Accused Gives Testimony In Lamesa Trial

J. A. Bond On Trial Second Time For Death Of J. C. White

LAMESA—J. A. Bond, charged with murdering J. C. White, in Brownfield two years ago, took the stand Wednesday, as defense counsel continued its testimony. Cross examination in the trial, in 100th district court, was to begin in the afternoon.

Bond said he entered the cafe, in which he subsequently shot White to death, to await Dewey Murphy, with whom he intended to go to Lubbock to confer about Bond's job in the state highway department.

Sons Take Stand

Lester and Vester Bond, twin sons of the defendant, testified of communicating to their father threats by White against him.

Tuesday's testimony included some pertaining to birth of a child to White's daughter the day after she was married to Vester Bond.

The state rested its case at 6 o'clock, and presentation of defense evidence began. Mrs. J. C. White told of the birth.

The wedding of Vester Bond and Leola White occurred in November, 1930, in Lovington, N. M. Evidence was that Bond lived with the girl, then 15, only a few days afterward.

Thurston writing of a letter by Bond and others asking removal of H. E. McBride, a highway department foreman in Terry county, and the subsequent discharging of Bond was said to have accentuated ill feeling between Bond and White.

THE AMERICAN CRISIS

In the report of the London Chamber's Special Committee on Monetary Policy, presented to the Council of the Chamber in June last, the weaknesses of the American banking system were summarized as follows:

Seventy-five per cent of the banks in the United States, with twenty-five per cent of the total deposits, do not belong to the Federal Reserve system; branch banking has not been developed as in this country, and small inefficient units are numerous and most important of all, there has been no adequate central control of the volume of financial, as distinct from commercial and industrial credit.

In 1920 the price level in the United States was practically the same as it was in this country. Real wages were much higher and industry made the largest profits in the history of the country, and this in spite of, and not because of, the most preposterous inflation on the financial credit side, security, values and fixed assets being pushed up to incredible heights.

It is possible that the United States has not yet paid the full penalty for her failure to control the total volume of financial, as distinct from commercial and industrial, credit.

This view has since been upheld (Continued On Page 7)

Home Town Talk by Beddy

It is to be hoped that a county relief committee can be obtained when resignations of the present committee become effective, so that Howard county men may continue to be provided employment through federal relief funds.

But, it is very obvious that it is going to be very difficult to get anyone to serve on the committee. The reason why few men will consent to serve is that they have witnessed in Big Spring in the last few months just how much abuse is thrown at the men who have given their time and effort without pay to make it possible for the federal relief money to be available for Howard county men.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation's rules provide that there must be a county committee set up, and acting under bond, before any county can receive allotments of employment relief money.

The fact that these county committees furnish bond to the federal government, and that very careful, detailed reports must be made to the government on the manner in which the funds are used locally, ought to make plain to any fair-minded person that the men on the committee could not if they wished to do so divert any of the funds to any purpose except that for which the money was allotted.

It is very unfortunate that some men who have been given employment because this committee consented to serve have seen fit to criticize the committee with a number of rumors and accusations that not only are so unfounded that they do not merit the dignity of replies, but also are so vicious that those who started them might well consider the fact that there are laws that make slander or libel crimes (Continued On Page 7)

Friendship of Jesus is infinitely more than the friendship of mere men. Jesus means the nearness of an Almighty and Forgiving God. All men must have a God. Through Jesus I know that the Father in Heaven is God. Jesus means the comfort and help of a powerfully ally. Through Jesus I have assurance of an abiding and eternal life. How can we get along without Him? Do you not believe that these are universal needs—your needs?"

 in this state.

The fact is that if local business and professional men who compose the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce had not taken action last fall and appointed a county relief committee no relief funds would have been obtained for Howard county.

Another fact is that if these men had not consented to serve on the committee, giving their time and thought, and submitting to the unjust accusations thrown at them, the relief funds could not have been distributed here.

Another fact is that wages paid R.F.C. workers here are higher than wages paid in other towns.

These remarks are made solely in justice to citizens of the city and for no selfish purpose. This newspaper has never had anything to do with handling relief funds, except to publish announcements for information of men seeking employment.

Since the county committee has resigned, another one must be appointed and consent to serve or

Environment And Crime

When the Illinois Tax service association went before that state's Board of Pardons and Paroles to plead for the life of Russell McWilliams, 18-year-old condemned murderer, it advanced an argument that every citizen in the land might profitably have listened to.

This argument was a bold assertion that the state of Illinois itself has a share in the responsibility for this lad's crime, and that having such a share it can not properly put him to death.

Because taxes on small homes are so heavy, the argument declared, McWilliams' parents could not give the boy a fair chance in life. McWilliams lived in a blighted "slum area" in a home which, in the words of the association's brief, "offered no normal amusements or wholesome opportunities for happiness."

The modern world, furthermore, has evolved commercialized pleasures so rapidly that to many minds "pleasure is identical with purchasing." The only way, then, in which a lad like McWilliams can get pleasure is by getting money.

In other words, an abnormal temptation to steal is put in front of him, and the state instead of countering such a temptation, "tolerates an antiquated and socially inhumane tax system that directly contributes to the dissatisfaction and delinquency of youth thru its degrading influence upon housing and home life."

This plea is something new in American criminal procedure. The state, always ready to take the responsibility for ending a murderer's life—on those rare occasions when it can catch and convict him—has not yet thought of assuming partial responsibility for his crime. It is always ready with Cain's plea—"Am I my brother's keeper?"

But the responsibility is there. The least sentimental of men, walking through a city slum, can not escape realizing that children brought up in such a place start life with the cards stacked against them.

CANCER SURGERY

Bearing in mind that cancer is not at first a general disease but a local growth, it is evident that one of two things must be done to get rid of it. The cancer must be removed or destroyed. It can best be removed from the body by surgery or destroyed in the body by irradiation. And it must be done quickly to save life. This is imperative.

Few people realize how great have been the triumphs of surgery within the past years. No other branch of medicine compares with it in definiteness, precision and brilliance of results. No branch of surgery has progressed farther than the surgery of cancer. Fortunate indeed is the patient whose cancer is so small and so favorably located that the modern resources of surgery and radiation can be employed to effect a cure.

It is scarcely more than a generation ago that cancer was looked upon by surgeons as practically incurable, because they receive only patients with cancer so advanced as to be beyond help. Now people are more intelligent and are seeking help before it is too late. This factor, coupled with the increased interest in and knowledge of cancer on the part of the medical profession, is resulting a constantly increasing number of permanent cures each year.

Puts An End To Bunion Pains

No Need to Suffer Another Day

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflammation of swollen toe joints and help get them down to normal and that is to apply Moore's Emerald Oil night and morning.

Ask Collins Bros. or any first class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and furthermore if one bottle of Emerald Oil does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly suffer an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.—adv.

Reid's Ankle Injury May Prevent Entrance In Mile Event

May 4, 5, 6, sport fans will be eagerly awaiting results of three local high school track and field stars, representing districts 3 and 9 in the annual state meet sponsored by the University Interscholastic League at Austin.

As usual, the injury jinx had to settle on Big Spring's only hope on the cinder path, lanky "Cy" Reid, district mile champ. Cecil has been laid out for the past few days with a badly sprained ankle that threatens to spell "final" to his career as a black and gold athlete, as the tall likable boy will be graduated in May.

Even if Reid is able to run in the mile he will face stiff opposition that will force him to run much faster than at any previous time if a good showing is made.

In the district 10 track and field meet held last Saturday, Hanshaw of Woodrow Wilson School at Dallas, lowered the state mile record of 4:32.3 set last year by the veteran Morgan from Alford, to 4:31.9. Not a great deal trimmed off but a second may mean the difference between victory and defeat. Morgan, who ran second to Hanshaw, will trek to Austin again this year.

1st Christian Revival Adds New Interest

'Midnight Raid On A Wild Party' Subject Of Rev. Shettlesworth

Another peak of interest was reached Wednesday evening in the revival at the Christian Church with added music features which were offered for the Glory of God and ongoing of the Kingdom, said an announcement of Thursday.

Harry Jordan and Joe Edward Davis, veteran net stars, will battle for state honors in the doubles division against a strong array of opponents. Coach Wayne Matthews is going easy on the bi-district champs in hopes of preventing any injuries, of which the Steer team is usually afflicted with a yearly epidemic. Both Harry and Joe have another full year to bid for tennis laurels.

Using as his subject "A Midnight Raid on a Wild Party" the minister spoke from the experiences recorded in the 5th chapter of Daniel and pointed out the danger of one who might be surrounded with material blessings and public acclaim being adjudged "weighed and found wanting" when measured in the balances of God.

Tests suggested by the speaker included "having no other God"; "Taking the name of the Lord in vain"; "desecration of the Lord's Day"; and failure to "obey the spoken commands of Jesus." "If one is not in position to say 'all these I have kept faithfully' then the Divine Word and human experience both show that such a one is weighed and found wanting in the wisdom of a just God," said Rev. Shettlesworth.

Rev. Shettlesworth insists that his subject tonight, "What Think Ye of Christ," will be the best message of the entire series thus far, and the public is urged to join in the study of this question at eight o'clock this evening.

Child Fed Through Tube Three Years Now Eats Normally

EL PASO, (UP)—Efrain Alvarado, 3, who has been fed through a tube in his abdomen for almost two years, again can eat normally through his mouth, doctors decided after an examination.

A strong lyse solution that he swallowed closed the passage to Efrain's stomach in June, 1931. Doctors made an incision in his stomach, inserted a rubber tube, and began artificial feeding. Orange Juice, soup, water and other liquids were poured into his stomach. Physicians predicted the boy would go through life fed in this way, a constant hospital visitor, for the tube had to be removed, cleaned and replaced every two weeks.

A few weeks ago, however, Efrain suddenly reached for a bowl of oatmeal and ate part of it. Fearing he would choke to death, his mother called a physician. He could find nothing wrong. Examination was delayed because of a scarlet fever quarantine.

Dr. J. Mott Rawl's made a fluoroscopic examination that showed food will pass through the boy's throat to his stomach. He decided that the scar tissue that closed his throat had been absorbed gradually, something that rarely occurs in such cases.

Efrain will be permitted to eat soft food such as cereal, mashed potatoes, orange juice and soup, until all danger of his throat closing again is gone, then the tube will be finally removed.

Royalty And Land Owners Must Settle Oil Crisis Says Speaker

KILGORE, (UP)—Judge W. R. Hughes of Longview, speaking before the East Texas Land Owners' association here said the present oil crisis can only be settled by action of land and royalty owners.

The meeting was the first of several called to consider the oil marketing problems. Dime-a-barrel oil threatens security of the industry the delegates from Henderson, Overton, Longview and adjoining towns were told.

"Nothing but disaster stares us in the face and it is going to take clear thinking and cooperation to bring us out of the present situation," Hughes said.

He suggested as a possible solution to the problem that a test case be filed in federal courts to determine the validity of the present royalty order. The order permits allowable production on a percentage of potential production basis and has met with dissatisfaction of many land owners and operators.

Hughes said proof that the new allowable caused waste would result in a rewritten order by the railroad commission.

"I believe the present price of ten cents a barrel will prevail for sometime," Judge Hughes said, "and if the land owners get relief we must find some way out ourselves. We are the only factors left that can do anything."

The association passed a resolution calling on Governor Miram A. Ferguson to sign the marginal well bill.

"We believe this act is vitally important to the stabilization of the industry," said the telegram dispatched to the governor.

A second meeting of the association was to be held at Longview. Independent operators prepared to meet with a committee of landowners to determine what course they would follow in event the railroad commission's order was not altered.

Giant Hurler Is Nicked For Single Safety

Dodgers And Reds Take Other Games In National

NEW YORK—By the narrow margin of a double which might have been scored as an error, Roy Parmalee, making his first appearance of the season, Wednesday missed baseball's hall of fame when he held the Phillies to one hit in the New York Giants 3-1 victory.

In the third inning, Mickey Finn, Phillies second baseman, cracked a fast hopper down the third base line. Johnny Verges got his hands on the ball but was unable to hold it and Finn pulled up at second. An outfield fly and a wild pitch sent him across the plate.

The one run appeared good enough to win the game until the seventh inning, when the Giants counted twice. Singles by Ryan and Ott, mixed with Parmalee's sacrifice, gave the Giants their third run in the eighth.

Jim Elliott kept the Giants' six hits well scattered except the two innings the Giants scored. Parmalee was invincible, however, striking out six men.

BROOKLYN—The slugging of Del Blasonette behind the four-hit pitching of Owen Carroll gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 5-1 victory over the Boston Braves Wednesday.

The Dodgers' veteran first baseman, who returned to the game this season following a year on the sidelines with an injured leg, cracked out a home run, a double and a single to drive in four runs.

Walter Berger's home run in the seventh produced the Braves' only run off Carroll, who kept Boston's four hits scattered over as many innings.

ST. LOUIS—Shas Johnson held the St. Louis Cardinals to five hits and the Cincinnati Reds took the first game of the series Wednesday, 2-1, largely because Leo Durocher, usually a weak hitter, pounded everything that Paul Derringer offered him.

Galveston Takes Lead

Thormahlen Administers Cats Second Five-Hit Defeat

GALVESTON—Hank Thormahlen picked up where his teammate southpaw, Lefty Barrow, left off Tuesday night and sent the Fort Worth Cats down to their second five hit defeat here Wednesday night, 4-3, in a game that gave Galveston a clean sweep of the short series against their north Texas rivals.

Except for one bad inning where six hits and a sacrifice netted all of Galveston's runs, the Panther pitchers, Whitworth and Briggs, pitched creditable ball. The Hucs collected 12 hits all told. The victory sent Galveston into the Texas league lead by a half game.

HOUSTON—Augustus "Lefty" Johns, an almost invincible southpaw in the days when he tolled for Jackie Atz' Fort Worth Cats, turned in a firing line performance here Wednesday night that would have done credit to any youngster. The crafty wrong-hander held the Houston Oilers to four singles, two of them decidedly scratchy, and blanked the bayou city aggregation 8-0.

THEY'LL CONFER ON WORLD'S ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

Two of the most popular post-war statesmen of Europe are among the foreign notables coming to Washington for conferences with President Roosevelt on world economic problems. They are Ramsay MacDonald (left), four times premier of Great Britain, and Edouard Herriot, who is still generally regarded as the dominant figure in France, although a protégé of his now heads the government. The President has invited representatives from all parts of the world to Washington for a series of discussions which probably will last several weeks. (Associated Press Photo)

BEAUMONT—Ray Fitz, former first baseman and outfielder, continued to look impressive as a pitcher Wednesday by defeating the Oklahoma City Indians 4-4 and limiting them to seven hits. The southpaw showed unusually good control, walking only one man and by his efforts the Exporters were able to sweep the short series with the Sooners, having won Tuesday 2-0.

Al Bentsen, Oklahoma City ace, was handicapped by wisdom, walking six batters in the six innings he worked. He gave up six hits and six runs before being replaced by Lumpkin, stubby southpaw. Oklahoma City 000 000 310—4 7 2

Hildebrand Hurls 1-Hit Exhibition

Three Reach First, Two On Passes—Tigers Take Long Game

CLEVELAND — Lanky Oral Hildebrand missed the goal of all pitchers—a no hit game—Wednesday by the narrow margin of a single safe blow as the Cleveland Indians made it two in a row over St. Louis, 2 to 0.

The budgeon of Art Scharein, the Browns' third baseman, ruined Hildebrand's bid for the baseball hall of fame in the third inning. Scharein cracked a whistly blow to right center, and Averill had to hustle to keep it to a single.

Only two other Browns reached first base — both on passes — and none got as far as second. It was Hildebrand's third victory in as many appearances this season.

CHICAGO—Detroit overcame a three run lead in the closing innings Wednesday and then went on to defeat the White Sox, 6 to 4, in a tight 11 inning game in which 32 players, including seven pitchers, saw action.

Singles by Fox, Webb and Geringer, plus a long fly by Walker, pushed over the two winning runs for the Tigers in the final inning and ended the three-game winning streak of the rejuvenated White Sox.

Sam Jones held the Tigers to two harmless hits over the first six innings as the White Sox piled up three runs with Minter Hayes leading the attack with a home run, a double and a single. A hit batsman and three singles gave the Tigers two runs in the seventh. They tied it up in the ninth on a single by Earl Webb after Reiber, a pinch hitter, and Owens drew walks. Gregory relieved Jones at that point and stopped the rally only to give up a walk and two singles in the tenth that sent Detroit ahead by a run momentarily, the Sox tying it again on a walk and Berry's triple.

Who Is Governor? Question Debated By House Members

AUSTIN (UP)—A challenge to know who is the real governor of Texas stirred the house of representatives here today as members debated a bill to supplant the present state highway commission.

Rep. Pat Dwyer, San Antonio, was speaking for a bill which will create an elective highway commission but permit the governor to appoint a commission to act until 1935.

Dwyer charged that those opposing the bill are the same ones who opposed the election of Mrs. Ferguson.

"Who is the governor?" shouted Rep. George Winningham, Mexico.

"Mrs. Ferguson" said Dwyer.

"Who sent for us to come down (to the governor's office) on the emergency bank bill?" asked Winningham. "Him or her?"

"Didn't the people elect Mrs. Ferguson?" asked Dwyer.

"The didn't elect him" replied Winningham.

Winningham later revealed that he and others had been called to the governor's office by James E. Ferguson during the banking bill discussion.

"I sent him back word that he was a private citizen" Winningham told the United Press.

Discussion of the bill was dropped to hear the Glee Club of Texas Christian university and Miss Adina De Zavala, grand daughter of Lorenzo De Zavala, first vice president of the Republic of Texas.

Pending at the time was an amendment to strike out the section allowing the governor to appoint a commission to serve until 1935.

No action had been taken today on a bill offered yesterday by Rep. Harry Graves, Georgetown, making it a final offense to question a member of the legislature about his statements in debate.

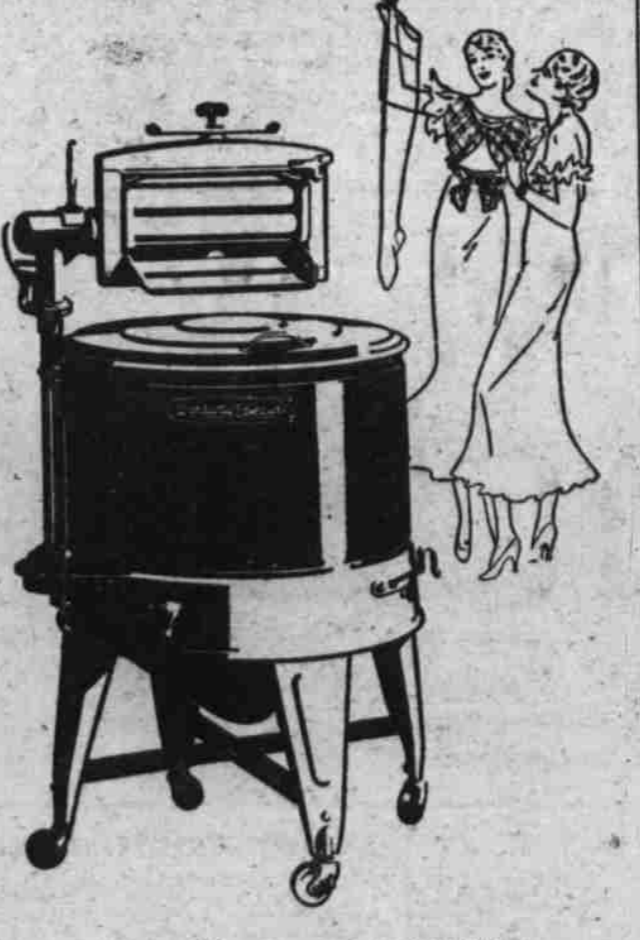

Labor And Industry Representatives For 30-Hour Work Week
WASHINGTON (UP)— Labor and industry endorse the 30-hour work week principle, Gerard Swope of the General Electric Company and President Green of the American Federation of Labor testified at a congressional hearing.

Green testified that while he favored the 30-hour week and his application to practically all industries, he strongly opposed the minimum wage proposal of Miss Perkins. He feared it would lower the average wage, rather than lift it.

Swope said industry favors the short work week if the minimum hour provision is made flexible. The labor department he said should set minimum wages but only for an emergency period of two years.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The Republican and the Inflation Bill

In coming forward so promptly with a statement of their position on the Inflation Bill, the Republican leaders have performed a useful service. The decision taken last week was a momentous one and it is highly desirable not only that the objections to the bill should be made known at once but that a strong opposition should watch over the execution of the policy.

Nothing could, therefore, be more absurd than the outcry raised by some Congressman or other that former Secretary Mills was "lobbying" against the bill because he is supposed to have been helping formulate the Republican attitude. Under any reasonable form of democratic government not only Mr. Mills, but Mr. Hoover as leader of his party, would naturally take an open part in the debate which precedes the enactment of the bill. The country should wish to hear their views, not only because it is intolerant not to wish to hear them, but because so great a decision of national policy should be the result of a clarifying debate.

Those who have advocated the policy which the Administration has adopted will find the Republican statement very reassuring. For it appears that the Republican leaders find nothing to criticize in the decision to suspend gold payments and to cease supporting the dollar at its parity with gold. On this basic decision they are silent and their silence must be taken as giving consent. This is of great importance. For the Republican Party is the historic defender of the gold standard and in the recent campaign it reaffirmed its devotion to the platform. That its leaders should now raise no objection to the present departure from the gold standard can mean only that they understand the compelling reasons which brought it about.

But the Republican leaders do more than consent by their silence to the departure from the gold standard. They explicitly approve "the need for an advance in all commodity prices," and they declare they are willing to support "an expansion of credit by open market operations." This is the principal measure proposed by the Administration for bringing about an advance in all commodity prices. This is even more important. This places the Republican party on record as being willing to support a policy of monetary management for the purpose of raising prices rather than of maintaining the dollar at its gold parity.

Thus those who were opposed to the gold embargo on the ground that we ought to protect "the integrity of the dollar" can find no comfort in the statement of Republican principles. Those who object to monetary management for the purpose of raising prices find truth to say that the Republican party, through its official spokesmen, has accepted the objective, the fundamental principle of President Roosevelt's policy and the two principal measures—namely, the departure from the gold standard and a large credit expansion, which are proposed in order to carry it out.

Where then, it may be asked does their disagreement begin? The bill authorizes the Treasury "to enter into agreements with the several Federal Reserve Banks and with the Federal Reserve Board" to have them purchase in the open market Federal securities up to three billions and to hold these securities until the Treasury permits them to be sold. The Republicans say that there are "grave objections to the domination of the Federal Reserve System by the Treasury and that it is hard to defend the unsound practice of the government's borrowing directly from the central banks." Nevertheless, they are willing to waive these objections "in view of the existing emergency."

Since they themselves initiated the "unsound practice" of borrowing from the central banks, they naturally can not object, especially since they immediately admit that they are in favor of continuing the practice on an even greater scale. As for the "domination" of the Federal Reserve System by the Treasury, they are, of course, right in principle when they criticize this provision; but they know too well from their own experience that such "domination" has for the time being become necessary.

It has become necessary because the twelve governors and their 12 boards of directors have demonstrated in the past year that they can not be counted upon to adopt a coherent and courageous policy and to carry it through. The "open market operation" which, of course, was thoroughly approved by Secretary Mills and Governor Meyer, met such resistance from the commercial bankers in the system that it was finally brought to a standstill. The bill profits by their experience, and I take it that the Republicans who wrote the statement of policy recognize with the administration that this time there must be sufficient central authority to see that the policy is not nullified.

It is the necessity of having power to compel the Federal Reserve Banks to act that accounts primarily for the second section of the bill to which the Republicans are strongly opposed. This section authorizes an issue of United States notes of $2 to three billion dollars, provided (1) that the Federal Reserve Banks refuse to carry out the open market operation, or (2) the open market operation fails to raise the price level. These notes are to be used to buy Federal securities and retire them. It is this provision which has been described as a resort to the printing press. This is not an accurate description of it. Under this proposal the notes are not to be used to pay the government's bills. They are to be used only to buy securities and the operation is in principle the same as the purchase of securities in the open market by the Federal Reserve Banks. When the Federal Reserve Banks buy securities they pay for them by creating money in the form of deposits to the credit of the owner. Under this proposal the Treasury would buy the securities with money created for the purpose, and this money would be deposited to the credit of the owners of the securities. This provision, therefore, while in appearance an inflation of the currency, is in fact merely an alternative or supplementary way of inflating credit through a currency operation. In no ordinary sense of the word can it be described as a currency inflation.

If the Federal Reserve Banks and the banks generally carry out the open market operation successfully, section 2 of the bill would not be resorted to. If the banks refuse, or if their operation is not large enough, then this power becomes effective.

Section 2 therefore is in part a form of pressure upon the Federal Reserve Banks to carry out the policy of the bill and in part a power to supplement the Federal Reserve open market operation with a direct operation by the Treasury similar in method, and similar in purpose.

While it is technically unfamiliar, section 2 can not be fairly described in the words of the Republican statement as "authority to issue printing press money."

Finally, the Republicans object to the third section of the bill which gives the President authority to fix the weight of the gold dollar within a range of 50 per cent. There, I think, there is some confusion of mind both among the sponsors of the bill and among its critics. If the bill means that the President or anyone else should try to decide what the gold content of the dollar should be, it is putting the cart before the horse. We are off the gold standard. Nobody can obtain any gold. It is proposed to raise the price level, which is equivalent to reducing the purchasing power of the dollar. When the new price level is reached and the government is stabilizing at that level, and when that stabilization has been maintained for a reasonable period of time, the gold value of the dollar will be its then exchange value with other gold currencies if there are any left. That will determine the new gold content of the dollar. If, for example, the dollar is worth 70 per cent of its old parity with the gold franc, then in returning to the gold standard the gold dollar will be devalued 30 per cent.

The new gold content is not a matter to be determined by the judgment of the President or of congress or of any person. The new gold content will be the consequence of having raised the American price level in terms of American dollars. No man can possibly tell what that gold content will be until the relation of prices has been carried through and until other countries have done or failed to do likewise. If the gold content were fixed arbitrarily today, it might be too high. In that event we should promptly be forced off the gold standard or the new price level would collapse. Or if it were fixed arbitrarily, it might be too low. In that event we should get more inflation than we ought to have to restore the internal equilibrium of wages, prices, debts and fixed charges.

Read with a realistic understanding of the actual processes of the policy we are undertaking, the right of the President "by proclamation to fix the weight of the gold dollar" means actually his right not "to fix" but "to recognize" the gold value which the dollar will have when stabilization is carried through.

Assuming that a deliberate effort is made to raise the price level by monetary operations outside the gold standard is a desirable national policy, and the Republican statement gives assent to this policy, the worst that can be said about the bill is that it gives the President more power than he is likely to need. But this is really an advantage. For it removes the monetary question from the arena of Congressional debate for a time.

sufficient, that is until next January, to make a full and fair trial of what can be done by methods which, though they have never been tested on so large a scale, are an accepted part of central banking practice and monetary management.

Plymouth Opens Campaign With Two New Lines

The aggressive campaign of the Plymouth Motor Corporation on its two new lines of motor cars started here today.

The Plymouth Corporation has done the unusual by announcing two new motor cars within a week's period, and both cars, it was asserted, are being backed by an advertising and merchandising campaign.

Announcement of the new Plymouths followed the recent statement of Walter P. Chrysler that he felt that present conditions were ripe for the introduction of new products, and that "the manufacturer ... who offers unusual values and aggressively places his products before the people, will be in a position to realize the greatest sales." He further stated that "it is up to us as manufacturers—and it is up to our dealers—to show the public how much good sense there is in buying today. And it's up to buyers to look into what the dollar will buy today."

The new Plymouths are now on display here at Dodge, De Soto and Chrysler dealers. The new cars are the De Luxe Plymouth Six of 112-inch wheelbase, which is priced f.o.b. from $495, and the Standard Plymouth Six, 106-inch wheelbase, priced f.o.b. from $445. The new Standard Plymouth Six Sedan, priced f.o.b. at $510, is stated to be the lowest priced six-cylinder four-door sedan on the American motor car market.

CHAPTER XLV

McKewan of the detective squad entered the living room, hat in hand. "Good afternoon," he said. "Your maid said you were here, Mrs. Carlyle. Thought I might as well come over and get this thing cleared up."

"Oh, Mr. McKewan, have you found out anything?"

"We've found the necklace."

"Oh! The woman's voice came in a chorus. Betty Carlyle was leaning eagerly forward. Mrs. Carlyle, severe and right in her straight-backed chair.

"Where did you find it?" Betty asked. "What did she do with it?"

"I'll answer all your questions," the detective told her. "But first take a look at this."

He reached into his pocket, drew out small black case and handed it to her. "See if that's your necklace," he said.

The lid of the box sprang open as Betty's touch. Inside on a square of white satin lay a strand of pearls. Betty held them up to the light, smiling. "Of course it is," she said. "I've never seen any others with a clasp like this."

McKewan nodded. "I found them in a pawn shop," he said.

"A pawn shop?"

Mrs. Carlyle interrupted. "I think I'd better call Janet," she said.

"Yes, bring her in!" Betty nodded eagerly. "I want her to see."

"I don't believe that will be necessary," the detective began but Betty was already on her feet. "I'll find her," she said and disappeared through the door.

She was back a moment later, cheeks flushed and eyes triumphant. Janet followed her into the room, paused and looked questioningly toward Mrs. Carlyle.

"Sit down, Janet," the older woman said. "Mr. McKewan has found the necklace."

Janet saw the box lying open on the table and stepped forward. Her pale face was suddenly transformed. "Oh, I'm so glad!" she exclaimed. "I'm so glad!"

Betty Carlyle darted a swift glance at the other girl and frowned. McKewan cleared his throat.

"Well," he said, "I thought maybe you'd rather we talked it over in private but if this is the way you want it, all right. The necklace was in a pawn shop down on Mulberry street. Been there nearly a week. You see, we were sure it was an amateur job so this morning, just on a chance, we checked the pawn shops. Found it in the second place we went. The fellow who runs the shop told us a man brought the necklace in last Monday."

"You say it was a man?" Mrs. Carlyle asked.

"Yes," McKewan hesitated. "I guess there's no reason to beat around the bush about it," he went on. "It was your husband, Mrs. Carlyle."

"My husband?" Betty's eyes were like two angry fires. "Not Rolfe! Oh, no, he couldn't!"

The detective nodded. "I'm afraid there isn't any question about it," he said. "I've already talked to him. It seems there were some debts he had to pay. In a hurry. He didn't want anyone to know about it."

"You mean—he admitted it?"

"Oh, yes. Nothing else for him to do. He'd used another name on the ticket but it was easy enough to trace. As soon as I talked to him he admitted the whole story. Pretty badly worried, I guess."

Mrs. Carlyle had found her voice. "Oh, Betty!" she exclaimed. "My poor little girl!"

"He said," McKewan went on, "that he didn't really mean to take the necklace. He was going to put it back just as soon as he could get the money. Said he didn't think you'd miss it. The pawn broker only allowed him $300 on it."

Betty Carlyle was on her feet. "A thief!" she cried. "Oh, my God! Lying to me. Stealing. He's been gambling and lost again, that's what he's done. I told him the last time I wouldn't give him another cent!" She stamped one small, spike-heeled foot. "I hate him!" she cried. "I'm sick of the sight of him and I never want to see him again. I won't forgive him for this as long as I live. Never! Never!"

Over-wrought emotion had its way. Betty sank into a chair, sobbing violently.

Her mother bent over her, murmuring comforting phrases, stroking her shoulder and trying to quiet her. The detective shifted uncomfortably in his chair and looked about the room. All at once he sprang forward. He exclaimed, "She's fainted!"

The two women turned. Janet Hill's eyes were closed. Her head had tilted back against her chair and her face was paper white.

McKewan said, "She ought to be lying down. Can someone get some water?"

Rolfe Carlyle let himself into the apartment. There was no light in the living room, grayed with dusk, but from beyond came a faint glow. He walked on until he reached the door of the bedroom, stopped on the threshold.

"Well," he said, "I didn't know whether I'd find you here or not." Betty was surveying herself in the full-length mirror. She wore a black dress with a scarlet bow on one shoulder. There were no sleeves. It was a dress she often wore to dinner parties.

"Why, yes, I'm here," she said and she picked that up, too. "Frederick's down stairs with mother's car," she said. "Maybe she'll say to me get in touch with Trumbull and Schaeffer. They're my lawyers."

Rolfe took her arm. "Betty," he said huskily, "couldn't you give me another chance?"

She drew away from him. "Don't touch me!" she exclaimed. Raising her carefully painted face she added, "You thief!"

 Not being one of those fellows who believes everything he sees in the papers, we asked James J. Johnston, now head of Madison Square Garden but once one of the leading managers in the game, if the Nazi press was right in regard to managers—if it was true that managers were no good and fighters would be better off without them.
 "Sweetheart," replied Mr. Johnston, "the Nazi press is nuts. As a man who managed half a dozen world champions and more palookas than there are monkeys in Brazil, let me say once again that the Nazi press is nuts."
 "So the managers get all the gravy, huh? They don't, but even if they did they'd deserve it. The great managers I mean. A great manager is a rare thing. A great manager must have personality, brains, and above all, he must be a smooth lying so-and-so who can make you believe it isn't raining even when the water is pouring down your back."
 "What was the greatest managerial feat Mr. Johnston could recall? Was it Kearns work with Dempsey?
 "Kearns did a swell job, but I wouldn't call it the finest of all. You see, Kearns had a guy with something on the ball. No, I'd say the managerial masterpiece was James J. Johnston's work with Phil Scott. Phil Scott! There was a guy who couldn't beat Jackie Cooper with Babe Knuckles yet I made myself fifty grand with him."
 Could Johnston name any fighters who had suffered from mismanagement?
 "Hundreds of 'em. They was Jackey McFarland, Sid Terris and Ruby Goldstein to name three. And Max Schmeling to make it four."

Tom Connally Urges Passage Of Farm Bill

WASHINGTON.—In a stirring plea to members of the senate to stand by President Roosevelt and pass the farm relief bill, Senator Tom Connally of Texas effectively answered republican attacks on the measure in the senate recently. The bill is designed to raise the price of agricultural commodities and the farm mortgage relief plan is incorporated in it.
 Senator Connally outlined the provision for refinancing farm mortgages and declared, "It seems to me that feature is perhaps the most admirable part of the bill. It may not be 100 per cent perfect. It no doubt has deficiencies and defects in it, but it at least offers a program to the American farmer to save his home, to get reduced interest rates."
 "In this period of depression and deflation if the farms are foreclosed and farmers lose their homesteads, then we are faced with the prospect of the United States becoming a country of land barons and passants. It is a prospect that no free people can contemplate without grave concern."
 "This bill offers a plan for refinancing farm mortgages in order to extend and amortize loans at lower rates of interest and thereby give substantial relief to the farm owners of America."
 Senator Connally assailed the

"do nothing" policy of the republicans and concluded his address by stating:
 "I want to admit that this bill is an experiment I want to admit that it will not give to the farmer all things he is hoping for; but it is at least an effort; it is action instead of inaction; it is a program instead of sitting still and doing nothing. It is a charted course, instead of the course of Mr. Hoover, of dillydallying, side-stepping issues, turning them over to committees. We have leadership in the White House, and I propose to follow President Roosevelt in this effort to help the farmer."

 Final congressional approval of the measure is expected shortly.

TEXAS ELECTRIC SERVICE COMPANY

"Look for the stores that display this emblem"

Under The Dome

At Austin

By Gordon K. Shearer

AUSTIN, (UP)—Possibility that the Texas Legislature may recess instead of adjourning is being whispered about the state capitol.

While lacking definite statement or backing the report is so frequent that many believe the smoke indicates some fire.

Such a course would leave the legislature free to reassemble regardless of a call from the governor.

With national policies being rapidly changed, there is much doubt as to what conditions will be within a short time after the present session of the state legislature finishes its work.

Certain of its emergency measures have already become obsolete.

Some members point out that inflation may raise commodity prices to such an extent that state budgets will have to be revised.

Prices go up 25 per cent, the situation will be difficult for the state employee, who are being cut 25 per cent or more in the appropriation bills already worked out.

The net result would be a 50 per cent cut in ability to purchase.

State employees have been having a most uncomfortable time while the Texas legislature has been at work on the appropriation bills.

If he had such a small salary that the standard 25 per cent cut was small in the money, some would compare it with the dollars cut from others.

If he was getting a "big" salary, and got a correspondingly big cut, some one would demand that he be cut still more.

Here is a typical instance. The salary of President H. Y. Benedict of the University of Texas has been $1,000 a year.

The House appropriations committee placed it at $7,200. A floor amendment cut it to $6,000. Arguing that $7,200 was already a big reduction from $10,000, the appropriations committee was met with the remark: "If he has been getting $10,000 a year for the past four years, he ought to be satisfied with $6,000 for a while."

If an employee's salary was explained to the legislators by stating he did the work of two or more persons, the comment often was: "In these times of unemployment, would not he be better to 'employ more men at his pay'?"

If the budget showed a large number of employees at low salary, some one would ask if it would not be cheaper to hire one "good man" than several "cheap men."

Another effect of the legislature recessing instead of adjourning would be to retain the senate's control over appointments made by the governor.

When the session adjourns the governor may name appointees who serve without confirmation until the legislature is again in session.

In view of the conflicts between the governor and the senate over appointments, this may play a material part in the decision.

It would not affect the status of the appointment of Frank Denton of Temple, to the chairmanship of the state highway commission. If the supreme court decides he was not legally confirmed when he received a majority senate vote, his claim to the place would end. The governor can not name a rejected appointee after the legislature adjourns. She can name any other person.

C. W. Howth, Beaumont, and former County Commissioner Marjory of Harris county are being mentioned as possible choices if Denton is not permitted to hold the place.

Reps. George Butler, Bryan, and William Clayton, El Paso, are continuing their fight for a state bonding and wrestling commission.

Each time they get a test vote by seeking to advance it on the calendar, they show a gain. It is now reported if definite assurance is given that there will be no attempt to amend the bill to include a racing commission, that the measure stands a chance.

A married man, who owns no property, could continue to escape taxes under the income tax law, now before the Texas legislature, John T. Smith, Austin tax expert, points out in the current Texas Tax Journal.

If he puts his excess salary in a bank, a lock box or a sock, the tax could not be collected, Smith says.

Crop Loan Requests Must Be In By Sunday

John S. Andrews, field supervisor of the crop production loan office, Dallas, said Wednesday that April 30 is the dead line for farmers in Howard county to apply for government loans for crop production purposes.

Under the regulations, applications must be in the mail by the night of April 30, approved by the county committee not later than Monday, May 1 and mailed to the field supervisor for approval.

Andrews is anxious that all deserving and needy farmers who have not already applied for loans, and who need this assistance to get busy and get the money while it is available. Regulations plainly state that the government can not accept applications after April 30. "This is the last and final warning," Andrews stated.

All farmers who wish to apply are requested to call at the State National Bank where their applications will be made out by Mr. Lowrimore.

Tin Mine Discovered By Wade H. Pollard

Wade H. Pollard, formerly of Fort Worth, is now operating with Big Spring as a boss, having interested several local businessmen in metal mining, pending rejuvenation of the oil industry.

Pollard used to be a cowman until somebody hung a gold pan on the fence with the branding iron. Intrigued, he took out for Arizona and New Mexico, in search of something that would leave a bright golden glimmer in the pan.

He has since found and worked various gold properties, then recently returned to a discovery made several years ago, when metal prices and wages made it less attractive than now. This is placer tin ground, over in Catman County, New Mexico. Presumably there are so few tin deposits in the United States that one near by is worth talking about, hook, tin being imported from Bolivia, Cornwall, etc. This is so rarely located that only two or three American smelters have facilities for separating it from its normal associate, iron ore.

The Pollard samples, he says, assay ninety-eight per cent tin with a small iron content, and the process of mining tin ore in this form is with screens as for placer gold. In open-cut work, washing the dirt down with giants. His Big Spring friends liked hearing about the tin, but listened attentively to mention that open season on antelope begins this year, and according to Pollard, he has to be careful not to tangle antelopes, deer, bears and wild turkeys with prospecting operations, and they all grow as fat and big as box cars.

Sweetwater 1934 Hostess City To Clubs

The meeting of the Sixth District of Federated Clubs closed at Midland Wednesday afternoon, after selecting Sweetwater for the next year's convention city.

Mrs. Joseph Perkins of Eastland, was elected president of the district for the next two years. Mrs. Roy Roundtree, of Goldthwaite, was elected first vice-president and Mrs. A. C. These women will take office next November. Chairmen will be appointed then.

More than 200 delegates and visitors attended the district meeting and enjoyed the various sessions and reports.

Outstanding among the city's entertainments were the American Home luncheon at the Scharbauer Hotel, at which the home demonstration agents of the district made short talks and a "live at home-buy at home" program was strongly advocated for Texans; and a demonstration of the choral singing at the high school building.

At this latter performance the club women were seated on the stage at the high school auditorium and given an opportunity to see how part singing and reading union were taught high school pupils of that city.

Other features of the program included a fine arts evening at the high school; a president's luncheon and tea at the Scharbauer.

A good representative from Big Spring clubs attended the Midland session, including the two district committee chairmen, Mmes. B. Reagan and Joe Fisher.

Girls present were: Ruby and Doris Smith, Ruth Mellinger, Ruth and Quixea Bee King, Mildred Herring, Clara Bronstein, Evelyn LaLonde, Modesta Good, Dorothy Bell Riggs, Mary Louise Miller and Wynell Woodall.
