WINTER CLEANING TIME

By Vera R. Martin

With the coming of winter comes cleaning problems. Not only does the proverbial house cleaning take place, but yards and premises should likewise be cleaned.

Clean up, rake up, brush up, and mend up. These are some of the problems which Farm Security families are solving at the present time.

Perhaps your yard is littered with cans, bottles, or old pieces of lumber. Then, let's get out the wheel barrow or wagon and haul them away. These pieces of machinery which have remained in the yard year after year should be removed and stored behind the barn or out of sight. Your neighbors will probably appreciate the removal of these unnecessary articles if they are within the neighbors' line of vision.

Of course, there's the problem of weeds. Weeds have always and will always be with us unless we do something about it. True, the freeze killed them, but the seeds will be scattered and the weeds not only lend an unsightly appearance but also form a breeding place for insects and fungus pests. Consequently, yards and garden spots should be cleared of weeds now.

There's coal to be bought. When it is purchased, place it, along with your pile, to the back of the house and out of sight of the yard entrance. Even though it may take a few more steps to reach it, the neat appearance will be worth your time and trouble.

That broken down fence should be mended, or perhaps a little attention given to that sagging gate would improve the looks of the entire place. Such repairs usually cost nothing and require only a small amount of time.

If there are low places in your yard where water stands when it rains, fill them in before winter begins in earnest. The looks of your yard will not only be improved, but the sanitation will also be improved.

TIPS to Gardeners

Making the Garden Pay

VEGETABLE gardens are grown to provide fresher, more nourishing food for the family, and to conserve on food bills. Therefore, crops must be wisely chosen and systematically planted.

According to Walter H. Nixon, seed breeding vegetable expert, the most important vegetables considered both for food value and garden space required are beans, cabbage, carrots, beets, squash, tomatoes, onions, peas and spinach.

To get the most from garden space, plant two crops of spinach, one in early spring, the other in late fall. Plant chinese cabbage, carrots, beets and parsnips in fall in space occupied earlier by beans, radishes and peas.

Plant bush beans and beets on both sides of tomato rows. When tomatoes need the space, those earlier crops will have been pulled and used.

Corn can be worked into the garden plan even though there is not much space. Plant spinach or beets or onions between rows of slower-growing corn. Then grow pole beans (cornfield beans) to climb on the corn stalks.

Shelterbelt plantings should show almost 100% survival this year, with the fine season now in the ground. Farmers should see that their applications are in now, in order to take advantage of the unusually good planting condition.

The cold weather is welcome this month, as in several winters past a warm spell in January started sap in trees, with a later freeze killing the trees. With plenty of moisture already in the ground, normal cold for the rest of the winter means the right kind of spring this year.

It is claimed that there are more prospective automobile buyers now in the market than at any other time in recent years. If this is true, prosperity should be on the way back, for the automobile market has always been the best barometer of business conditions. The new car buyer gets than ever before. Of course, as in recent years, some of the "improvements" are only gadgets that time will show to be practically worthless, but there are many things that will remain as permanent improvements on future cars.

The American Medical Association is in trouble with the New Deal and could use some favorable publicity. A little less observance of the Association's stone-age ethics forbidding doctors to advertise might stand them in good stead right now. With 15 million people in the United States who do not patronize medical doctors, depending upon patent medicine, faith cures, etc.; and thousands of good physicians who do not belong to the association, it is about time for a little light on the subject. Most of the state laws on medical practice have been fostered by the association, with little regard for other systems of healing, which may or may not be beneficial to the public at large. The AMA has an opportunity to be of service to humanity, but such service can be effectively rendered only by a program of fullest publicity of its aims and practices.

Shelterbelt Information for Farmers

The following general information regarding the plan of shelterbelt planting is furnished The News by Roy B. Morgan, of the U. S. forest service, in charge of this section:

Purpose of shelterbelt plantings.
(1) Primarily, to protect soil from wind erosion. (2) To protect growing crops, particularly in early spring when they are subject to being blown out or badly damaged by high winds. (3) To conserve soil moisture. (4) To furnish protection for livestock. (5) To furnish food and cover for insectivorous and upland game birds. (6) In later years, to supply fuel, posts and other wood products. (7) To protect and beautify the farm home and the community, and in other ways to contribute to the general well-being of the region.

In order to secure the most from the planting and to assure its success, certain requirements must be observed, most important of which are:

(1) LOCATION. Plantings will be located where, in the opinion of the Forest Service and the landowner, they will give maximum protection to the farm.

(2) SIZE OF BELTS. All belts will consist of 10 rows, 1 or 2 shrub rows and 8 or 9 tree rows, except in very unusual cases. This number of rows is needed to prevent holes in the belt through the loss of one or two species, to provide both quick growth and permanent trees, to furnish some supplies such as posts and fuel, to conserve moisture by forming a forest cover within the belt, to furnish a wider range of food for game birds, and to prevent soil drifting into the belt as it does into a fence row of shinnery.

(3) SOIL. Plantings will not be made where it is determined that the soil is not suitable for tree growth.

(4) TREES AND PLANTING. The trees will be furnished and planted by the Forest Service without charge. After planting the trees will become the property of the landowner. However, the landowner must agree not to sell or remove the young trees.

(5) CARE AND PROTECTION. The landowner agrees to exclude all livestock from the planted area. If fencing is necessary, the landowner will furnish the fencing materials required.

(6) GROUND PREPARATION FOR PLANTING. The landowner must prepare the ground for planting in a manner acceptable to the Forest Service.

(7) CULTIVATION. Proper cultivation is one of the most important operations necessary toward successfully establishing and growing trees. Without good cultivation the planting will probably be a failure. Since the trees become the property of the landowner after planting, it will be his responsibility to do this necessary cultivating.

parents with a greater responsibility resting on them. Parents are responsible for bringing children in the home and must teach them to meet life humbly. Pre-school children should be allowed to mingle with others of their own age, supervised by a trained leader with mothers assisting. Children from 6 to 13 create a puzzling condition and should be taught to do what's best, regardless of their own decisions. Teach them cause and effect for reasoning. Children demand fair play. PETER DENIES HIS LORD

LESSON TEXT—Luke 22:31, 32, 54-62. GOLDEN TEXT—Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.—1 Corinthians 10:12.

One of the most heartbreaking experiences we have as Christians is to find that one in whom we have had every confidence as a true and faithful follower of the Lord, has denied Him by going out into almost unbelievable sin...

Lest any unbeliever who reads this begin to gloat over the failures of Christians, let him be reminded now of his own sin which needs his attention, and of the fact that though Peter fell, he arose again to victory and usefulness...

I. Sifted but Not Destroyed (vv. 31, 32).

Satan, who is a far more powerful spiritual being than most folk think, is actively interested in tempting the Christian. He uses many clever devices. Although he is not possessed of divine powers, he does have supernatural cunning...

II. Self-assurance and Disgraceful Failure (vv. 33, 34, 54-60).

Peter was sure of himself and of his consecration to the Lord. A man who stands in that place is in grave danger. It is not long before we find Peter, apparently presuming on his own ability to stand fast...

The denials made by Peter seem almost unbelievable in the life of one who had been in immediate fellowship with the Lord and who had seen His glory. We have here a revelation of the fact that "the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked; who can know it?" (Jer. 17:9)...

III. The Look of Love and a Broken Heart (vv. 61, 62).

What was in the look of Jesus is perhaps best expressed by Alexander Maclaren: "It spoke of Christ's knowledge, of Christ's pain, of Christ's love."

The backslider needs first of all to realize that the Lord knows all about his denials and sin. He has been hiding things from his family and friends, denying accusations, trying to cover up his guilt...

The second thing to be realized is that he has added to the pain and sorrow of his Lord. For a believer to turn away from Him is no light matter, to be casually dealt with. He needs to be deeply conscious of the wounding of the heart of the Lord, as well as of the damage done to God's people and His cause in the earth.

But above all it was a look of love. The Lord deals in tenderness with the backslider. While he never can or will condone sin, He loves the sinner, and especially does He love the one who belongs to Him out who has gone astray. What a gracious Lord we do have!

CORN AND ALFALFA BEST LAMB RATION

May Need No Supplement if Both Feeds Are Good.

By W. E. Morris, Extension Animal Husbandman, University Farm, St. Paul, WNU Service.

Corn and alfalfa will make about the most profitable ration the lamb feeder can provide for his flock this winter. If both feeds are of good quality, it is doubtful, at present prices, that a supplement of any kind need be fed.

Whole shelled corn has been found a most suitable grain ration. When on full feed, lambs weighing from 60 to 85 pounds should eat from one and one-half to two pounds of grain per head daily, including any supplement provided, and from one and one-fourth to one and one-half pounds of hay. If a common roughage is used, such as prairie hay, a protein supplement should be fed at the rate of one pound daily to each five lambs...

Lambs should gain at least one-third of a pound daily, making a gain of 25 to 30 pounds in 75 to 100 days of feeding. An efficient feeder will have his lambs fat enough to kill out well and suitable to the packer in that period of time. Slightly above 90 pounds is a good weight to begin marketing lambs, if they are fat.

Experiments show that it is best to feed all the grain lambs will clean up in about 20 minutes' time twice a day. Hay also is best fed twice daily. The hay should be fed after the lambs have eaten their grain.

Mentions Some Causes Of Soft Shelled Eggs

A number of things may cause hens to lay soft shelled eggs, among which are fright, close inbreeding, and diseases like fowl pox, coccidiosis, and laryngotracheitis.

Hens that are too fat may lay soft shelled eggs, the egg simply slipping through layers of fat too quickly to allow the shell to form. Excessive feeding of mangels or cabbage which causes looseness of the bowels may result in the appearance of many poor shelled eggs. But the chief cause of soft shelled eggs, according to an authority in the Missouri Farmer, is a low assimilation of lime by the layers. The lime may be available in the form of oystershell and still this will happen. The oystershell may become covered with dirt and hence be unappetizing, or vitamin D may be deficient which does not allow a proper assimilation. It is a good plan to keep the oystershell fresh, stir it daily or sprinkle some over the mash so as to stimulate consumption, and then make sure that the laying mash contains at least 2 per cent cod liver oil so as to insure a proper supply of vitamin D. Hard grit should also be available at all times.

It is important to guard against soft shelled eggs because it encourages the egg-eating habit which is so expensive when eggs are high in price.

Soy Bean Hay for Horses

If soy bean hay is well-cured, free from mold and dust, and was cut before the beans hardened too much, it may be fed to horses, says A. L. Harvey, division of animal and poultry husbandry, University Farm, St. Paul. Horses can be fed about as much soy bean hay as they will eat daily. When feeding the beans, it is best to grind or chop them and give them with other feeds. From one to two pounds of the beans can be fed in this manner to each horse per day.

Winter Greens for Poultry

Alfalfa hay, lespedeza, and clover hay make good greens for winter use provided they are so cured as to retain their green color. Alfalfa leaf meal, if a bright green color, makes a satisfactory green feed, but should not constitute more than 10 per cent of the mash, says a North Carolina Agricultural college authority. Where the hays are used, they should be fed in racks as the birds will eat only the leaves and the stems can then be thrown in the litter. Of the feed mentioned, green alfalfa hay is the most satisfactory.

'Red' Mites Attack Poultry

Mites are thieves that really do come in the night. Hidden away in cracks and crevices during the day, they steal forth and crawl over the hen's body when she goes to roost at night to feast upon her blood until their tiny bodies are distended and red in color, which doubtless gave them their name, "red" mite. Their bodies filled with warm blood, they stream back to their crevices where they carry out nature's plan of multiplication and growth.

C. Houston Goudiss Reports Some Current Knowledge of Vitamin G, a Substance Essential to Growth and Normal Nutrition

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

A NUMBER of the vitamins have been discussed in these columns from time to time. The latest findings of nutritional science have been related, together with suggestions made by outstanding authorities concerning the amounts of different vitamins required to help maintain top health.

So far vitamin G has not been discussed specifically. Yet a knowledge of some of the functions and sources of this vitamin should be possessed by every homemaker. For eminent authorities are of the opinion that it has a far-reaching influence upon health.

Possible Effects on Longevity

The avowed objectives of modern nutritional scientists are to help humanity to enjoy happier, healthier and longer lives. If any one vitamin could be said to have more influence than any other on longevity, the distinction most certainly would be accorded—so far as present knowledge is concerned—to vitamin G. Extensive laboratory experiments by investigators who are paramount in their field seem to indicate that vitamin G has a pronounced effect upon the maintenance of health and vigor at all ages. It has been demonstrated with experimental animals that a diet containing more vitamin G than is required for normal growth resulted in greater vigor, a postponement of the onset of senility and a comparatively short period of the mental and physical infirmities we usually associate with old age.

Effect on Digestion and Nerves

Laboratory experiments have also indicated that when there is a shortage of vitamin G, digestion is usually impaired. In this respect, a shortage of vitamin G has a slightly different effect than a deficiency of vitamin B. A definite lack of vitamin B causes an abrupt and complete loss of appetite. Withholding vitamin G appears to affect the desire for food, so that experimental animals consume only about two-thirds as much as they would normally take. A form of nervous depression may occur when the diet is low in vitamin G for any protracted length of time. Other unfortunate consequences may be a decline in the health of the skin. Studies with animals indicated that when the vitamin was withheld, not only did a loss of weight occur, but there were other signs of nutritional failure. These included an inflammation of the mouth, a loss of hair, a thickening and in some cases, a cracking and scaling, of the skin.

Vitamin G and Healthy Eyes

Studies with a variety of experimental animals resulted in the startling disclosure that on diets lacking vitamin G the health of the eyes was distinctly affected. Not only was there a loss of hair around the eyes, but the eyeball developed a whitish appearance which was determined to be cataract. At present, scientists are not prepared to say whether these laboratory findings may be confirmed clinically. But certainly when we know that in many ways, the food requirements of experimental animals are comparable to those in man, it would be distinctly to our advantage to make sure that we do not lack for adequate amounts of vitamin G.

Sources of Vitamin G

Because vitamin G is closely associated with vitamin B, some homemakers occasionally confuse

AROUND THE HOUSE

Fringed Celery.—Celery looks much more attractive on the table when fringed. To fringe, cut celery into two inch lengths. Fringe each stalk within a quarter of an inch from the center. Put into ice water to which a slice of lemon has been added and let stand until ends are curled.

When to Add Salt.—Salt should never be added to stews, soups and boiled meats until after they're cooked. If put in at first it toughens the fiber of the meat and takes out the juices.

Olive Oil Substitute.—Melted butter is a good substitute for olive oil in salad dressing.

Baking Potatoes.—Potatoes will bake more quickly if, after peeling, they are wiped dry and smeared over with dripping before being put in the oven.

Milk, Meat, Eggs, Greens

The richest sources of vitamin G are the concentrates of yeast, yeast extract and wheat germ. Almost equally well supplied with this vitamin are liver and kidney. Muscle cuts of meat contain vitamin G, but in lesser amounts than liver and kidney.

The vitamin is also found in young green plants, and it is interesting to note that the vitamin is formed during the growth of the plant and decreases with maturity. The amount of the vitamin has been found to vary with different parts of the same plant. In broccoli, the flower buds are said to contain only half as much as the leaves, while the stems contain even less. Among the greens,

Questions Answered

Mrs. G. M. L.—The term, water balance, about which you inquired is used to describe the situation in which the available water from food, beverages, and that manufactured in the body equals that of the water excreted or lost from the body. It is to help keep the body in water balance that the daily diet must contain adequate amounts of fluids.

E. G. M. Jr.—Yes, it is true that approximately one-third of the protein required during infancy is stored by the child's body to take care of growth and development. As children grow older, the amount of protein stored for growth gradually decreases until they become adults.

HOW to SEW

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

VALANCE BOARD OVER WINDOWS

Curtaining a Group of Windows

DEAR MRS. SPEARS: I want to tell you how much practical help I have received from both of your books. I have been sewing for years but these books have explained many points that I never understood before. I am now planning new draperies to dress my living room up a bit. One group of three windows is especially difficult as the davenport has to be placed in front of them. Can you give me a suggestion? I think I would like a plain valance without gathers or pleats across the top. How should this be made and hung? I have just made a beige slipcover for the davenport with green piping and bands.—A. D. W.

I would use plain cream colored glass curtains for all three windows and overdrapes at the ends only. A striped material in tones of tan and green and blue would be nice for the draperies with a narrow fringe edging in green and tan or green and blue. A valance board at the top of the windows is essential when a plain valance is used. This board should be four inches wide and 1/2 inch thick. It is screwed in place with L brackets. Ordinary metal curtain rods are placed just under it for the glass curtains and side drapes. The plain valance should be long enough to fit around the ends of the board and should be about six inches deep finished. It should be stiffened with an interlining of crinoline, and an allowance should be made at the top for a tuck or fold to be tacked to the board as shown. Be sure to save this lesson as it is not in either of the books offered below.

THE ADVENTURES OF OZZIE

His Bluff Is Called

Two Jobs for January
By T. C. RICHARDSON, Secretary
Breeder-Feeder Association

The home orchard and the family garden mean more in good eating good health, and the economy of good living, than any other acre on the farm. Those who say "I can buy it cheaper than I can raise it" usually do without most of the fresh fruits and vegetables which tantalize the appetite and relieve the monotony of the menu. No housewife thinks she can "set a good table" without the products of orchard and garden, and if it isn't raised at home it is quite likely to be too rare on the menu for a healthy diet.

In the southwest orchards can be planted up to April in some sections, but generally speaking, February planting is preferable. If it is to be planted this year the trees and vines must be ordered and the ground prepared immediately. There is no part of the Southwest in which berries, grapes, or tree fruits, or all of them cannot be grown if the right sorts are chosen and proper attention given to planting and care afterward.

For the small cost of $9 we have a home orchard which, though only three years old, produced fruit worth $35 in 1938 and I filled my pantry shelves with 147 quarts besides having fresh fruit five months," writes Mrs. B. F. Johnson, of Van Zandt county, Texas. Similar letters from all over Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana and Oklahoma are in the hands of the writer, many of them from tenants who grow their own fruit on rented farms.

"It takes too long for fruit to come into bearing," say the procrastinators. "You're going to spend the time anyway," retort the others, "so why not have something to look forward to while time passes?"

As a matter of fact, berries bear the second year and good nursery trees of peaches and plums the third year. Grape cuttings rooted this spring will fruit two years from now while rooted vines from the nursery will bear next year.

"You'll never eat the fruit from the trees you are planting," said a visitor to E. L. Brown, when planting 100 peach trees on his 78th birthday last year. "Trees were planted for me before I was born," was his reply. Somebody planted for us all, or we would be eating no fruit.

The orchard and vineyard already planted requires attention during the dormant period in the matter of pruning and spraying for scale insects. Spraying for the insects which attack the fruit begins at blooming time, and fungous diseases call for still other sprays during the summer. Every state has a horticultural specialist who will supply specific spray information on the different fruits and their pests, for his particular state. The county and home demonstration agents will gladly furnish reliable information on every phase of home orcharding, and will cooperate in every way possible with farm families who need and desire such information.

Local nurserymen are always willing to give information on adapted varieties in their territory, and a visit to the nursery permits the customer to see the kind of trees and plants he is getting. It has the further advantage that they can be immediately planted after digging or removing from the heel-yard, though trees properly wrapped may be safely shipped any distance if the customer gives them good treatment immediately on their receipt. That means either planting where they are to stay or "heeling in" well so that the roots cannot dry out until planting.

A generation ago no farm was without its orchard. There is a strong movement back to home orchards and good eating now. Get in the swim.

OFFICIAL PUBLICATIONS

The best check the taxpayers of Texas have on their duly elected officers is the publication of the official proceedings of such officers in the newspapers. Many states have such publication laws and government is benefited greatly by the arrangement. The cost is small and the taxpayers are more than willing to pay it in order to get the information, in addition to being entitled to it. Without the publication of the proceedings of our spending officers, the people have no knowledge and therefore no check. The necessity of publication itself has a wholesome influence on officials and expenditures, more than saving the cost of giving information to all readers. This also discourages unauthorized spending and has a tendency of keeping officers who overstep their authority within lawful bounds.—Capital News.

A BETTER AVERAGE

The ready retort is sometimes useful in holding one's own. It is often far more effective than long-winded argument or straight denial. There's the story of the tough ball player who swung at two strikes and watched the next one go by. "Strike three," right-handed the ump.

"Yeh, missed that one," stormed the tough guy.

"Not as much as you missed the first two," grinned back the ump, and the stands wondered why Harrigan quit his beefing and walked so meekly to the bench.

Men are disturbed not by things themselves, but by their opinions or thoughts concerning those things.—Epicurus.

Field and Garden

By J. Lee Brown
Landscape Architect
Oklahoma A. and M. College

"How did you happen to select 'Field and Garden' as the title of this column?"

The question was put to me by a friend who had just finished reading last week's column. I countered with another question.

"Didn't I see some plants of buckbrush in your garden the other day?"

He replied in the affirmative, so I asked him where he had gotten them.

"I bought them from a nursery, under the name of Symphoricarpos vulgaris, but they grow along the fence rows and in the margins of woodlands all over Oklahoma."

"Why did you select buckbrush instead of something else?" I asked.

"I had noticed how attractive it is along the fences when the red berries come out in the fall, so I wanted to try it in my garden."

"There you are," I said. "You wanted to bring the out-of-doors into your garden. That's just what I want to do in the column 'Field and Garden.'"

"A few days ago I went for a trip in southeastern Oklahoma. On river bottom soil I walked among straight trunks of sweet gum (Liquidambar styraciflua) and holly (Ilex opaca) and watched the sunlight filter down through the forest canopy onto the floor of dry leaves. The scene had an atmosphere of dignity and repose which I longed to bring into my own backyard.

"Yesterday afternoon I went for a drive from Stillwater to Lake Blackwell. I arrived just in time to see the colors of sunset spread out over the placid surface of the water. Knowing I couldn't have a lake in my garden, I wished that I could build my home by the lake where I could sit on the back step and watch the sunset over the water. I wanted to bring this spirit of quietude into my home. This desire gives me my cue for the column, 'Field and Garden.' I want to bring the spirit of the field into the garden."

My friend thought this over for several seconds before replying.

"You know, I believe there's something to your idea. I've been spending my spare time trying to grow better roses and zinnias than my neighbor. He admits that I have the best of him in this effort, but I've secretly wondered what there is about his garden that mine doesn't have. I think I know the answer now. While I've been pruning and cultivating my roses, he has been going for long walks in the fields and woods. Somehow he seems to have captured the spirit of nature, and has planted it in his garden along with his trees and shrubs."

"Mr. Smith, do you think the bride's pledge of 'obey' should be left out of the marriage ceremony?"

"Well, leaving it in never seemed to bother my wife any."

"I'm glad the sky is painted blue; And the earth is painted green; And such a lot of nice fresh air All sandwiched in between."

THE TRUTH

Sitting in a concert hall waiting for the concert to begin, a man seeing a little boy in front of him looking at his watch, bent forward and asked, "Does it tell the time?"

"No," answered the little boy, "you have to look at it."

A middle aged woman lost her balance and fell out of a window into a garbage can. A Chinaman passing remarked: "Americans were wasteful. That woman good for ten years yet."
