No wonder the governments of Europe were desperately worried by such a critical condition.

Hitler must have realized that the time was not ripe for aggressive action against the Czechs, for German authorities in Berlin solemnly assured Dr. Vojtech Mastny, Czech minister to Berlin, and the Czech military attache that Germany planned no military expedition the situation somewhat, but the British cabinet continued to urge Benes and his government to make all possible concessions to Hitler concerning the demands of the Sudeten German minority. It was believed the Fuehrer would ultimately get about everything he wants m the Czechs without a fight. Both France and Britain were bringing strong pressure to bear on Berlin, and the British especially were determined to avert general war if it could be done.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, it was said, was working out a plan under which his government would play the part of mediator. The neme was based on autonomy for the 3,250,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia with freedom in municipal and educational affairs. Henlein's German party in the Sudeten districts of Czechoslovakia was winning victories in municipal elections, and this made the Nazis quite cocky in their attitude. They refused to negotiate with the government until their safety had been

CONGRESS received from the President a request that it ap-propriate $23,875,000 immediately to egin strengthening the nation's sea and air defenses in accordance with the billion dollar naval expansion

The President outlined the intended uses of the fund as follows in a letter to Speaker Bankhead:

For three new warships, ten auxiliaries and a fleet of small vessels of great speed and maneuverability, $16,500,000.

For nine patrol planes of the latest type, $3,375,000. For a dirigible—the first since the Macon and Akron crashed several

Predestination Is Out

GENERAL assembly of the Pres byterian church in the United States, in session at Meriden, Miss., voted 151 to 130 to omit from the confession of faith these two important sections:

A budget bureau statement accompanying the President's communication showed that the bulk of the losses grew out of the shrinkage in the market value of cotton, corn, tobacco, turpentine and other commodities put up as collateral for price bolstering loans.

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES

OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Death by Proxy" By FLOYD GIBBONS Famous Headline Hunter

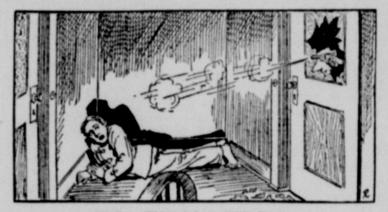

ELLO EVERYBODY: There's only one thing I know that's less profitable than being a burglar, and that's just posing as one. And Distinguished Adventurer Willard G. Stanton of Bloomfield, N. J., ought to agree with me there. Once upon a time, when Bill was a youngster of sixteen, he tried that little stunt. Not purposely, of course. Bill's intentions were perfectly O. K. But it doesn't burglar, or if you act like a burglar, first thing you know somebody is going to think you ARE a burglar and treat you ac- 4:19), which makes Christianity Back in 1907, when this adventure happened to Bill, he lived in an oldfashioned apartment house in Brooklyn. At least it would look old-fashioned today. At that time it was probably the last word in apartment houses. It had a stairway running up the center of the building, and there were two apartments to the floor. The doors of the living rooms opened on the stair landing, and the outer doors were fitted with ground glass panels. The glass was opaque. You couldn't exactly see through it. But when you were on the inside looking out you could tell when someone was at the door, because you could see a shadow of a human figure against the glass

Remember those panels. They've got a lot to do with the story. Burglars Alarmed the Old Ladies.

Bill's family had an apartment on the fourth and top floor of that building. Across the hall lived two old ladies-retired school teachersone of whom was slightly deaf. Remember that deaf old lady, too.

Bullets Whizzed Over Bill's Head.

Between her and the glass panels, Old Lady Adventure managed to cook up quite a thrill for Bill Stanton.

About three o'clock one November morning, Bill was awakened out of a sound sleep by a loud, insistent pounding. As he came out of a half-doze, he realized that the pounding came from the wall, on the other side of which the two old ladies slept. Something was wrong in their apartment! Bill jumped out of bed and went into his own living room. Then he saw what the trouble was.

On the ground glass panels of the door leading to the hall he could see two shadowy figures. They were over by the door of the old ladies' apartment and they seemed to be trying to jimmy the lock. So that was it! Burglars, trying to get in next door! The old ladies had heard THE desperate primary battle them and pounded on the wall to attract Bill's attention.

Bill called out, "Who's there?" and began rattling the door ires moved noiselessly to the stairs and be gan to descend. Bill was sixteen, and impetuous. He ran out of his apartment and started to follow the two men down the stairs. "Right there," he says, "is where my adventuring career

Bill Was in a Tight Place.

Bill followed the crooks down two flights of stairs, but they were too fast for him. He was in pajamas, and he couldn't very well dash out into the street after them anyway. Not on a cold night in November. He turned around and went slowly back up the stairs.

Bill got to the top and put his hand on the doorknob. The door was locked. In his haste to follow the two men he had slammed it behind him. In his pajamas and without a key in his pocket, it looked as if he was going to have some trouble getting back in. He stood for a moment considering his plight, and then, suddenly he heard a voice coming from the next apartment.

It was one of the old ladies-the deaf one-and her tone was omi-"If you don't go away," she yelled, "I'll shoot."

All at once Bill realized what a tight situation he was in. The old lady could see his shadow through the glass door and thought he was one of the departed burglars. He knew she kept a gun in her apartment and didn't have any doubt that she would do just what she threatened to do.

Shot At by a Deaf Woman.

"I thought I had a good pair of lungs," says Bill, "and I screamed back: 'Don't shoot. It's me.' But I didn't count on that old lady being deaf. Before I had a chance to get in another word I heard a loud report and a bullet came crashing through the door. It was followed by two more. Then I dropped flat on the floor, and while I lay there, three more shots imbedded themselves in the wall over my head."

The shots stopped then, but Bill lay right where he was, afraid to stir lest the slightest motion bring more of that hot lead his way. Then, inside his own apartment, he heard his mother open a window and start screaming for the police. Still Bill stayed where he was. Courage is one thing, but when a panic-stricken old lady starts blazing away right and left with a revolver, there isn't any sense in giving her a mark to

Bill lay right where he was until the police came. Then he got up again. He looked himself over and was relieved to find that he hadn't been hit by any of those wild bullets, but he found an ominous little hole in the sleeve of his pajamas that showed just how close he had come to having a funeral instead of just an adventure. "And now-adays," says Bill, "when there is any burglar hunting to be done, I do it by telephone."

Use of the Oregon Boot

Once Oregon was famous for a contrivance that was held in pardonable distaste by prisoners who happened to find themselves confined within the cold gray walls of the state penitentiary. The Oregon boot, they called it, and it was used as an efficient but not altogether humane method of keeping prisoners from dashing off on their own.

Lesson for June 5 SERVING BY PERSONAL DEVOTION TO CHRIST

LESSON TEXT-Mark 14:3-11, 27-31. GOLDEN TEXT-She hath done wha ould Mark 16:8.
PRIMARY TOPIC-Mary's Present

JUNIOR TOPIC-Mary's Love Gift. Showing Our Love to Christ.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.
The Heart of Christian Service.

"The love of Christ constrained us" (II Cor. 5:14) was the all-sufcient moving force back of the greatest life of service rendered by any man. It is this personal devomake any difference what your intentions are. If you look like a tion to the One whom we love "be cause he first loved us" (I John different from all other religions. Christianity alone acts through this natural and deep hunger of mankind with a personalized religion which can be a satisfying joy and pleasure. Yet at this point Christians fail the most and make diff. cult the work of serving Jesus. They see religion as a job to be done. form to be observed, a duty to be fulfilled" (W. R. King).

We need to renew that devotice to Christ which expresses itself is true worship. Prayer is too often asking for things; praise, thanking for things (unless we become so engrossed with them that we forget to return thanks); and worship, which is a coming to God in adoration and thanksgiving for what He is rather than what He can give, is forgotten Our Heavenly father wants us to show love toward Him. The act of Mary was pure personal devotion and worship, and its fragrance lives to this day.

I. Wasted-But Eternally Saved

The dark hours of betrayal and death were before our Lord. All around Him was hostility. Even a the inner circle of the disciples there was misunderstanding and bicker Mary (to be distinguished from the sinful woman of Luke ? with the quick intuition of an understanding woman's heart knew what He was passing through, and with magnificent act of love stood by Him in the fellowship of His sufferings Dr. Morgan points out that it was "an impulsive act . . . born of the prodigality of love daring not to calculate." In the words of vers 9, Jesus declared that the gospel and that which this woman h done were to "stand side by side with each other forever. That kee intuition of love, that uncalculating outpouring of love, was Godlike, and an act in fellowship with the ad of God by which a world is re

So Nora came back, though it was all of two days before she spoke. Her first real sentence was: "Have you cabled to Father?" Her second:
"What have they done to you, Don?
You look five years older!" Her third: "I think his hair will wave like yours, darling."

Not until then did Don feel that she had come back to stay.

The tide was coming in. Said Nora, watching the restless break-ers: "That was a beauty, wasn't it? Let's move back close to the dunes, Don. We'll be getting wet."

Her husband, flat on the sun-warmed sands of Maine, commanded lazily: "Sit still, woman. Who minds a dash of salt water on such

"I do," confessed Nora, "at least, when it gets into my shoes! Jimsy recious, don't throw that sand into Daddy's hair. Haven't I told you not to hundreds of times?"

"Hund'eds o' times," Jimsy, aged two years and some odd months admitted amiably; and sat down on his father without warning.

"Ouch!" exclaimed Don. "What do you think my stomach's made of, feller? He's a buster, isn't he, Nora? I bet he's headed for the prize ring! Was my heir and namesake as husky at this age? I can't

With cautious eyes on an approaching wave, Nora responded 'He was almost four pounds lighter; and then that awful typhoid in uth Africa pulled him down. Sometimes I feel that he's never quite recovered from the effects of it. I believe . . ."

She paused, because neither of them liked to recall that year near Cape Town, especially Nora. Though she had seen

They both longed for Capri. Even without the Venables, who were to winter in New York that year, it would seem homelike. But it was understood that Don's articles must describe some different portion of the country, so a tiny villa overlooking Lake Como was their headquarters during the next

Not that the entire year was spent in Italy. Trust Don for that! There had been a wonderful two months in southern France-another in Belfum-a German Christmas! And there was always the joy of watching their small son change and develop: that ageless miracle which to adoring parents is ever new.

Time drifted by, a happy time, though there were days when the realization that her father was still unrelenting, would descend bleakly on Leonora, blinding her eyes to the Italian sunshine-bringing her tears at night when none could see. For not even after learning that she was a mother had James Lambert written. This hurt the girl more than all that had gone before; and, knowing she suffered, her husband was conscious of futile rage toward the man who wounded her. She said one day when the little boy was taking his first steps:

"Don, when you wrote to Father about the baby, did-did you tell him how very sick I was?" Don nodded; arose, and because he feared to say something unkind Nora's father, merely stooped fown to kiss the top of her bright said as much; but Nora, to his surprise, looked up and smiled at him.

"You're right," she said. "He's a stubborn old angel; but he's the only father I've ever known, Don, and I can't forget him even though he has-has forgotten me."

"Oh, no he hasn't!" Don spoke with truth that was intuitive. "He'll never forget you, Nora. You can bank on that if it's any comfort." So, "banking on that," Nora's letters to James Lambert continued to be a part of her busy life. Sometimes they followed one another closely. Sometimes long weeks lay in between; but they did not cease. And then, when Donald Mason, Jr., was two years old and his parents were making plans for a return to America, the London editor whom Don had christened "old life-preserver," made him an offer. He wanted more "Letters." His public had asked for them-letters from asked, incredulous. She turned away. Don mustn't see her tell-tale eyes. "Of course I do! It's only that I'd counted on going home. I thought if we were nearer that Father might consent to see us-see the baby, I mean. But it's all right, Don. Of course we shall go. And it's only a year." But what a year!

They were staying temporarily in a settlement some miles north of Cape Town, gathering material for Don's work. Three months had passed. Only five of the promised Letters off to England; and on the very morning when Nora discovered that she was to face the ordeal of motherhood again, Don returned from a four-days' trip to the diamond mines of Kimberley, kissed her half-heartedly, dropped into the nearest chair, and said: "I'm all in, Nora. I-I am awfully afraid that something's-got me."

Something had! Six days later when the doctor diagnosed the case as typhoid, Don was too sick to be moved to a Cape Town hospital. More than half ill herself, Nora nursed her husband through weary days and nights-week after week of weary days and nights, not dar-ing to spend money for a trained helper. Not that there weren't those who lent assistance when it became known that "the nice Americanthe writer chap" was down with typhoid. Nora never forgot one terri ble gray dawn when, worn with her vigil—fighting the deadly nau-sea that was then her portion—Don slightly delirious—the baby fretting unaccountably, she glanced up at the sound of a softly opening door to see a woman whose unenviable reputation was common knowledge in the community. Nora had once smiled courteously on her in passng, "because," she said in answer to the amazement that swept across the face of her own escort, an English boy of twenty who, in Don's absence, was showing her "a bit of Africa,"—"because we don't know, do we, what dragged her down?"

just what he thought-sorry he'd | flushing: "I say! I-I think that's | steady. And we had 20 beautiful ripping of you, Mrs. Mason!"

So in the chill, gray dawn, Nora, woman in the doorway. Her mouth was rouged into a cupid's bow; her hair hung in untidy wisps about her face; and, even in that surprising moment Nora saw, embedded in the flesh of one pudgy finger, a dia-mond that would have supported Don's small family for a year or

"You been up all night?" was her only greeting. "I saw yar light burnin' at two o'clock. Say, lady, you ain't built for a job like this; and there ain't a thing you could tell me about typhoid. I near died of it myself, and I've nursed three cases. I'll look after your man now while you get a rest. Maybe if you lay down side o' that kid he'll quit his yellin'. You go lay down.

Without one protest Nora dropped like a log beside the baby. They slept for hours. It was long past oon when she awoke. The woman had vanished, and sitting beside Don's bed was the young English boy. He said, as if it were the most natural thing on earth to have found such a woman guarding the sick

"She said to tell you that Mr. Mason had a nap; and she'll be back at midnight to spell you for a while. The kiddie woke up once and she gave him some boiled milk. The doctor's been, and thinks your husband has turned the corner."

Nora felt sure during the next few days, that the worst was over; but before her husband was on his feet again, the baby sickened as his father had. Don, a gaunt, holloweyed skeleton (it frightened Nora just to look at him), rose from his bed to help her with the nursing. In those black days, watching their little son waste to a shadow, fighting together for his very life, nothing else mattered, not even an irate cable from the London editor demanding copy long overdue.

It was on a day when things had been very bad indeed, that the young Englishman came in bearing a letter addressed to Leonora in the familiar writing of Constance Venable. After long, fretful hours the baby was asleep, and Don said softly: "Read it aloud, dear. Perhaps

Nora opened the letter, glanced And she was breathing hard. "What's happened?" he questioned, and would have grasped the nissive had she not held it back "It-it's Ven, darling," she told im, her voice trembling now.

"Gone, Don. Drowned on their wn beach off the island-a cramp robably. He-he was all alone. She arose then, to put her arms about him. During those months at Capri Don's friendship for Carl Venable had grown into something very close. For a long time, it seemed to Nora, Don sat there, his face pressed into her shoulder. Then he said harshly: "Read the letter, Nora. It can't be any worse than -this.

They read it with tears; yet both felt better after the reading. It was a long letter, and toward the end Constance had written: "Try not to grieve too much, for that would grieve Carl, wouldn't it? He was the happiest human being I have ever known. After all, it's a wonderful thing to go out on the crest of life, leaving only one's finest work as a memorial. He had stroke of the brush which marks eyes. his paintings, would become un-years together, Nora; years when we lived lavishly-spent too lavishlifting heavy eyelids, beheld that ly some would think. But I don't regret it, even though there is little left save some paintings, his life insurance, and the villa at Capri. If that seems strange, recalling the prices Carl's work has brought, remember the countless friends he was always helping: discouraged artists-boys needing an education -old folks who save for him would have ended their days in leneliness and poverty. Money meant nothing to Carl except a means of doing things for others. And his last gift, Nora, was a gift for you! It's safe at the shack now-was to have been a surprise when you came home, 'because,' he said, 'it'll be years before they'll save enough to buy one, and it's a crime for Nora not to have it while she's young!' -A beautiful baby-grand piano, dear Nora. One of the finest. He was so happy about it-one of his last real happinesses . . Nora paused. She could not read any further; nor could Don speak. And then a voice came from the bed, a tired, weak little voice that many times during those days they had feared never to hear again: "Me wants - dinkawater - Mud-

CHAPTER X

The rest seemed easy to Leonora compared with all that had gone before. Yet the night when she found Don asleep over the weekly 'Letters from Cape Town," his head dropped forward on the kitchen table that served as desk, one stillthin hand clutching a stub of pencil "Too tired to use his typewriter, poor boy!" she thought compassionately), and discovered that instead of spending long days in the open as he'd led her to believe, getting back strength lost in his illness, he had for weeks been going into Cape Town to help load freighters at the docks because it meant more money - immediate money, the girl wished for one bitter moment that they had never met.

"Oh, Don, what have I brought you to?" she cried; and he responded in an effort to console her:

"To something better, I hope, than the careless boy you married, Nora. We've been growing up, I suppose; and growing pains leave scars on some of us. Give me time, darling, and I'll get back my It still hurt Nora to think about that night.

And the next morning!

In Don's absence a letter arrived from the London editor. Nora opened it eagerly. According to her husband's contract each article was to be paid for when received; and the "cupboard was bare," or nearer bare than she liked to think about. But to her surprise no crisp. blue check fell from the envelope. It contained merely a letter and a manuscript. The editor was, it appeared, courteously puzzled. contributor's work seemed to be slipping-was surely not up to its customary standard. The last few installments had seemed forced-as if he were writing under pressure, not for the joy of narrating his adventures. They lacked utterly the charm of all his former work. For both their sakes he was returning the last "Letter from Cape Town.

For a long time Nora sat stricken, staring at those words written in neat longhand. Under the circumstances it was not a disagreeable letter. It was merely cold. It made her think of a hypercritical parent dreaded the time when his hand reproving a careless child. It would might falter-when that sure, clean hit Don like a blow between the

The 11 engaging Kennedys have been viewed more or less en bloc in the news and Mrs. Kennedy has never been in a very sharp lens focus.

She was one of the prettiest of Boston debutantes, 30 years ago, a rollicking girl with black hair and eyes of Irish blue. Back home from her convent training, she taught her father "Sweet Adeline."

He was John F. (Honey Fitz) Fitzgerald, and in his campaigns he sang his way to memorable political fame-riding like a surfboard the long, lingering "swipes" of the song taught him by his daughter-"the flower of his heart." Joseph P. Kennedy, her childhood

C. Houston Goudiss Describes the Place of Fats in the Diet

Nationally Known Food Authority Compares the Different Cooking Fats and Shortenings

> By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS East 39th St., New York City.

HERE are, perhaps, more false notions concerning fats I than any other class of foods.

Some homemakers, considering them as "fattening" only, try to eliminate them entirely from the diet. Others have the impression that foods containing fat are difficult to digest, and for this reason deprive their families of many delicious ignorance of dietary facts.

Fats Are Necessary to Health

Fats have a number of important functions to perform. They are a concentrated fuel food, having more than twice the energy value of an equal weight of protein or carbohy-

One-half ounce of fat, that is one tablespoon, yields 100 calories, and were he able to eat it, a man could obtain an entire day's fuel from three-fourths of a pound of fat. It is interesting to note that it would require nearly eight pounds of cooked rice to give the same number of calories.

In Oriental countries, where large populations live in great poverty, fat is usually scarce and it is necessary to consume huge quantities of food in order to meet the daily fuel requirements. As a result, most of the people develop distended abdo-

Children Must Have Fat

Because fat is such a compact food, nutritionists agree that for growing boys and girls, and men engaged in strenuous physical exercise, fat is almost essential, if they are to get enough total cal-

There is also experimental evidence that at least a small amount of one or more of the unsaturated fatty acids must be supplied by the food if normal nutrition is to be maintained. And .two competent investigators found, experimentally, that the presence of fat in the diet tends to conserve vitamin B in the body.

Some fats, especially those from animal sources, are rich in vitamins A and D, and fats made from vegetable oils may contain vitamin E.

Fat and Hunger

Perhaps the greatest service performed by fat is its ability to give "staying power" to the dietto satisfy hunger. In this respect, it directly affects the disposition and may influence the ability to enjoy life.

The shortage of fats in European countries during the World war graphically demonstrated how a deficiency of this class of foods can destroy the morale of entire

With supplies cut off or very greatly curtailed, the warring countries found it necessary to ration fats closely. As a result, their people were always hungry and dissatisfied, even when their actual needs were satisfied. In this connection, it is interesting to note that a slice of bread and butter or margarine will delay the onset of hunger longer than a slice of bread and jam, even though the number of calories may be the same.

Different Fats Compared

As sources of energy, the different food fats are very similar. Thus, the homemaker's choice

> The various forms of edible fats and oils are derived from both animal and vegetable sources. They include butter, margarine, lard, compounds, which are a mixture of animal fats and vegetable oils, hydrogenated fats, and the liquid vegetable oils.

Butter and margarine are used chiefly as a spread, and it is interesting to note that the annual per capita consumption of margarine is steadily increasing, as homemakers have discovered that the use of this less expensive product releases more money for milk, fruits and vegetables. Margarine is interchangeable with butter for dressing vegetables and in doughs foods come in for a great deal of containing spices, fruits and chocolate. Its shortening power and keeping qualities are similar to those of butter.

Lards, compounds and other shortening fats are useful not only will be no opportunity for decomas a means of increasing palatability and food value, but to add flakiness to baked foods and to produce a crisp coating which seals in the minerals and vitamins of fried foods.

Lard is used chiefly as a shortening for pastry, and a good grade will be found to be white and free from objectionable odors. The highest grade, called leaf lard, is produced from the leaves of fat in the sides of the hog.

When made by a reputable manufacturer, the compounds prepared especially for cake making, for shortening pastry and for deep-frying, are wholesome, highly nutritious and give most satisfactory results. They are a most economical form of shortening.

digestive organs carry on their work, it is conceded that fats in general retard the secretion of the gastric juice and thus cause food to remain longer in the stomach.

On the other hand, most fats have such a high coefficient of digestibility, that under normal conditions only about one-twentieth of the fat eaten escapes digestion. Experiments indicate, for example, that the coefficient of digestibility of oleomargarine is 97.55 per cent.

It is sometimes erroneously stated that pastry is indigestible. This statement is without foundation, provided the pastry is made from a high grade shortening and is properly baked. Nutritionists have ample evidence that health is best served when 30 to 35 per cent of the total energy value foods is provided in the form of fat. This will include the fat of meat and the fat used in cooking the many delicious fried and baked foods which make eating a pleasure.

Mrs. N. H. R .- As to whether a tendency to overweight is inherited: the body build is inherited. That is, some individuals tend to be short and stocky; others are tall and slender. However, there is no reason why the stocky individual should allow himself to become obese. Frequently, a condition that is blamed on inheritance can be traced to faulty habits of diet, exercise and sleep, passed from one generation to another.

Advertising,

LIKE BUSINESS. MUST BE CONTINUOUS!

It is superfluous to say that commercial enterprises must be open every business day to be successful Still, some merchants who keep their doors open figuratively, close them to a vast group of customers, whose index to buying is the McLean News columns, by not advertising weekly. Without advertising that merchant's business is closed for the day to a multitude of potential buyers.

John Wanamaker once said, "Continuous advertising, like continuous work, is most effective. If there is any enterprise in the world that a quitter should leave alone, it is advertising. Advertising does not jerk-it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day, year by year, until it exerts an irrestible power. To discontinue your advertisement is the same thing as taking down your sign. If you want to do business, you must let the public know it. I would as soon think of doing business without clerks as without advertising."

Though a person may seem to scan the ads weekly, he will be indelibly impressed with the ads that are "always in the paper." Selling is almost altogether a mental process. Purchases are oft made in the buyer's mind before the actual physical sale. The mental buying is of inestimable value to the professional advertiser when his name is associated with the article. This is the first step toward the sale. The value of being known and kepeing it known is of utmost importance.
