NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS: The "Europian" Whirligig Written by a group of the best informed newspapermen of Washington and New York. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

War— While the principal chancelleries of Europe ring with glib talk of friendly agreements, limitation of armaments and treaties of guarantee, the Balkan situation grows steadily worse. Some kind of explosion can be expected here not later than this spring. Italy has her eye on Dalmatia and has quietly been penetrating the Balkans. She has aided Albania in the construction of new military roads. The purpose in all her undercover activities is to threaten Jugoslavia.

Troops— France is observing in light humor an attempt to form a military political party very similar in purpose to Hitler's German National Socialists. Like Hitler, Herve wants troops to impose his program, a kind of state socialism, thoroughly militarized and dictatorial. He would fight the truce and financial speculation, would have the President the real head of the government appointed for ten years and with power to choose his own successor.

Switzerland— The Swiss are one of the few peoples in Europe in sound financial condition. They have no foreign debt, the last of the American loans has been paid off and Swiss paper money has a gold reserve of 166 per cent, just 12 per cent more than the law requires.

Dollar— The rise of the dollar is the most important development in recent European finance. At present, quotations it is almost more profitable to settle for American purchases by exporting gold than to buy dollar credits for payments.

Communism— Outside of the U. S. S. R., Communism is making an apparent progress. Recent general elections in Holland, Denmark, Belgium, Switzerland, France, and Germany showed no gains. In Germany 721,615 votes were lost in four months. Communist funds distributed by the Third International for outside propaganda have been greatly reduced. Many European leaders are convinced that Bolshevism is turning out to be a purely Russian

Martin Plays Activities Of Economy Bloc

Legion Leader Addresses Lions On Veterans Problems

Leland L. Martin, Foran superintendent criticized the National Economy League's activities Friday before the Lions Club in a plea for support of the 16th District American Legion convention to be held here next month.

National Economy League, child of the Anti-Bonus League according to Martin, has sought to thwart the program of the American Legion by circulating "misleading propaganda." Martin declared efforts of the league to reduce veterans' expenditures were amiss, and that economy should be attempted elsewhere.

Heavyest Borrowers By far the heaviest borrowers were banks and trust companies. Prior to July 21, loans of $702,942,914 had been authorized to them. R F C Loans Reported By House Clerk

More Than Billion And Half Listed For February, June 1932

WASHINGTON (UP)—The secretary for nearly a year has hidden early activities of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation ended today with a report to the house detailing loans totaling $1,171,983,307.

The great lending agency, set up to save a nation's financial structure, disclosed that during the first six months of its existence it made more than 5,000 advances to great corporations, banks and railroads.

Every state in the union and nearly every city of any size was represented in the report. It detailed advances made to small country banks; to great railroads faced with refinancing operations of tremendous magnitude; to banking institutions in the financial nerve centers of the nation.

Bank of America The loan to the Bank of America had never before been officially confirmed. All but approximately $7,000,000 had been repaid by Jan. 6.

Chicago Advance Made to the great financial institution directed by Charles G. Dawes, who shortly before the loan was concluded resigned as president of the reconstruction corporation.

SPOTLIGHT

CHAPTER XVI

The second important happening of the day came only two hours later. When Dick Stanley put down the telephone after talking to Sheila he walked rapidly across the living room, lighted a cigaret, tossed it aside within five minutes. Then he sank impatiently into a chair and called Trevor Lane's number.

"It's a bad break all right," Trevor replied when Dick had told him how Sheila had left the new show. "It doesn't mean that she wasn't a success, though. That little little Lee who has the part now can't compare with Sheila. But Marvin Randolph is bound to have her own way! Two peevish tears from those blue eyes and she could practically put Mandrake himself out!"

Dick interrupted to say precisely what he thought of that producer.

"There's no use taking it that way," Trevor assured him. "And if you want to help Sheila you won't even mention this to Mandrake. You say they're both coming to town? Well, suppose I drift in on the party?"

He did just that.

Nothing was said about Sheila's departure from the cast of "When Lights Are Low." Sheila drank her tea, looked wide-eyed and serious, smiled and answered desultory questions. She even sang a little when Trevor asked her to sing.

While she and Dick at the far end of the room were hunting through sheets of music for the song they wanted Trevor talked to Mandrake.

Sheila was never to learn just what was said in that conversation but next morning she was again in rehearsal. The part was in the road show company of a Broadway hit. This time the contract was signed, Sheila's flat lit, the purse contained the precious document when she met Dick after the rehearsal.

"And that's that!" he said, folding the document after he had read it and handing it back to her. "Let's celebrate!"

There was another rehearsal at 7 which would end an hour later since most of the cast were playing in another show about to close.

Until 7 Dick and Sheila drove. She had a new job. He had been hard at work on his play and only the night before had reached the turning point when every part of his drama seemed to dovetail.

"We're going to have a lot of fun this year together," he said, His eyes, straight ahead on the pavement, turned for an instant to meet hers.

"But I won't be here! I thought you knew, Dick. It's the road company I'm going in!"

"The road company?" His face was blank. "But, good Lord, Sheila, you can't take it then! The road company! Why, that means traveling."

"Of course it does," Sheila put in. "And I love it!"

He turned toward her a face so filled with dismay that her own expression softened. Her hand crept out on the wheel to pat his own.

"But, Sheila, you can't!" he insisted. "Oh, please—I want you here!"

"I've been here all the time, Dick," she replied uncertainly. "It was so exactly like a man to suddenly discover that a girl was indispensable just when she was leaving."

"I know you have, honey. But somehow I didn't know how much you mean to me until now."

They had driven far up the drive and were nearing Inspiration Point. It was barely 6:30. By choosing the least crowded thoroughfare he could have her back at the hall where the rehearsal was to be held in plenty of time.

The sky across the Palisades was gray. The silver roughness of the river reflected every shade of the sunset. The park, high on the rocks, twinkled uncertainly with diamond-like lights, growing brighter and brighter as the sky slowly faded.

Sheila brightened. Dick mustn't tell her now that he loved her. It wouldn't do. Both of them had so many other things to think about. But did he really love her? Did she want him to tell her so even if it were true?

"I think we should turn back, Dick," she said, withdrawing her hand. "It's getting late."

"Just as you say," he did not raise his eyes.

Swiftly the car skimmed down the drive, crossed into the park at 110th street and picked up the winding road through the trees. They reached 45th street at 7 o'clock promptly.

"I'll be waiting when you're finished," Dick said.

Sheila ran up the stairs, her cheeks burning. Was Dick going to ask her to marry him? If she agreed would that mean they were going to live on 7? Dick had said that he was the poor member of the family. He meant poor, no doubt, according to Trevor Lane's standards—not her own. Dick could hardly rent a lovely penthouse without a fair income. True enough, his home wasn't anything like the palatial quarters where Trevor Lane lived. Trevor's apartment was a show place—a perfect setting for the sort of parties he gave. Dick's rooms were cozy with deep, comfortable wharves, dark wood, his books, his fireplace, his cluttered table. Dick was a fine fellow, a real friend—but did she want him to fall in love with her?

As Sheila took her place on the stage she tried to put all this from her mind. The chorus was going through its paces. Weary girls in practice suits, always willing, always cheerful under the most grueling, tortuous drilling. They looked little more than children. These girls received little pay and for that little they worked long hours, endured the bitterest criticism, comments from sarcastic stage managers.

Sheila watched the chorus stepping through its routine. Then the ensemble fell back against the wings and she fluttered into the open space.

"That's right!" the dance director bellowed, seating himself but not raising his eyes from Sheila's feet. "See that, girls! Watch how Shayne does that step!"

The girls attained respectful attention. Black curls bent to blend, frizzes and nodded approval. All eyes were on Sheila's flying feet.

Countless times the chorus went through the routine. Countless times Sheila fluttered down among them smiling, slowing a step and repeating it for their edification. Eight o'clock came. Half the chorus left abruptly, looking anxiously at their cheap little wrist watches. To be five minutes late might mean the loss of a pay check.

Sheila stayed on. She was not in another show, as the dance director well knew. She could hear the horn on Dick's car honking impatiently through the open window giving on the street. Then she heard the car draw away to round the block. A traffic policeman had been responsible for that, no doubt! Presently she heard the car pulling up to the curb again.

Nine o'clock came. Nine-fifteen. Sheila remained fluttering, weaving, twirling, her hair flopping, her heart pounding with fatigue, her face slightly flushed but her smile and her eyes serene.

At 9:30, on Dick's fifth round of the block, she appeared in the doorway. He smiled gratefully and stepped into the seat beside the wheel.

"Tired?" he asked.

"Terribly. The air will do me good, though. So will a little food. Have you eaten?"

Dick looked toward her in mild rebuke. "We're going to have

Gran Chaco Scene Of Bloody Battle

BY A. L. BRADFORD

United Press Staff Correspondent BUENOS AIRES (UP).—One of the bloodiest battles in modern South American history entered its fifth day in the Gran Chaco, where Bolivia and Paraguay have been fighting an "undeclared war" for nearly seven months. Thousands have been killed or wounded.

The Bolivians, who had been on the defense in the face of a Paraguayan drive until General Hans Kundt returned from Germany to assume the Bolivian high command, made a desperate attempt to break through the Paraguayan lines.

The casualties were more than 4,000 killed or wounded, if dispatches from Bolivia and Paraguayan headquarters at the front could be credited. Latest reports from La Paz, Bolivian capital, claimed the Paraguayans lost 1,500 killed and 2,000 wounded in the first four days of the battle.

La Paz reported officially that the Bolivians had taken up strategic positions designed to prevent Paraguayan reinforcements from receiving reinforcements from the north. Optimistic reports from both sides made it difficult to tell who was winning.

Bolivia's losses in the present battle were estimated at approximately 2,000 killed, including many officers. Paraguayan losses were described as "slight."

Expenses Of Rangers For Boons, Lost Bets Cited By McGregor

AUSTIN, (UP).—State Rangers' expense accounts for boons and lost bets were cited by Rep. T. H. McGregor in the House of Representatives here while demanding future itemization of all authorized expenditures.

A $30 gambling bet in Ft. Worth for one ranger, a $25 bet for another and a charge for whiskey in a ranger expense account were referred to by McGregor without giving names of the rangers.

He added that a ranger was buried at expense to the state of $400 and that medical attention for rangers had been at state expense.

A resolution for permitting specific expenditures only carried by a vote of 128 to 1.

Relief Program Favored By Roosevelt Discussed

WASHINGTON, (UP)—General relief program, understood by sponsors to carry out suggestions of President-elect Roosevelt, was agreed upon Thursday by the senate manufacturers committee. Report of the measure to the senate was authorized without a vote. The proposition combines the La Follette-Costigan and Cutting bills which had been aimed at different angles to the relief problem.

EXTRA HOURS OF FREEDOM ARE YOURS WITH ELECTRIC COOKING And how much is your freedom worth?—One might as well ask the cost of sunsets. Extra hours of freedom are priceless—blue skies outdoors—new color in your cheeks—more time for your friends and your family—more gaiety and real contentment. Cooking electrically means extra time to spend as you want to. It means knowing that you are cooking the most efficient way possible. You don't have to waste precious afternoon hours tending a cranky oven. And the automatic time and temperature controls of an electric range let you put on your hat and go while dinner cooks perfectly. Priceless though extra hours of freedom are, their cost is astonishingly low. When you cook electrically, you pay for those priceless hours in pennies. Electricity is Cheap — Use More of It!
