France Deserts Great Britain To Find Safety With Germany

strong Rome-Berlin axis, Great Britain and France have long sought to keep Germany and Italy divided. Now this clever trick of diplomacy has boomeranged. With Hitler and Mussolini on top of the heap since Munich's peace treaty, the Rome-Berlin axis is very successfully building a barrier between London and Paris.

Until a few weeks ago Great Britain and Germany were compara-tively close friends, while Italy busied herself hurling insults in the general direction of London. Now this is changed; the Anglo-Italian "friendship" treaty has been invoked and Prime Minister Chamberlain is willing to grant belligerent rights to Fascist Spain. During this display of affection, shrewd Adolf Hitler has found it convenient to abandon his British friends and turn to France. Thus it was not entirely unexpected when France ounced conclusion of a pact with Germany to outlaw war between the two nations and recognize the permanent integrity of present Franco-German boundary lines.

On the surface this appears to complement the Anglo-German "no war" treaty signed secretly by Hitler and Chamberlain at Munich. A more likely result is that it will cause bickering between France and Britain; by making peace with Berlin, Paris has figuratively abandoned the protectorship of British aristocrats and financiers. Still to come are French overtures for Italian friendship, probably to be paid for by the grant of new African colonies to Mussolini. Though both England and France deny it, observers are quite certain both will return war-mandated colonies to

The only new development which does not fit into this appeasement program is the Anglo-French decion to pool air forces and construct fleet of 10,000 fighting planes by 1940. This contradictory move only emphasizes how little faith any modern European nation places in the sanctity of treaties, since the only reason for a "super" air fleet would be to combat the combined threat of an Italo-German fleet.

Not only does the war department want to lay plans for mobilizing an army of 1,200,000 men within a few weeks, but it also wants to start storing away equipment for this army. Armament's share of the new budget must be paid with new taxes, once told another congressional and many congressmen advocate a two-year emergency income tax. This would pile a 10 per cent levy on top of the present income tax and provide $260,000,000 a year. Already trying to spike such plans, Utah's Sen. William H. King proposes to substitute "war taxes" in the form of a "nuisance" levy on luxury and semi-luxury goods.

Throughout the U.S. are about 2,500 manufacturing firms who share profits or managerial responsibility with employees. Politics

Since last summer the public has cringed under a barrage of insults and name-calling hurled back and forth between Rep. Martin Dies of the house un-Americanism commit-tee and members of the Roosevelt administration. Mr. Dies' favorite enemy in the cabinet has always been Madame Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, but lately his appetite has been whetted by conflict with Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes.

Alice Lee Jemison, a Yosemite Indian, told Mr. Dies' committee that Mr. Ickes was a member of the Civil Liberties Union. She said that Roger Baldwin, head of the group, committee that the organization upheld the rights of aliens to advocate murder, assassination and the overthrow of the government by force and violence.

This charge started the ball rolling. Admitting membership in the union, Mr. Ickes called Mr. Dies "the outstanding zany in our political history." Answered Mr. Dies: "The secretary's most recent fit of uncontrollable rage only emphasizes his unfitness for the high position he holds. The secretary literally reeks with the venom of hatred. It flows from him as naturally and free-

Foreign

The resignation of Premier Bela Imredi's Hungarian cabinet is a direct result of his failure to obtain the entire eastern half of Czecho. slovakia, an aim which was opposed first by Germany, and now by Italy as well. Since Adolf Hitler has delivered flat representations opposing any Hungarian ambitions in the Slovakian or Carpatho-Ukraine (Ruthenia) districts, the new cabinet is expected to be more closely allied to the German viewpoint. Hitler naturally does not want Hungary to annex Czech territory which would give her a common border with Poland, since that might block Germany's long-planned "drive to the southeast" through Czechoslovakia.

Lee knows at least one good

When Lee was in his early twenties-and that was back in the fall of 1919—he spent a few months on a ranch near the little town of Walden, Colo. Learned to Stick on a Horse's Back.

Lee says there's no finer, more generous or more open-hearted class of men than the cow-punchers. They gave him their friend-ship, and along with it all kinds of good advice on the handling of horses. They started him riding on safe docile ponies, and although he was quite awkward at it, he soon learned to stick on a horse's back well enough to go riding with the boys, rounding up strays, cutting out calves and doing the thousand and one odd jobs that man and horse have to do on a big ranch.

As I progressed," says Lee, "I quite naturally changed from the slower, more patient ponies to faster, more highly organized animals. My seat improved, and with greater ease in the saddle my confidence in myself grew by leaps and bounds.

And quite often it's nothing more than a little too much confidence that leads you into one of those good old-fashioned hair-raising adventures.

"One bitterly cold day," says Lee, "when the air was as clear and sharp as thin glass, it was decided to move some 500 head of eattle from the home ranch down to the Old Ranch for winter feeding. I asked to be included in the crew and felt mighty proud when I was accepted by the foreman. With the temperature at forty below zero it was a job to keep warm. I dressed in heavy underwear, mackinaw, blanket pants, hair chaps, wool-lined coat, mittens and cap. It was all I could do to navigate in all-this haberdashery. Having put on two pairs of heavy woolen socks, my feet were too large for the tight riding boots I usually wore, so I slipped on some big work shoes and buckled my spurs to them." And that was an error that Lee nearly paid for with his life, a Horse Had Bad Disposition.

The horse Lee had chosen to ride was "Bill," a big, rangy buckskin, fast on his feet, but not noted for his good disposition. They rode over to the cattle corral and the boys left Lee at the gate ready to swing it open when the animals were bunched up for the drive. Sitting on his horse, he got colder and stiffer every minute he waited. Finally the herd was bunched and headed for the gate-big, heavy, Hereford cattle, lowing, bawling and making wild dashes hither and yon. "Hereford cattle," says Lee, "are peculiar. They will not attack a mounted man, but they are deadly to one afoot. I didn't know this, and since the gate was heavy and I was all bound up in excess clothing, I slipped off Bill to swing it open.

Felt as if his leg were being torn from its socket.

The next thing Lee knew he heard a yell from the foreman and looked up to see the herd almost on top of him. Someone yelled, "Get on that horse. Yuh want ta get killed?" And Lee moved plenty fast. He put his foot in the stirrup and swung himself on his horse, but because he was stiff and cold and hampered by a lot of excess clothing, his right foot didn't quite swing clear. Instead he gave Bill a rake across the hind-quarters with his spur, and Bill jumped. Lee lost his hold. The next minute he was on the ground, hanging by his left foot to the stirrup. His low heel had slipped through and his ankle was held in the bow as if he had had on a leg iron.

"Bill started to run," says Lee, "with the cattle pounding right on behind. My head was dragging at the horse's heels and his steel shoes actually stirred my hair. I knew that to put my arms over my head was to have them smashed. My only hope was to work my foot free and take my chances with the cattle. The horse ran faster and faster as he became more frightened at my weight dragging alongside. Contrary to reports, my sins did not troop before my mind at this time. All I thought of was to get my foot free, for my leg felt as if it were being dragged from its socket."

Could Feel Death Clutching at Him.

Lee says he could fairly feel Death reach out and clutch at him. One fate had him fast by the foot, dragging him to doom; another thundered along behind him. If he wriggled from the grasp of the one, he was sure to fall under the pounding hoofs of the other. To right and left he could glimpse the legs of other horses about him, and knew his friends the cow-punchers were doing their best to save him. "But I knew, too," he says, "that help couldn't possibly come from them. The cattle seemed to have fallen away somewhere, but I still had to get loose from my horse. I kept tugging on my imprisoned foot, and suddenly there was a snap. The lace broke, my shoe came off and I was lying on the ground, quiet, motionless. Believe me, for a moment I was the most comfortable man in the world.

"The boys were around me, helping me up. I'll never forget the foreman, a young man with a fair skin, for the freckles stood out on his paper-white face like legal seals on a state document. They carried me to the ranch house, and when the reaction set in I was a pretty sick boy for a while. The foreman told me he never expected to see me come out alive."

And that brings us around to Lee's argument about high heels. You see, when they're on a puncher's boots, they're not for show, but to keep the foot from sliding through the stirrup and prevent just the sort of accident that almost had Lee up before the celestial bar of justice, cashing in his chips for a first payment on a harp.

The eyes of Heather shone like sapphires as Alan reached them. She danced around the fire, her wavy golden hair tossing about her deer to the west. They'll be combig hand to grasp Alan's in a fierce "All aboard for the caribou, Alan, my boy!" roared the giant. "Now shed those worries of yours! We'll oon have meat and skins for clothes, old kill-joy!"

Even the dogs grew excited at the feverish activity at the camp. Everything left behind was cached safely out of reach of wolverines. Then the impatient Napayo and Noel started with rifles and light packs, while John and Alan waited or the aid of the moonlight to make their way with the canoe and the heavy packs up the trail through the spruce and around the gorge. On up the river in the morning went the canoe, while Heather walked the shore with the dogs for company. In the middle of the afternoon the signs of caribou hair along the water line increased. The deer were passing in greater numbers, but now far upstream? That night the tired polers made camp late in the twilight but there were no signs of the two Indians ahead of them. At sunrise. Heather and Alan went back from the river to sweep the barrens with the glasses.

Rolling away before them reached the white moss hills studded with boulders. Alan handed the binoculars to Heather who focused them on the distant tundra while he held her rifle. As she stood like a statue slowly searching the skyline, his eyes feasted on the tumbled gold of her hair, in its wayward luxuriance, then followed the nape of her strong, round neck to the collar of her patched shirt and the skin coat worn over it. Tall and strong and straight she was in her tattered clothes, as she swept the tundra with the glasses, all unconscious of the silent tribute in the gray eyes of the man beside her. He wanted to touch her-touch the gold that curled at the nape of her neck; wanted to take her in his arms. there on the barren, and kiss the dimples in her brown cheeks.

As she turned and handed him the glasses, her violet eyes, deepened in hue by contrast with her tanned face, caught the warmth of his gaze, and she looked away as she said, "I see no deer."

"If you knew how you looked,

"Why do you say this to me, when you carry her picture? Oh, don't think I'm not sorry for you -leaving her as you did with your heart sad-"

He reached swiftly and placed his hand over her mouth. "I'm not sad, Heather!" he cried. "I'm glad -glad that I'm here with you-you! you hear that! Do you understand? It's you, Heather! Only you who count!"

"Why do you still carry her picture?"

"It went into the fire, long ago It's you, Heather! You I've been carrying in my heart!" He impulsively reached to take her in his arms, but she stepped away from him.

She shivered as if suddenly cold. "It's only because I'm here, with you, Alan. You're lonely-you only think you've forgotten her. If we live-get out of this terrible country, you'd be sorry, if I believed you're lonely. You'd only be sor-

Above them, splashing the water in all directions, four caribou plunged into the stream and started to cross. Antlered heads, backs, white rumps and tails out of water, the frightened deer drove across the current as if propelled by engines. Seizing his rifle, Alan dropped to a knee, while McCord steadied the boat with his pole, and fired as the deer reached the shallows. Again, as they left the water in a wild panic, he fired and two bucks wavered, stumbled and, reaching the beach,

He and Noel had already shot, dressed and skinned a number from the scattering bands and placed them in a cache upstream.

While the rest of the hungry hunters revelled in deer chops, Noel and the Naskapi roasted the head and tongue, the best part of the animal in the opinion of the Indians.

The following day in small bands the migrating caribou continued to cross the river headed for the protected valleys and wooded country far to the south. Stationed along the river shore at the well beaten paths leading down from the tundra, the hunters chose their deer, avoiding the old bulls whose white

As far as they could see with the glasses marched the battalions and regiments of the army of caribou, on their annual journey from the vast highlands west of Ungava Bay to the sheltered valleys of the south-one of the zoological phenomena of the world.

For hours the absorbed McCord, Alan and Heather watched the marching thousands, like great herds of cattle; bulls, cows and fauns, all moving into the breeze. Over them hovered circling ravens and a golden eagle hung high in the sky. On a hilltop off the flanks of the main herd, Alan's glasses revealed for a space the slinking shapes of a family of white wolves watching for a straggling faun or yearling

For, like ghosts, the wolves follow the migration south and, again north, in the spring. And nearer, from the graveled summit of a ridge, two shaggy animals with long bodies and bear-like heads, a pair of wolverines, the most hated beast in the north, viewed the spectacle.

Then for days the hunters toiled at the camp on the river, preparing and great antlers dis- the skins and meat to be taken were anxious to see the main herd which Napayo assured them was following these scattered bands-a compact mass of literally hundreds of thousands of traveling caribou, larger than the mythical buffalo herds that once roamed the western plains. So, leaving the Indians McCord, Alan and Heather went back on the barrens.

As they left the scrub of the valley and came out on the open tundra above, to gaze over the rolling moss-covered plain reaching away mile after mile to dim hills on the horizon, McCord gasped:

"Look at those deer!" In every direction bands of caribou dotted the white moss tundra, always moving into the light breeze that blew from the west. On the skyline of an adjacent rise in the barren a line of white-maned stags were standing enjoying the breeze that gave them relief from the pest what you say now. No, it's because of flies. Everywhere the amazed eyes of the three hunters gazed they met moving groups of deer. Does with their parti-colored fauns, yearlings, old stags, all moving up-wind as is their invariable habit. The three traveled on farther from the river watching the moving deer when suddenly, out of a little valley, rushed a band with their peculiar, high knee-actioned trot, snorting and grunting as they came "Hear the click of their hoofs, Heather?" cried Alan. "They al-ways make it when they travel."

"But, don't they see us? Why, they're going to run right over us! exclaimed the excited girl, as the band of deer approached.

The two men smiled at the girl's apprehension. Watch them when they get our scent. You'll see some antics!" replied Alan. Suddenly, as the band of approaching deer, whose eyesight is poor, crossed the scent of the hunters, they recoiled as if by word of command. Several young bucks rose on their hind legs and pranced back and forth, snorting loudly. The band scattered and retreated, then bunched again, and, led by a cow, finally charged across the tainted air that so frightened them, and were off over the tundra.

CHAPTER XIV

It was deep in September and each morning, now, a film of ice reached out from the shores of the bars where John and Alan still worked with sluice and shovel and pan while the others were busy sew ing hooded coats, breeches and leggings, sleeping-bags and smoketanned moccasins for use on the snow; pounding pemmican and storing it in bags, and stringing the bows of snowshoes with rawhide. The narrow, ten-foot toboggan sled with its wrapper of deer skin and the dog-harness, hung in a tree waiting for the long trail up the Koksoak with its load of 20-pound bags of vellow dust and nuggets and still more precious food for man and dog. Before the water grew too cold and silt ice stopped them, John and Alan worked on the eddies in the gorge and filled two more skin bags with large nuggets and flake gold.

"If Napayo does not show by tomorrow," said Alan," Noel and I'll take the dogs straight over the barren to the Koksoak and follow it up a day or two. The snow is beginning to pack. It's all right for the light load we'll carry.

"Yes, and run into what he's probably met-an ambush?" objected McCord. "No, let's hang together. When we start up the Koksoak, we'll travel like an infantry column with flank patrols out on the shores.

"I've felt it all along," burst out Heather. "It's McQueen! He's got poor Napayo! It's this terrible gold in the bags there! For two months, Dad, you've thought of nothing but You've been mad-crazed, about it! You want to load the sled down with it until there's not enough food to take us through! You'd kill the poor dogs to carry your gold!"

"Heather, Heather, girl," soothed McCord, "you're tired and worried, You don't mean what you say. We're going back all safe and sound Honey, and we have a fortune with us. McQueen'll never bother this outfit-if he's alive, but he's not. We'll never see hide or hair of Mc-Queen again. The Naskapi took care of him!

"The Naskapi may take care of us, too," she objected, winking back the tears her emotion had aroused. "No, Heather," said Alan.

Naskapi don't winter in the Koksoak valley, Napayo told me. They're probably in the timbered lake country, hundreds of miles south of here, by now."

They turned over the battered body, floating face down, and looked into the glazed, staring eyes of Napayo.

Monte Carlo Is Number Mad; Digits Are Picked at Random to Be Played on Wheel

The roulette wheel has made Monte Carlo perhaps the most number-conscious community in the world. People there have ever-alert eyes for numbers between one and thirty-six; they are always searching for portents, omens, indications from above which will reveal to them which number will be favored by fate at the casino that day. Generally, people bet on the day of the month, the number of the hotel room, or their age, writes David Ewen in the Globe Magazine.

Motor car licenses, when they have a striking repetition of one digit, will frequently inspire people to borrow that number for the day. When, during the last automobile sweepstake race in Monte Carlo, car No. 12 came in first there was a preponderance of betting on that number that evening at the casino; and by a curious coincidence No. 12 appeared frequently on every roulette wheel.

I have known people to sit quietly at the cafe sipping an aperitif when, suddenly, they perceived a number on the lapel of the waiter; without hesitation of a moment, they rose to their feet and rushed to the casino The two men and the girl watched to make a bet on the number.

One of the most amusing incidents in Monte Carlo concerns this whenever the number was below 36 half-empty.

Charles Dickens never went to school more than four years in all his life; yet he wrote 17 of the greatest novels in the Bnglish language. His childhood was sordid and pathetic. He was one of few men who retained the confidence of Ataturk to the end. He was a firm and exacting and, at times, ruthless ruler of the army, and is said to lack none of the traditional specifications of the iron man.

again MINNEAPOLIS-MOLINE steps ahead and OPENS THE OOOR to a revolutionary advance in farm tractors. OPENS THE DOOR and seats the farmer in a cab as comfortable as that of his modern automobile. Of course, the MM is more than a tractor with a cab — it's a "COMFORTRACTOR" with a cab as much a part of it as the cab on an automobile. There are comfortable cushion seats for two in the roomy air ventilated and temperature controlled cab with a hot water heater in cold weather and air circulation in hot weather. COMFORTABLY seated away from the dust and ele-ments, the farmer has at his command FIVE SPEEDS forward — from a crawl to 40 M. P. H. Gears can be shifted "on the go". The variable speed governor is controlled like a footfeed. Before the operator are the speedometer, ammeter, oil pressure gauge, and water temperature gauge. Almost any convenience he may name is at his command including such luxuries as a radio and a cigar lighter. A self-starter and powerful electric head lights obey his touch. For night work there is a powerful spot light controlled from the cab that can be turned in any direction. Naturally, POWER and UTILITY have not been sacrificed to modern conveniences, and the new Special DE LUXE Model MM Tractor promises performance records as astonishing as its comfort features. SAFETY, TOO, has been a watchword—the Cab is made of Steel. Safety glass has been used throughout. Vision is excellent.

Tested and proved for several years in the Mohave Desert and under many other tough farming conditions we offer you this modern MM tractor that has every modern feature of the modern automobiles. Windshield wipers, and an electric horn respond to a touch. Big Bendix "self-energizing" brakes and smooth action clutch are foot operated. See the heavy duty bumper; fenders, front and rear, and many other features you'll want to read all about. HIGH COMPRES-SION for using regular "leaded" gasoline is standard equipment for this 3-4 plow tractor with speed and power for every need on belt, power-take-off and on the drawbar in the field and on the highway.

You Must Carry Muff This

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

LADY, your muff! It will never do to forget your muff. Orders is orders and Dame Fashion will never forgive if you go costumed this winter sans an intriguing muff-using the word "intriguing" advisedly for the cunning muffs being turned out this season are just as whimsical and cunning as can be.

Not only are muffs decidedly "in" (nothing less than a riot of muffs) but designers are playing them up in every mood. Big muffs, little muffs, muffs of precious furs and muffs conjured of fabric, flowers or feathers, or "what have you." Some are flat and pillow-like, others round up in modish barrel type, and others-well, you never can tell what will happen in the guise of a muff as matters are going this season.

Take out the family album and copy grandma's favorite jacket-andmuff and more likely than not it will be an exact counterpart of the cunning "set" pictured to the right in the accompanying illustration. This winsome little ermine jacket is worn over the new crinoline hoop-skirted gown such as we of this generation | complement the costume in a dechad heretofore regarded as belonging to the daguerreotype age but now at fashion's command we are accepting it as "latest style" with high enthusiasm. The jacket fits prim and snug at the waistline, is cut away in front and has huge buttons of the ermine. The adorable muff speaks for itself.

The costume to the left affirms the continued style prestige of the black-and-white costume theme. This perfect black-with-white frock is the sort that will supply you with the lift of assurance so necessary

THE SIN OF COVETOUSNESS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:17; Luke 12: 3-21; I Timothy 6:6-10. GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not covet.—ixodus 20:17.

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts se-lected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education; used by

"The word of God is quick, and powerful, and sharper than any twoedged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart" (Heb. 4:12). These are the words that came to the writer's mind as he read the Scripture portions assigned for this lesson. He would fain have set aside his own comments and used this column to print the words from the Bible. If any reader of these lines purposes to read just these efforts to expound the truth, and not to read the Bible itself, let me plead with you to stop here and turn to God's Word. Let its powerful truth grip your soul and change

It seems peculiarly appropriate this lesson on covetousness should come right in the midst of our preparations for Christmas, for it directs our attention away from things to God, from outward preparation to the preparation of the heart, from greedy desire to true liberality of heart. Christmas may be literally "made over" for all of us if we receive its truth.

I. A Command (Exod. 20:17).

"Thou shalt not covet." This last commandment carries us "beyond the domain of civil magistracy into that intellectual realm of motive, desire, and thought, where God alone is Lord and Judge" (Dykes). It deals with the heart, out of which are all the issues of life. It reaches to the root of so much that is wicked and destructive in the world-the covetousness of man. The love of money makes men lie, steal, kill, cheat; in fact, "the whole realm of human interrelations is disorganized and broken up by the dishonoring of the tenth andment" (Morgan).

The yardstick of success in the world-for an individual, and organization, or a nation; yes, even for one? The purpose of the new muffs is many a church-is the possession of wealth, or property, or other "things." Write it then in large letters on the hearts and minds of our boys and girls, "A man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth" (v. 15). The one who was known to his friends (and to himself) as "a rich man" (v. 16), but whom God knew as a "fool" (v. 20), had more than he could use for himself. He had to build new and bigger barns, and could not see the "barns" that were already prepared, for, as Ambrose says, "Thou hast barns-the bosoms of the needy, the houses of widows, the mouths of orphans and infants." He was a fool who loved money for himself. "Godliness with contentment." As a minister of the gospel the writer would first remind himself that this was written by Paul to the preacher Timothy. Brethren in the ministry, let us not fall into the temptation and snare that comes with the love of money.

In this dizzy age when many are so intent on making money that they have no time for home and children, church and fellowship; when men neglect their responsibilities and duties as citizens to get gain; when any dirty business is all right if it produces a profit; when "for gold men betray their country, their friends, their God, their immortal souls" (Farrar)-yes, in this day let us remind men that "we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain that we can carry nothing out." Let us teach and exemplify in our lives the fact that the only real and worth while gain in life is 'godliness with contentment."

What to Eat and Why

C. Houston Goudiss Discusses the Child Who Has a Lagging Appetite; Tells What to Do for the Finicky Eater By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

THAS been well said that with the knowledge of nutrition now at the command of practically every mother, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Unfortunately, statistics show that possibly one-half of the children in this country are either underweight, undernourished or

Many factors may be responsible for this state of affairs.

Some children are fed incorrectly owing to the fact that ous tension to be observed in and the mother has not learned or worried over some uncomplet how to utilize low-cost foods ed school assignment, it may inthat are rich in protective terfere seriously with his appeminerals and vitamins in tite and consequently with his nuplace of those that are higher priced. In other families, the mothers do not realize the importance of providing a well-rounded diet for growing children. But the probhomemakers are more easily remedied, perhaps, than who plan a wellbalanced diet, but find that their child

Developing the Right Attitude young child a proper attitude toto be taught that they must eat enough food for their body requirements. It is part of the of an adult. training they should have in early childhood, so that they develop a willingness to eat what is put before them, to try new foods when offered, and to become increasingly independent in making a selection at mealtimes.

If a child has been properly conditioned in these respects from his earliest years, mothers will seldom find themselves faced with a "child who will not eat."

Problem of Anorexia

All normal children will, at times, exhibit a lack of appetite. We are not concerned here with occasions when a child who usually eats well feels no desire for food. Such lack of appetite may mean the beginning of a cold or some other illness and should be carefully investigated. Unfortunately, however, many mothers of young children are faced with a chronic lack of appetite in their children-a condition that physicians describe as anorexia. In or-der to correct this condition, it is necessary to understand its causes and to use wisdom in helping to remove them.

Find the Causes

When a child chronically lacks interest in food, the mother should set about systematically to learn the reasons why. Possibly the cooperation of your physician will be required, for sometimes obscure physical causes may be responsible, such as faulty elimination, diseased tonsils or teeth or some other focal infection. On the other hand, it frequently occurs that a changed attitude on the part of the mother in presenting food is all that is necessary to alter completely a child's attitude in regard to his meals.

It is interesting to note, however, that in studying a large group of children with poor appe-tites, one investigator found that 82 per cent of the children were more than average in height and narrow in body build.

Faulty Diet May Destroy Appetite Frequently, a child's lack of in-terest in food may be traced directly to poor choice among the foods presented to him. It has been repeatedly demonstrated, for example, that when the diet lacks vitamin B., appetite decreases, so that there is less desire for food of any kind. Then, too, when a child's diet contains too much fat, digestion may be delayed and this in turn may interfere with the appetite for the next meal. While some children thrive better with a between-meal feeding, in others it seems to destroy appetite for the meal that is to follow. And with some children, "fussiness" at mealtimes may be due to the fact that their diet contains too many concentrated foods, too few crisp raw ones that stimulate appetite.

Fatigue a Factor

Occasionally, a child does not eat well merely because he is too tired. Even though he obtains adequate sleep at night, too much or too prolonged exercise or excitement may result in fatigue during the day. If a child spends too much time with adults, overstimulation may be the result. And in the case of older children, their school work may be troubling

Another frequent cause of lag-ging appetite is the constant nerv-

the family income is small some households. If a child is allowed to become unhappy, angry, trition. With younger children, the fact that they are able to attract favorable attention from adults by refusing to eat often stimulates them to repeat their refusal as long as mother shows concern over their antics.

> Parents' Attitude Important This brings us to perhaps the most important factor in dealing with the young, finicky eater who those of mothers eats sparingly and whose dislikes usually far outnumber his likes. Such a child must be encouraged tactfully to eat a wide variety of lacks interest in, or even refuses foods, but mothers must not be over-solicitous, nor must they become obviously angry or irritated when the child refuses food. Scolding, punishment and threats Strange as it may seem, such of punishment should be avoided, difficulties often arise because a as they defeat their purpose. Remother fails to give the necessary member, too, that precept is a consideration to developing in the powerful teacher, and that a child's dislike for certain foods ward food. Some children need may have been instilled by a none-too-guardedly expressed dislike of a similar food on the part

> Some Helpful Hints It may be necessary for the entire family to live more quietly, in order to give the finicky eater a chance to be quiet and relaxed. There must be regularity of meals and mealtimes must be peaceful. Keep the table conversation general and impersonal in character before older children. See to it that younger ones eat by them-

Often a short rest before meals will help a child to become relaxed completely. And frequently, a new method of presenting foods will result in a changed attitude on the part of the child.

Foods for young children should not be seasoned too highly. In general, condiments should be avoided. Strong-flavored vegetables, as a rule, are not well liked, and if introduced in the young child's diet should be combined with some familiar, and mild-tastkeep the pieces large enough so that the child can identify what he is eating. Include a crisp food in each meal.

Finally, remember that a child's eating habits cannot be changed overnight. Changes should be introduced gradually, so that he is scarcely aware of what is going on.
