total about 200,000,000 bushels. This, together with the winter crop of about 630,000,000 bushels, indicates a prospective output of 830,000,000 bushels.

Pretty Silk for Her Easter Frock

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

DECK little daughter out in a pretty-pretty dress-up silken gown at the joyous Easter time and note what a radiant outlook it will give her. It will be as refreshing a sight as the flowers that burst into an ecstasy of color at the magic touch of spring to see little girls liting their way along in the Easter style parade. It seems that silk for dress-up "Sunday-go-to-meeting" frocks has come into its own this spring in childhood's realm, more so than for many seasons past.

Mothers are becoming increasingly alert to the fact that bright colorful well-cut clothes are vastly important in the development of a child's personality. Often it is only a becoming dress that spells the difference between a confident happy child and a timid backward one.

Mothers will find inspiration aplenty as to "how to make" little daughter's Easter frock, in the trio of fashions illustrated, for they came fresh from the designers' hands and are alive with new "ideas." If you prefer to buy your child's frock ready made you will find more daintily fashioned silk models than have been shown for quite some time, but if you are a sew-at-home enthusiast all you have to do to make a dress after the manner of the model shown to the right is to take enough silk (navy printed silk taffeta fashions the gown pictured) to the pleater and the pleater pleats the skirt. Just ask little daughter, she knows!—knows that pleated skirts are very stylish indeed this season. To give the attractive styling to the top part insert puffed details in the sleeves and the bodice as pictured.

As to the little girl centered in the group it is not a case of "all dressed up and no place to go" for her outfit, even to her new wrist watch and the dainty white gloves she carries, unmistakably identifies her as one who will join in the style parade proudly arrayed in her Easter finery. The dress is made of dainty flower-print silk crepe in delicate lovely colors. There is considerable smocking at the waistline, giving the corset effect so popular in adult fashions, with simulated yoke effect repeating the smocking. The brim hat is of the same silk print.

Little daughter will look just as if she stepped out of a fashion plate if on Easter she wears a dress of plaid weighted silk taffeta (very smart is taffeta this season). Make the skirt with fan box pleats and grace the neckline with a pleated frill, as you see to the left in the picture. Velvet ribbon is used for the bow at the neck and for about the waist, which gives it still another claim as a fashion-first. When in doubt use velvet touches to finish off the dress or the coat you may be making, for as a trimming feature velvet is very important this season.

For children's dresses plain silk crepe in the new charming pastel colors ranks in high favor. These pretty monotone crepes revel in "oodles" of shirring, smocking, fagoting and other handwork detail. The colors available are entrancing.

NEW IN THE MODE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Silk sweaters in bright colors with the tailored spring suit are important news. A cardigan fine slip-over silk sweater as pictured at the top can be buttoned in back or front. It has a boat neck and short sleeves. The silk knit has a small spaced arrow motif. The rough straw sailor has a bandana trim. The gypsy blouse shown here is in black and white polka dot silk crepe. It has a turnover collar and long full sleeves with turned back cuffs and a red silk chiffon handkerchief in the breast pocket. It is worn with a black silk taffeta upturned sombrero with a chin strap.

TAILORED OUTFITS HERALD OF SPRING

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The annual blossoming of tailored suits is a surer sign of spring than the appearance of the first crocus. Of course, there are always modifications, and this year they take the form of lower waistlines, higher hemlines, and boxy shoulder details.

In keeping with this vogue, simple shoes are once again highlighted. Gone are the foot-revealing sandals that predominated in last year's spring line.

Shoe trimming details, including simple cut-outs, punchwork, and perforations, are especially significant because of their restraint. This is also true of colors. The blue, red, and copper-hued shades were slated for style importance are considerably toned down to conform with the note of early spring reserve.

Nursery Rhyme Buttons to Adorn Spring Prints

Little Jack Horner was no more surprised than the fashion snopper is at the new forms of catalin buttons that are now being sewed on prints here, cotton goods there or just fastened to fancy little cards for the home dressmaker. Little Jack Horner happens to be one of the figures into which the catalin has been shaped and he is accompanied by such renowned persons as Old Mother Hubbard and her sheep, Little Red Riding Hood, the Piper's Son, Jack the Giant Killer and Mother Goose, herself, whose rhymes were the inspiration for these new shapes. Colors? Blue, green, orange and red. And, as strange as it seems, (or does it?) more of these buttons are being used on adults' apparel than on infant wear.

Lesson for April 10 FINDING OURSELVES IN SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-38. GOLDEN TEXT—"What shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul?"—Mark 8:36. PRIMARY TOPIC—What Peter Meant.

OUTLINE. JUNIOR TOPIC—Peter's Right Answer. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Making Life Count Through Service. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Finding the Richest Life Through Service.

"Finding ourselves" seems like a singular, almost self-contradictory expression, but it refers to a sought principle recognized by psychologists as well as spiritual leaders. It is a matter of fact, modern psychology has begun to recognize and alone bring about human happiness and efficiency.

A word of warning—let no one who studies this lesson fall into the error of thinking that a formal religious service will bring redemption and favor with God. We are saved by grace through faith in the Lord Jesus Christ—"because you work, lest any man should boast of it." It is then by the new birth that we are "created in Christ Jesus unto good works which God hath before ordained that we should walk in them" (Eph. 2:8-10).

It is the Christian who needs to "find himself in service." Only he thus yields to Christ does he really find the life worth living. The words of Jesus in verse 35 are emphatic and gloriously true.

I. Clear Confession (vv. 27-31)

Even those who deny to our Creator the recognition of His deity, and His devotion of life which is His due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man has lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even in the quiet of his life on earth those who do not accept Him as Christ regarded Him as the resurrected form of one of the nation's greatest leaders. Now, when believing men speak of Him as the great founder of Christianity, they refer to a wonderful example of a man, or an unequalled teacher. He is not enough that we stand in the mass of humanity who may admire Him, but who do not know Him as Saviour and Lord. The question comes to us as it did to the disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?" "Thou art the Christ!"

alone suffices as the foundation of Christian testimony and conduct.

II. Corrected Error (vv. 31-38)

Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was preparing to teach His disciples concerning His rejection and death. "He began to teach them that the Son of man must suffer . . . be rejected, be killed and . . . rise again."

Note the divine "must." While it is true that wicked men show their hostility toward our God by His Christ by hanging Him on a cross, yet it was His will to die for the world. The cross has rightly of old to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

Error now asserts itself, strangely enough it is the very truth regarding the Messiahship of Christ and boldly expressed it in now objects to the revelation of coming death and resurrection of Christ, and lends his voice to bibe the Master for speaking of a grave. Jesus won the victory of him there. He did not want to die before it took place and he impulsive Peter for a mouthful to object. He doesn't want to die about it now and uses many skillful and gifted preacher to argue against it. "The offense of the cross" (Gal. 5:11) has never ceased (vv. 34-38).

"Let him deny himself" (v. 34). That command we have constant to mean that we should perform the acts of self-denial, foregoing some comfort or pleasure, possibly for a few weeks. It does not mean that at all—but does mean the complete yielding to God's will. Likewise, to take up one's cross does not mean to bear some of the little disagreeable experiences of life means again to die to self and live for Christ.

Careful attention should be given to the solemn questions asked in statements made in verses 34-38. These are not the reasonings of man—they fall from the lips of the Son of God. What, He asks, will you give in exchange for your soul?

Payment

How little we pay our way in life! Although we have our purses continually in our hand, the part of service goes still unredeemed.

Discussion

The more discussion the better. Passion and personalities be chewed.

Pain

Pain is in itself a sharp discipline and hard to bear.

3RD YEAR GIRLS SERVE LUNCH

Thursday, March 31, the third year home economics girls served a luncheon in class. They prepared and served the meal in their class period. The meal consisted of pork chops, gravy, buttered asparagus, stuffed tomato salad, hot biscuits, butter, sliced peaches, whipped cream, and ice tea. Edith Mae Duncan was hostess, Florence Jones Host, and Marie Little waitress. Others eating were: Zelena Lanford, Viola Clemmons and Dorothy Mertel.

SENIORS HAVE HOBO DAY

Friday, April 1, the seniors celebrated by coming to school dressed as hoboes. They provided a sight that has never been witnessed in McLean high before. Even Principal W. M. Bralley cooperated with the seniors and came dressed as a hobo. He was so well disguised that no one in high school was able to recognize him at first. Everyone agrees that Mr. Bralley certainly is a good make-up artist.

The latter part of the afternoon was spent in the auditorium with senior hoboes performing on the stage. The one and only tap-dancing hobo, Molita Turman, really got hot. The hobo quartet composed of George Watson, Woodrow Patrick, Pee Wee Turner and Paris Hess, accompanied by Louise Biggers, sang 'Hallelujah, I'm a Bum.' The contestants for the best hobo costume pranced about to the tune of 'Old Joe Clark.' Then all the contestants marched across the stage in the approved style show runner. Pee Wee Turner, Kid McCoy and P. M. Gossett, with his two daughters, La Homa Roberts and Eva Dowell, were selected as the first having the best costumes. Pee Wee Turner won first place. The day was brought to a close with a very important senior class meeting concerning the senior play, 'The Alley Daffodil,' which was presented Tuesday night, April 5.

After the 3:30 bell a number of the class took pictures of the prize winning costumes. If any of you are interested in raising a good garden this year, these pictures may be had at a very reasonable cost.

PEP SQUAD SPONSORS BANQUET

An athletic fans' banquet is being sponsored by the McLean high school pep squad girls, in the Presbyterian Church basement, Tuesday, April 12, at 8 o'clock. Tickets may be bought at the Meador Cafe, City Drug Store, or from the pep squad girls, for 50. Everyone is invited.

APRIL FOOL

April the first! The one day when a fool gets applause for acting natural. No one knows when this old custom first started, for it has been observed for centuries in many nations.

This is a day when the school children play jokes on everyone and when most of them try to play hockey—either one is the answer to 'why teachers turn gray.' At McLean high school the teachers were determined there would be no hockey playing, so they had six-weeks tests and other hard assignments, saying anyone who was absent would receive a double zero. They were considered 'kill-joys' by most pupils, but they made the best of it and took their revenge on the poor harassed teachers. No one believed anything anyone said. Even the weather joined in the spirit of April Fool by turning from spring weather, to a cold snowy day.

'If my freshman can find a dollar, we'll both be there.'—Kid McCoy, Jr. 'I think the banquet will be the best the pep squad has had in years.'—Mabel Back. 'If they cancel my task of making a speech and assure me a keen partner, I'll be there.'—Bralley. 'I think the pep squad banquet will be a real success because it is being well planned.'—Mary Lou Clemmons. 'The thing that goes the farthest towards making life worth while, that costs the least and does the most, is just a pleasant smile. Smile girls, the banquet is coming.'—Cryer. 'I am sure the pep squad banquet will be a success and I will be there early.'—Allen. 'If they'll call me Miss Who From Where, I'll sure be there.'—Cunningham. Better come, football fans, and feel that football spirit once again this year.

SPRING TRAINING CONTINUES The McLean Tigers continued their battle Monday afternoon when the Golds evened the count by defeating the Whites 13-7, while last week the Whites won by a score of 13-0. The tie will be played off Monday night at 8 o'clock at Tiger Field. Both the band and pep squad will be on hand to encourage the teams. The winning team will be given an ice cream supper by the losers at Coach Allen's home, some time next week. Pictures were taken of the game Monday afternoon and will be shown at the ice cream party. The Tigers have a large squad of inexperienced boys, but with a lot of work they might come through and promise to end the supremacy of the Wellington Skyrockets who were district champions last year. The next few weeks will be spent in polishing up their plays and in perfecting their blocking and tackling, and their spring session will end with a scrimmage game between the Exes and the Tigers first team, which will be composed of members from both the White and Gold teams. Some twenty boys are battling over the seven positions that were left open by graduation. Coach Allen is having a hard time picking the starting lineup for the ex-Tiger game, but will pick a team after next week's contest to start against the experienced ex-Tigers. This team however, will be subject to change as the boys improve.

Miss Agnes Abbott and Mrs. Frank Etckon of Oklahoma City visited their mother, Mrs. D. L. Abbott, over the week end.

SYNOPSIS

James Lambert tries in vain to dissuade his beautiful foster-daughter, Leonora, from marrying Don Mason, young "rolling stone." He tells her, "Unless a house is founded upon a rock, it will not survive." Leonora suspects the influence of her half-brother, Ned, always jealous of the girl since the day his father brought her home from the deathbed of her mother, abandoned by her Italian baritone lover. Don arrives in the midst of the argument, and Lambert realizes the frank understanding between the two. Sitting up late into the night, Lambert reviews the whole story of Nora as a child, at boarding school, studying music abroad, meeting Don on the return trip. In the morning he delivers his ultimatum, to give Don a job with Ned for a year's show-down. When Nora suggests the possibility of running away with Don, Lambert threatens disturbance. Don agrees to the job, but before a month is over, his nerves are jumpy, he cannot sleep at night, he is too tired to go out much with Nora. Nora soothes him with her music. Nora grows quieter, and broods over Don, complains to her father of Ned's spying on him, and decides that rather than see Don's spirit broken, she will run away. She urges her father to put an end to the futile experiment. James Lambert is elaborate and angry. Lambert tells her that if Don quits she will quit with him; that he will be through with her. He adds that if she tries of her bargain it will be useless to come to him for help. Later Don and Nora discuss the situation.

"For you, Nora! For you, of course, sweetheart. For me—Well, without you there would be nothing left, nothing at all. Don't cry, Nora. I've never made you cry before. It hurts me. Things will go better after this. I promise to buck up—take life more calmly—try to remember that nothing really matters if you don't despise me. The biggest part of the year is over now. We'll stick it out, as I said before. We must, you know."

Nora looked up, winking away the tears as she said gently: "We must try, of course. It would be so terrible to hurt Father. But it's the last small straw that breaks the camel's back, Don. Don't forget that."

CHAPTER IV

It seemed to Nora that things did go better for a time. Don appeared less tired. He even accompanied her to one or two informal parties with some show of enthusiasm; and was, according to their hostess, "a perfect life-saver" at a dinner given in honor of a renowned explorer, recently returned from the Arctic.

"The affair would have been a complete washout if your young man hadn't been here, Nora," she said with gratitude. "No one else present could talk intelligently with our lion on the subjects nearest his heart, you know."

That evening was something of a triumph to the girl. As she watched her lover conversing so easily and naturally with the guest of honor, comparing experiences, putting questions, answering others which the great man put to him, her eyes shone with happy pride. Even Ned, sitting across the table, was obviously impressed though he essayed to hide the fact. And Corinne, observing that others appeared to be listening with interest to "that queer boy Nora has taken up with," listened herself, and wondered if her ears deceived her when she heard the distinguished guest invite Don to dine with him next night.

"And can you tell me," she asked Ned petulantly as they rode toward home, "what a man like that can have in common with Don Mason?" Indeed, she had to repeat the question before her husband, who was deep in thought, roused himself to reply:

"Possibly he wants to book him for his next expedition."

Corinne brightened. "I wish to goodness he would! Don could never resist such an opportunity; and an absence of that sort would settle Nora! Did you see that Kemp Corless acted extremely struck with her tonight? They say he's worth ten million."

Ned shrugged. "I can't see our fastidious sister falling for a bald head and fifty years, my dear."

"She'd be a fool not to, with all that money into the bargain," Corinne retorted.

"Nora is a fool more ways than one," observed Ned with brotherly candor, "but she's perfectly aware that Dad'll never let her suffer from want of cash. And there's more to Don Mason than I supposed, Corinne. He's got uncommonly good manners, too. Did you notice—"

"Oh, yes, I noticed," broke in Corinne impatiently. "He simply monopolized the guest of honor, if you call that manners."

"It appeared to me," maintained her husband with honesty which would have astonished Leonora, "that the guest of honor was monopolizing Don!"

For a while there was silence, a thoughtful silence on the part of Corinne before she ventured: "I wonder if the man would dine with us if he understood that Don would be there."

Being not utterly blind to his wife's social ambitions, Ned threw her an ironic glance.

"Better not try, my dear," was his advice, "and save yourself a disappointment. I've heard he turns down almost everyone."

So things went better for a time. What Nora did not suspect was the heroic effort Don was making to conceal his unhappy state of mind. He was bitterly ashamed to have her know how let-down he really was—how intolerable the situation had become to him. Often he felt that could he talk freely—get the sense of rebellion at this way of living out of his system, it would ease the strain; but Nora was worried enough as it was, he argued. Why add to her troubles? Let her think, if she could, that he was at last becoming inured to this hectic existence which his fellow men regarded as the natural thing.

To Don, filled with spring wanderlust, the long days seemed interminable, and the office little better than a prison cell. There came an evening when he could not go to Nora for fear she would suspect the terrible unrest that had possession of him. Instead he tramped for miles into the country, trying to find peace from the stars—the cool of evening—the wild, sweet scent of growing things.

It was late when he turned his steps toward town. Peace had eluded him. He could not find it. Reaching a bridge he paused to rest a moment, gazing down into the infinite blackness of moving water. Peace must be there, he mused. Peace and coolness; release from this ghastly treadmill that men called life. After all, did the clouds have the best of it? Or in that somewhere beyond did they look back regretfully, sorrowfully, wishing they'd played the game—wishing—

"Thinkin' about ending it all?" came a voice close at his side.

Don started guiltily, having been too lost in thought to hear approaching footsteps. Now the bright starlight showed him that a girl had spoken, her small, thin, pointed face looking up at him without fear, yet without boldness.

"Not seriously," he answered, as if there were nothing unusual in her question. "Is that what you were considering, this time of night?"

The girl shrugged, the cynical shrug of a bored flapper: an imitation, possibly, of some cheap actress of the screen.

"I tried it once," she confessed quite simply. "Honest I did; but a cop got in the way."

Don turned to look at her more closely, his interest rising.

"So you find life as desperate as that?" he questioned.

"Sometimes I do. Some days I don't care nothin' about livin'. Say!" she broke off suddenly, "have you got a girl—I mean a steady?"

He nodded, thinking how Nora would appreciate the appellation.

"But you ain't married. Anyone with half an eye could see it. You don't look tied."

"Don't it?" Don smiled at this description. "The truth is, I'm tied to a ledger—an immense and horrible black book chock full of figures that persist in dancing before my eyes when I want to sleep, and getting into the wrong columns day-times, just to be spiteful."

"You better be thankful they don't smell bad," the girl retorted. "I work in a dye house. Some days I can't hardly eat my lunch. How long you been goin' with your sweetie, anyhow?"

Don was beginning to enjoy himself. To be revealing his life history to an utter stranger, with no thought of the conventions, brought back the days of easy vagabondage that had once been his. Besides, this encounter would be something to tell Nora—something amusing. He answered, dropping with ease into the vernacular of his companion, a habit which endeared him to chance acquaintances: "We've been going together more'n a year now, sister."

"And you ain't tired of her?"

"Not so's you'd notice it!" grinned Don.

The girl drew in a breath which seemed, somehow, laden with discouragement.

"I bet she's got a lot o' swell clothes then, boy."

Not moving his head, Don turned his eyes a little. The moon had come from behind a bank of clouds, and he saw distinctly the much-washed, sleazy frock the girl was wearing. Even a patch under one arm was visible as she raised her elbows to the parapet, and, looking down into the dark water, repeated the statement she had just made:

"I bet she's got a lot o' clothes."

Don said, a vision of Nora's silver slippers and gay chiffons rising before him: "I'll say she has! But believe me, girl, I'd think as much of her without 'em."

"A lot you would!"

She laughed, a dreary, yet somehow brave attempt at mirth that hurt Don strangely.

"Maybe you think you would. Maybe you never seen her till she was all dolled up. I bet she don't work in no dye house anyway. What's her job?"

"She—" Don paused, then finished with sudden inspiration, "She plays—the piano, and—"

"The piano! Say, are you tryin' to kid me? The piano went out when the talkies come in, boy. Didn't you know that? I had a chum that could pound the ivories to beat the band. Played in a movie theater and dressed like she was Gloria Swanson. Why that girl had her nails fixed up in a beauty parlor every Saturday. Honest, I ain't kiddin'." (Don saw with pity the dye-stained fingers clutching the rail.)

The office was little better than a prison cell.

come from work. But she lost her job again and had to sell the piano to pay room rent; and after that I guess she thought there was no use tryin' and . . ."

The girl's voice trailed off, her eyes seeking the water, and Don said: "What happened? What happened to her after that?"

"What would ha' happened to a girl like her?" Hopelessness deep as the water below them was in the answer. "She ain't respectable any more, that's all. My mother says she'll turn me out if ever she catches me talkin' to her again; but I ask you, honest, what could the girl do? Sometimes I donno as it pays to be respectable anyhow. I met Cora (she's the one I'm tellin' about) a day last winter when I was freezin', and b'lieve it or not, she was wearin' a fur coat!"

Don advised soberly: "I'd stay respectable just the same, sister, if I were you."

"And see my boy friend goin' with another girl because I ain't got a decent rag to wear when he takes me out?" she retorted furiously. "It ain't as if I could spend what I make on clothes, like some girls can. My old man don't work steady and I have to help my mother. Once last winter I saved ten dollars for a new dress. Thought it was safe under the newspaper in my bureau drawer; but—but my old man smelt it out and took it. Ain't that a dirty trick to play on yer owa kid?"

"I'll say it was!"

Don felt a consuming desire to lay violent hands on the "old man."

Stirred by a sudden, compelling impulse, he moved nearer, and grasping the girl's thin shoulders turned her about so that the moonlight fell on her bitter, upturned face.

"Look at me, girl," he said. "Are you on the level? Not kidding me? No, don't get mad" (as she shook his hands off roughly). "I'm going to help. Honest-to-goodness, I'm going to help you, kid."

For he had read the answer to his question in those indignant, angry, tear-stained eyes, and knew that the girl had talked so freely only because she was lonely to the point of heartbreak. He reached in a pocket, thankful for his eccentric landlady (who was once the unfortunate recipient of a forged check) insisted on receiving her monthly stipend in cold cash. Don had intended paying her that night. A roll of bills met his expectant fingers. After all, he was thinking, it didn't matter whether the fickle Joe of the girl's story was worthy of her or not. She loved him, poor child! She wanted to be beautiful—for him; and—thank God!—he could make her dream come true. His hand slid from the pocket, and lifting those dye-stained, work-worn young fingers, he closed them gently 'round the roll of greenbacks.

"That's yours, sister."

"Mine!" The girl stared down in stupefaction at the money, her breath coming in quick gasps. She said, her voice breaking on a shaky laugh: "Say!—who are you, anyhow John D., or—Santa Claus?"

Don grinned and answered: "I'm just a friend. You put that where your old man can't find it, and—"

"But—but you've savin' up to get married, ain't you?" she protested. "I can't take your whole roll this way—honest I can't. I ain't got a right to take any of it; but—but if you'd spare me five bucks maybe I'd get to save somethin' next week."

She extended the money as if to give it back to him, and Don, taking her hand in both of his, said gently: "No. It's yours, sister, every darn cent of it. My girl would want you to have it. See? She likes to look swell too, you know. She'll understand. Why, you poor kid! Don't cry. It's nothin'—nothing at all to cry about."

Don ceased, ducking his head against the blinding glare of headlights as a big car moved slowly across the bridge. Not until later did he recall the fact that as those powerful lights picked him out of the darkness, the car had wavered for a moment, almost stopped, before it went on into the night.

A week dragged by, one of those first hot weeks that sap the energy. Even Nora, wilted, and wilting, thought compassionately of Don, sentenced to spend those enervating days in the correct attire of a business man. How, she asked herself, could he ever stick it out until October? And if he didn't . . .

She came in early one afternoon to find her father at home, minus his collar and seated by an electric fan. He said, smiling an apology: "It's so blamed hot down town I couldn't stand it. Don't think I've ever known it so warm this time of year. What do you say to getting into the country earlier than usual, my dear? You look—"

"Don't say how I look!" begged Nora, slumping down limply beside the fan. "I was hoping there was something wrong with the hall mirror! Such early heat is downright wicked, isn't it? I—I'm not going to the country, Father."

"What do you mean?"

In his amazement James was oblivious of a bead of perspiration that trickled persistently down his nose.

Science Finds That Aches in Bones Are Not True Index to the Weather

Science has cast serious doubt on the old belief that persons can forecast the weather by the aches in their bones.

The popular theory that pains are associated with certain kinds of weather is disputed by Dr. W. P. Elhardt of the department of physiology at the University of Illinois.

Dr. Elhardt collected data for a six-month period and set it down on one long graph chart, chronologically arranged.

And across this long, correlated chart of meteorological conditions Dr. Elhardt plotted a record of pain.

The pain records, finally transferred to the chart, were kept by a veteran severely wounded in the World War, who, until he was shown the result of the experiment, believed he could feel bad weather coming by a recurrence of pain.

The soldier had suffered a gunshot wound in his hand; another in his shoulder. He had lost a little and a ring finger of one hand, and numerous other injuries.

His pain, after the war, struck him at all-too-frequent, irregular intervals. He blamed the weather. From

Dr. Elhardt's data, however, it was shown that changes in the weather were not the cause of the recurrence.

During six months of observation the pain struck the veteran thirty-nine times on a decrease of temperature; but there were 172 drops in temperature during that period, so the correlation was only 22.7 per cent. Furthermore, the temperature ranged from -10 degrees to 98 degrees, while the pain occurred only between the ranges of 23 and 92 degrees.

The correlation between pain and increase in humidity (which occurred 170 times) was only 22.4 per cent; between pain and decrease in humidity, only 7 per cent.

Mountains Keep Norway Warm
Guarding the coast line of Norway is a range of undersea mountains which effectually turn back the icy currents flowing down from the Arctic circle; but the warm Gulf stream, flowing higher in the water, passes over the peaks and brings the country a moderate climate for a great part of the year.

Time was when McLean had heated local elections, but now it seems difficult to get enough voters to register a choice to make it interesting.

The need of a zoning law is felt by even the smallest town. When building lots are small there is nothing to keep someone from maintaining a stock pen or something else that maybe does not bother the owner at all, but certainly is not so acceptable to the neighbor who is forced to live next door.

School kids are not the only traffic offenders in McLean. We have a few men who think nothing of turning around in the middle of Main street, rather than drive a half block to the turning place, and some of them do not mind driving too fast on any street.

It is a funny thing that any town thinks it must send away from home for a toastmaster or principal speaker for a banquet, and then turn the meeting over to the visitor after everyone is tired and ready to go home.

Only a few short years ago every American was taught to be self-reliant—now hundreds of people are looking to someone else for help and guidance, adopting the policy of leaning rather than laboring, as a mode of life.

"A Free Ride to Doom"

By FLOYD GIBBONS
Famous Headline Hunter

HELLO EVERYBODY:

I've seen a lot of articles lately, in newspapers and magazines, warning automobilists not to pick up strangers along the road. Well, sir, today I'm going to warn the strangers not to get too chummy with these doggone automobilists.

And I'm not more than half kidding about that, either, boys and girls. It's a poor rule that won't work both ways, and you can get in just as much of a jam picking up with some bird in a car as the bird in a car can by giving a lift to the guy with the wiggling thumb at the side of the road.

If you don't believe that, listen to the story of Ernest A. Kehr, of Richmond Hill, N. Y. Ernie took a ride one time, back in the summer of 1934, with a bird he'd never seen before—and that ride came darned close to being the last one Ernie ever took.

Picked Up by a Strange Motorist.

Ernie had been in Calgary riding wild horses in the rodeo and was on his way home. He had hiked through Glacier National park and he was pretty tired, but he was pushing on as fast as he could because he had arranged to meet a friend at a small town in Montana and he didn't want to keep him waiting.

Valier was the name of the town and Ernie was within 15 miles of it when a man came along driving a brand-new car. The man pulled up beside Ernie and asked him if he wanted a ride. It didn't take much figuring on Ernie's part to decide that this was an easier mode of travel than the "Shanks mare" system he had been following. He climbed into the seat by the driver and they were off.

But Ernie had no more got into that buzz buggy than he began to have his doubts. There was something queer about the driver. He had seemed cordial enough when he had offered Ernie the ride, but there his good will seemed to have ended. When Ernie passed a casual remark, the fellow ignored it. He kept his eye on the road and the car seemed to be moving faster and faster with every foot they went.

They had gone quite a distance before Ernie discovered what the trouble was. His companion was well under the influence of liquor.

Fast Driving on a Dangerous Road.

That didn't look so good to Ernie. The fellow was driving faster than was safe, even with a sober man at the wheel. By this time he was hitting fifty on a road where a sane driver would not have gone more than thirty—a long, steep downgrade that ran along a sloping mountain ridge. The ground fell away on one side of them into a deep mountain gully and on the other side it rose straight up—a wall cut out of solid rock by the graders who had leveled the roadbed.

The small car bounced about perilously on the rough, uneven road, but that didn't seem to bother the man at the wheel. Instead of slowing down he fed the machine more gas. The needle of the speedometer climbed to sixty—then to seventy.

Ernie began to get nervous about that time. The car was roaring along now at a speed that almost upset it every time it came to a curve. It bounced about the surface of the road in a thoroughly alarming manner. Ernie kept his eye glued on the driver, watching his every move and ready to grasp the wheel in the event that he should lose control of the car. It seemed nothing short of a miracle to Ernie that it hadn't gone off the road or smashed into something long before.

Plunged Right Off the Mountain Side.

They had gone skidding around a curve on two wheels and had just come to a long, straight stretch. The road ahead looked smooth and in good condition, and for the first time during the ride Ernie felt comparatively safe. He drew in a deep breath and heaved a sigh of relief—let his eyes wander over the landscape for a second. And then it happened.

Says Ernie: "I had no sooner taken my eyes from the man than I saw the car leave the hard road and go off onto a soft shoulder. At the speed we were making, that shoulder was fatal. The sudden change of surface swerved the wheels of the car and over the side of the mountain we went, the car turning over in the air as it left the ground. The earth seemed to spin about in a dizzy circle for a few seconds and then we crashed to the slope at the bottom of a sheer drop of 40 feet.

"We hit the slope with a crash—so hard that the motor of the car was knocked right off the chassis and buried itself in the ground where we struck. But the rest of the car, with both of us in it, continued to roll down the slope at a terrific speed. It rolled over six or eight times and finally crashed into a rock with such force that I went sailing 50 feet through the air. After that I lost consciousness."

A 40-foot drop, six turns in a tumbling car and a 50-foot sail through the air! The driver was dead when they found him, and Ernie—he got a bump on the head, three busted teeth—and that's all. He's still wondering if he's really as tough as those figures would seem to indicate.

A Classic Example

The Hermitage, beautiful and his home of Andrew Jackson, lies a few minutes from the heart of Nashville, Tenn. The building is a classic example of the best architecture of its day and is preserved in every detail almost precisely as it was when Old Hickory died away. The site of The Hermitage presents a scene of sylvan beauty and quietude reminiscent of the home of the great statesman and mementos of Jackson's bustling life are everywhere. The rooms are furnished with pieces which Jackson and his family actually used, and the grand way in the lower hall ranks as one of the most beautiful.

Roman Emperor's Advice

Begin the morning by saying to thyself, I shall meet with the busy-body, the ungrateful, arrogant, deceitful, envious, unsocial. All these things happen to them by reason of their ignorance of what is good and evil. But I, who have seen the nature of the good that is beautiful, and of the bad that is ugly, and the nature of him who does wrong, that it is akin to me, not only of the same blood or seed, but that it participates in the same intelligence and the same portion of the divinity, I can neither be injured by any of them, nor can I be angry with my kinsman, nor hate him.—Marcus Aurelius.

The Romance Languages

The Romance languages, which are Italian, Spanish, Portuguese, French and Rumanian, are described as "romance," from the Old French word, "romanz," meaning translated from Latin.

Doctor of Divinity

The degree of doctor of divinity is usually an earned degree. There is no general regulation, however, to deter a university from bestowing such an honorary degree should it so decide.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—Big beefy, handsome Joseph Buerckel, forty years old, with hard fists and a whip-lash tongue, is Hitler's grand marshal of the Nazi subjugation of Austria. To the surprise of Nazi home talent in Austria, he is given entire charge of the fusion and subordination of the Austrian Nazis by Berlin.

Hard Fists to Nazify Austrians

He was a poor schoolmaster who worked his way up by continuous and diligent Jew-hating. While less earnest and industrious young men were wasting their time, he was working nights, Sundays and holidays on this, his chosen career.

Against stiff competition, it took him years to gain distinction, but at last he came to out-rank even the illustrious Julius Streicher in long-distance anti-Semitism.

He was born in the Palatinate, the south German territory adjoining the Saar. He was in the World War, in the closing years, and joined the Hitler movement soon after the Munich beer hall putsch in 1923.

He was a good rough-and-tumble fighter and organizer and was advanced rapidly in the more overt and violent party drives.

When Baron von Papen was removed as Saar commissioner, in 1934, and made ambassador to Vienna, Herr Buerckel replaced him. Under his supervision was the jug-handled plebiscite and his the exultant radio voice which told the world that German justice had triumphed.

The League of Nations handed him the valley, and he became governor in 1935.

A typically forthright usake was his Christmas decree against shopping in Jewish stores.

"If you try to get out of it," he said, "by pretending that your wife did the shopping, it merely shows that an unreal Nazi spirit prevails in your home, and you are not a he-man, but a fool."

Saar Post Taught Him Technique

YOUNG Jan G. Masaryk, Czech minister to the Court of St. James, had a fervent belief in the Kellogg and Locarno pacts. He once said, "They are splendid instruments of a world order of peace and stability." Now he calls at the British foreign office, perhaps to hint that something seems to have gone wrong.

He is the son of the late Dr. Thomas Masaryk, first president of Czechoslovakia. His mother was an American, born and reared in Brooklyn, and so is his wife, the former Mrs. Francis Crane Leatherbee, daughter of Charles R. Crane, the widely known manufacturer and industrialist. He has spent much time in America.

At the age of eighteen, he ran away from the University of Prague, in the early years of the war, and worked in a factory at Bridgeport, Conn. He returned home and finished his studies, and was the first Czech minister to the United States in 1919.

He has his famous father's impassioned belief in democracy, and has been its eloquent defender in central Europe, where his country is Horatius at the Bridge.

Czech Sees Fadeout of Peace Hope

THE history of this age will be hard to unscramble. Japan can't take a belt at a local power baron without landing on an American stockholder. Dr. Joji Matsumoto warned the government not to get in trouble with American investors by nationalizing its electric power industry.

This would endanger investments of $75,000,000, he contended, mostly held in this country.

He is Japan's leading corporation lawyer and one of its most important financiers, an officer of the Capital Rehabilitation Aid company, which has a quaint sound but which is understandable even in the Occident.

Sixty years old, he is a former professor of law at the Tokyo Imperial university, from which he was graduated. He is a director of the Tokyo Gas company and several other corporations, and was vice president of the South Manchurian railway.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Noted Food Authority

Relates the Miracle of VITAMINS and Explains Why YOU MUST EAT THEM or DIE

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS
6 East 39th St., New York.

WE LIVE in the most inspiring age the world has ever known. Chemists grow plants without soil. Doctors snatch men from death with insulin. Surgeons perform incredibly delicate brain operations. And thanks to the amazing discoveries of nutritional scientists, children enter the world with far better chances for long and happy lives, while men and women of seventy are more active and useful than their grandparents were at fifty.

Much of the hard-won knowledge of how to eat so as to increase efficiency, curb disease, and improve the chances for longevity is due to the discovery of vitamins.

VITAMINS DISCOVERED

Twenty-six years ago, a now-famous scientist walked nervously around his laboratory, back and forth—back and forth—back and forth. He was conducting a nutrition experiment of vast importance. He didn't quite know what he was going to find, but he believed that he was on the verge of a revolutionary food discovery.

The scientist was my friend, Casimir Funk, a brilliant Polish bio-chemist. He had been working on the problem for many years. At last, in the year 1912, his experiments were positive and conclusive. Then he announced to the scientific world that he had discovered a vital force. "This force," said Funk, "I have called vitamin, because it is necessary to life."

Thus, the word "vitamin" came into being, along with the first knowledge of these minute but powerful factors which exert such a tremendous influence on human health and happiness.

SPARK PLUGS OF NUTRITION

Other bio-chemists throughout the world—including Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins in England, and Hart, Humphrey, Babcock, Steenbock and McCollum in the United States—had been working on the same problem that Funk had partially solved. They knew that the first step was to find out how vitamins affected the human body, and that the second step was to discover what foods contained these vital substances.

And so there began a long series of experiments in the laboratories of great universities all over the world, which demonstrated what happens when a diet is deficient in any of the vitamins, and proved that if laboratory animals are wholly deprived of vitamins for a short time they will die.

These experiments are of the utmost significance to every homemaker, because the same thing happens to human beings as to experimental animals. Today our knowledge of vitamins has progressed to such a degree that it is possible to state the exact requirement for most of the vitamins and to designate the foods from which adequate quantities can be obtained.

RESISTANCE AND VITAMIN A

To date, six vitamins have been identified. Vitamin A promotes growth and builds resistance to disease. It is necessary for the Building, Maintaining Family Health

IN THE C. Houston Goudiss articles that have appeared weekly in this newspaper previous to this one, the nationally known food authority has described FOOD, as it provides the key to mental and physical power; PROTEINS, the foods you cannot live without; CARBOHYDRATES and FATS, foods that provide motive power for the body machinery; and MINERAL SALTS, that you must have in order to build strong bones, healthy nerves and rich, red blood.

These subjects have been treated in an interesting and understandable manner, free of scientific terms, principally offering advice to the housewife that will aid her in the problem of feeding the members of her family such foods as will build and maintain their health.

Every one of these articles has a definite place in your scrapbook for future reference. If you have missed any of these discussions, the publisher of this newspaper will supply them upon your request. If you have not already done so, start a department of these informative articles in your scrapbook at once!

What Is the Cause of "Spider-Web Check"?

If not properly "fed" with a good oil polish, furniture in time develops what is known as "spider-web check!" This appears on the finish, like wrinkles on the human face—fine lines, spreading here and there in a spider-web pattern. This crazing, this light cracking, is known in furniture language as "checking" and "spider-web checking" better describes the condition. This is the danger-signal, on finish! It's the indication of "starving" wood! A warning to the housewife, that if the finish is not cared for immediately and properly, the furniture will develop cracks, ridges and splits. "Spider-web check" is generally the result of either one of these two causes: Polish-neglect—or the use of a poor, cheap polish—without the essential fine, light-oil base. When the furniture is periodically "massaged" with a reputable oil polish (the best is non-greasy), the pores of the wood are "fed" and the piece is preserved. Then "spider-web check" will not appear! The use of a quality oil polish is the best preventive formula for this ugly, detrimental check!

MORE WOMEN USE O-CEDAR POLISH THAN ANY OTHER KIND!

...because O-Cedar not only cleans as it polishes, but preserves your furniture—"feeds" the finish, prevents drying-out, cracking. Insist upon O-Cedar Polish, for furniture, woodwork and floors (with the famous O-Cedar Mop).

BEAUTY CONTEST for PLANTS!

HAVE you ever wondered why most of the finest gardens in your locality are grown from Ferry's Seeds? Here's why:

All Ferry's Seeds are the result of many years of careful breeding, selecting and improving. In developing a new strain, the seed experts of the Ferry-Morse Seed-Breeding Institute hold "plant beauty contests" to select the finest plants. Their seeds are planted for the next crop. Thus, year after year, weaknesses are eliminated and desirable qualities encouraged.

Select your flower and vegetable seeds from the Ferry's Seeds store display. All have been tested this year for germination and tested for true-ness to type. Be a packet and up. Ferry-Morse Seed Co., Detroit, San Francisco.

FERRY'S SEEDS

Every Packet DATED

Snoopin' Around

By D. A. Davis

A modern young man of McLean Has a car and airplane; He'll ride on a bus, Put the modern little cuss Won't ride on a horse or a train.

Folks, it won't be long until railroads and horses will be things of the past. There is only one way to railroads will ever get back to the good old days and that is to quit running their trains on a safety basis. There's no excitement or thrills or danger in riding on the railroads any more. Away back yonder I can remember people used to buy accident policies when they bought their tickets, and the whole family would come down to the depot and cry on each other's shoulders and act just like the ones that were leaving on the train would never return, and when they went in the coach they would sit down and hold onto the seats with both hands, expecting the train to either run off the track or have a head-on collision with another train. And when they arrived at their destination they would send a telegram saying "Arrived safely," but nowadays you hardly ever hear of a train wreck. Lots of railroads are boasting that their trains have traveled millions and millions of miles without killing anybody.

And this fact is exactly the reason us chance taking Americans have quit riding on safe and comfortable trains where there is no excitement or wrecks, where a dozen or so people are ground to pieces under the car wheels or scalded by steam.

What we want to do today is to ride in automobiles at a speed of seventy to ninety miles per hour, scoot up a hill on the wrong side of the road, or tear around a curve on two wheels, burst into some other automobile and scatter ourselves all over the road in a mashed, bruised mass of human flesh, bone and blood.

If the railroads would go to having wrecks and kill a few thousand passengers, maybe we Americans would go back to riding the trains again.

Folks, it won't be long until we will have another awful car wreck that will mangle into mincemeat some of us right here in McLean. It's going to happen just as sure as I am living—it can't be delayed much longer unless we stop our fast driving in the city limits, especially near our school grounds. I've witnessed three almost fatal accidents right here on our streets in the last week. I am sorry to say, but two of these "stunts" were pulled by you high school smart alecks. Now don't go and get mad as a hornet at me, and you kids remember I greatly admire everyone of you, and I'll admit the grownups are pulling just as many or more near fatal accident stunts than you do. But listen, you boys (and girls, too), you sure are flirting with the undertaker when you come tearing up Main Street from the park to the stop light over that rough road at seventy miles an hour. There's no use your denying it, either, because I saw you with my own eyes.

Folks, I'm not unreasonable or foggy. I'm strictly conservative. I want you kids to have a good time and enjoy yourselves while you are young, but for God's sake get a little "steadiness" in those noggin's of yours and cut out that fast driving around town. And this goes for you "whippersnappers" that're past the high school age that're tearing up and down these streets just as fast as your cars will run. And you parents! You'd better check up on some of your kids that're burning up the air around here before they kill their fool selves. Day, folks, is written with the very best of intention on my part. I wouldn't hurt the feelings of anybody for this world, and don't any of yousall go and get mad at me but just take it seriously and honestly. For God's sake, folks, let's not have one of those awful automobile accidents that we are reading about every day that's happening all around us. And you grandpas and grandmas, you can slow down quite a bit yourselves and still be going too fast.

Our 10-day Bible conference came to a close last Sunday. You who did not attend surely missed a great blessing, and also many educational points which were very valuable to those who received them.

Bishop Dan T. Muse was the speaker throughout the conference. He presented a Bible picture of the condition of the world today. Bishop Muse is one of the most able speakers of today. He spoke in every service concerning the prophecies of the Bible, stressing especially those of the coming of Christ. We would all do well to hear him when he again will be the principal speaker at the annual camp meeting at Lefors, beginning July 22.

The conference was well attended, having representatives from three Oklahoma cities, Clinton 2, Turpin 5, and Eldorado 5; there were 5 present from Hatch, N. M., which is near 600 miles from McLean; and representatives from Texas towns too numerous to mention. Pampa had the largest delegation of any visiting city.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH

W. B. Swim, Pastor

Mrs. Lois G. Morrison of Abilene will speak at the First Methodist Church Sunday morning on the subject of "Present Day Conditions in Europe in the Light of Christian Education." Mrs. Morrison spent three months in Europe last year, studying at Oxford University and traveling. She attended the Oxford Conference of World Religion last summer. She is well qualified to speak on her subject. She is associate professor of education, and head of the department of correspondence and extension at McMurry College in Abilene. Mrs. Morrison received her B. A. degree from Arkansas State Teachers College and her M. A. from the University of Oklahoma. She has also done graduate work at the University of Texas. Mrs. Morrison is an interesting and forceful speaker and the public is invited to hear her.

At 7:45 Sunday evening Mrs. Morrison will speak on "Why Send My Child to a Denominational School." This will in no sense be denominational, and will apply equally well to other denominational schools than those supported by the Methodist church. All the parents and members of the senior class are especially invited.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

Troy A. Sumrall, Pastor

The Baptists appreciate the capacity crowd of last Sunday and welcome you to a still greater service next Sunday.

Last Sunday was an unusual day at the Baptist Church, and especially the evening service. The subject, as announced at the morning hour, was "A Study and Observance of the Church Ordinances." The Lord blessed us by leading five to unite with us. The first ordinance, baptism, was commemorated, and also the second ordinance, "the Lord's Supper" with practically all the present members partaking. The church covenant was read before the benediction.

Next Sunday is Old Folks' Day. Special seats will be arranged for all folks sixty years old and above, that they may sit together. Your choice songs will be sung. The sermon subject will be "Some Characteristics of Old Fashioned Religion." Cars will be sent out to bring in all who will get in touch with the pastor. We want you to come and enjoy this great service with us.
