Some fifteen numbers were presented along with minstrel skits before the final curtain.

AYERS FAMILY REUNION HELD AT CADDO MILLS

J. M. Ayers has just returned from Caddo Mills, where a reunion of the Ayers family was held at the home of the youngest brother, George W. Ayers, who lives in about 28 miles of the old home settled by their father. The father, mother and two oldest children came to Hunt county in 1867 by covered wagon from Mississippi. They first settled at Greenville, which was a small place with only two stores at that time. The Indians were so bad the people had to locate in settlements for protection.

The father, John H. Ayers, freighted from Shreveport, La., to Fort Worth and other towns by ox wagon for several years. He helped get and make the first railroad ties that were laid through Greenville. Afterward he bought land on what is called Smith Prairie, out from town about 16 miles. One child, John T. Ayers, was born at Greenville, Elizabeth and Willie in Mississippi, and the others, James M., William H., R. Franklin and Susan, being born on the old home place on Smith Prairie. The mother, Mrs. Matilda Ayers, died when Susan was about 15 months old, and Elizabeth, being the oldest, helped her father to rear the children.

Feb. 3, 1885, Elizabeth married Rev. B. G. Eilers, Baptist missionary preacher, and settled in Hopkins county, near Blackjack Grove, now known as Cumby. In 1907 they moved to Hollis, Okla. The family were together at the reunion for the first time since her marriage.

Weekly News Review
France, England Friendless
In New World Power Lineup
By Joseph W. La Bine

Foreign

Since the notorious peace of Munich, almost every day has seen the stars of Great Britain and France descend to new lows, torn by dissection from within, heaped with ridicule from without.

That Prime Minister Chamberlain agrees is shown by his insistence on a high-speed rearmament program, a move quite contradictory to his Anglo-German peace pact and his treaty with Italy.

WINSTON CHURCHILL
He, among others, was ashamed.

sion that not even Mr. Chamberlain trusts Adolf Hitler or Benito Mussolini very far.

Meanwhile, France has been quick to make peace with Italy by recognizing her conquest of Ethiopia. Her parliament, by overwhelmingly approving the Munich pact, agreed that no price was too high for peace even though it meant relegating France to the position of a second-rate power.

There are other signs, as well. The resignation of Czech President Eduard Benes in the face of growing public sentiment against weak-kneed democracies, indicates that Czechoslovakia is giving in to demands for co-operation with the Rome-Berlin axis.

With central Europe turned over completely to dictatorship, with Russia breaking her French alliance and crawling back into silence, France and Britain apparently stand alone, friendless, merely tolerated by her "friends"—Italy and Germany.

Taxation

Though campaigning politicians do not speak of it, next winter's congress will probably turn the income tax headache into a nightmare. With another federal deficit in prospect, with high income brackets already taxed to the limit, the solution will be a broadening of tax base on middle and low income groups.

Business

When President Roosevelt asked early this month that there be less "saber rattling" by business and labor, instead of more co-operation to aid the almost-certain economic recovery, he gave business an opportunity to speak.

Industry wants to see a higher income for every family. Industry does not want to see runaway prices. To help this recovery along, every group in this country can assist.

Labor

Chief result of the American Federation of Labor's Houston convention has been a widening of the breach between A. F. of L. and John Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

But when A. F. of L.'s William Green began throwing charges of "communism" at C. I. O., when he alleged further that two members of the Wagner labor relations board (Donald Wakefield Smith and Edwin S. Smith) were pro-C. I. O., the last hope for peace faded.

Strangest feature of labor's war is that both factions remain loyal to President Roosevelt, who should have incurred A. F. of L.'s wrath by reappointing Donald Wakefield Smith to the labor board last month, and who should have made C. I. O. angry by consenting to changing the Wagner act next winter.

War

To the Japanese soldier clawing his way toward Hankow, the prospect has been discouraging. Even if he survives the stubborn, bloody Chinese resistance, even though he helps raise the Jap flag over Hankow, the war will not be over.

CHINA'S CHIANG KAI-SHEK
"There can be no peace..."

pon has announced Hankow as the final objective, and it probably will be taken soon. But Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek insists his people will continue to resist.

His latest statement: "If Japan does not abandon aggression and withdraw her instruments of invasion, and if she does not restore China's territorial and administrative integrity, there can be no peace. The longer our armed resistance continues, the stronger will our determination grow."

General Chiang's prophecy is already fulfilled. Though Chinese have won no spectacular victories, Japan's drive up the Yangtze to Hankow has cost more casualties than any previous phase of the war.

Every indication is that Japan will never control more than rivers, railroads and highways, that huge and lumbering China will eventually assimilate whatever permanent Japanese population is sent over to administer the conquered territory.

Since "peace at any price" became Europe's watchword during the Czechoslovakian crisis, it is just possible the same watchword may be applied to Spain's civil war.

Domestic

Though the U. S. is a land of free press and speech, most Americans agree it is far from smart to let foreign agents operate untrammelled. Last winter, when agitation for an investigation of un-Americanism first came before congress, many a lawmaker wondered not only about un-American agents, but also about foreign agents.

Regardless of who holds power when civil service is expanded, it will create furor in the minority ranks because present job-holders will be favored. On this assumption, a furor will come in Republican ranks February 1 when 81,000 Democratic workers in so-called emergency agencies are moved into civil service classification.

Politics

To New York state voters, November's gubernatorial election will be a matter of choosing between two worthy men, once co-workers against crime, now political opponents through trick of circumstance.

Merits for Dewey: An amazing record of fighting New York city's criminal element since he was appointed special prosecutor by Governor Lehman in 1935.

Merits for Lehman: Almost 40 years' manufacturing and banking experience that have enabled him to run the Empire state on a business basis.

Dewey Support: New York state Republicans. He must win 250,000 votes which Lehman controlled in 1936, must also win the powerful labor vote which, though it helped elect him district attorney last year, is still Democratic.

Lehman support: New York state Democrats, who have controlled the governorship many years; New York city Jewry, because Lehman is Jewish; Tammany (what is left of it), because Tammany bitterly dislikes Tom Dewey for prosecuting its favorite son, Jimmy Hines; the American Labor party, because Lehman has endorsement of both A. F. of L. and C. I. O.

Since he must attack his strongest points, Candidate Dewey's first blast was against Tammany, which necessitated dragging Candidate Lehman into the picture. Unintentionally, said Mr. Dewey, the governor is "the good will advertising, the front man and window dressing for a thoroughly corrupt machine."

Proud of his own anti-crime record, Governor Lehman answered he was "amazed" that the young district

CANDIDATE LEHMAN

attorney would "abandon" his racketeering prosecution to enter government affairs in which he has "no real record of accomplishment."

What everyone knows is that Tom Dewey can have anything he wants from the Republican party, even the 1940 presidential nomination, if he wins. That is one reason Franklin Roosevelt was willing to patch up his quarrel with Governor Lehman, who opposed the Supreme court enlargement bill. It is also why New York's campaign is attracting national attention.

Floyd Gibbons' ADVENTURERS' CLUB

HEADLINES FROM THE LIVES OF PEOPLE LIKE YOURSELF!

"Beast of the North"

HELLO EVERYBODY:

It's sixteen-year-old Bob Shreves of 1333 Pacific St., Brooklyn, N. Y., who crashes into the Adventurers Club today and wins himself the rating of Distinguished Adventurer.

Now it's been years since big game hunters roamed around Brooklyn looking for animals to shoot. Hunting parties have been giving it the go-by since the days when Peter Minuit was mayor of New York and the town belonged to the Dutch.

It was just twelve o'clock noon, when eight-year-old Bob filed out of Public School No. 15 with a bunch of other school kids and started up State street toward his home, which was then at 146 South Elliott place.

The Bear Looked Harmless.

The crowd was standing at the back door of a large theater. Young Bob went over and joined it. On the sidewalk by the stage entrance was a huge brown bear.

"The bear was lying down," says Bob. "He was pretty old, and looked like a harmless creature. The helpers were holding him only by a small piece of worn clothes line tied around the collar on his neck."

That bear may have looked harmless—but Bob soon found out that he wasn't.

A lot of other people shared Bob's opinion that the bear wouldn't hurt anyone. Nearly the whole student body of Public School No. 15 had trooped down to the theater stage door, attracted by the gathering crowd. Such a mob of kids you never saw in your life. They pushed and jostled one another as they crowded closer. They yelled to one another and directed loud, shrill questions at the men who were holding the big brute.

One great paw lashed out in a vicious swing.

Broke Away and Charged the Crowd.

Then that mob of kids began milling and pushing in their effort to follow the bear in. Bob Shreves was way up in the front row, being pushed along by those behind him, when suddenly the bear fell into a panic.

He was coming right toward the spot where young Bob was standing—and with a mob of three or four hundred kids pushing from behind, there was no way for Bob to escape. A big boy in front of him screamed and turned to flee. And in his frantic effort to get away he ran squarely into Bob and bowled him over.

Bob fell flat on the ground. For a moment he was confused. All around him now he heard the screams of other kids. Then he looked up—to see the bear charging straight at him—almost on top of him!

Bob's heart leaped to his mouth—and in another split second the bear was on him. One great paw lashed out in a vicious swing at Bob's head. Instinctively, Bob ducked. "If I hadn't," Bob says, "he would have ripped my face wide open. As it was, he took away a piece of my scalp as big as a man's hand. He was standing over me now, snarling and growling, and suddenly I found myself in his big, powerful arms."

Was Slowly Crushing the Life Out of Him.

"I thought my chest was going to cave in," he says, "and my lungs felt as if they would burst. I tried to cry out, but that was impossible. I couldn't even draw a breath."

Meanwhile, one of the helpers had grabbed up the bear's rope again while the other ran in to get the trainer. Little Bob wasn't even conscious of that. He wasn't conscious of anything but the big, hairy animal that kept squeezing—squeezing—slowly crushing the life out of him.

The next thing he knew he was in Cumberland hospital, with a badly lacerated head and right shoulder, and a broken rib—and the doctors told him that if he hadn't had on a thick overcoat he'd have been maimed for life, if not killed outright. But three months later Bob was out of the hospital, and all right except for a lasting scar on his head.

The bear weighed 880 pounds and stood seven feet tall when erect. He was the biggest critter Bob ever took on for a fight before—or since. And he's still wondering if Schmeling, or Joe Louis, or even Dempsey in his prime, could have done any better with that animal than he did.

THE RIVER of SKULLS

by George Marsh

WNU SERVICE

"Ah-hah!" grunted Noel. "Camp smoke!"

"Smoke hanging over that spruce point all right but whose smoke? McQueen's or the Naskapi's?"

"De Naskapi hunt deer on de barren. Dat ees McQueen."

Back at camp McCord listened to the news.

"Right on our heels, like wolves after deer, eh! Well, they won't find much deer in us!"

But Heather sat gazing into the fire, her brown face grave with foreboding.

Noel, too, was silent as he worked on a paddle with his draw-knife, for the tales he had heard since childhood of the spirit-haunted rivers and the fierce nomads who roamed the interior following the caribou herds harassed him.

Shortly after daylight, the Peterboro slid into the slant of the first drop of the outlet on its long voyage north.

Past shores rimmed with red willows and alders behind which the young leaves of the aspen shivered in the breeze, apple-green against the olive of the spruce, they rode the strong water.

Farther on, past bold, boulder-strewn shores and through lake expansions, they traveled beyond the sunset and into the afterglow.

In the morning, when they raised their net, Alan took from among the red-bellied square-tails and the whitefish, a graceful, dark backed, silvery fish and held it for John's inspection.

"It must be a winninish, John, as sure as you're born! No sea salmon can get up here above all these falls and it's too early, anyway. We don't have these fellows on the coast—only the Hearne's salmon, with red spots, in the Bay. This proves we're on Koksoak waters."

McCord's brown face widened in a grin as he examined the fish.

"Land-locked salmon, boy! I've caught them often in Quebec! Notice that line of black spots along the side! By glory, I'm going to have some fun, nights on this river, for I've got a rod and some flies—flies, lad! My Scotch blood wouldn't let me come without them."

To Alan's amusement McCord produced from a stout skin case, a jointed steel rod, a reel with oiled silk line and a small leader and fly-book.

Good river men though they were, the next few days taxed the skill and strength of the crew. Chutes and white-water and flumes followed each other endlessly.

Past boulder choked shores where great cakes of ice left by the high water still melted in the sun, with terraces of stratified sand rising above them, the Peterboro plunged. Packing around roaring falls and rock-scattered reaches, they labored day after day, while always beyond the valley reached the tundra, its white moss slopes stippled with flowers and mapped with caribou paths.

It was the last month of the northern movement of the great central herd that winters in the forests. Already does and fauns had preceded the bucks to the cool wind-whipped barrens where the mosquito pest and bot flies are less troublesome. But the canoe bound for the River of Skulls did not linger in the high plateau country. They had ample provisions, with the river fish, and their goal was too far and the summer too short.

Then, one day, the country ahead began to fall away, the valley narrowed, and a muffled roar reached their ears from below, where the river entered a long, rocky gorge. Landing, Alan and Noel went ahead over the boulders and gravel at the head of the gorge to inspect the water.

Hours later they returned. For five miles they had followed the shores of the gorge jammed with boulders piled high by the ice and found the river impassable to a canoe. For three days they slaved with the canoe and outfit over rocks and boulders, Heather insisting on doing her share of the portaging with the tump-line strap over her monde head.

Below the canyon the canoe was again put in and shortly the river widened into a lake where they camped for a day's rest.

There is no spring on the high Ungava plateau. Winter dies hard with occasional snow flurries and frosty nights in June, then summer, the magician, touches the land of the tundra overnight with its wand. Myriad flowers spring to life. The rolling barrens between the innumerable lakes and rivers become gray-green carpets of caribou moss, velvet to the feet, splashed with the white blooms of the bake-apple and service berries, the pale rose of the fragrant twin-flower and the pink patches of the Irok.

And now summer had come to the wild valley of the Koksoak, and almost daily rainbows arched the river, for Ungava is the land of rainbows.

"When are we going back to look for caribou on the barrens, Alan?"

And that is a question that is important to get to the bottom of the two small traveling tents with cheese-cloth mosquito linings. "I'd like to see the country up there."

Alan opened his eyes where he drowsed in the sun to consider the graceful figure of the girl near him.

How many women could have come through the days of hardship behind them and hardly look tired. He thought of the girl back at Fort George, so lovely in her dark, feminine way.

But compared with this tall girl who lay near him on the warm beach, Berthe was frail, too soft for hardship.

"Were ees de glass?" asked Noel who had been staring for some minutes at the hills to the north.

"In the tent on my clothes pack."

Noel got the glasses and sitting down on the beach began to sweep the distant ridges below the lake.

After an interval he announced, excitedly:

"Smoke sign—down de riviere!"

"If that's smoke and not haze, then it's Indians," replied Alan, getting to his feet.

"No haze—dis!" insisted Noel, his downstream with their poles and picked him up.

"It look bad but we can run dem!" was the report.

"We've got to run them!" insisted Alan.

"They can shoot us out of the boat from the shore, here. We've got to get out of this country!"

"That's right, Alan!" agreed McCord, a soothing arm circling the shoulders of the girl who stood gripping her rifle, her frightened eyes patrolling the opposite shore.

"Ah-hah! We go!"

The Peterboro caught the suck of the first drop and was into the maw of the white water where the river boiled and churned and lashed itself into a frenzy of foam and flung spume until hidden by a rocky bend.

Following black water channels past boulders over which the driven water mounded high to burst into cascades of spray; missing, by the width of a paddle, upthrusts and splinters of rock where the river thrashed itself into white fury; dodging knife-edged ledges that would rip the bottom from nose to

Alan as he came up beside the filling boat. "Are you all right, Heather?" he called to the girl who had been thrown wide and was swimming back to the canoe pivoting on its caught bow with the current.

"All right!" answered the girl, who swam like a fish.

"Get her bow off, quick, before we lose our loose stuff!"

"I've got it!" yelled the giant, standing on the submerged rock as he heaved and freed the bow.

Frantically the crew worked, in water like ice, to bring the half-filled craft ashore. They were shored in shoal water where they freed the precious pemmican, flour, and provision bags from their lashings and put them on the beach, then emptied the canoe.

"Any paddle gone?" cried Alan.

"Mine and Heather's," answered McCord.

"Come on, Noel, they'll drift ashore in that bend!" And the two boys, leaping into the canoe in the fast fading light, hurried away and eyes frozen to the glasses while Heather and Alan stood beside him.

"Dere eet go again! T'ree puff, I tell you," he cried excitedly. "De Injun signal wid a blanket!"

"Let me have a look!"

Noel handed the binoculars to Alan.

From a blue ridge down the river valley Alan shortly saw a column of smoke rise, to be cut short off.

Presently this was followed by another column and this, later, by another. There was no mistaking it. This was no haze. This was smoke signaling by alternately holding a blanket over the fire and removing it, to separate the puffs.

"Where's John?"

"Over at the outlet fishing for salmon," replied Heather.

"There! There's the answer from the farthest blue hill, on this side of the valley! See it, Noel?"

Noel took the glasses. "Ah-hah," he said. "I see eet."

"We'll do a little signalling ourselves." And Alan tied Heather's white sweater to a paddle and waved it back and forth to the man a mile away in the canoe.

When the canoe was seen to head towards camp, the two men and the girl started hurriedly to roll their tents and get the outfit ready for the canoe.

"What's the matter?" demanded the curious McCord, reaching them.

"There are Indians signalling from a hill below here. They may be hunters who have found deer and are telling someone across the valley. Then again they may have seen us and are starting to head us off. We've got to get downstream, past them!"

"How about McQueen?"

"If I know anything about canoe-men McQueen's fifty miles behind us, John. This is Naskapi!"

Calling the dogs who were hunting back in the scrub, they loaded the canoe and started for the outlet. For a few miles below the lake there was good canoe water; then, when the Peterboro was abreast of the ridge where they had seen the first smoke signals, the river fell off in a long rapid.

Taking his rifle Noel leaped ashore and ran ahead to inspect the water while Alan and McCord remained at the boat with Heather watching the shores for a possible ambush. Shortly Noel waved them ashore and they "snubbed" the boat stern; the Peterboro raced and plunged past the menacing shores where hidden Naskapi could pour upon them a withering fire.

On down the river they pushed through the day and into the long twilight, putting mile after mile between the canoe and the hills of the signal smoke. The dusk was beginning to pack the spruce of the shores when the tired canoe-men began to look for a place to camp.

At a widening where the river bed was strewn with boulders but the water not strong, the bowman swung the nose of the canoe toward the beach. But, within a hundred feet of the shore, the Peterboro with its heavy load rode upon a submerged boulder and, before the crew could save it, rolled and they were in the river.

"Save the flour and pemmican! Don't let the pemmican sink!" cried were back shortly with the lost paddles.

Then while a fire was kindled the flour bags were carefully examined.

"The water got to two bags," mourned Alan, "but we'll save some of it if we work quick enough!" The pemmican's all right!

They opened the wet bags and removing what flour had not been reached by water, placed it in spare bags, then spread their outfit out to dry by the fire. Owing to the fact that everything of value in the canoe was lashed to the thwart's they had lost nothing except the flour. Half of that was ruined.

While the steam rose from their wet clothes and their socks hung on a thong suspended by sticks, they stood in their bare feet drying out beside the fire.

Men Excel in Fishing; Outclass Women by Two to One, According to Michigan Expert

Women are not as good at trout fishing as are men, three years of research on Michigan trout streams by the Institute for Fisheries Research of the state department of conservation and the University of Michigan reveals, says the Detroit News.

Creel censuses taken on a random selection of Michigan lakes and streams for the last three years show that, while women do just about as well as men in lake fishing, they catch only about half as many trout in streams. Over the three-year period, said Dr. R. William Eschmeyer, of the institute, men have caught almost one trout per hour of fishing, while women have had an average catch of only 0.5 of a trout per hour. The average catch for all fishermen, he added, was 0.8 of a trout per hour of fishing.

There are a number of reasons for women's ill-luck when it comes to stream fishing, said Dr. Eschmeyer, and these do not include any mention of ability. In the first place, he pointed out, stream fishing may be compared to solitaire, while lake fishing is more comparable to bridge; the former is non-social, the latter, social. Women, he said, prefer the company of others, a condition that is supplied by lake fishing, which is generally done from a boat containing several persons. Then, too, he continued, some of the best fishing is near or after dark, at which time most women have probably left the stream.

Another reason, he said, is to be found in the fact that trout fishing, particularly in rapid streams, demands considerable careful wading and always offers the possibility of getting wet in relatively cold water. In the last place, he concluded, "according to those addicted to the pipe (chiefly men), pipe smoking while fishing permits one to give more attention to trout and less to mosquitoes."

Iris, Snake Bite Cure

Iris typifies wisdom, faith and courage. Its early medicinal value, according to doctors of the time, was as a cure for snake bites, fits, dropsy, bruises, anger and coughs. Some doctors went so far as to say that if petals of the iris were placed on a black and blue spot for five days the flesh would assume the natural color. The roots of the iris were used as teething rings for babies and are used to this day in some countries. The iris was used by Louis VII in his crusades in 1187.

High School Sponges

Webster says sponges come from the sea. That may be true in part, but not all sponges come from the sea.

There are sponges and sponges. There are sponges that are lovable and gracious in their ways; some who do not have a very brilliant technique; some who could get you to give your last piece of clothing to them on the coldest day of the year.

Do you know a sponge? It is certain you do. At school there is the person who always wants you to prepare his lessons for him. He is forever asking for your algebra paper, or your chemistry notes, or your English exercises.

When you see the sponge come down the hall, you run the other way. But he is a good sprinter; he catches you two minutes later. Just as you are congratulating yourself on your escape, he approaches with a serene air and "smiling morning face."

Without waiting for you to say yes, he thrusts all of the papers in your arms and hurries away, telling you how busy he is and how much help you are to him.

The fellow is positively uncanny. You have left off hating out of fear—pure fear. He has a way of finding you every time he needs you. Before each approach you determine not to give in, but you always weaken when he flashes that "Mae West" smile.

A sponge never achieves anything in life. And at the end he has probably soaked up nothing but ways to scheme and get others to do what he wants done. Once a sponge, always a sponge; it makes no difference in what condition or state of life the creature exists.

Fire prevention week was observed by the seniors in writing themes. Each student wrote a theme on the prevention of fire, ranging from 200 to 300 words. Some of the titles are as follows:

"Who Pays the Fire Losses?" "Meaning of Fire Waste," "Safe Use of Liquefied Petroleum," "The Chemistry of Fire," "The Value of Our Fire Department as a Public Institution," "Prometheus and Fire," "Motives Prompting Incendiary Fires," and "Fire Prevention in Ancient Rome."

NEWS BRIEFS

The junior class had a class meeting one day last week and selected the class colors, which are blue and gold. The class motto will be chosen at the next meeting. Arthur Reece, formerly of Conchas Dam, N. M., enrolled in the sophomore class Wednesday, Oct. 12. Clyde Carpenter, Jack Bogan, Clint Doolen and J. H. Gordon left last Wednesday for Kansas City to attend the national F. F. A. convention. W. M. Bralley visited Friday in the Amarillo schools.

LOCKERS FILLED TO CAPACITY

"All lockers are filled to capacity, in some cases there are three to each locker," stated W. M. Bralley, principal of the high school. Since last year locks have been specified for the students' use. A prize was offered last year to anyone who could open the specified type of lock without the proper key. No prize was won. It is compulsory that every student who has been issued a locker, must have it registered in the office and must keep it locked. Any student failing to do this will lose his locker and draw a penalty.

Pep Squad Spells D-E-M-O-N-S at Friday's Game

The pep squad spelled out D-E-M-O-N-S at the half of the game between Dumas and McLean Friday night. Formation instructions were given by Julia Slough, Tuesday morning, during activity period. The formation was made at the half Friday night, for the game which was played on Tiger Field.

Former Member of Sousa's Band Speaks to Students

Mr. Bruce of Indiana, a former member of Sousa's band, who now represents an outstanding band company of Elkhart, Ind., gave the band a 45-minute demonstration on brass instruments, Oct. 3, during band rehearsal. He showed the students how to reach the very highest notes easily and stressed the necessity for proper and regular daily practice. The importance of soft playing and long tone practice to develop facial muscles was emphasized.

F. F. A. CHAPTER TO HOLD MEETING

A third regular meeting of the F. F. A. boys will be held Oct. 25 to set up objectives for the year and appoint committees. The three committees to be appointed are the executive, livestock and social. Parliamentary procedure will be used in the opening and closing of the meeting. Two things will be organized in this meeting: first, the thrift bank, which is expected to have from $250 to $300 to help pay summer camp expenses, will be organized. Second, the livestock improvement plan, which has made a purchase of several registered male pigs, is expected to be fully organized after this meeting.

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses Vitamins And Vision; Explains How and Why You Should Feed Your Eyes

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

FOR a number of years, scientists have stressed the importance of a well-balanced diet as a means of maintaining health, promoting growth and preventing disease. Recently, an even more significant development has occurred. It has been determined that a carefully chosen diet is absolutely necessary to preserve the general health and efficiency of every bodily function and that there is a close relationship between a good diet and good eyesight.

Your Food and Your Eyes

Many people regard their eyesight as one of the five senses which operate in some mysterious manner of their own! If they suffer from indigestion, they recognize that it is quite apt to be due to something they ate. If they are troubled with stomach, liver or kidney complaints, they quickly appreciate that prolonged dietary indiscretions may be at the root of the trouble. But it never occurs to them that what they eat may affect the eyes just as profoundly as it affects the internal organs.

It is not uncommon, during an attack of biliousness, to suffer a disturbance of the vision. But that disturbance usually disappears with the disorder that caused it. On the other hand, a deficient diet may produce eye troubles that have a far reaching effect upon health, efficiency, and even personal safety.

Night Blindness Explained

For example, it has been established that there is a definite relation between your vision and the vitamins in your diet; between your ability to drive a car safely at night, and the amount of vitamin A-containing foods that you consume.

To understand this astonishing fact, it is necessary to know that vision under faint illumination is accomplished by means of chemical changes in the pigment at the back of the eye. This is known as the "visual purple" of the retina and one of its important components is carotene, which is the active form of vitamin A.

The visual purple might be compared to the film in a camera. When you are in a dim light and the eyes are suddenly exposed to bright light, the visual purple is greatly reduced or bleached. This change results in a stimulation of the optic nerve and enables you to see clearly.

When an adequate supply of vitamin A is present in the body, the visual purple is rapidly regenerated. But when the supply is inadequate, a much longer period elapses before the corrective chemical change takes place. During the intervening time, many people find it difficult to see.

That is the condition known as "night blindness." And it accounts for the fact that a large proportion of serious motor accidents occur at night. Victims of this deficiency disease are first blinded by approaching headlights, then cannot quickly readjust themselves after the oncoming car has passed. Their ability to drive safely is subsequently impaired for they cannot clearly see the road ahead, and they may miss dangerous curves, pedestrians or other vehicles.

A Common Complaint

Unfortunately, the prevalence of night blindness is not generally recognized, though it is held that urban dwellers are more conscious of it than those living in the rural areas. This is borne out by the fact that ocular disorders from vitamin deficiency are less common in urban than in rural areas.

Children Often Victims

Since the discovery of the close connection between vitamin A and the ability to see in dim light, scientists have tested large numbers of school children to determine whether vitamin A was present in their diet in adequate amounts. It was revealed that from 26 to 79 per cent of the children examined had incipient night blindness.

The same deplorable conditions were found among adults. Mild to moderate degrees of vitamin A deficiency were present in from 46 to over 50 per cent of each group tested.

Yet here is the remarkable thing —in nearly every case, a diet rich in vitamin A for a few weeks restored the vision to normal.

A Significant Experiment

An even more striking example of the power of food to affect the eyesight is to be found in the report of an experiment in which breeding sows were given food in abundance but lacking vitamin A for 160 days before and for 30 days after breeding. In three litters of 35 pigs, all were blind. In another litter of 14 pigs, all were sightless. But under normal feeding, the same animals produced litters of pigs with normal eyes and vision. This experiment justifies the conclusion of one of our most noted food scientists, that the deficiency of essential food elements may so alter vital processes that even pre-natal changes may occur.

Cause of Other Eye Disorders

Night blindness is not the only eye disease caused by an improper diet. Xerophthalmia or conjunctivitis, characterized by excessive dryness of the eyeball, has long been known to be caused by a vitamin A deficiency. It is also well known that a liberal amount of this vitamin will prevent that serious disease and will even effect a cure where destruction of the cornea has not progressed too far.

This suggests the tremendous importance of including in the diet foods rich in vitamin A—cod and other fish-liver oils; milk and other dairy products; green leafy and yellow vegetables; and egg yolk. Experiments with rats, whose dietary requirements are similar to those of man, show a close connection between cataract and a deficiency of another vitamin—vitamin G. This is found most abundantly in meat, milk, eggs, fruit and vegetables.

Were she concerned about protecting the blessing of good eyesight alone, that would be sufficient reason why every homemaker should plan meals that are rich in vitamins. But it is not only the eyes which are dependent upon vitamins, for they have many other functions to perform.

An improper diet may cause people to drive automobiles blindly at night so that they are dangerous not only to themselves and their passengers, but to everyone on the streets and roads. A deficient diet will also send them through life with half-efficient bodies, half-efficient brains, half-efficient senses.

That is why I urge you to learn everything you can about food, so that in planning meals you will not only feed your eyes, your husband's eyes and your children's eyes, but will take advantage of the wonderful discoveries of nutritional science to make every member of the family so efficient that they will enjoy the best of health each day of their lives.

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. C. L.—Yes, indeed, nutritionists do approve of a mid-afternoon snack for most school children. A glass of milk and a slice of buttered bread with jam or preserves; fruit juice and oatmeal cookies; or a chocolate milk shake and graham crackers will provide fresh energy for late afternoon play. Without the between-meal lunch, some children become so fatigued that nerve strain results. Take care, however, that the snack does not destroy the appetite for the evening meal. ©-WNU—C. When Cooking Greens.—If a piece of fat about the size of a nutmeg is added to the water in which any kind of greens are being cooked there will be no boiling over and no stirring will be required.

Salt Improves Coffee.—The flavor of coffee is improved if a little salt is sprinkled on the bottom of the pot before the coffee is put in.

Bright Clothes for Children.—You may not like vividly colored clothes, but they are the safest thing to wear in traffic. It is advisable to dress children in such costumes to help protect them from accidents.

Apples for the Winter.—To keep apples through the winter, bore holes in the bottom and sides of a barrel and store on a dry platform a foot or more from the ground. Where only a few apples are available for storage, a good plan is to carefully wrap them singly in paper, then pack them in layers three or four deep in shallow boxes and place them in the coolest position in the house or outbuilding.

Flowers and Vase for Sick.—It is an excellent idea when sending cut flowers to a hospital to send an inexpensive vase with them. Nurses often find it difficult to find vases enough to hold flowers.

Save Salty Water.—When water in which salt has been boiling is poured over coal, it makes good coal last longer and improves bad coal.

Keeping Paint.—If a can of paint has to be left open, stir it thoroughly, so as to dissolve all the oil, then fill up with water. When it becomes necessary to use the paint pour off the water and you will find it as fresh as when first opened.

Well-Fitting Hose.—Children's stockings ought to be selected carefully. Short ones creep toes and will eventually make them crooked. Too long ones wrinkle and twist, irritating toes and heels. Also, children should be taught to wear a fresh pair of stockings each morning. Don't allow your youngsters to wear gasholers in the house or classroom.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

Lesson for October 23 OUR DAY OF REST

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:8-11; Luke 13:10-17. GOLDEN TEXT—Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy.—Exodus 20:8.

Rest—how full of meaning that little word is when we recall that it means quiet for the struggling one, calm for the troubled, repose for the weary, tranquility for the disturbed, cessation of labor for the worn-out one. God in His infinite wisdom saw that without rest man would soon destroy himself, and He made provision for one day in seven when labor should cease and man should be free for that re-creation of soul and body which should fit him for the labor of the week. Men in their greed have coveted the time God gave for rest and have used it for themselves, and the ragged nerves and broken bodies, to say nothing of the impoverished spirits of our day, testify that it can be done only at our peril.

Our study centers around Scripture passages which have to do with the Jewish Sabbath, but since it was essentially a day of rest, and afforded an opportunity for the worship of God, the principles surrounding it are applicable to our day of rest—the first day of the week, the Lord's Day.

I. Why We Keep a Day of Rest (Exod. 20:8-11).

1. God commanded that there should be a day of rest—one out of seven—and that should be sufficient to cause His people to "remember" the day "to keep it holy." It is cause for grave concern that Sunday has become a day of swimming, hiking, auto-driving, golfing, and one might go on with the list almost indefinitely. Many men or women who have built into their own characters the stalwart virtues nurtured by family attendance at the house of God, have not only forgotten their own need and responsibility but are destroying every vestige of interest in divine worship in the hearts of their children. It is serious business to go astray oneself, but infinitely more serious to mislead one's own children.

Notice that the day of rest was to be not only for the family but also for servants and for visitors. The employer who operates his factory or office on Sunday violates this commandment. Note also that the man who is to rest on the seventh day is supposed to work on the six days. Some folk neglect to do both.

2. God's command is strengthened by the divine example (v. 11). We are not able to do all things that God does, but here we are privileged to follow His example.

II. How We Keep the Day of Rest (Luke 13:10-17).

The incident recorded by Luke does not give us an exhaustive list of things to be done with our day of rest, but it is interesting to note that our Lord was

1. In the house of God (v. 10). Jesus was in the synagogue. The distinguished Apostle Paul never became too great or too good to attend divine worship. We all need to go to church (if it is at all possible for us to do so) to fellowship with others in the things of Christ. Let us have a revival of church attendance, and not only on Sunday mornings, but also on Sunday night and for midweek prayer meetings.

2. Alert to the needs of others (vv. 11, 12). It is not indicated that the woman asked to be healed. Jesus saw her need and met it. We can save her need and meet it. We can do what he did, but there are needs that we can meet if we are but alert to see them and willing to help.

3. Active in service (v. 13). In spite of the criticism which He knew would come from the lazy and helpless standers-by, Jesus did the work of God. We may glorify God by being ready—yes anxious—to serve in the church. Our daily work is set aside on the Lord's Day not that we should be indolent, but that we should be free to do the Lord's work.

4. Contending for the faith (vv. 14-17). Jesus met the unjust criticism (which, by the way, was leveled at the poor woman because the critic feared Jesus) by a masterly appeal to the law of the Pharisees (vv. 15, 16). But He did more than that, for He ably defended the rights of humanity as superior to the formalities of man-made law. The Lawgiver comes, and no law can hinder Him by its letter, as He fulfills its spirit.

We may not speak as Jesus did, that is to declare what the law is, but we may in His name, and by His grace and power, declare the full counsel of God, defend it against its critics and withstand those who while bearing the name of Christian leaders only hinder the work of Christ (compare III John 9, 10). For such service we need His guidance. His wisdom, His power, and His grace.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

NEW YORK.—As America looks to its air defenses, it finds, as acting chief of the army air corps, a pioneer technician in the adaptation of the air-plane to war uses. He is Brig. Gen. H. H. Arnold, assuming command of the corps after the death of Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, in a plane wreck.

Arnold Seems Well Qualified For Air Chief

Soon after the Wright brothers had made their first few faltering air jumps, young Lieutenant Arnold was sent to Dayton, Ohio, not only to learn to fly, but to make technical studies of the possibilities of aircraft for observation and fighting. He was among the earliest of the army's trained fliers, and, in 1912, won the Mackay medal for a triangular flight, 30 miles to the leg, from College Point, Md., over Washington and Fort Meyer. In 1935, he again won this trophy for his exploit of the previous year in leading a flight of 10 bombing planes from Washington to Fairbanks, Alaska.

He has been an aggressive champion of aerial defense, reprimanded in 1926 for what was considered an excess of zeal for air armament. In 1917, he organized and commanded the Panama Canal air defenses, and was with the A. E. F. in France, in the closing months of the World war, on inspection duty. He became assistant chief of the air corps in January, 1936. His technical studies have included photography, special means for topographical observations, and aerial mass tactic, as well as engineering problems of flying.

He is 51 years old, a native of Gladwyn, Pa., graduated from West Point in 1907.

IN HIS Washington garden, Robert E. Bondy has some late-blooming roses and chrysanthemums, which are now in bud. The hurricane never touched them. He has had to turn his back on his garden for a time, as his world outside of it became mostly chaos. As national director of disaster relief for the Red Cross, he's been doing a heroic work in New England. His roses may be one kind of act of God, but his business is mainly with the other kind—Swinburne's "Forsaken Garden," where "wild waves and spent winds labor."

Clouds Have Silver Lining In R. E. Bondy

He was a letter-man on the University of Chicago baseball team and a police reporter for a Chicago newspaper. On the latter job, he had a ringside seat at man-made disasters, but, in his later career, took up with the more elemental upsets and breakdowns.

For 19 years, he has organized disaster relief for the Red Cross in the Lake, Southern and Washington divisions. He is one of our most seasoned and efficient battlers against all the ills and dangers that come in the wake of flood, fire, earthquake or any other widespread ruin. He is a native of Minnesota, in his early forties, his hair thinning—and no wonder.

IN WASHINGTON, Congressman Lucius N. Littauer of New York used to beat even Uncle Joe Cannon in the house poker games. And just a little something out of the kitty is the $2,250,000 graduate school of public administration, which he handed Harvard and which recently opened. Mr. Littauer is the widely known glove-pontate of Gloversville. He is 79 years old, graduated from Harvard 59 years ago. His father, a German immigrant, founded the family glove factory. He has established many benefactions for useful public purposes, among them a gift of $1,000,000 in 1929, to "bring about a better understanding among all mankind." He provided $100,000 to recondition his old boyhood swimming hole.

THE subject of totalitarian humor is brought up by President James L. McConaughy, of Wesleyan college. He says that what's the matter with the iron men—no humor. He finds humor the salt and leaven which will save democracy, it short-circuits egoism and pulls down the stuffed shirts, and is kin to humility.

Doctor McConaughy, New York-born, Yale '09, has been president of Wesleyan since 1925. He is a modern, alert pedagogue, with a broad social point of view and an awareness of timely problems.

Try This With Your New Ruffled Curtains!

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS
"DEAR Mrs. Spears—I want to thank you for the clear diagram of how to hang draw curtains in your Book 1—SEWING for the Home Decorator. This was just what I have been needing as we have casement windows and no shades in our living room. With a pull of the cord my new curtains shut out the light or the outside view. I wonder if you would help me with another problem? I do not want to make the curtains for the rest of the house. Thought I would buy ruffled net ones. Do you think they would be too commonplace? J. T."

Answer: Here is a suggestion for hanging ruffled curtains that will make your windows a little different from those of your neighbors and lend no end of style to your rooms. Double curtain rods are needed to give the crossed effect and a valance board is added to the top of the window as shown. Here the valance is the sort that comes with ready made curtains and the top is folded back to make it double. In thumbtacking it to the valance board, do not stretch it—just "ease it on" so that it hangs well. If you feel that the windows need color, the valance and the backs may be of plain glazed chintz that repeats the strongest color in your room color scheme. A contrasting valance may be either plain or gathered.

Let Father and Young Son and Little Sister help you make the home a center of interest. Book 1—SEWING, for the Home Decorator contains many useful things that every one may take a hand in making. Book 2 shows you with pictures how to make many lovely gifts. Books are 25 cents each. Order both books today and get the patchwork quilt leaflet picturing 36 authentic embroidery stitches free. We Hope They Got Home Before Moon Came Up!

A young farmer had bought a horse which was a wonderful jumper, and was riding him home. They came to a gate 10 feet high. The horse pricked up his ears, wagged his tail and gracefully jumped over.

A little farther on they came to a gate 14 feet high, and again the horse pricked up his ears, wagged his tail and sailed over with equal ease.

Farther on still they came to a railway bridge. Again the horse pricked up his ears, wagged his tail, but the squire shouted nervously, "Whoa, under this one, not over."

PTA HAS INTERESTING SESSION

By Mrs. Luther Petty

The Parent-Teacher Association met Wednesday afternoon of last week in the music room at the grade school building, with 78 members and visitors present.

Mrs. C. B. Batson, president, conducted a short business session, during which Miss Lorene Winton, newly elected treasurer, reported nearly 100 paid members and that the national dues of $5.00 had been paid.

Mrs. W. F. McDonald, chairman of the book drive, who used the method of collecting coat hangers, reported 2,224 had been collected. Miss Ruby Swim and the third grade were presented a gift of a book house containing 10 books for bringing in the most hangers. Mrs. McDonald also reported that several books for the school library had been received.

The P. T. A. voted to sponsor club scouting.

In the absence of Mrs. H. E. Franks, program chairman, Mrs. Bob Black, member of the committee, was in charge of the following program:

A musical reading, "Home," was given by Mrs. E. C. Crews, with Mrs. Willie Boyett accompanying at the piano.

Rev. W. B. Swim brought the devotional, and Mrs. H. C. Rippy introduced Mrs. C. T. Hunkapillar, district PTA president, of Pampa, as the guest speaker for the afternoon.

Mrs. Hunkapillar based her talk on Home and PTA, saying in part: "The PTA means parents and teachers associating together for the sake of the children." She said that homes have changed since our grandmothers' time, in that many of the former activities of the home are placed in the industrial world by the industrial revolution.

"Farm women were about the only women that were making an effort to help make the living, although from 1920 to 1930 there were more married women who had gone to work," the speaker said. "This, perhaps is the cause of many juvenile crimes, as the children of these homes were neglected, and the fact that the women were no longer dependent upon their husbands made for broken homes."

Leisure caused by inventions determines what we as mothers are going to do. Because of clubs and other outside engagements we fail to take time to think.

"It is said, 'Home is a place to go when there is no where else to go.' Family altars and discussion of religion in the home are now too often crowded out. As social communities, industries, schools, etc., have changed, so have our homes. The PTA is to help cooperate with homes, regardless of circumstances. Concentrate on what is needed and do it. Homes should have love, cooperation, appreciation and understanding."

Rev. Troy A. Sumrall, who discussed "Good Times in the Family," said: "The family is the basic institution of society, because it furnishes the home of man and woman, united in the holy bonds of matrimony, and is the nursery and training school for the young."

Rev. Sumrall further stated: "Families that play together stay together. In the home all learn to give and take. In playing together our greatest differences are adjusted and independence is increased." He gave the fable of the seven sons and seven sticks, showing cooperation. "Every parent should see that ample home provisions are made for every necessity of the children, and this is accomplished by families playing together. Here they learn the harmony of life. In the family play circle, problems have diminished and have increased in public play grounds, scout troops, nursery schools, summer camps in many institutions."

Rev. Sumrall closed by saying: "Happy families are not only those which stay together, but rather those families whose members have chosen their vocation in life, and, having been properly trained, have gone out to do their best to grow a greater world."

Mrs. Cliff Vincent of Lefors, president of the Gray County PTA Council, was introduced, as was also Mrs. W. L. Campbell, past president.

The 7-B room, of which Principal Sam H. Branch is the home room teacher, was given $2.50 for having the largest percentage in attendance.

Mrs. Hunkapillar explained the idea of room mothers is to bring home and school in closer relation by visitation, and that of least importance is helping entertain the children. She said it is advisable to change room mothers each year, and not choose only those who are able to give financial aid.

The need of fathers in attendance at the meetings was stressed, as well as more mothers and teachers.

The next meeting will be Nov. 9 at the grade school building, beginning at 3:45 p. m.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

The Christian Endeavor of the First Presbyterian Church met for their regular weekly meeting Sunday, Oct. 16 at 6:30 p. m. The meeting was called to order by the president, Vester Lee Smith. After the theme song, "Follow Thee," was sung, a short business meeting was held, when it was decided to have a party Oct. 29.

The program on the subject, "War in Europe," was given by Dorothy Sitter and Doris Wilson. After the program, the benediction was repeated and the meeting adjourned.

Those present were: Joe Cooke, Maxine Goodman, Lorraine Hodges, Ray Humphreys, Vester Lee Smith, Frances Sitter, Dorothy Sitter, Doris Wilson, Virginia Wehba, James Everett, Peggy Greer, and the sponsors, Mr. and Mrs. Travis Stokes.
