Are You This Man?

A composite picture of the typical accident victim in 1939 is given in "Smash Hits of the Year," a booklet published in the interests of street and highway safety.

He was a pedestrian over 40 years of age, with eyesight and hearing somewhat past their peak of efficiency. He was frequently preoccupied; occasionally down-right absent-minded. In a large number of cases he had had a drink or two.

He had never learned to drive a car, and his walking habits had been formed when automobiles were both fewer and slower than they are now.

He did not know, or at any rate did not stop to realize, that while a man on foot takes one step and advances a scant yard, an automobile driven at a mere 30 miles an hour advances nine yards.

He was wearing dark clothing, and while the headlights of the oncoming car seemed blinding to him, his outline was scarcely discernible to the driver against the dark background of the pavement.

It was between six and seven o'clock on a late autumn evening, and he was struck just as he stepped out from between two parked cars preparatory to crossing between intersections on an unlighted street in a fairly large city.

SHELTERBELT SIGNS LIKED BY FARMERS

"Travelers through Northwest Texas are beginning to recognize the meaning of the belts of young trees they see along the highways," stated W. E. Webb, state director, recently. "Shield-shaped shelterbelt signs placed at a few of the tree plantings tell that they are cooperatively-planted farm shelterbelts, showing the years they were planted."

The signs, green and white shields, suspended from cross arms, are quite impressive, Webb said, and competition among farmers for them is keen. Every farmer who gets a shelterbelt also wants one of the signs, and it would almost be worth the life of the local forester to remove one for erection elsewhere.

"When it is considered that shelterbelts already have been planted on 2,180 farms in Northwest Texas, it can be easily seen that only a small portion of them can be provided with signs," the state director remarked. "That really is enough, though, because everyone who lives in the area knows what the shelterbelts are and it is necessary to explain them only to out-siders passing through."

Since 1935, when the project began, 1,850 miles of shelterbelts have been planted in Northwest Texas, using nearly 20 million trees. Their purpose is to check the force of the winds which damage farm lands and crops, and to conserve soil moisture.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

Fundamental Strategy of War Undergoes Major Alterations; Presidential Race Warms Up

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. Released by Western Newspaper Union.

This map graphically shows the many points of attack on the British Isles open to Hitler's air raiders.

GERMAN WAR: Strategy

It is about time that we examined the fundamental strategy of the German war, at this point. For the whole situation has changed, in England, in Germany, and in the United States.

The German aim was a simple one. It was to attack England by land, sea, and air, without wasting much time or effort in other theaters of war, which were trifling, anyway. Italy was expected to take Malta, and Spain was expected to enter the war and take Gibraltar, with the possibility that Japan might take Hongkong, but all these were side issues as compared with the basic battle of Britain. Here the preliminary German air bombardment proved highly effective, and English Portsmouth and Welsh Cardiff were believed already to be gutted. Edward VIII, duke of Windsor, was called a fifth columnist by some Englishmen, and hailed as the next monarch by others.

Churchill Plan

The English war plan was this: to hold out, like a besieged fortress, if possible for two or three months. Then, late fall would put an end to German operations against the island fortress. At this point, the English would swing into offensive action in the following way: by an intensified sea blockade that would bring famine to the entire continent of Europe. There have been crop shortages, and failures, on the continent, and another war-winter might bring untold horrors to the Dutch, Belgians, French, Norse, Danes, etc.—and even to the Germans. This was exactly what Winston Churchill was counting on.

There was one hitch in this plan. What food there was on the continent, would go (1) to the German army, (2) to the German home folks, and (3) to the Dutch, Belgians, French, etc., etc. Thereby, the British would make the Dutch and French suffer for Hitler's wrongdoings. But this was only the beginning of the repercussions. It was expected that this plan—the "Churchill plan," they called it—would have the following astounding effect in the United States: it would turn the isolationists into interventionists, and the interventionists into isolationists. The reason for this was as follows: the humane isolationists could not stand the continental starvation, and would want to intervene

NAMES

... in the news

New York city's Mayor LaGuardia strongly advocated universal military service.

President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines told American high-commissioner Francis Sayre (Woodrow Wilson's son-in-law): "We must do our own thinking and learn lessons from contemporary history—or bust!"

Claude Dornier Jr., son of Germany's outstanding aircraft designer, was in New York, and planned to enter an American university in the autumn. Dornier bombers were being massed for the battle of Britain: all-metal monoplanes.

Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser's famous Near Eastern French army was reported, at last, ready for final disbandment, under the direction of an Italian war mission. Mittelhauser succeeded Gen. Max Weygand when the latter went to France to wind up the war and help reorganize the government.

to break the British blockade and feed the starving French, Dutch, and Belgians, with American foodstuffs (of which we would have a surplus). This would make the isolationists take an interventionist position. Meanwhile, the interventionists would cry "hands off" the British blockade, and would want the continent to stew in its own juice, which would turn them into isolationists. This, then, was the keynote to the European war situation as a whole. Meanwhile, Hitler liberated the Belgian war prisoners and sent them home, having long since done the same by the Norwegian and Dutch soldier-captives. The French were expected to be next on the parole list. Not so, the "tough-and-ready" Poles, of whom there were more than a million in German military hands.

CAMPAIGN: Up-Warming

The 1940 presidential campaign race was busy up-warming. It was, in fact, getting warmer and warmer. The third term attempt, by Mr. Roosevelt brought forth many dire predictions from newspaper editorial writers. One excellent quip went the rounds. A lady said to a gent: "But a third term's unprecedented!" To which the gent replied, "So was General Washington's first term."

Some thoughtful students of political science believed that the third term phenomenon was a pale American reflection of totalitarian dictatorships abroad. . . . just as our Civil war of 1861 was a pale reflection of "civil 1848" in Europe. Henry Wallace was put up as Democratic vice president in order to match the Republican McNary, for both were agricultural experts of the very first water. The choice of Wallace brought out that this New Dealer was an ex-Republican, and Mr. Roosevelt had passed over a number of regulation machine Democrats.

Wallace, Ickes, Stimson, Knox, Hopkins, Miss Perkins: none of them had had a Democratic background. But then, of course, the ex-Republican Willie had only been a Republican for but two scant years. Hoover, too, was a former Democrat, while it was expected that Al Smith would continue to take a walk. It looked as though the old party divisions were breaking down all along the line, and the terms New Deal and Old Guard were increasingly taking the place of the Republican and Democratic tags. The loss of Jim Farley, the political genius who managed the party machinery for Roosevelt, was a heavy blow to many of the Democrats.

More of It

While a good many Democrats were muttering about the III term, Wallace, and Farley, Willie stressed his own humble origin, and inferred artfully that Roosevelt's path had been a lot softer. Willie said, furthermore, that he was making no sacrifice, but that he really wanted to run—which was certainly obvious to almost anybody.

OIL, OIL, OIL: Petroleum

Large shipments of oil have been going through to Spain, from American Texas, and also from South American Venezuela and Colombia. Something like 2 1/2 million barrels had been sent from the United States in eight months of the war. Was Hitler getting much of it? Probably, they thought in Washington.

Some, in fact, believed that Germany had been getting far more oil from America, than from Russia.

An Emphatic No

To Adolf Hitler's "last chance peace offer," Prime Minister Churchill of England sounded the expected "no." Long an enemy of Hitler, Churchill has been particularly obnoxious to the Fuehrer. Even when Churchill was just a private citizen, Hitler singled him out for oratorical attack. (See—Hitler Talks.)

HITLER TALKS: Endlessly

Hitler's speech came over the radio, translated into an extreme, ultra, English accent. It must have been Lord Haw-Haw putting it across. It went on endlessly. Hitler said he didn't want to destroy the British empire. He said he shrank at the destruction which hung over England, and suggested an "honorable" peace. Hitler reviewed his conquests, his methods, and his diplomatic wrangles with Chamberlain and Daladier. He said he spoke not as a victor, but as a rationalist, anxious to terminate futile misery. Some 31 Pacific coast radio stations cut off his speech because it was trying to "justify his crimes against civilization itself."

Hitler also made Goering something brand-new in the staid history of the Prussian army: a Reich's Marshal of Greater Germany, and gave him the Grand Cross of the Iron Cross. Goering designed himself a new, different, extra-special uniform—"the only one of its kind in all German officialdom." Hitler also created nine new field-marshal, and two new field-marshal-generals, and 17 new colonel-generals (German military grades run different from the American).

BURMA ROAD: So Silly

The Burma road controversy took the silliest turn on record. That road carried war supplies to Chiang Kai-shek and his armies. The British foreign office closed it, on the heated demand of Japan. Then Secretary Hull protested that the Burma road was necessary for world trade and international commerce (Hull is an old free-trader). At this point, part of the British parliament supported Hull against their own foreign office, with cries of "no appeasement." China, infuriated, threatened England with dire threats. Germany, of course, took the side of Japan. Thereby, Hitler took the side of the British foreign office, against Hull and Chiang Kai-shek. It was Anglo-Germany, plus Japan, versus the U. S. A. Meanwhile, England was trying to negotiate the finish to the Jap-Chinese contest, but apparently our own state department was opposed to "appeasement" in the Orient. All this hit a new low in foreign relations.

ANGLO-SHIFT: Turnabouts

While Hitler was promoting all those glamour-boy generals and airmen, and scattering decorations to the four winds, England was kicking various people upstairs. An arrogant-looking gentleman named Lieut.-Gen. Sir Alan F. Brooke, recently general officer in charge of the southern command, became commander-in-chief of the home forces. He took the place of Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside (it was Oliver Cromwell's ironside that founded the British regular army).

Sir Ironside, a huge, hulking fellow, who once commanded Gibraltar, was kicked into being a field-general. Viscount Gort, former commander of the ill-fated British expeditionary force in France and Flanders, had the same experience. He became inspector general of forces for training. Previously, Gort had received the sacred order of the bath, which evoked considerable criticism. But Gort, everybody admitted, was a good organizer. Brooke had commanded the II corps of the British expeditionary force.

Vitamin B

Simultaneous with the military turnabouts, England went in for a new kind of white bread. It was rich in vitamin B and calcium salt, to help overcome the wartime strain of nerves and physical fatigue. It was a revolution in nutrition. The scientific food ministry was enthusiastic about it, and it might turn out to be a real boon to medicine, and to humanity in general. The British public began to buy it up, and gulp it down, prontissimo.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—The first World war tipped over 20 reigning princes and dukes, four emperors and seven kings, in addition to a scattering of small-fry royalty whose names are now all but forgotten.

European Royalty is heading our way in droves. Carol of Rumania and George of Greece were the only kings who came back, and they aren't a good risk for Lloyd's—and perhaps Lloyd's isn't either.

If the Mayflower were still afloat, it could book a full passenger list of kings fleeing from commoners, seeking a haven in a new world—at any rate, kings and their consorts, their courtiers and others of princely rank.

It is understood that the Empress Zita of Austria will be in America before long. The word "former" is omitted here, in deference to a clever, purposeful woman, who has never admitted that she isn't still the empress. Of her son, Archduke Otto, now living in a two-room apartment in New York, she once said, "If the time ever comes when he has but one servant, that servant will call him 'your majesty.'"

In early-day San Francisco a stately old gentleman with a splendid, kindly uniform announced that he was "Emperor Norton," and was pleased to make San Francisco his royal domain. Nobody knew who he was or where he came from, but he looked and behaved like an emperor, so they took him up on his proposition. He held court, for years, received homage and issued decrees, and when he needed revenue levied on the stock exchange, finding a handful of $20 gold pieces always ready. He died sitting straight upright in his little cubby-hole room, wearing his full dress uniform. The city gave him a grand funeral. San Francisco was proud of her emperor. They never did learn anything about him.

This department was never particularly partial to kings, but in addition to child refugees it might be a nice idea for each city over here

Cities May Bid for the Unhappy Royal Refugees to adopt a king, or a prince or duke. Hollywood, of course, would get Zug of Albania—now in London and fixing to sail for America, according to news reports—a "swinging king" who installed in his Graustarkian palace a 40-piece American jazz band and became one of the best hoofers in his kingdom.

Philadelphia probably would put in a bid for the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg, a thrifty hombody, now in Quebec. The news is that, if England falls, she and her six children will come to the U. S. A. She knits; plays the piano; is a fluent linguist and rears her children beautifully. There might not be any bidders for old Ferdinand of Bulgaria, the butterfly collector. He has a knack for pageantry, however, which might interest New Orleans.

In case the above should appear to be a callous reference to tragic unhappiness, the main idea is that this democracy might well accord a certain respect to fugitive royalty because it appears to have something it really believes in.

AT MIAMI, FLA., IN October, 1934, John Dwight Sullivan, then commander of the New York department of the American Legion, urged the Legionnaires to concentrate less on more and bigger bonuses and to center their efforts on understanding and supporting the government in constructive undertakings. He emphasized the need for co-operation as citizens rather than activity as a pressure group. His was a scholarly essay on citizenship.

New Mr. Sullivan has placed before the convention of the New York County Legion a proposal, for a single, unified United States air force, in which all air arms of all services would be under a single command. Mr. Sullivan is chairman of the Legion's national aviation committee. He is a New York lawyer and an alumnus of Princeton university.

He has been active in the furtherance of civil and military aviation for many years and was appointed a member of the New York state aviation commission by Governor Roosevelt in 1930. He is 47 years of age, scholarly and ascetic in appearance, preaching social responsibility in the Legion for more than a decade.

He insists that the organization cannot attain its high purpose without widening activities in political education, and an informed attitude on basic questions of domestic and foreign policy.

Gay Plaids and Stripes Add Zest to Smart Play Clothes

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

AN outstanding movement developing in the world of fashion during the last several seasons is the increasing attention given to the styling of play clothes. It is indeed something to reckon with, this matter of being correctly outfitted in the field of sports. This new importance attached to play clothes is proving a lively incentive to designers to turn out outfits that shall add to the picture as well as prove practical down to the last detail. There is no more fascinating endeavor that the field of costume design has to offer than this of creating play-clothes for young moderns.

It adds greatly to the pleasurable excitement that materials these days are produced so nearly perfect, not alone from the pictorial standpoint, but that they neither fade nor shrink in the wash, neither do they wrinkle or prove unseemly in the wearing. Playgrounds this season, because of the spectacular garb of fun-loving outdoor enthusiasts, burst forth in a blaze of color that fairly dazzles the eye. And of all the conspirators in the color game we know of none that are so loyally flying cheer-inspiring colors as are the fashionable-for-play clothes plaids and stripes.

The picture shows how dramatically and picturesquely color-bright stripes and plaids are being fashioned into clothes that go golfing, tennis playing, cruising, dude-ranching and so forth wherever your wanderlust happens to take you this summer. The very attractive outfit which you see to the right in the illustration makes one parson-conscious at very first glance. Which is as it should be for one of the very most important events on the fashion program this summer is the come-back of parsons. Designers of bench clothes find big appeal in the par-sol idea and whenever and wherever it is consistent to do so they introduce an eye-thrilling parson. I worked out beautifully for the outfit pictured to add a matching parson, and here you see it in all its glory flaunting the same gay stripes that give color to the smartly fashioned skirt. The fabric combination for this costume is a very happy one of stripe-printed celanese crepe for the skirt and parson with sharkskin in monotone for the blouse top.

You can get such easy-to-follow patterns for play clothes nowadays, and modern sewing machines have such a vast equipment of gadgets and attachments that almost perform miracles in stitching, tucking, quilting, shirring, cording, it is a temptation to make one's own outfits. Many smart, fashion-wise women are doing just that, buying up pretty materials and making their own. It is a fact the records show that the home-sewing idea is decidedly on the increase.

Consider, in the light of being your own dressmaker, the charming daytime sun suit which the girl seated is wearing. Just a few yards of seersucker plaid in vivid colors were required. You can make the whole outfit by spending only a couple of hours at your sewing machine even if you are a beginner at the sewing game. A little gathering attachment in your sewing machine kit will dispose of the yards of gathering at the waistline in just a few moments. You'll love the swirling ballerina skirt and the smartly fitted jacket top that furnish the styling theme for this outfit. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

New Handknit

Fashion experts predict an enthusiastic revival of knitted costumes with emphasis on hand-knit sweaters for fall. This pert little bolero sweater is just the thing to slip on with your summer outfits and it will prove a life-saver to bridge over midseason days. It is easily made in simple drop stitch using contrasting pastel yarns. Though the yarn gives the impression of being heavy and substantial it is in reality light as a feather.

Sheer Black Hat Is Smart Fashion

The new hats of sheer black horse-hair braid or of thin net or chiffon are registering as one of the season's outstanding successes. The smartest ones have large brims that are styled to wear far back on the head so that they halo hair and face with a mist of wispy black. They give you the dress-up look that is so important for special occasions. You'll love a hat of this type with your black and white prints and with the all-black afternoon sheer costumes that are high fashion this summer.

Berets for Smart Summer Headwear

For chic millinery to wear now and through the fall, the берет, big, black and dramatic carries the honors. The present берет vogue is gaining momentum by leaps and bounds. One way of wearing the new берет is to pose it far back on the head. There are also dramatic profile-berets that turn up picturesquely at one side. It is worth while to study up on the берет movement for as assured berets are important millinery news.

Patriotic Jewelry Is Latest Fashion

The latest fashion gesture is to wear a decorative piece of patriotic jewelry. Of course the American flag comes first in clips or brooches. It has jeweled stripes and stars in red white and blue. Glittering American eagle emblems eloquently bespeak patriotism and they are ever so decorative posed on suit lapel or at the neckline of your summer frocks.

Big Revival for Knitted Fashions

Knitwear enthusiasts here's good news for you, in that nearly every fashion report mentions the coming importance of hand-knitted costumes, capes, sweaters and three-quarter cardigans. So "attend to your knitting" so as to be ready and smartly knit clad when fall comes. A charming novelty is the sweater with a picturesque detachable matching knitted hood.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS BY ROGER SHAW

Fundamental Strategy of War Undergoes Major Alterations; Presidential Race Warms Up

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

This map graphically shows the many points of attack on the British Isles open to Hitler's air raiders.

GERMAN WAR: Strategy

It is about time that we examined the fundamental strategy of the German war, at this point. For the whole situation has changed, in England, in Germany, and in the United States.

The German aim was a simple one. It was to attack England by land, sea, and air, without wasting much time or effort in other theaters of war, which were trifling, anyway. Italy was expected to take Malta, and Spain was expected to enter the war and take Gibraltar, with the possibility that Japan might take Hongkong, but all these were side issues as compared with the basic battle of Britain. Here the preliminary German air bombardment proved highly effective, and English Portsmouth and Welsh Cardiff were believed already to be gutted. Edward VIII, duke of Windsor, was called a fifth columnist by some Englishmen, and hailed as the next monarch by others.

Churchill Plan

The English war plan was this: to hold out, like a besieged fortress, if possible for two or three months. Then, late fall would put an end to German operations against the island fortress. At this point, the English would swing into offensive action in the following way: by an intensified sea blockade that would bring famine to the entire continent of Europe. There have been crop shortages, and failures, on the continent, and another war-winter might bring untold horrors to the Dutch, Belgians, French, Norse, Danes, etc.—and even to the Germans. This was exactly what Winston Churchill was counting on.

There was one hitch in this plan. What food there was on the continent, would go (1) to the German army, (2) to the German home folks, and (3) to the Dutch, Belgians, French, etc., etc. Thereby, the British suffer for Hitler's wrongdoings. But this was only the beginning of the repercussions. It was expected that this plan—the "Churchill plan," they called it—would have the following astounding effect in the United States: it would turn the isolationists into interventionists, and the interventionists into isolationists. The reason for this was as follows: the humane isolationists could not stand the continental starvation, and would want to intervene

... in the news

New York city's Mayor LaGuardia strongly advocated universal military service.

President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines told American high-commissioner Francis Sayre (Woodrow Wilson's son-in-law): "We must do our own thinking and learn lessons from contemporary history—or bust!"

Claude Dornier Jr., son of Germany's outstanding aircraft designer, was in New York, and planned to enter an American university in the autumn. Dornier bombers were being massed for the battle of Britain: all-metal monoplanes.

Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser's famous Near Eastern French army was reported, at last, ready for final disbandment, under the direction of an Italian war mission. Mittelhauser succeeded Gen. Max Weygand when the latter went to France to wind up the war and help reorganize the government.

to break the British blockade and feed the starving French, Dutch, and Belgians, with American foodstuffs (of which we would have a surplus). This would make the isolationists take an interventionist position. Meanwhile, the interventionists would cry "hands off" the British blockade, and would want the continent to stew in its own juice, which would turn them into isolationists. This, then, was the key-note to the European war situation as a whole. Meanwhile, Hitler liberated the Belgian war prisoners and sent them home, having long since done the same by the Norwegian and Dutch soldier-captives. The French were expected to be next on the parole list. Not so, the "tough-and-ready" Poles, of whom there were more than a million in German military hands.

CAMPAIGN: Up-Warming

The 1940 presidential campaign race was busy up-warming. It was, in fact, getting warmer and warmer. The third term attempt, by Mr. Roosevelt brought forth many dire predictions from newspaper editorial writers. One excellent quip went the rounds. A lady said to a gent: "But a third term's unprecedented!" To which the gent replied, "So was General Washington's first term."

Some thoughtful students of political science believed that the third term phenomenon was a pale American reflection of totalitarian dictatorships abroad. . . . just as our Civil War of 1861 was a pale reflection of "civil 1848" in Europe. Henry Wallace was put up as Democratic vice president in order to match the Republican McNary, for both were agricultural experts of the very first water. The choice of Wallace brought out that this New Dealer was an ex-Republican, and Mr. Roosevelt had passed over a number of regulation machine Democrats.

Wallace, Ickes, Stimson, Knox, Hopkins, Miss Perkins: none of them had had a Democratic background. But then, of course, the ex-Democrat Willkie had only been a Republican for but two scant years. Hoover, too, was a former Democrat, while it was expected that Al Smith would continue to take a walk. It looked as though the old party divisions were breaking down all along the line, and the terms New Deal and Old Guard were increasingly taking the place of the Republican and Democratic tags. The loss of Jim Farley, the political genius who managed the party machinery for Roosevelt, was a heavy blow to many of the Democrats.

More of It

While a good many Democrats were muttering about the III term, Wallace, and Farley, Willkie stressed his own humble origin, and inferred artfully that Roosevelt's path had been a lot softer. Willkie said, furthermore, that he was making no sacrifice, but that he really wanted to run—which was certainly obvious to almost anybody.

OIL, OIL, OIL: Petroleum

Large shipments of oil have been going through to Spain, from American Texas, and also from South American Venezuela and Colombia. Something like 2½ million barrels had been sent from the United States in eight months of the war. Was Hitler getting much of it? Probably, they thought in Washington.

Some, in fact, believed that Germany had been getting far more oil from America, than from Russia.

An Emphatic No

To Adolf Hitler's "last chance peace offer," Prime Minister Churchill of England sounded the expected "no." Long an enemy of Hitler, Churchill has been particularly obnoxious to the Fuehrer. Even when Churchill was just a private citizen, Hitler singled him out for oratorical attack.
(See—Hitler Talks.)

HITLER TALKS: Endlessly

Hitler's speech came over the radio, translated into an extreme, ultra, English accent. It must have been Lord Haw-Haw putting it across. It went on endlessly. Hitler said he didn't want to destroy the British empire. He said he shrank at the destruction which hung over England, and suggested an "honorable" peace. Hitler reviewed his conquests, his methods, and his diplomatic wrangles with Chamberlain and Daladier. He said he spoke not as a victor, but as a rationalist, anxious to terminate futile misery. Some 31 Pacific coast radio stations cut off his speech because it was trying to "justify his crimes against civilization itself."

Hitler also made Goering something brand-new in the staid history of the Prussian army: a Reich's Marshal of Greater Germany, and gave him the Grand Cross of the Iron Cross. Goering designed himself a new, different, extra-special uniform—"the only one of its kind in all German officialdom." Hitler also created nine new field-marshal and two new field-marshal-general, and 17 new colonel-generals (German military grades run different from the American).

BURMA ROAD: So Silly

The Burma road controversy took the silliest turn on record. That road carried war supplies to Chiang Kai-shek and his armies. The British foreign office closed it, on the heated demand of Japan. Then Secretary Hull protested that the Burma road was necessary for world trade and international commerce (Hull is an old free-trader). At this point, part of the British parliament supported Hull against their own foreign office, with cries of "no appeasement." China, infuriated, threatened England with dire threats. Germany, of course, took the side of Japan. Thereby, Hitler took the side of the British foreign office, against Hull and Chiang Kai-shek. It was Anglo-Germany, plus Japan, versus the U. S. A. Meanwhile, England was trying to negotiate the finish to the Jap-Chinese contest, but apparently our own state department was opposed to "appeasement" in the Orient. All this hit a new low in foreign relations.

ANGLO-SHIFT: Turnabouts

While Hitler was promoting all those glamour-boy generals and airmen, and scattering decorations to the four winds, England was kicking various people upstairs. An arrogant-looking gentleman named Lieut-Gen. Sir Alan F. Brooke, recently general officer in charge of the southern command, became commander-in-chief of the home forces. He took the place of Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside (it was Oliver Cromwell's ironside that founded the British regular army).

Sir Ironside, a huge, hulking fellow, who once commanded Gibraltar, was kicked into being a field-general. Viscount Gort, former commander of the ill-fated British expeditionary force in France and Flanders, had the same experience. He became inspector general of forces for training. Previously, Gort had received the sacred order of the bath, which evoked considerable criticism. But Gort, everybody admitted, was a good organizer. Brooke had commanded the II corps of the British expeditionary force.

Vitamin B

Simultaneous with the military turnabouts, England went in for a new kind of white bread. It was rich in vitamin B and calcium salt, to help overcome the wartime strain of nerves and physical fatigue. It was a revolution in nutrition. The scientific food ministry was enthusiastic about it, and it might turn out to be a real boon to medicine, and to humanity in general. The British public began to buy it up, and gulp it down, prontissimo.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—The first World War tipped over 20 reigning princes and dukes, four emperors and seven kings, in addition to a scattering of small-fry royalty whose names are now all but forgotten.

Carol of Rumania and George of Greece were the only kings who came back, and they aren't a good risk for Lloyd's—and perhaps Lloyd's isn't either.

If the Mayflower were still afloat, it could book a full passenger list of kings fleeing from commoners, seeking a haven in a new world—at any rate, kings and their consorts, their courtiers and others of princely rank.

It is understood that the Empress Zita of Austria will be in America before long. The word "former" is omitted here, in deference to a clever, purposeful woman, who has never admitted that she isn't still the empress. Of her son, Archduke Otto, now living in a two-room apartment in New York, she once said, "If the time ever comes when he has but one servant, that servant will call him 'your majesty.'"

In early-day San Francisco a stately old gentleman with a splendid, kingly uniform announced that he was "Emperor Norton," and was pleased to make San Francisco his royal domain. Nobody knew who he was or where he came from, but he looked and behaved like an emperor, so they took him up on his proposition. He held court, for years, received homage and issued decrees, and when he needed revenue levied on the stock exchange, finding a handful of $20 gold pieces always ready. He died sitting straight upright in his little cubby-hole room, wearing his full dress uniform. The city gave him a grand funeral. San Francisco was proud of her emperor. They never did learn anything about him.

This department was never particularly partial to kings, but in addition to child refugees it might be a nice idea for each city over here to adopt a king, or a prince or duke. Hollywood, of course, would get Zog of Albania—now in London and fixing to sail for America, according to news reports—a "swingtime king" who installed in his Graustarkian palace a 40-piece American jazz band and became one of the best hoofers in his kingdom.

Philadelphia probably would put in a bid for the Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxembourg, a thrifty homebody, now in Quebec. The news is that, if England falls, she and her six children will come to the U. S. A. She knits; plays the piano; is a fluent linguist and rears her children beautifully. There might not be any bidders for old Ferdinand of Bulgaria, the butterfly collector. He has a knack for pageantry, however, which might interest New Orleans.

In case the above should appear to be a callous reference to tragic unhappiness, the main idea is that this democracy might well accord a certain respect to fugitive royalty because it appears to have something it really believes in.

AT MIAMI, FLA., in October, 1934, John Dwight Sullivan, then commander of the New York department of the American Legion, urged the Legionnaires to concentrate less on more and bigger bonuses and to center their efforts on understanding and supporting the government in constructive undertakings. He emphasized the need for co-operation as citizens rather than activity as a pressure group. His was a scholarly essay on citizenship.

Now Mr. Sullivan has placed before the convention of the New York County Legion a proposal, for a single, unified United States air force, in which all air arms of all services would be under a single command. Mr. Sullivan is chairman of the Legion's national aviation committee. He is a New York lawyer and an alumnus of Princeton university.

He has been active in the furtherance of civil and military aviation for many years and was appointed a member of the New York state aviation commission by Governor Roosevelt in 1930. He is 47 years of age, scholarly and ascetic in appearance, preaching social responsibility in the Legion for more than a decade.

He insists that the organization cannot attain its high purpose without widening activities in political education, and an informed attitude on basic questions of domestic and foreign policy.

Transformation of Gram's Old Buffet

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

YOU have heard quite a good deal in these articles about Grandmother, who is just "Grand" to her family. Also about her favorite grandson, Bill, and his up-and-coming bride, Mary — the same for whom Gram made the stunning rag rug in Sewing Book 3. Then there is Bill's kid sister, Betsy, who streamlined the old iron bed illustrated in Book 3. You all know "Mom," too. She has become almost famous because of her curtains and slip-covers and "The Rug That Grew Up With the Family." And there is "Dad" who is handy with hammer, saw and screw driver.

Well, recently the family has "ganged-up" on Gram about her fancy out-of-date buffet. They think she deserves and can afford something new. Gram decided to get rid of the buffet, then Mary said that she wanted it! This sketch shows you one of the things she and Bill did with it. Watch next week for what became of the mirror and legs.

The only person who ever played a part on the screen that she had played in real life in a famous historical event was Madame Ada Bodart, declares Collier's. In 1922 she underwent much questioning by German army officers about her friend, Nurse Edith Cavell. In 1927 she played the part of herself in the British film, "Dawn," which was the story of this English nurse who was executed for having helped Allied soldiers escape from Belgium.

VERY GREEN

The following is stated to be true—but not by us!
The owner of a cattle ranch in Oklahoma worried because his pastures were dry and his cattle were not fattening. So he bought 500 pairs of green goggles and fitted them on his cows.
The animals were shipped to market in prime condition, and the rancher insists it was because they ate the shriveled grass which looked green through the spectacles.

SHEEP RAISING YIELDS PROFITS

Breeding, Management and Feeding Vital Factors.

By L. I. CASE

Growers who make the most money from their sheep and who receive top prices for their lambs and wool aren't turning this trick by accident.

They have learned something about the many factors which contribute to growing a product in ready demand by the market. Chief among these factors are good breeding, feeding, and management practices.

In breeding, the successful sheepman is careful to select short-legged, compact, blocky rams rather than the long-legged, coarse, upstanding type. Then he ships to market each year his wether lambs and part of his ewe lambs but holds back the best ewe lambs for replacing old and poor-producing members of the flock.

Good feeding, placed by many sheepmen ahead of good breeding, is likewise highly important in the production of high-grade market animals. Plenty of milk is probably the most important feed item in producing top-notch lambs. This means that the ewes must be fed for milk production.

Many growers feed their lambs some grain in addition to the milk. This is often placed in a creep where the lambs may help themselves without being disturbed by the older sheep.

In addition to good feeding and good breeding, there are a large number of approved management practices that the most successful sheepmen follow. One of the most important is a regular monthly drenching for the control of internal parasites.

'Frame' Vegetable Plots Are Proving Successful

Farm families in sections of the country subject to excessive heat and insufficient rainfall have found that they can still raise enough fresh vegetables for home use by planting frame gardens.

Though they have been used by some farmers for a number of years, it was not until the past year that their use became widespread. The Farm Security administration has sponsored the gardens as an aid to a balanced diet, especially where drought has prevented farmers from growing many vegetables for home consumption.

Many of the farmers have used scrap lumber in constructing the frame. It is usually four or five feet wide, 12 to 18 inches high, and as long as desired. Frequently a subirrigation system is installed to improve production. This requires less water and less labor than surface irrigation—nor does the garden crust over. Homemade concrete tiles, or even tin cans are used for subirrigation. They are placed in rows two or three feet apart the length of the garden plot at a depth of 12 to 14 inches, and connected to the water supply. Over this system is laid fertile soil. Sacks can be placed around the sides to give protection from the wind and sun. A thin cloth is spread over the top to protect the green stuff from excessive heat or cold.

As soon as the soil has been cleared of one crop, it can be replanted. Thus, the same families have fresh vegetables most of the year around. These frame gardens cut down the grocery bill, but another important function is supplying food with some of the vitamins necessary for proper nutrition and good health.

Aiding Farm Migrants

"While federal agencies have been acting to help the migrants already on the road, their main efforts," Secretary Wallace recently explained to the senate civil liberties committee, "have been devoted to checking migration at its source. For every dollar which the Farm Security administration has used to aid migrants in California, for example, it has used $20 for the rehabilitation of needy farm families in the five states from which most of the Pacific coast migrants originally came—Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Arkansas, and Missouri. Throughout the nation it has used nearly $480,000,000 in the last five years to help low-income farm families get a new foothold in their home communities."

Candling Tests Quality

More poultrymen—particularly those who sell direct to housewives or local retailers—should candle their eggs before selling them. Sometimes an absolutely fresh, new-laid egg will be unsuitable for food, and if delivered the reputation of the producer, because of a bloody white, a blood spot, or meat spot. On the average farm, candling will take only a few minutes daily. A length of stove pipe and a light make a good candle.

Storm troopers with arms linked hold back the crowds as Adolf Hitler, leader of the Reich, returns to Berlin in triumph after the successful military operations of his armies in France. # Queen Bess' Silk Stockings

In the third year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth her silk woman, Mistress Montague, presented this redoubtable daughter of Henry VIII a pair of black silk knit stockings for a New Year's gift, relates Robert Cortes Holliday in "Unmentionables: From Fig Leaves to Scanties." These articles pleased her so well that she sent for Mistress Montague and asked her if she could help her to any more.

Mistress Montague answered, saying: "I made them very carefully of purpose only for your majesty, and seeing these please you so well, I will presently get more in hand."

"Do," said the queen, "for indeed I like silk stockings so well, because they are pleasant, fine and delicate, that henceforth, I will wear no more cloth stockings."

No man is indispensable. When one gets to thinking he is, he is either on his way out, or is a budding dictator.

Cows are subject to 12 different diseases that are communicable to man; dogs eight and cats five; yet most people seem to be unaware that such dangers exist. If cows are tested for TB, we think it is sufficient, forgetting the rabbit fever and other prevalent diseases that can be traced right to the milk we are drinking.

The city council is striving to keep step with the beautifying movement among towns, and instructions have been issued to discourage junk yards near the highway within the city limits. With the nice entrance parks on each side of the town on Highway 66, tourists get a very favorable impression of McLean's civic pride, but a junk yard or two on the highway can quickly kill such an impression.

The Lynn County News asks if there are any Brass Collar Democrats left, after showing that most every prominent Democrat from the President down has booted the ticket at some time in his life; in fact, the News says that many people ask if there are any Democrats left. The time has passed when party label means much, and most people realize it. There is much more in getting the right kind of man elected than in any certain party being victorious.

Civilization is judged, among other things, on how the community cares for those who have passed on. McLean has made sporadic attempts to beautify and care for Hillcrest cemetery, but much remains to be done if it is to show proper respect for the dead.

The Lions Club planted a number of shade trees at one time and all, with one or two exceptions, are living, but the place should be surrounded with a fence, and prices for lots should be equalized and raised in line with the times. There are enough unsold lots to insure perpetual care if prices were raised in line with other cemeteries. Grave spaces should be sold instead of whole lots, as many people need only the one space, and when the whole lot is sold it takes just that much land off the market that should be bringing in funds for care.

The colored preacher was describing the "bad place" to a congregation of awed listeners.

"Friends," he said, "you has seen melted iron runnin' out of a furnace, has you? It am white hot, sizzlin' and hiss'n'. Well, dey use dat stuff for ice cream in de place I se tellin' you about."

Playfoot—Your face is familiar. Haven't I seen you somewhere?

A TRIBUTE TO DADDY

By Nerine Smith Hicks

In death's cold sleep, he's gone away. From this old earth he's gone to stay;

He's reaping now his great reward To which he has always looked forward.

Although to us it seems so sad The Lord would take one oh so glad To live and see his friends each day, Work and live, and also pray.

But now in his home on heaven's shore He'll never have to suffer more His pains of life that were so great He never more will have to take.

It seems just like an angel's gone That's tired of earth and all its wrongs. He's gone to meet his loved ones there.

And that I'll meet him is my prayer. He was my daddy—I loved him so— If only now he could just know.

It seems just like I'm almost blind, My brightest star has ceased to shine But still my memories are so sweet, How his bright smile he'd always greet.

He dedicated his whole life To others who have worked in strife. His worries he would never show; When he came home we would not know.

Although his mind would troubled be The brighter side he'd always see. He always tried to help the one When in sorrow to him would come. He'd always say, "Don't be afraid, Tomorrow is another day."

When life seemed darkest he would say, "The darkest hour is just before day."

We wonder why the Lord above Would take a life so dearly loved. But He knows best—we know not why He moved his home into the sky.

For some great purpose he is gone To meet his Lord in his new home And some great day I'll meet my dad In his new home in another land.

And when that great day comes to me, I'll be so glad his face to see. No more I dread death's fatal sting For now I know he waits for me And the sweetest thought to me will be Of going home my dad to see.

AUTO QUIZ NO. 10

Answers

1. c. clear. Note that this question refers to fatal accidents. Most of us have learned to fear snow, rain and fog, and we drive accordingly. There are many minor mishaps in such weather, but because few of us drive at high speeds under these conditions, fatal accidents occur more rarely than one would suspect.

2. f. 720 feet. As speed in increased, the car requires an increased turning radius. This radius increases as the square of the speed. Thus, when speed is doubled, the safe turning radius is quadrupled; when speed is tripled the safe turning radius is nine times longer. An appreciation of these facts will explain many accidents on curves.

3. c. high. Under any other conditions this would be considered a driving error. Using the gentler gear maintains the light friction which exists between the tires and ice, mud or clay. Be sure, however, that you engage the clutch with all possible care and slowness.

"Bridget, will you stand at the door and call the guests' names as they arrive?"

"That I will, ma'am. It's what I've wanted to do for many a day."

M. M. Newman made a business trip to Pampa the first of the week.

The Navy Department shares private businessmen's idea that pressing documents can be hurried through the barricade of office red tape if specially marked for immediate attention. The trouble with this system, as the Navy Department discovered, is that people get used to any sort of immediate-attention mark, and you have to resort to a more stimulating one. Long ago, a Navy Department official got some little pink slips marked "EXPEDITE," "URGENT." This was followed by "RUSH." Came the inevitable time when documents marked "RUSH" were discovered days later, buried in somebody's desk, and the high command realized that a new word was in order. Pressing papers are now marked "FRANTIC."—The New York.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

As Lynn came down the staircase she looked absurdly young. Wild thought as he watched. They went off down a winding path to the pool. There must have been twenty people gathered about, most of them with highballs. Wild took Lynn directly to his mother. She seemed so much younger than Lynn had imagined that the girl was startled.

"What in the world kept you two so long on a day like this?" demanded Mrs. Austin with a lovely smile for Lynn.

"I didn't get through work until 3:30, Mrs. Austin. I hope I didn't disturb things."

"Good girl!" thought Wild as he grinned down at his mother. First round to Lynn. Mrs. Austin looked speculatively at the girl.

"Why, she's lovely!" Mrs. Austin's heart contracted. She had had a hunch all along. Wild had been so different this Summer.

Mrs. Austin was a clever, charming woman and she adored her boy. She had seen one man make a disastrous marriage. She was determined that Wild would not be taken in the same way.

"This is my brother, Chuck, this Lynn," Wild was saying. Other introductions followed.

"Come, we'll take a plunge," Wild led her to the pool.

Lynn slid over the edge of the pool. It was wonderful to be swimming again. Wild took a running dive and was beside her.

"I'll teach you to dive one of these days," he promised.

The others were calling to each other across the water, laughing easily. Lynn felt a little out of things, and then chided herself for her thoughts.

"After all, I am an outsider."

Mrs. Austin gave the signal shortly to everybody that it was time to dress for dinner.

Dinner seemed interminable. Lynn sat down at the table with Wild, between his brother and a young man from Asheville. Coffee was served on the terrace. Then Mrs. Austin suggested bridge. Of course, Lynn did not play.

"Then that means one table's out, unless Wild will play," a pretty brunette moaned.

"Chuck won't, you know how he is," Mrs. Austin apologized for her elder son.

"Please sit in, Wild!" begged a pretty brunette, whose name was Marie.

Wild came over to Lynn with a shrug. "I guess I'm sunk. Never mind. They won't keep me late. Will you mind talking to Chuck?"

Lynn did, very much, and it was clear to her that Chuck was just as annoyed. But there was nothing to do but smile gracefully and accept the situation.

The five tables settled themselves and there was a lot of talk about stakes which Lynn did not understand. She went out on to the terrace. The night was gorgeous. Chuck followed her, glaring at his mother.

"Well, here we are!" he announced.

"Yes, here we are!" Lynn laughed. He was so frankly annoyed.

"I don't mind just being here alone. Run along. Really, I mean it."

"Mother would be furious. I can't."

"All right. Then let's promise each other we don't have to be polite. We'll just sit and brood!"

CHAPTER XV

Chuck laughed in spite of himself. "You're a funny kid, a lot younger than I thought you'd be."

"I'm nineteen."

"A terrific age!"

"It is. I feel a hundred years old."

"I suppose it's not much fun being on your own."

"It is, though. Things are going so well for me. I'm a lucky girl."

Chuck looked down at the white blur of her profile.

"I didn't suppose working girls like to work." He was quite sincere.

"There's where you're wrong. I've not had an easy time since I got out of high school. But it is wonderful when you feel secure, able to take care of yourself."

Chuck was a little abashed. He had not expected such candor.

"They'd come to a stone bench and Chuck sat down and lighted a cigarette."

"What do you, 19, know about troubles?"

"I know what it means to be hungry, not to know where my next meal is coming from or where I'm going to sleep! That's trouble enough!"

"Are you serious? A pretty girl like you?"

"Certainly, I am! The trouble with people with money is that they hunt around to find something to be unhappy about. I see it in the shop. Most of those wealthy women I'd hate to change places with them."

"What do you know about life?"

"I do. My wife has left me for another man. I haven't seen my son in almost a year, don't even know where he is. She's using him for a settlement. Those are the bald facts. Everybody knows them, you'll hear from the girls before you leave!"

"You sound as though you minded the gossip more than the loss of your family."

Chuck struck the bench with his hand. Lynn suddenly felt sorry for him, for it was plain he was suffering.

"That's a lie! I loved them! I suppose I still do. But, God—when your wife runs off with your best friend! I did everything for her, everything. She never had anything until I married her—"

How different Chuck was from Wild; "I wonder what she'd say?" Lynn spoke her thoughts before she realized what she said.

"What do you mean?"

"That maybe a gorgeous home and money were not enough."

"What more could a woman want?"

"Companionship, sympathy, understanding. I'd die, I think, without them."

Nobody had ever before talked to the eldest son of the Austin millions like that.

"She had a string of pearls which had belonged to a Queen."

"I imagine one might be very lonely here, if one didn't belong."

"She didn't belong. I admit that!" Chuck turned impatiently. "She showed me how much she didn't belong!"

"Did she take the pearls when she left?"

"No; she had the decency to leave them."

"You shouldn't complain then."

Chuck had a sudden desire to slap this impertinent young person's face. He turned, realized she was smiling.

"You're nice, only you're afraid everybody's after you for your money! You're nice yourself, you know, and very handsome."

Chuck had the grace to laugh a little. "I'm just a bitter old man crying for the moon," he said, a little shamefacedly.

"You're not alone in that. We all do it. Only we cry for different things."

"What are you crying for? Hollywood, maybe?"

"Not Hollywood." She considered for a little, trying to be honest. "I wonder if I know?" "I'm just restless, that's all."

"Be careful and don't stub your pretty toes," Chuck warned.

Talking seemed to help Chuck. This girl was not of their world, she wouldn't be looking at him across from dinner tables, with pity in her eyes!

"I hate pity. That's what I get now! You see she was pretty. She worked for me. My secretary. They tried to stop me, but I wouldn't listen. At first we were happy and I adored the boy. Then things went to pot. She didn't care about my friends, they didn't care about her. I suppose she was lonely—"

Chuck talked for a long time. Then he stopped as suddenly as he started. "What a bore this must have been for you."

"No. I like you. You're really nice and kind, underneath."

"And you're certainly a candid young person! Chuck stood up. "We better be getting back or the tables will start."

The place seemed full of young people, and Wild was talking to a beautiful blonde whose name was Heloise. Then suddenly Lynn saw Terry McNair.

"Lynn!" He came rushing over to her. Lynn was in a panic at what he might say.

"That snake Wild never told me you were here!" He took her hand.

"She's been in the garden round manning Chuck," Marie North said with a laugh. Mrs. Austin was standing nearby. She prayed Terry might be discrete.

"You look lovely in that white shawl, Lynn," Terry rattled on. Reminds me of Florida."

Mrs. Austin made a mental note to speak to Terry when the opportunity arose, and it came then, for Mr. Austin was presented to Lynn. Wild joined Lynn and his father.

The girl was telling Mr. Austin about the little Vermont town where she was born. And then Austin began a long story about his afternoon's golf, of which Lynn understood hardly a word.

Wild realized suddenly how hard it was for Lynn to talk to these people. They had so little in common. He must be sure she had a nice time Sunday and Monday.

Wild apologized: "I felt miserable about deserting you tonight."

"You needn't. I enjoyed myself."

"You must be tired. I'll see you break away early. There'll be dancing tomorrow night, and it will be late then."

When she finally went to her room, Marie North came along with her for a little chat. Lynn had the feeling that the girl was frankly curious about her and had promised to make a report to the rest.

"That's a grand frock," Marie remarked as Lynn hung it in the clothes closet.

"It's one of Mme. Reanoud's. I model for her, you know."

"It must be fun working, having freedom from your damned family," Marie remarked.

When Marie had found out where Lynn lived in New York, and whether she liked posing for Bouchier, she left.

CHAPTER XVI

Sunday was a perfect day. Wild and Lynn, both up early, had breakfast with some of the golfers, and then the two of them went off for a sail. Wild took along a basket, and Lynn wore her bathing suit.

Lying on the deck, covered with sun-tan oil, Lynn relaxed, watched Wild sail the smart little catboat expertly. They were so perfectly happy there together, scooting along in the wind. Lynn did not stop to ask why.

Toward noon they made for a reef which offered some shade, and went for a swim. Later, lying in the shade, they had their lunch.

"This is perfect. You're a nice companion, Lynn." He turned over and smiled up at her. "You know something I've always wondered. How did you get back up North?"

Lynn's heart was pounding. She felt there was danger ahead. Finally she answered: "Rene."

"Rene?"

"I've meant to tell you the whole story, Wild." Lynn made a resolve to tell the truth, then and there.

"You remember the car you chased that night? I was in the back seat, hidden."

"You wretch! If I'd only found you then! Think of the trouble it would have saved me." Lynn's eyes widened in surprise. "Don't you know I moved heaven and earth to find you?" He was suddenly serious.

"I had no idea."

"Well, I did. I never forgot you. I tried but I couldn't." He raised himself on his elbow. Suddenly he took one of her hands, brushed the sand from its palm and kissed it.

"I must tell him!" Lynn tried to draw her hand away.

"I'm pretty much off the deep end about you, Lynn. You know that." He drew her to him, lifted her face to his.

"Please."

"Sweet!" He kissed her suddenly, holding her close.

"Wild, please!" Lynn struggled away from him. "There's something I want to tell you. I—"

"What does anything matter—"

"Wild, Rene came north in a trailer. He didn't have much money, but he let me come along. I tried to pay my way by cooking our meals—"

"You mean you lived with him in his trailer?"

"Yes."

"For how long?"

Lynn tried to explain the whole thing, their arrival in New York, Rene's illness, and no money. She hesitated once, and then decided not to mention Mr. Mortimer. Lynn was horrified at how difficult that story was to tell. It sounded bald and cheap as she recounted it, Wild's eyes on hers.

"You were with him for weeks and months?"

"Yes."

"Were you in love with him, Lynn?"

"Of course, not. But he is the kindest person I've ever known."

"You weren't — sweethearts, Lynn?" Lynn's wide brown eyes met Wild's squarely.

"We weren't sweethearts, Wild, ever."

"I believe you, darling." He took her in his arms. "Now, never speak of that again. Never! It is forgotten!"

"But there's more"—Lynn made one more try to tell him about the wedding. How could she? It seemed so improbable, nobody would believe it.

"Not for you and me. I can read between the lines. You looked after him when he was sick, supported him until he got well. That's it, isn't it?"

"I owed it to him."

"And your debt's paid." Wild's arms were about her again. "Look at me!" Lynn buried her face in his shoulder to hide the tears in her eyes. But Wild persisted.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By HAROLD L. LUNDQUIST, D. D., Dean of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for August 4

Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.

THE TWO WAYS

LESSON TEXT — Psalm 1: Matthew 7:24-27
GOLDEN TEXT — For the Lord knoweth the way of the righteous; but the way of the ungodly shall perish.—Psalm 1:6.

The most important thing in life is living. That is not an attempt to make a striking statement, but a sincere effort to present a fact which too often escapes our attention. We are so concentrated upon making a living, or making money, or making a name for ourselves, that we often fail to make a life. God is more concerned about what we are than what we do.

There are two ways—the right way and the wrong way. We build our life either on the true foundation or the false. There is no middle way, no half-good foundation. We must choose, and it is either one or the other.

I. Two Roads (Ps. 1).
Scripture is not at all concerned about mixing figures of speech, so long as the truth is graphically expressed and fully understood. Here it speaks of a man walking by a river, the chaff of the threshing floor; and then returns to the figure of walking in the way. All of these present the same truth, for essentially the idea is that of the two ways in which men walk.

1. Choosing the Way (vv. 1, 4, 6). Even the choice of his way of life marks a man as either blessed or wicked. Some seem to think that they can choose or just drift into the wrong way and still have hope that all will be well. Their choice, or their failure to choose, has put them in the one class or the other.

Making a choice is a vital and serious matter. Let us do it carefully. Walking in the counsel or philosophy of the wicked soon results in a man lingering in the way of sinners, and before he is aware of it he will find himself so at home, that he will sit among them and scoff.

2. Continuing in the Way (vv. 2-4). The man who will permit the law of God to control every detail of life night and day will never go astray, but will prosper in everything he does. Observe that to prosper does not necessarily mean to have money, position or recognition in this world. It means to be a success in the thing which God has given one to do.

Much that this world calls prosperity is nothing but an empty show, while at the same time some lives which the world says have been wasted are prosperous in the sight of God because His will has been done.

3. At the End of the Way (vv. 5, 6). Every road of life comes to an end. "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment" (Heb. 9:27). Ah yes—the judgment—what will it be in your life and in mine?

The wicked cannot stand in the presence of the divine Judge. All the bold front and boastful talk which went over so well before men, loses its flavor and the wicked man can only expect judgment. It is a dark and dreadful scene, but man need not go in the way which ends there, but may turn to God in faith and repentance.

II. Two Houses (Matt. 7:24-27).
Two men build houses evidently much alike, but we find that there is a great difference between them.

1. The Builders (vv. 24, 26). "Wise" and "foolish" are the builders, and what made them so was their choice of a foundation. No matter how brilliant a man may seem, to be in the learning of this world, if he rejects God's Word he is foolish and bound to suffer the loss of everything.

2. The Foundations (vv. 24, 26). The foundation of life is really everything. Built on the sands of human philosophy or personal desire and in the rejection of God's will, man prepares only for disaster. But—and here is a glorious thought—the Son of God says that if a man will hear His sayings and build on them, no storm can destroy his building. Blessed assurance!

3. The Testing (vv. 25, 27). The time of testing always comes. It may come early in life, or it may be delayed, but be certain that it will come. To the believer in Christ it is only that—a testing, to prove that his house will stand. But to the one who has rejected Christ the testing time brings dreadful destruction.

Shining in the Heart.
God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shined in our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ.—II Corinthians 4:6.

There's the Danger.
If men make their plan of service and then ask God to help them, they may, by that very assertion of self, quench the Holy Spirit.

MAKE it in a few hours, and wear it day after day after day! You can see, from the small diagram sketch, how easy this dress is to put together—merely five pieces, including the sleeves, and the only detailing consists of a few simple darts at the waistline. But you can't really tell until you get it on, how easy it is to wear and work in, how unhampering and becoming. The waistline looks slim but is completely unrestraining—nothing about the dress to catch you up short when reaching into the top shelf or dusting down the stairs.
The front fastening makes it easy to get into. This is an easily tubbable dress, too. Make up

ACYCLE OF HUMAN BETTERMENT

ADVERTISING gives you new ideas, and also makes them available to you at economical cost. As these new ideas become more accepted, prices go down. As prices go down, more persons enjoy new ideas. It is a cycle of human betterment, and it starts with the printed words of a newspaper advertisement.

"LOVE OF TRUTH"

Among those thrown into prison in Germany last fortnight were six individuals found guilty of using their ears. Their crime was the monstrous one of listening in on radio programs broadcast from foreign lands.

These six vile criminals had the temerity to suppose that God gave them their sense of hearing without any strings attached—as if God (Who is a good Nazi) would have thus sabotaged a law of Der Fuehrer! In their poisonous pluto-democratic baseness, they were stupid enough to assume that if dogs and monkeys are free to absorb sound, human beings must be also—as if there were no difference between a human being and a dog or a monkey!

To what lengths will perfidy go! These six pairs of polluted ears were a clear menace to the Fatherland. For if the free exercise of ear's sense of hearing were allowed, what could Nazidom expect? Why, before long people would begin to imagine they were at liberty to smell anything, see anything, talk anything, and even think anything!

Considering the immensity of their crime, the six listeners-in were lucky to get off with nothing worse than three years in jail. If Adolf Hitler were a man of harder heart, he would have smashed in their ear-drums, gouged out their eyes and cut off their tongues—just to be on the safe side. But Nazi justice is sweet-tempered, and anyhow most Germans realize that foreign radio stations tell nothing but lies. Or, as the official report on this case put it: "In Germany everyone listens only to the German word. The love of truth of the German news policy is recognized throughout the world." Of course.—Pathfinder.

HAT TRICK

This trick is frequently found on the program of some of the best jugglers, but it can easily be learned and performed by almost any boy or girl. All it takes is the time to practice.

The equipment can readily be made at home. Take a dowel stick about two feet long, and in the end of it hammer a nail, allowing it to project about three-sixteenths of an inch. Then cut off the head of the nail and file it to a point.

For the trick use a soft round hat. Toss the hat into the air before you, making it spin. As the hat descends, catch the brim on the side lightly with the spinning stick and give it an easy upward push. This will renew its spinning and cause it to ascend again. Do this each time the hat comes down, thus keeping it spinning in the air.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Some time ago Bernard Shaw was interviewed by a reporter from an English newspaper, who asked Shaw whether he believed in advertising. Shaw promptly answered:

"Decidedly so, and I have my reasons. It is known that a codfish lays ten thousand eggs in one day, but it is done silently. Well, the chicken lays one egg and cackles. Nobody eats codfish eggs, and everybody eats chicken eggs."

My feet, they haul me round the house.

They hoist me up the stairs; I only have to steer them, and they ride me everywhere.

—Gelett Burgess.

Cop—Who was driving when you hit that car?

Drunk (triumphantly)—None of us; we were all in the back seat.

MY APPRECIATION

to all those who so loyally supported me in the primary election.

I will appreciate your continued support in the second primary.

Thank You Friends!

Just a simple thank you seems inadequate to express my appreciation toward the good friends of the 31st Judicial District who, by their support and votes, nominated me for the office of District Attorney. But when made with all the sincerity and gratefulness which I feel for the expression of confidence as shown in Saturday's primary election returns, "thank you, friends," conveys a world of meaning.

Your decisive approval will be a constant incentive to discharge the duties of the office in a highly acceptable manner.

Carbon Monoxide, even when it fails to kill, may injure a person seriously, report Drs. Harvey G. Beck, Wilmer H. Schulze and George M. Suiter, in the American Medical Association's Journal. The organs most seriously damaged by the gas, which affects the oxygen content of the blood, are the heart and brain.
