WASHINGTON By Paul Mallon

Repeat— This prohibition discord among Democrats started at the New York Congressional conference with Mr. Roosevelt. Someone asked how repeal was getting along. Democratic Floor Leader Robinson replied it was progressing nicely along the lines he approved. That included a constitutional election against the saloon, constitutional protection to dry state legislatures.

Whisperer Speaker Garner emitted a few cowboy equivalents of Gosh darn. He asserted that was the Republican platform instead of the straight-out repeal promised by the Democrats.

The most important thing about the Robinson-Garner scene in New York was that President-elect Roosevelt said nothing. Some present expected him to step in and settle the dispute by siding either with Robinson or Garner. His silence will result in a certain split. He had given no cue to Senate Democrats publicly or privately early this week.

The way it is scheduled to come out now is that the senate will adopt the Robinson plan and the House will make another stab at substituting the Garner plan. Neither will pass finally until the new congress comes in unless the House runs out on Garner and supports Robinson. That is possible but not probable.

Garner's hold on the House is weakening on the inside. Members realize they are under his thumb for only about six weeks more. He can not do anything to them as Vice-President.

Quite a substantial number of Roosevelt supporters have weakened in their fidelity during the last ten days. That group includes a prominent liberal on the United States Supreme Court, and two Democratic leaders in Congress. These boys wanted action. They are not getting it and are impatient. They point to Mr. Roosevelt's refusal to lead the way on foreign debts and budget balancing taxes. They thought the New York Congressional conference a complete flop. From these inside developments it is being apparent that the Roosevelt official honeymoon may last no longer than Mr. Hoover's did four years ago.

Mr. Roosevelt will have strong doubts about the advisability of trying to lead when he has no authority to carry out his leadership. He realizes the present President would veto some measures upon which he would like to use leadership, beer, the Allotment Plan, etc. He thinks it might be far wiser to wait until March 4 (now only about six weeks off) and then he will be in a position to assert himself.

That word is being passed

The committee in charge of distribution of federal relief work funds loaned this county left 1 p. m. Saturday for Sweetwater where it would make bond and receive the January and February allotments for Howard county.

Friends of Congressman McDuffie say Garner's close association has hurt his candidacy for leadership. Some are afraid Garner would try to run the House through McDuffie.

That might not be a bad idea.

Oil Well Afire In Conroe Field Baffles Firemen

HOUSTON (AP)—Fire fighters battling the flaming Standard of Kansas No. 1 Madelay, Conroe oil field, faced new difficulties Saturday when the well began making about 2,000 barrels of oil daily.

Efforts to extinguish fire have proven unsuccessful and the well is cratering badly. It has swallowed the derrick and rig.

Sterling Not To Take Part In Ma's Inaugural Jan. 17

AUSTIN (AP)—Governor Sterling, who will retire from office Tuesday noon, said Saturday he would not participate in the inaugural ceremonies of his successor, Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson.

"Since a member of the senate has taken it upon himself to give out to the press that I will not participate, you may take that as an answer," the governor told Senator Parr, Benavides, and Representative Walker, Vernon, and Jones, Jourdanton, a statement read in the house said. It was signed by those members.

Cotton Consumed During December Given By Bureau

Airmail Educational Campaign To Be Waged Intensively Here Soon

An educational campaign for increased patronage of airmail which had its inception recently in Phoenix, Arizona, will be inaugurated here soon.

For the present, pending appointment of new standing committees for the Chamber of Commerce little active work is being done. Several merchants have consented to handle airmail stamps as a courtesy to the public.

Jesse Maxwell, American Airways representative, has pledged cooperation in any drive to increase patronage. Rumors that there was likelihood that the Dallas-Los Angeles air line would be abandoned provoked the move for more airmail patronage along the route followed by the line. Although fears have since been largely dispelled, it will have no effect on the planned campaign, it was thought.

Charity Benefits From Dance Held At Casino Friday

Clothing, groceries, shoes, cash, in generous quantities replenished the saddy depleted supply on hand for distribution to needy people of the city because members of the Women's Auxiliary to the local post of the American Legion gave a dance at the Casino Friday night.

One of the largest crowds that has attended a public dance here in several years was on hand, and each couple brought something for use by Mrs. F. C. Scott, city-county welfare worker, as the price of admission.

Mrs. Scott was overjoyed, because Saturday morning there are seven families in town most of whose members were ill with influenza, and suffering for lack of food. If the Auxiliary had not collected a fresh supply Friday night these families could not have been cared for.

Clyde Miller donated use of the hall. The Vagabonds furnished music for approximately 200 couples. Groceries collected were valued at more than $50 exclusive of 125 cans of food donated by the American Legion and 50 cans donated by a woman residing northwest of town.

Three large boxes of good shoes, numbering about 50 pairs; a total of nearly 500 garments, including two dozen brand new ones; $26 in cash; checks for 35 loaves of bread from one bakery and a dozen loaves from another were all included in the receipts of the dance. Officials of the auxiliary plan to give another dance of this kind next month.

Harold Lloyd Comes To Ritz Theatre Friday In 'Movie Crazy'

Star Relates First Effort In Movie Role

Veteran Comedian Worked With Hal Roach In Old Universal Days

The idea back of Harold Lloyd's adoption of the horned rimmed spectacles and his development into the big gag and goggle man, has remained somewhat of a mystery to most followers of motion pictures. But in the course of his visit to New York Times just before he left for the West Coast to begin work on "Movie Crazy" with Constance Cummings, which comes Friday and Saturday to the Ritz Theatre, the young comedian disclosed the real story.

Motion picture legend has related various versions of this incident, which resulted in the popularization of tortoise shell spectacles throughout the world, but the thought which led Lloyd to their establishment as one of the outstanding trademarks of filmdom dates back to when he was making what were then known as the "Lonesome Lake" comedies.

Ambition Stirred

"To relate the real story, I will have to go back to the time when I virtually started in motion pictures," avers Lloyd. "I began as an extra on the old Universal lot, and while working there in a picture called 'Samson and Delilah,' I met Hal Roach. Hal, like myself, was not contented to remain an extra but had ambitions to do 'bigger and better things.'

"We made a couple of pictures, when I elected to devote all my time to the comedies. Roach and I talked the situation all over and he decided to star me in a series of one reel comedies. We cast about for a character and finally settled on a nondescript one which we called 'Willie Work.' I used a grossly exaggerated makeup which was the custom in those days, nearly fifteen years ago.

New Character

"I was not satisfied with this character, however, and shifted to one which we named 'Lonesome Luke.' My makeup for this character consisted of two little dots of moustache, placed on either of the nostrils; tight fitting coat and trousers, a small hat which fit atop my head, and shoes that were somewhat large for me. For several years these comedies were increasing in favor, but I was not thoroughly satisfied with my characterization. I used to sit in theaters, and get absolutely no reaction to myself. I felt my character was giving nothing off, other than a few laughs. I had ambitions to be individual, but was stumped as to just how to attain it. I knew I wanted a more human character, one we might see on the streets any time and anywhere.

"One night I attended a performance of a Los Angeles Stock company. I can not even recall the name of the show. But in the cast was a person who wore horned rimmed spectacles. His was not an exaggerated character, but a most natural one. There dawned on me then the idea of adopting the horned rims as part of my makeup and going away with the moustache and the other accoutrements of Lonesome Luke.

"A few days later, I talked over with Roach the possibilities of my changing the Lonesome Luke character.

"He gave me little encouragement. 'I don't think Pathe will stand for it,' I recall him saying. They have spent a lot of money advertising Lonesome Luke and I am sure they will want you to continue in the character.'

Demanding Risks

"I had fully made up my mind that I was not going to continue it, and my ultimatum to Roach was that I was either to be permitted the horned rimmed make-up, or quit comedies entirely. I had considerable dramatic training before I took up comedies, and felt I could do just as well in that field.

"He decided to go to New York to talk the matter over with Pathe. The officials of our distributing organization finally agreed, but with the provision that if I didn't make good, I was to go back to the Lonesome Luke.

"For about the first fifteen pictures, I was on my own, directing writing the story and figuring the gags, and I think I proved my case in that time. But I had considerable trouble getting my rims adjusted. The first pair I selected was entirely too heavy. They killed my expression almost completely.

"Then I shifted to a pair that was too big. They jumped up over the eyebrows, and interfered with my facial work. I kept experimenting, however, until finally I hit on a pair that was just exactly what I thought I needed. I have changed them but very little since, although now I have them made expressly for me."

Mrs. J. W. Buller, of Fort Worth, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. F. L. Danner.

Joe E. Brown Marathon Swimmer Who Can't Swim In Ritz Picture This Week, 'You Said A Mouthful'

Joe E. Brown is coming to town. Coming to the Ritz Theatre next Tuesday and Wednesday in the First National picture, "You Said A Mouthful."

And what a mouthful. He's a marathon swimmer who can't swim! According to advance Hollywood reports, this wide aperture screen favorite, outdoors in hilarity even his recent laugh hits, "The Tenderfoot" and "Fireman, Save My Child."

Mistaken for a swimming champion, Joe is forced into a marathon race through his love for a beautiful girl and his own inability to explain matters. In deadly fear of the water, and never having tried to swim before except to practice the strokes on dry land, he musters up courage to start when he is presented with what he believes to be a non-sinkable bathing suit. After a series of hilarious incidents in which he is nearly drowned, he surprises himself, and puts one over on his opponent, by winning the race and becoming a hero.

Joe is supported by an excep-

'Cabin In The Cotton' Opens Today At Ritz

Barthelmess In Leading Role For Romance Of South

The South, grown-up and modernized, but still adhering to its old romantic color and living with its gallant traditions, is the background for the epic story of "The Cabin in the Cotton." Richard Barthelmess' latest First National film which comes to the Ritz Theatre today and Monday.

In the South of today, in the planter, the share-cropper, the poor white and the negro, Harry Harrison Kroll, who wrote the novel, and Paul Green—Pulitzer prize winner—who made the screen adaptation, have found a source of new and vital story material.

Typically American, the lives of these people are filled with incidents little known and still less understood by their Eastern, Northern and Western brothers.

The class distinction, which is still such a vital part of Southern tradition, is shown in the love of the young "poor white" played by Barthelmess for the two girls, one a poor white like himself, and the other a planter's daughter. His position in being placed between the two conflicting classes provides not only a novel romantic interest, but also the basis for a surge of events which makes the picture an innovation in film story material.

As novel and successful as most Barthelmess pictures have been to date, "The Cabin in the Cotton" is acclaimed as the greatest portrayal he has given in years, and topping in general interest his more recent "Dawn Patrol" and "Alias The Doctor" which have done much to secure his topnotch rank in filmdom.

The supporting cast contains a number of front rank names, and it is evident that the studio has found the story of great importance in its program, for the casting of the characters was done with special care. Bette Davis and Dorothy Jordan share honors as leading ladies. Henry B. Walthall, the famed "Little Colonel" of "Birth of a Nation" fame, is once more transplanted to a Southern setting in this picture. Other capable players who contribute largely are Dorothy Peterson, Harold Albright, David Landau, Tully Marshall, Bertton Churchill, Russell Simpson, Edmund Breece, John Marston, Clarence Muse and many others.

The success achieved by Michael Curtiz in the direction of "Alias The Doctor" won him the directorial assignment of "The Cabin in the Cotton."

This sure-fire combination of story, cast and direction has placed this picture on every critic's "must" list.

O'Brien Plays In Western At The Queen

Based on one of the many incidents that have colored Arizona's history, "Robber's Roost," the new Fox Film offering, comes to the screen of the Queen Theatre next Friday and Saturday. George O'Brien and Maureen O'Sullivan head the cast of the picture, taken from Zane Grey's story, and with its picturesque setting at the original locale of the episode, "Robber's Roost" is said to be O'Brien's outstanding screen play.

The wholesale plundering of the cattle on a big ranch in the southern part of the state some twenty years ago forms the historical basis of the tale. The ranch owner, a wealthy Briton, is careless enough to hire a rascally foreman to run the place for him, and the foreman drives the entire herd over the line into Mexico, sells them and vanishes with the proceeds.

Weaving an unusual type of romance into this plot, Zane Grey succeeded in making "Robber's Roost" one of his most interesting stories. In transferring it to the screen Director Louis King has faithfully preserved its atmosphere.

How O'Brien, playing a double game of pretending to side with the band of thieves and at the same time secretly bringing an avenging posse to the "Roost," manages to rescue the girl he loves and square matters with his enemy, forms the climax of the picture.

Besides Miss O'Sullivan the supporting cast includes William Pawley, as the foreman, Reginald Owen as the unsuspecting Britisher, Maude Egan as his aunt, Walter McGrath as Pawley's assistant and Robert Greig as Owen's solemn butler. With its swift action, its scenic backgrounds and Louis King's direction, "Robber's Roost" should prove one of the most popular offerings of the season.

'Bring 'Em Back Alive', Presented By Frank Buck, Begins Engagement Of Three Days At R-R Queen Sunday

Although the surprising wild animal motion picture, "Bring 'Em Back Alive" opens under a tropical moon in the Bay of Bengal, the real beginning of the Van Beuren-Buck Expedition was at a luncheon table not far from Times Square. And that is the beginning of the story behind the story.

Two men were at the table. One was Amodeo J. Van Beuren, president of the Van Beuren Corporation; the other was Frank Buck. There had been dickering for several weeks between the two. Buck had more than twenty years' experience as a collector of live wild animals but had only the limited film experience which comes to every explorer who meets the ship news cameraman. He was not so sure that Mr. Van Beuren, as a motion picture producer, would understand that while the hazards of capturing animals are greater than those of taking their pictures, it was still a question of extreme difficulty in obtaining shots superior to those which have been appearing in every wild animal picture. The expense of the expedition would be tremendous. Finally one of the men said: "Well, that's settled."

Arrangements were under way very afternoon. Mr. Buck immediately filed a fat batch of cablegrams to his agent in Singapore and to friends there who could tell their servants to round up his "boys." There were cablegrams to the English, French and Dutch authorities by way of observing the highly important animals. Then there were telegrams to scattered spots in the United States. One went to an elderly man named Morrow in San Angelo. It was an order for hand-woven lasso ropes. There was another to a New England city for special ammunition which would be true and immune to humid climatic conditions in the Malay Peninsula and Sumatra. There were such tiny details as buying extra lenses for reading-glasses. But for the most part the slogan of the newly-born Van Beuren-Buck Expedition had to be "Duy British." There would be nothing gained, and probably a great deal of time and effort lost, in totting baggage and impediments across the Atlantic, over the Mediterranean, through the Suez Canal and on eastward to Singapore.

Within one month of the luncheon, the party, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Buck, Clyde E. Elliott, the director; Nicholas Cavaliere and Carl Berger, cameramen, sailed on the Staatenlam, London, Paris, Marseilles and Singapore were on the itinerary.

Bazaar Tipsters

In Singapore, Mr. Buck was met by Al, the boy who had accompanied him on many previous expeditions, and they were joined by Matt, Delmie, Ahmad and Samie, who also were members of past expeditions. After paying their respects to the various consuls, the expedition got under way: first by a small steamer, then by wagon, then by dugout canoes, until finally they set up camp. The site of the camp was determined by observations at the bazaars. At one bazaar, more than a hundred miles inland, and at least half that distance in semi-jungle, the boys spoke with a Sakai who had seen a great python. At another bazaar it was apparent that a man-eating tiger was on the rampage. At this bazaar, too, it was learned the comparatively rare black panther likewise had been seen.

Night Frowlers

Wire netting was placed on all windows in the expedition's jungle headquarters, mainly as a warning signal. An animal which scratches wire netting makes a noise that is guaranteed to waken an alert sleeper. For protection against large animals, the boys built a stockade. For protection against snakes there is only prayer. When night came, double-barreled .12 gauge shotguns were distributed

The Stimson Doctrine

The Japanese armies are once more in action, seeking to enlarge their conquests of Chinese territory. When the present phase of the campaign is completed, Japan will, if it is victorious, not only have seized another Chinese province, but will be in a position to descend upon Peking, the old capital, and to dominate by force of arms the northern part of China proper.

What is the ultimate objective no one can say. Probably no one knows. Certainly no statement of intention from the Japanese Foreign Office can be relied upon. For more than sixteen months the Japanese diplomats have made promises which the Japanese army has ignored. As the drama in the Far East is unfolded it is coming to look more and more like one of those military conquests which have no limit short of the exhaustion of the conqueror or the prostration of his victim. There does not seem to be any point at which the Japanese are able to stop and say that they have had enough. They are immediately in danger wherever they pause. So they must push on, deeper and deeper from China, farther and farther from their base.

It has become exceedingly unlikely that Japan could stop now even if the more moderate parties were to regain the ascendancy. Certainly the treaties, the resolutions, and the opinions of Europe and America will not stop her. The question arises, therefore, as to what should be the policy of the Western nations, among them the United States.

At the present time their position is, in broad outline, as follows: the United States, acting under the so-called Stimson Doctrine, announced on January 7 a year ago refused to recognize any situation, treaty, or arrangement brought about by means contrary to the Kellogg-Briand Treaty. The Assembly of the League of Nations was by a unanimous vote on March 17 was quickly added to the film.

Several other "lucky breaks" found their way into celluloid. It had been beyond the most optimistic plans of Mr. Buck to include a camera account of a fight between the crushing-jawed crocodile and the black panther. As a matter of fact it was hard to understand how a panther, usually crafty as well as exceedingly pugnacious, could be so stupid as to investigate a 'croc.'

The complete RKO-Radio record of the "Bring 'Em Back Alive" expedition, with sound and musical score, will be shown at the Queen Theatre beginning today.

Japan and China, abating, declared that it is "incumbent upon" the members of the League not to recognize a situation brought about by violation of the League Covenant and the Kellogg Treaty. In September, Japan recognized the "independent" state of Manchukuo. In October, the Lytton Commission, appointed by the League of Nations, brought in its report which found that Manchukuo had been established by force of Japanese arms. This report, therefore, makes it morally binding upon all members of the League to adopt the American attitude of non-recognition as declared a year ago in the Stimson Doctrine. As a matter of fact, no nation, except Japan, has recognized Manchukuo.

What is the ultimate objective no one can say. Probably no one knows. Certainly no statement of intention from the Japanese Foreign Office can be relied upon. For more than sixteen months the Japanese diplomats have made promises which the Japanese army has ignored. As the drama in the Far East is unfolded it is coming to look more and more like one of those military conquests which have no limit short of the exhaustion of the conqueror or the prostration of his victim. There does not seem to be any point at which the Japanese are able to stop and say that they have had enough. They are immediately in danger wherever they pause. So they must push on, deeper and deeper from China, farther and farther from their base.

dismember China. How could an American government do that? We are pledged by treaty to respect the integrity of China. Could we then say to China that we respect her integrity so little that we recognize the achievements of her conqueror?

It may be asked: what good does it do not to recognize that Japanese conquest? Non-recognition has not stopped Japan thus far. The answer is that the question is not whether the outcome will be to stop the Stimson Doctrine does not profess to be able to check the advance of the Japanese army. It does not profess to prescribe the nature of the ultimate settlement of the Manchurian question. It says, however, that when the fighting is over the settlement must be one which does China no substantial injury. This means, I take it, assuming the whole world adopts the doctrine, that the weight of world influence will be exerted in the final settlement on behalf of the integrity of China. The Japanese must reckon with that. They must realize that when they have spent their force against China, they have still to deal with the diplomatic power of the outer world. That is no inconsiderable thing to reckon with.

Essentially, the Stimson Doctrine was the result of a choice between two courses of action: one was to recognize Japan's action and thus help her to dismember China; the other was not to recognize, and thus to align the world's influence against the dismemberment of China. There was and there is no other alternative. The world could not intervene by force, as Mr. Lowell desired. It was too divided and too distracted. The world could not be neutral and uninterested because if it recognized Japan's action it was in fact supporting Japan; if it did not recognize Japan, it was doing what the Stimson Doctrine declares that it should do.

Thus the Stimson Doctrine is not a fancy bit of idealism but the inevitable outcome of the logic of the situation.

The Strain Of College

College students are popularly supposed to be care-free youngsters who spend far more time having fun than studying; but De. Lee H. Ferguson, director of the health service of Western Reserve university, tells the American Student Health association that college students in general are studying too hard and working too hard for the good of their health.

College curricula, for one thing, are often too heavy for the students to carry without undue strains, says Dr. Ferguson. For another, youngsters who are working their way through college carry a double burden which in many cases is making them easy victims for tuberculosis.

To be sure, Dr. Ferguson reports that some collegians are also playing too hard; but in the main the picture he offers is that of a set of young folks who are desperately in earnest and who are sacrificing their health in order to get the education they desire.

But there is this to be said for the Administration: it had to deal with powerful interests in Europe which were not only very sympathetic to Japanese ambitions in many ways deeply involved in them. It is by no means certain that the European powers would not have given Japan a free hand if the United States had not made it morally impossible for them to do so. From what I learned at Geneva and in the chief capitals of western Europe last winter, I am satisfied that but for President Hoover and Secretary Stimson the whole post-war machinery of peace would have collapsed in an ignominious surrender before the Japanese aggression. The risks they took were great. But the risks of complete destruction of all faith in the collective effort to preserve peace were, I believe, even greater. Therefore, though the diplomatic procedure might have been more adroit, in the long perspective it will appear, I think, that Mr. Hoover and Mr. Stimson were bold in a great cause. They did not merely save the faces of the western powers by providing them with the formula of an empty gesture. Had the League not had the Stimson Doctrine to fall back upon last March it would have been forced to admit that it was absolutely impotent. They did more than that. They kept alive at a moment when a gale threatened to blow it out the small flame of international solidarity in behalf of the law and order of the world.

Mr. Lowell's principal objection, however, is to the Doctrine itself. If I understand him correctly, his view is that the proper way to prevent war is to use collective force to stop it at the beginning. Mr. Lowell is a believer in the League of Nations and was in favor last winter of using economic force against Japan. He believes, however, that if the war is not prevented, if it proceeds to a conquest, then the only safe thing to do is to recognize the result.

This is a very logical position. There is good reason to think that if all nations were ready to use force against an aggressor the moment he threatens to break loose, no aggressor could withstand it. But the fact is that last winter no nation was willing to use force to stop Japan. The question, therefore, is whether the nations should have given Japan a free hand and have stood ready to recognize her conquests. I do not see how the United States, as a matter of honor or of practice, could have done what Mr. Lowell suggests. To recognize Manchukuo when China refuses to recognize it would have amounted to using our influence to

'Research Racket', With Numerous Duplications Cost Millions Each Year, United Press Survey Shows

By RAYMOND CLAPPER

United Press Staff Correspondent (Copyright, 1933, By United Press) WASHINGTON (UP)—Critics of what is now called the "research racket" center much of their fire on the duplications and countless investigations in the department of agriculture which run into millions of dollars a year.

Mere listing of all items would be impossible in limited space. Even items on which more than $100,000 was spent last year can not all be listed. In an organization spending $4,000,000 (B) a year a $100,000 item is small change though it would take a man working at $50 a week almost 40 years to earn that much. It is more than the average man earns in a whole lifetime.

Here is a skeleton outline of expenses last year within just one government department, revealing the number of investigations and the duplication of work that goes on among several bureaus all operating under the Secretary of Agriculture and supposedly consolidated into one unified working unit of the executive branch.

These particular figures show to what an extent federal funds are expended on investigating insects. The insects are investigated by first one branch of the agriculture department and then another.

First, important expenditures in the entomology bureau:

- Fruit and shade tree insects $400,000.
- Truck and garden crop insects $375,000.
- Forest insects $190,000.
- Cereal and forage insects $463,000.
- Cotton insects $208,000.
- Insects affecting man and animals, $140,000.
- Household and stored products insects $116,000.
- Taxonomy and interrelations of insects $208,000.

Meantime the bureau of plant industry also is busy, spending money as follows:

- Barberry eradication $307,000.
- Blister rust control $471,000.
- Cereal crops and diseases $548,000.
- Dry land agriculture $339,000.
- Forage crops and diseases $257,000.
- Foreign plant introduction $209,000.

LESSON NO. 1

How To Use The Thermostat On Your Cook Stove

At the conclusion of our several hundred visits to various Big Spring homes to adjust and inspect gas appliances, we find that a great number of housewives are not entirely familiar with the use of the Thermostat on their cook stoves. The table below is primarily for Estate Gas Ranges but will apply to any stove with a Thermostat.

DIRECTIONS

Using the Thermostat is as easy as setting a clock. You simply light the oven burner in the usual way, then set the indicator of the Thermostat at the point prescribed on the guide.

When a temperature of less than 425 degrees is specified, wait 10 minutes for the oven to heat, then put in the food. When a temperature of 425 degrees or higher is specified, wait 15 minutes before putting in the food. The reason for this preheating of the oven is to allow the oven to attain the temperature specified. Food should never be placed in a cold oven. The time required for preheating will vary according to the character and pressure of the gas, but the time specified above is given as a good, safe average. FOR BROILING: Set the Thermostat at 550 degrees or at the point on the dial marked "For Broiling."

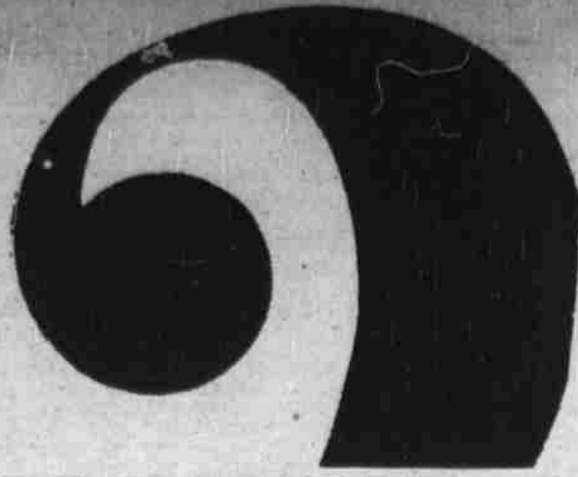

ROASTING TEMPERATURES

CHAPTER V

Joe Paris moved toward the practice rooms followed by the other two men. Miss Shayne looked at Jackson Heights to-night, he said.

Without preamble Joe opened the door. This time there was no halting of step or cessation of the music. It was Joe, the great Paris, and welcome indeed! Joe's presence in a practice room always meant something. Sheila continued with the difficult routine. She was dancing beautifully.

Her eyes met Dick Stanley's as, without stopping, she glided swiftly down the room. She smiled guardedly, a trifle mischievously. So he was a friend of Joe's! Maybe he had brought Joe back. Maybe he was a producer; she decided against this almost immediately, tapping energetically, skimming like a bird across the room, breaking into kicks, tapping again. It wasn't that the newcomer was too young to be a producer? They could be as young as they pleased, providing they had money. This young man was too interested in the things about him. He didn't look bored. And a producer has to learn very early to look bored and unimpressed if he doesn't want to be besieged by would-be hangers-on at every turn.

Sheila didn't think the other man was a producer either. Had he been filling the cast of a show he would have watched her for a few minutes and then disappeared. Instead he was talking to Joe and beckoning to Bill Brady.

It was clear however that Sheila was the subject of the conversation. Tapping, whirling, twisting like a flower in a brisk wind, she smiled gently, eyes on the ceiling, and danced on.

"This girl's a real dancer," Bill began affably. And again Sheila smiled. Not five minutes before, when she had muffed a turn, Bill had called her hopeless. Five minutes more and he would make her the world's leading danseuse. That was show business for you.

Timmy reached the end of the theme and began again but Bill cut in briskly. "That's all, Tim. You Shayne—come here."

She was going to meet Joe Paris! He had noticed her! Equally marvelous, she was going to meet this boy who had been watching her. She must look a sight now, her hair every which way, her face beaming. With a crumpled little handkerchief Sheila attempted to repair the ravages of the last two hours. What a moment to come face to face with any young man! "Well, if he liked me this way he'll like me dressed up. That's one comfort," she thought despairingly. Oddly it did not occur to her to wonder if Joe Paris liked her—

Joe, whose approbation could mean instant recognition. Bill was beaming at her as though she were one of his own prize pupils and drew her into the circle.

"Miss Shayne, Joe, Miss Shayne, Mr. Lane, and —er, your friend there—I didn't catch the name? Oh, yes, Stanley! Mr. Stanley, Sheila," Bill's voice was important. His eyes were on Joe Paris' face.

"Shayne," repeated Joe meditatively, acknowledged the girl's how with a curt nod. "Shayne, you're Johnny Desmond's daughter, aren't you? How come you changed your name?" "I—I wanted to make good on my own, Mr. Paris." Her voice was trembling. "I didn't want managers to hire me or agents to book me on my parents' account. You see, if I get anywhere I want it to be because I am a dancer, not because my mother and father were."

The big man nodded approvingly. "Still that doesn't keep you from inheriting Johnny's spunk," he said reflectively. "And you can dance all right. You're good!" "Good! You can dance all right." Such words as those from Joe Paris! If Joe troubled to praise a routine it meant something. Always considerate, always helpful to an actor in trouble or down-and-out, Joe never scattered undue praise.

"The kindest thing, he would repeat firmly and frequently, "the kindest thing you can do for some of them is to send them back to the five-and-dime stores. But if they are good, tell them so!"

Bill glowed at the tribute. "Mr. Lane, here," he said, indicating that gentleman, "is looking for talent."

Sheila's eyes widened expectantly. "For a party he's giving this evening."

The girl's face fell. "We thought perhaps you'd dance for him," Joe Paris added. "Just a number or two. I know you're booked with Roscoe Moody in Gleason's place."

Sheila showed her surprise. So Joe Paris knew that! That he had known her father did not seem so unusual as did this exciting bit of news.

"We are playing Jackson Heights," Sheila murmured in confusion. "I've been resting lately. I'm—well, pretty stiff." Joe grinned broadly. If he thought a mere muscles a poke, Sheila decided, it must be because he had never experienced them. Or had he? "Mm" Joe said, while Bill stood by attentively and the others remained silent. "Jackson Heights. That Bailey's theater? Well—you could make it in a hunk. After the show. Just a number or so. Is that right, Lane? Or a song?"

Bill leaned forward confidentially though his lowered voice reached and was meant to reach every corner in the room. "Shayne puts over a song number in great style."

Dick Stanley's pleading eyes met the girl's for an instant as she wavered. "I would like to accommodate you," she began, then added hastily, "but I haven't been dancing. I'll be awfully tired I'm afraid."

"You seem in excellent practice," Trevor Lane began politely. "It's not that!" Sheila flushed. "I may be too stiff by that time to dance well. Maybe you'd ridden horseback—and know how difficult it is!" She laughed ruefully. "Perhaps some other time!"

Her heart was pounding, saying loudly, "You little fool! Why are you refusing? Mr. Stanley will be there! You'll see him. Maybe he will take you home. Tell him you'll be glad to fill in."

"We pay 50—"

"Stentive!" announced Dick briskly, slyly nudging Trevor. "And, grinnin' boyishly, "we guarantee you an awfully good time. For you'll stay for the party of course!"

This, she knew, was irregular. Unbusinesslike. They got things from you they didn't pay for—extra songs, maybe dances, even a lesson or two. The men gathered around, considering a chorus girl fair prey. The girls snubbed you if you were good-looking, or if you were clever they said catty things. No, the wisest thing was to keep away. Still $75 is $75—a full wardrobe with careful buying! A new evening gown, new hat, new suit, shoes!

But why put herself at a disadvantage? Why appear beside society girls, wealthy young women of this man's own set, with the comparison all in their favor? Meticulously groomed, born to luxury and ease, never a worry or thought for tomorrow.

"I'm sorry. I'd love to some other time. It's awfully nice of you to ask me."

"Some other time, then," Trevor Lane said simply. He did not appear even vaguely disturbed. Dick Stanley looked crest-fallen. Joe Paris regarded her doubtfully and Bill glared.

"Can't I persuade you?" Dick asked in a low tone as the other moved away. "No, really I can't do it. Not tonight."

"Suppose I leave the telephone number with the girl? Will you use it if you change your mind?" She shook her head. "No. Well, maybe. Yes, leave it. But don't be disappointed—"

"Please change your mind. I'll expect to hear from you." Why hadn't he asked for her telephone number, Sheila wondered as he disappeared in the direction of the others. Didn't he know she had burned her bridges? That she couldn't telephone him now? He thought he could find her in the telephone book, perhaps. As if he could afford her own apartment in these days!

Sheila sighed. An opportunity had vanished. But work remained. Doggedly she went into the routine, her clicking heels beating out the rhythm as faithful Timmy played.

THE STORY OF SAN MICHELE

By Axel Munthe (Dutton and Co.)

If anyone could write a modern Arabian Nights a popular European doctor should be that one. No better comparison exists for "The Story of San Michele" written by Dr. Munthe, who was born in Sweden, practiced in Paris and retired in Italy—if doctors ever actually retire.

This is a new edition of this popular account, put out by the publishers to meet the constantly growing demand at a surprisingly reasonable price.

It is one of those books that fits one's gift list for almost any occasion. It is a book so nicely bound that one wonders how the publishers did it for the price. And by now the book is so well known that it is almost a sure thing that it will be a best seller.

that it may be ordered from any book store in the U. S. that does a small order business.

THE KALEIDOGRAH

January I can not resist taking a laugh at this poem—a very improper attitude toward poetry. It is titled "Preference" but it should have been titled "A Budding Young Capitalist." It is written by a New Yorker instead of a Texan. His name is Earl Daniels.

I would not have the moon to keep For fear the cool strange gold Too soon should show the fingerprints Of hands that tried to hold:

But give me rather for my own A penny new and bright Which I can polish every day, And take to bed at night.

Big Spring Study Club Combines Two Programs Into One

The Big Spring Study Club met at the home of Mrs. Felton Smith Friday and combined two programs in their study of "Puritanism" and "Service." The answer to roll call was early historical places.

Mrs. Smith gave "The Story of a Pioneer" and Mrs. Koberg "The Life of Andrew Carnegie." Mrs. Koberg also conducted a parliamentary quiz.

After the program Misses Doris and Ruby Smith surprised the guests with a delicious plate luncheon.

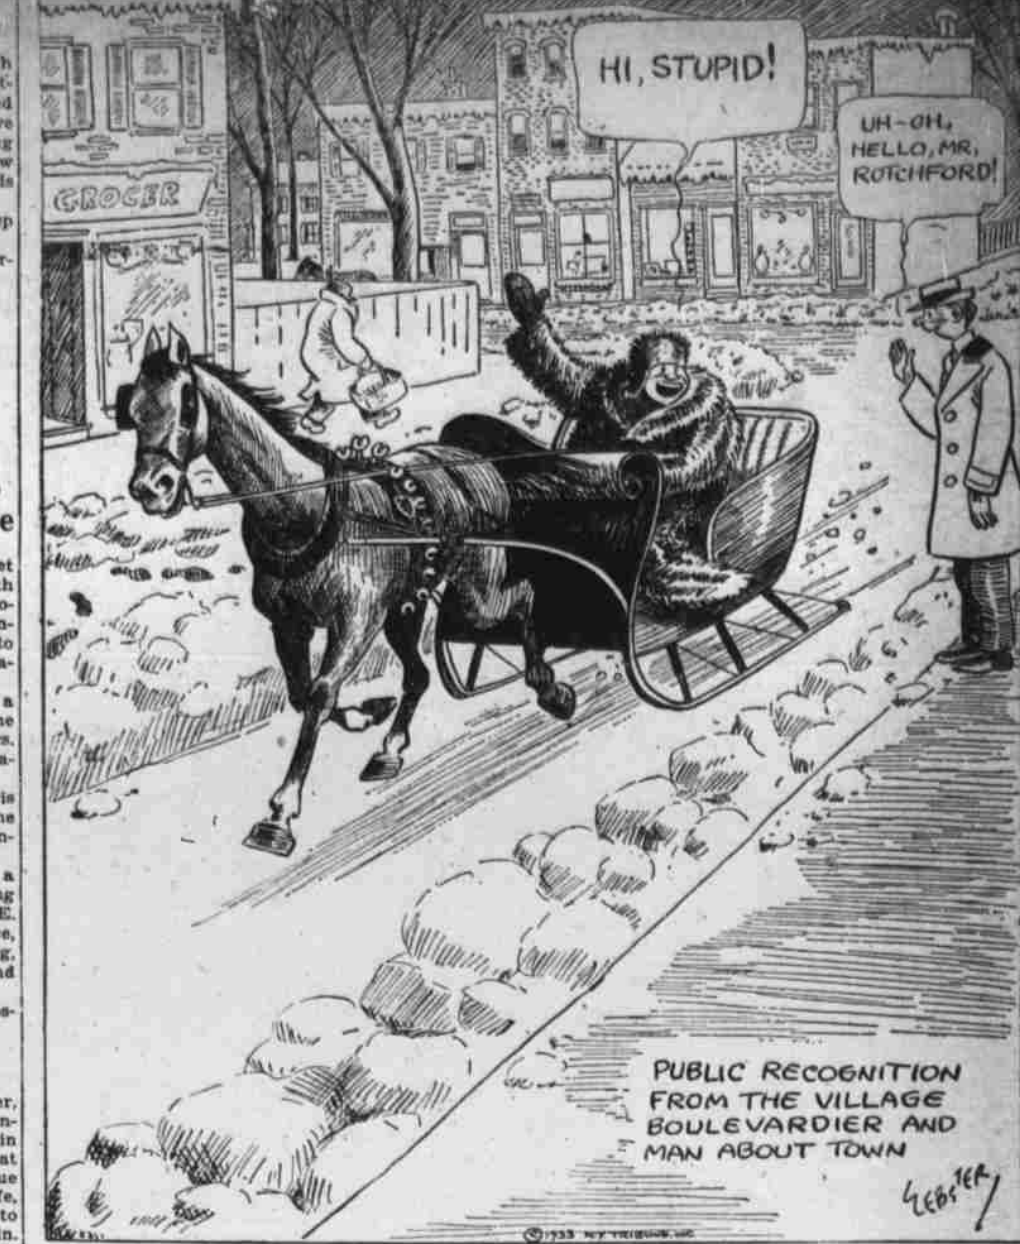

Mrs. Elizabeth Dorbandt was a guest at the club. The following members attended: Mmes. L. E. Eddy, Eddy Harding, Roy Pearce, Russell Manton, Charles Koberg, J. B. Delbridge, J. P. Dodge, and Miss Ione McAllister.

Mrs. Eddy will be the next hostess.

ATTEMPTS SUICIDE TWICE

DALLAS—Jesse William Walker, 38, Hopkins county man under indictment for murder, recovered in jail here from a second attempt at suicide. Awaiting trial on a true bill alleging he killed his wife, Walker was said to have tried to slash his throat with a piece of tin. He tried to shoot himself after his wife was killed.

around among the malcontents to quiet them. To it is added by friends this clear cut thought: The President can pass full leadership to the President-elect by using the formula President Wilson was set up to use had Mr. Hughes been elected. Mr. Wilson's reasons for retiring would have been the acute war issues. Mr. Hoover has far more potent reasons for retiring in the acute economic crisis. That might be statesmanship. It isn't politics.

Allotment—

Some very strong forces which did not appear in the public picture helped bring about the unexpected heavy opposition to the Farm Bill in the House. Buttressing the cloakroom work of the Presidential political secretary Walter Newell, the Treasury Department supplied the opposition with figures. These seek to show the Allotment Plan would raise $200,000,000 a year by a sales tax on four commodities. That amount is about the same as would be raised by a 2-2 1/2 per cent sales tax on all commodities.

The arguments were effective on Congressmen from the cities. They were used also by Republicans from farm districts who opposed the bill largely because it was a Democratic plan.

The same combination will work more havoc in the Senate when the bill comes up there.

Huey—

Certain parties near the top are interesting themselves in the future of Huey Long. They want to make it as hard as possible for him. His income tax return for last year is supposed to be involved.

There is no question but what Long is the outstanding star in the side of nearly everyone in Washington. His brazen way of doing things has rubbed the senate the wrong way. Let they have not put the pinners on him the way they usually do with young upstarts. He brags that he runs three states. There are good reasons for believing many are afraid of him.

Nobody heretofore has been able to do business long in Washington the way he is conducting his.

Short Week—

Five day week legislation is being pushed ardently in Congress but there is no hope for this session. Those behind it are merely getting prepared for a big push when Mr. Roosevelt comes in.

Hearings are being held and the record is being made so future legislation will not be delayed. Threats of strikes are not taken seriously.

The five-day week is supposed to be one of the leading items on Mr. Roosevelt's confidential program.

Luck—

Mr. Stimson's fair-haired boy Capt. Regnier got a break when the administration insisted on abolishing Fort Marfa, Texas, a lonely outpost. He asked to go to Fort Bliss instead and the war department sent him. That is a good post.

Some of the colonels had planned to send him to Marfa so he could live a life of solitude. They resented the soft life he had had with Stimson for many years.

Notes—

One of the last straws of conservative objection to inflation was broken when Smoot came out for it, proposing silver as the vehicle.

That was what was meant here earlier when it was said you would be surprised at some of the reactionaries coming around to the idea. Mr. Roosevelt probably will not care to use the Rapidan camp. He would rather have the yacht Mayflower back.

The House is a little ahead of schedule in handling the government appropriations bills. The senate is slightly behind. Not a one of the ten bills has passed the upper House.

Mr. Hoover dismantled his camp and personally sent to Premier MacDonal the bed in which MacDonal slept while visiting the camp three years ago.

CHURCHES

The Big Spring Pastor's Conference will meet for the regular bi-monthly meeting on Wednesday, January 18 at the First Baptist Church at 11:30 a. m. Rev. R. E. Day, president, will be the host and have charge of the devotions. All church pastors of the city are urged to become a member of this organization.

St. Mary's Episcopal
The vicar, the Rev. W. H. Martin, will conduct morning prayer and sermon at the usual hour. The sermon will be in keeping with the times and the season.

First Presbyterian
"Is He the Christ" will be the subject of the sermon by Rev. John C. Thorna at the First Presbyterian Church at 11:30 this morning. Tonight at 7:30 he will preach on "Spiritual Sight."

Sunday School meets at 9:45 a. m., the Co-ed Class at 6:00 p. m. and "The Young People of the Church" at 6:30 p. m. The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Deacons will be held at the West Texas National Bank on Monday at 5:00. Midweek prayer meeting will be held on Wednesday at 7:30.

East Fourth Street Baptist
The pastor, the Rev. W. M. Smith, will preach at the morning hour on "Life's Three-fold Secret" and at the evening hour on "The New Birth." This being the seventh message on John 3:16. The series will continue for several Sunday evenings. Special music at all hours.

FIRST METHODIST
Rev. J. Richard Spann, Pastor Young Peoples' district conference in session.

7:30—Morning watch for district young peoples' conference.
9:45—Church school.
11 a. m.—"Hidden Motives" is the pastor's theme.

1:30—Young Peoples' conference session.
7:30—The second message in the series on Sermon on the Mount, "The Hungry Hearted."
6:30—Young peoples' devotional program.

Steel—
The latest unfilled order report of the U. S. Steel company indicates that business held steady as compared to a month ago. You can believe that if you want to. Insiders are distinctly skeptical.

Settlement—
The embittered patent litigation between Bridgman and Electrolix which has been kept out of the papers is about to be settled amicably. The practical result will be a refrigerator embodying the best features of both and a substantial price reduction to the public.

Rails—
Connecticut's action in raising Ned with railroad bonds is a significant sign of the times. The securities of nearly every road except Union Pacific, Norfolk and Western and Chesapeake and Ohio have been dropped from the state's legal list. Atchison, Southern Pacific, Burlington and New York Central were among those to go overboard. The ruling applies only to new purchases and there will be no wholesale dumping. Local authorities believe Connecticut has gauged the future of the railroads accurately. Other states are expected to follow suit.

Cuba—
The efforts of President Machado of Cuba to arrange a truce with his political enemies are directly traceable to the approaching crisis recently referred to in this column. It is a belated attempt to salvage something from an impossible situation. Failure impends because the opposition is becoming aware of the acute weakness of Machado's position. His sum is setting rapidly.

Philippines—
Col. Arthur Little is believed

BURLEIGH TRAINS ON FARM DIET

here to be slated for Governor General of the Philippines. His father was a Democratic congressman from New York. President T. R. converted Colonel to Republicanism. Ardant work for F. D. R. in the campaign gave notice of return to the original fold.

Cabinet—
Public announcements are improbable within several weeks regardless of earlier decisions. Swagar Shirley is more likely to be in the legal department than in the Treasury. Attorney General or Solicitor-General are quite possible. Ex-Senator Gary of R. I. is not bound for France or Italy. Mayor Curley of Boston has lost or mislaid his naval ticket. Publisher James H. Thomson of New Orleans may become Secretary of War on his Inland Waterways program. Gulf to Lakes is star stuff.

Bright Spots In Business

By United Press
NEW YORK (UP)—Business throughout the country is offering more resistance to adverse influences than a year ago, weekly trade reviews said today.

YOUNGSTOWN, O.—Youngstown steel operations were estimated at 18 percent of capacity, the highest since Nov. 1, and a fractional gain from the start of this week.

NEW YORK—Dodge passenger car sales at retail during the week ended Dec. 31, were 13.5 percent higher than the preceding week, while truck sales showed a gain of 21.7 percent, it was reported.

Thirteen Dinner Guests Celebrate Friday, 13 By Sitting at Same Table

A group of friends who play bridge together on Friday evening met at the Settles Hotel Friday evening, for an unusually pretty and jolly Valentine dinner.

This is to be a semi-annual dinner and will take the place of a regular club meeting.

The table was set in the one of the private dining rooms. A centerpiece of red sweetpeas and red candles in silver holders made it very lovely. The place cards were comic valentines prepared by the hostesses in regard to the guests.

Instead of bridge the members spent the evening at games, songs and conversation.

The three couples who entertained were: Messrs. and Mmes. E. J. Mary, V. H. Flewelling and G. B. Cunningham. Because one of the children was sick, Mrs. Cunningham was unable to attend.

The club celebrated Friday the 13th by inviting a thirteenth guest to sit with them at the table. The other guests were: Messrs. and Mmes. M. K. House, L. W. Croft, Emil Fahrkamp and Misses Fern Wells and Mabel Robinson.

Mrs. Sanford Hostess To Congenial Club

Mrs. H. W. Leeper was guest high-scoring Friday afternoon at the party given Friday afternoon by Mrs. L. S. Sanford for the members and friends of the Congenial Bridge Club.

Mrs. Edwards was club high scorer.

Mrs. J. W. Buller of Fort Worth, was a tea guest. Other guests of the club were: Mmes. Tom Helton, I. H. Hamlett, C. P. Woodley and F. L. Danner.

A salad course was served to the visitors and following members: Mmes. C. C. Carter, Barber, D. C. Hamilton, Alton Underwood, W. H. Remel, Jimmie Mason.

Mrs. Underwood will be the next hostess.

Mrs. W. R. Ivey entertained the members of the Thimble with a delightful party at her home on Johnson street Friday afternoon. Rook was the diversion of the afternoon.

Mrs. Wilson made club high score and Mrs. Terry visitor's high.

A nice salad course was served to the following visitors: Mmes. J. L. Terry, Gus Pickle and Vesta Leverett, and to the following members: Mmes. Sam Eason, F. D. Wilson, Pete Johnson, Fox Stripling, Joe R. Neel, G. S. True, J. B. Pickle, W. H. Ward, W. D. McDonald, W. A. Miller and J. B. Hodges.

Mrs. Johnson will be the next hostess.

Miss Alta Taylor Is Hostess To O. R. E. Club

The members of the O. R. E. Club met at the home of Alta Taylor recently for a pretty party.

Melba Wilson won club high score and received a bottle of perfume. Georgiana Touchstone made guest high and received a handkerchief. Caroline McClesky was also a guest.

Jello, cake and whipped cream were served to the guests and following members: Gene Merrick, Laura Belle Underwood, Hattie Belle Mullins, Melba Wilson and Eleanor Rix.

Laura Belle Underwood will be the next hostess.

Shipping Data Asked For Economic Survey

L. P. Nitchell, field representative of the Trinity river economic survey, has requested that C. T. Watson, chamber of commerce manager, submit a list of carload lot shippers and receivers of freight in this city.

The information is "desired to develop among other data, potential traffic which might be available for shipment by barge, barge-rail, and rail-barge, if and when improvement is made," said a letter relative to a Trinity river canal project.

Chevrolet Sedan Stolen Here Year Ago Recovered

Almost a year from the time it was stolen, a Chevrolet sedan belonging to E. W. Nichols has been recovered in Amarillo.

Nichols, who has since moved to Clint, Texas, lost his automobile Feb. 8, 1932. This week it was taken in Amarillo by Sergeant Routh of the state highway patrol.

Floyd Brannon, in possession of the car, was released.

Girl Scout School To Be Held Here

Sessions At Settles Hotel Next Friday-Saturday; Public Invited

It is especially urged that a large crowd of mothers who are interested in their daughters of the teen-age and perplexed with problems of girls, and all other men and women interested in girls, attend the meeting of the Girl Scout leaders next Friday and Saturday at the Settles Hotel. A good crowd is especially desired, because the need of the town is to get acquainted with this movement and then to support it. The troops already organized have done some splendid work but not enough girls in town are enlisted.

The out of town leaders who will attend are Misses Mary L. White and Alice Mulkey. They will conduct a two-day school on Friday and Saturday, the hours being 9:30-11:30 in the morning and 1:30-4 in the afternoon.

On Friday evening at 7:30 there will be an open informal meeting at the hotel to which the whole public is invited, in order to get information on the topic. Further announcements will appear during the week. All mothers are asked to keep these dates open, so as to attend one or more sessions of the school, which is not restricted to members of the Girl Scout organization.

A meeting will be held Saturday afternoon at which the captains of the troops will arrange so that all the Girl Scouts may meet Misses White and Mulkey.

Luncheon Club Becomes Afternoon Bridge Club

Mrs. V. H. Flewelling entertained the members of the Friday Luncheon Club with a charming party at the Settles Hotel, following a delicious luncheon in the Coffee Shop the guests spent the afternoon at bridge.

Mrs. Wilke was the highest scorer of the afternoon.

The club members held a business session after the meeting and because several of the members resigned from the luncheon club decided to change to the afternoon and play in the homes.

Mrs. Wilke will be the next hostess Friday, Jan. 27.

There were no guests. The members present were: Mmes. Geo. Garrette, Paige Benbow, C. W. Cunningham, J. D. Biles, Geo. W. Wilke, Seth H. Parsons, Albert M. Fisher.

HAVANA—Helen Costello, American actress, and Arturo Del Barrio, Cuban lawyer, were married at Del Barrio's home here Jan. 6, it was revealed today.
