TIGERS WIN WITH 58 TO 8 SCORE

The McLean Tigers came back with a rush over the Wheeler Mustangs Friday night when they rolled up 58 points to the Mustangs' 8. Coach Sewell Cox never had a first team on the field at any time, giving every team member the exception of the cripples a chance to play.

John Kelly Lee was kept under the weather and Hill made touchdowns for the Tigers. The weather man had it in for game, most people staying away from the field because of the cold wind. Henderson invades the Tigers' lair every evening of this week and the boys are expected to furnish stiff competition. This will be next to the last game of the season, next week seeing the game with Shamrock on Tiger

WITH THE CHURCHES

ASSEMBLY OF GOD CHURCH

R. L. Franks, Pastor

Did you know that on October 1, 1939, America had a crime army of 4,600,000? This number equaled more than all students in schools and colleges; it was four times greater than the pupils in public schools. This army cost our nation $15,000,000,000, which is twice the cost of maintaining the Federal government; six times more than is needed to finance the public school system; and is an amount 25 times greater than that contributed to church enterprises, according to J. Edgar Hoover. Judges testify that 97% of the youths convicted of crime have had no religious training.

With these facts before us, let us be more diligent in our church work, and take our children to Sunday school.

Last Sunday evening we organized the young people of our church into a Christ's Ambassadors group. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Joyce Greenhouse, president; R. L. Owens, vice president; Miss Lois Owens, secretary-treasurer.

Our services are as follows:

Sunday school 10 a. m., C. R. Phillips, supt.

Sunday morning worship at 11, the pastor speaking.

Christ's Ambassadors service at 6:15 p. m.

Sunday evening service at 7:15, Mrs. Franks speaking.

Prayer meeting Thursday evening at 7:30, with the pastor giving a Bible lesson on "Perfection."

You will receive a hearty welcome at all our services.

Evening worship at 6:30. Our new plan for the evening worship met with a hearty response last Sunday. Worship with us this week and bring your sandwiches so that we may all enjoy a time of fellowship as we have our supper after the worship and meetings of the age groups. The pastor will meet with the adults, Mrs. Myrose with the juniors, Mrs. H. E. Franks with the seniors, and there will be a combined group for the primary and beginner ages.

The session meets Monday at 7:15. The ladies meet Tuesday at 2:30 in the church parlor.

The boy scouts meet Monday at 7:30, Don Alexander, scoutmaster.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Paul T. Brock, Pastor

We had a good number of children in Sunday school last Sunday. We are glad to have children in Sunday school as they will make our churches of tomorrow.

At the 11 o'clock service we brought a message on the subject, "What Is Man?" We had a beautiful spirit in this service. Our people seem encouraged and we feel that we will do great things this year.

Our Sunday school begins at 9:45 with Jim Tedder as superintendent. We urge all people to go to church somewhere.

Evening service at 7:15. Everyone welcome.

Public Warned of Fake Security Cards

Workers, employers, and the public in general are warned in a statement by Dewey Reed manager of the Amarillo office of the Social Security Board, to be on the lookout for individuals representing themselves as salesmen for social security cards, who are traveling through certain parts of Texas and adjoining states and selling fictitious social security account number cards to unsuspecting persons. When last heard from, these so-called salesmen were operating in San Antonio and Houston, as well as in the smaller towns adjacent to these cities.

In the Houston area salesmen were receiving 25c for each card and giving as a token to the purchaser a "key ring." In San Antonio, the price was $1.25 each, according to information furnished the board by purchasers.

"The card resembles the official social security account card with the exception that it does not contain the seal of the Social Security Board," Reed stated, "and on the face of the card, printed in bold type, is the word 'Specimen.' The serial number is 078-05-1120. The card is similar to the type usually used as a sample by some stores in the sale of bill folds and card cases."

All persons are warned against purchasing such cards as described above since they are not to be recognized by employers or by the Social Security Board.

THANKSGIVING NOV. 27

McLean will observe the traditional date for Thanksgiving this year, according to Governor Stevenson's proclamation for Nov. 27.

The schools will observe the day and it is expected that the whole community will line up with the schools in the observance of the day.

It has been promised that this year will end the confusion as to the dates, President Roosevelt saying that the change in date did not accomplish what it was intended to do, in making Christmas buying more profitable to merchants on account of allowing a longer time between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Girls, another style is being worn in dear old McLean high school. Gloria Wilson wears red wool hose with black and white checked pinafore apron and red blouse. Who knows, maybe you'll be the next to wear 'em.

Maudie Dell Woods wears a cute combination skirt and blouse. Her skirt is navy alpaca crepe and her blouse is red with white checks. Red socks and brown oxfords set off her costume.

Mary Lee Abbott wears a black pleated skirt and white blouse topped with a red jerkin. She wears the ever-faithful two-tone brown oxfords with red socks.

Tigers Entertained at Supper

The Tiger football team was entertained Friday evening with a Halloween supper given by J. A. Meador.

Others present at the supper were Floyd Shawver, Dr. Batson and C. A. Cryer.

Speeches of appreciation for the dinner and for the followers of the team were given by Coach Cox and Mr. Cryer.

The entire team expressed their appreciation for the dinner.

Rev. Huber Is Guest Speaker

The journalism class of the high school enjoyed an instructive survey by Rev. C. O. Huber, last Wednesday, on "the place of the newspaper in the community, the nation and the world."

Rev. Huber, who has been a member of many news organizations, brought to light many interesting facts in the field of journalism.

He spoke first on the newspaper in the community and the possibilities of the city with such an industry. "The newspaper is responsible for the growth of a small town into a large city," he said. "The newspaper is also a major factor in the world-wide developments of today," the speaker added.

After his interesting illustration, Rev. Huber answered many questions for the class.

He liked "Power Dive" better than any other movie. He likes red and blue colors, hamburgers and coney islands. He dislikes silly people. His ambition is to fly to the moon backwards.

She dislikes conceited and hateful people. Her ambition is to swim the Atlantic.

After the church and the school, the free public library is the most effective influence for good in America. The moral, mental and material benefits to be derived from a carefully selected collection of good books, free for the use of all the people, cannot be over-estimated. No community can afford to be without a library.—Theodore Roosevelt.

Why We Quit Giving Free Ambulance Service

The following letter from the State Board of Insurance Commissioners explains why we were forced to quit giving free ambulance service to our policy holders:

Austin, Texas, September 30, 1941.

Duenkel-Carmichael Burial Association, Pampa, Texas.

Gentlemen:

Complaints have come to the Board of Insurance Commissioners to the effect that certain associations are offering free ambulance service, either directly or indirectly, as an inducement to persons to become a member or remain a member in the association. It is, therefore, being called to your attention and the attention of all other burial associations that it is a violation of the law for any association or agent to offer, give, or allow any inducement whatever, not specified in the policy, in connection with the sale of insurance or the continuance thereof. Any association violating this law, either directly or indirectly, will subject itself to the possible revocation of its certificate or authority to operate a burial association.

You are also advised that ambulance service is not a benefit authorized by the law under which you operate, whether a premium is collected therefor or not. The issuance of such benefits is therefore illegal.

All associations operating contrary to the laws pointed out herein are requested to terminate such illegal operations immediately. Any association hereafter found to be violating these laws, or any other insurance laws will be called before the Board of Insurance Commissioners to show cause why its right to operate should not be forfeited.

Your cooperation in the enforcement of the laws under which you operate will be appreciated. It is the intention of your Board of Insurance Commissioners to see that all laws pertaining to insurance passed by your Legislature are enforced.

By securing your willing and hearty cooperation, we believe that the enforcement of the laws pertaining to your association will be mutually profitable to you and the general public as well.

Enclosed herewith is a receipt form which you are requested to have signed by your President and Secretary-Treasurer acknowledging the receipt of this communication. Please return the receipt at once.

Very truly yours,

O. P. LOCKHART, Chairman
Board of Insurance Commissioners.

A GOOD NAME

In the long run the average opinion of the people with whom a man lives will be a pretty accurate description of his real character. If I want to know who you really are, let me go around in your community and ask your friends, your neighbors—yes, even your enemies, if you have any—just what kind of a man you are. If I average the opinions of you going over a long stretch of years, I will know you, the real man. If you want to know me, the real man, go among my neighbors, my friends, my enemies, if I have any, and find out what they think of me. And if you will do this for a long period of time, and get the average of these opinions, you will know just what my real character is. You will notice that I guard my statement by saying, "in the long run."

Popularity rises and falls as the years go by. A man may stand well in his community for a while and then something happens. He takes an unpopular side of some great civic or moral question and he loses his popularity. Then this may pass away and his former popularity come back.

On the Sunday of His last week Jesus entered Jerusalem in triumph with everybody crying, "Hail to the King." On the Friday the mob looked on Him suffering on the cross and mocked and reviled Him. Later on the world came to look upon Him as the Jew did on that Palm Sunday. If we were to judge Jesus from the human standpoint, we must look upon Him for the whole years of his ministry and the years of His eternal reign. To really know a man you must know him for a long time. I guard my statement in the second place by saying "the average opinion."

I know a preacher whose wife told me he was the best man in the whole world. There was some excuse for her making this statement, for she had only been married just one week. Others spoke about this husband and said he was not worth the powder to blow him up. It wouldn't be fair to take either of these extreme statements as describing the character of the preacher. We should average these extreme statements.

When William Jennings Bryan ran for president in 1896, he was a citizen of Lincoln, Nebraska. When the election returns came in he failed to carry his precinct, his ward, his city, and his state. On the day of his funeral the whole city mourned the loss of one whom they called their greatest and best citizen. It would not be fair to judge the "Great Commoner" by the verdict of the voters, nor by the enthusiastic eulogies at his funeral. If we average these opinions we will come to know just what kind of a man William Jennings Bryan was.

So I maintain that "in the long run" the average opinion of a man's neighbors, friends and enemies (if he has them), in the community in which he lives is a description of his real character. A man's character is what he really is and his reputation is what the community thinks he is. Character and reputation are then the same. If the good opinion of neighbors and friends is sought and gained. The Good Book says, "A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches." All set. Let's get a good name! Col. E. C. Clemens, in Journal Chronicle, Owatonna, Minnesota.

Palmino horses being as new and as gold nuggets on Broadway—is a real distinction to breed.

Ruth Farrell, freshman at University of Texas, has been experimenting with palminos on her ranch near Meridian for past two years.

"It's an uncertain job," says Ruth, "because you can never be sure that a palmino will result from even the most careful crossing. Three of ten is a high average."

Ruth recently sold a palmino, the best success, she affirms, comes in crossing a dun gold horse having a black mane and tail with a white or bay mare.—State Observer.

IN THE MATTER OF FRIENDSHIP

All that can be expected of any man is to make the best use of the things that are within his power. Only the contented man is rich; so we must look for the things that bring contentment, and first of these is to find a friend; and if you find two friends you are indeed a lucky man, and if you find three friends—real friends—then you are a rich and powerful man. In prosperity it is easy to find a friend, but in adversity it is most difficult of all things. No matter how small a man's means may be, if he gives of what he has to his friend it is the same as if it was a great amount. A man's pleasures are insured by having them with a friend and his griefs are reduced by securing the sympathy of a friend. The counsel of a friend is the best counsel because it will be true advice; for, when received from a mere acquaintance, it may be so filled with flattery that its value will be destroyed, and faithful and true counsel rarely comes excepting from the true friend. It is said that in youth we have visions and in old age dreams, and the vision and the dream may give us an ideal of perfection; but experience and large contact with men compel us to accept the man who measures in his virtues only to the substantial average. If we view a man as a whole and find him good as a friend, we must not be diverted from the happy average—the everyday, human average—by using a magnifying glass upon his faults or frailties. We must, in order to have and hold a friend, accept him as he is, demanding one thing in return for our affection—his fidelity.—Harry B. Hawes in Pathfinder.

IT'S YOUR LIFE!

The typical accident victim: He was a pedestrian.

He was over 40 years of age—by no means decrepit; nevertheless his eyesight and hearing had passed their peak efficiency and he was less alert and agile than he had been only a few years ago.

He had the usual worries that go with the adult life of the family bread-winner; he was frequently preoccupied, and occasionally downright absent-minded.

He probably had had a couple of drinks.

He had never learned to drive a car, and his walking habits had been formed when automobiles were both fewer and slower than they are now.

He was wearing dark clothing, and while the headlights of the oncoming car seemed blinding to him, his outline was scarcely discernible to the driver against the dark background of the pavement.

It was between six and seven o'clock on a late autumn evening, and he was struck just as he stepped out from between two parked cars preparatory to crossing between intersections on an unlighted street in a fairly large city. It can be you!

According to the best medicals that isn't supposed to happen. Maybe it's because Pedro, even at so benign an age, is still self-supporting (no dole, no WPA), maybe it's just an old Spanish custom.

SOUR GRAPES

"The fathers have eaten sour grapes, and the children's teeth are set on edge."—Ezekiel 18:2.

Yesterday I saw a babe whose mother is hopelessly insane and whose father is an habitual drunkard. What a ghastly heritage for any child! Yet the babe seemed fairly normal; and I thought how God, through Natural Law often seems to mitigate in some degree the consequences of our faults. However, it is too much to hope that the child will escape all suffering for the sour grapes its parents have eaten. The laws of inheritance cannot be evaded or repealed by any of us, but we can cease eating the sour grapes of sin and strive to make the best that is possible out of our inheritance and condition.

All history reveals that it is quite possible for men and women to accomplish noble and useful lives despite great handicaps, both inherited and acquired. It has been done again and again through all the centuries. The very laws of nature seem attuned to assist those who strive to do some good work in life. Let us never say, even to ourselves, "I have no chance or opportunity because of conditions over which I have no control," for this is never true. Some door of opportunity stands open before every man and woman of normal mentality, no matter how many sour grapes have been eaten in the past.—Rev. Edw. Worcester, in The Chaser.

"Five mornings a week, nine months a year, we mothers of Texas get our children ready for school. In our home and a million other Texas homes, that's one of the first and most important duties of a mother's day. Sometimes Dad finds out what a job it is when he has to do it by himself."

All of us want our children to have the best education possible. Most of us look to the public schools for this.

Fortunately, Texas has the best public schools in the South. Helping to build and operate them is the Texas petroleum industry which pays 24 million dollars a year in taxes for school purposes.

These petroleum taxes pay an average of one-fourth the cost of educating our children. Altogether, they meet the entire expense of schooling nearly 400,000 Texas boys and girls.

In addition, oil has contributed substantially to the 70 million dollar permanent school fund. Oil is also responsible for much of the 30 million dollar permanent university fund, which has made possible the expansion of the University of Texas and A. & M. College.

Furthermore, taxes on petroleum products add another 11½ million dollars a year for the schools of our State.

Our children get a better education today because of the Texas petroleum industry.

IT'S YOUR LIFE!

When your back wheels slide crazily and your heart sinks—you are driving too fast for safety. But how can you tell when you are likely to skid?

One way to find out is to try out your brakes on a slippery road while traveling at about 10 miles an hour. If your car tends to slide at this speed, be extremely careful at higher speeds.

Exactly what you do when your car is skidding depends on your driving experience. Here are some suggestions, however, that are well worth following:

1. Don't put your foot on the brake.
2. Don't throw out your clutch. It is better to stall your engine than to allow your car to waltz all over the road.
3. Take your foot off the gas.
4. To pull out of a skid, turn the steering wheel in the same direction that the rear of the car is sliding. You must be quick about this or the skid will be over and any damage likely to occur will be done.

Swerving suddenly or jamming on your brakes at high speed may cause skidding even on dry roads. A slight swerve or a sharp turn even at a reasonable speed on wet, oily, or icy pavements, or roads covered with soggy leaves may result in a disastrous skid. Smooth, worn tires and unequal brake or air pressure are also frequently the causes of serious skids.

Slipping on slippery or icy streets is often difficult. The first rule for safe stopping under these conditions is to begin slowing your car at some distance from the place where you wish to stop. At first, press your brake lightly and release almost at once. Then press it again, release quickly, and repeat. By using this method, instead of applying your brakes continuously, you can usually stop without skidding.

When you see an error in the paper remember the newspaper man has a perfect alibi. . . . A statistician has worked out the number of chances for mistake in one column of print. The number is 70,000 to 1. . . . In an ordinary newspaper column there are 10,000 letters; there are seven wrong positions that a letter may be put in; there are 70,000 chances to make an error and millions of chances for transpositions. . . . In the short sentence "to be or not to be," by transposition alone it is possible to make 2,758,009 errors. . . . So, there!

No Fable, This!

We have a tale that should interest every man and every woman who sells advertising, buys advertising, or uses advertising as a guide to purchases. Hark:

One of our friends decided to replace his four-year-old overcoat. Maybe his wife made the decision. No matter, it was made. A quick reading of several New York papers revealed the advertisements of several retail clothing stores, within a minute's walk of his Times Square office.

All featured overcoat values.

Quitting half an hour early, our friend visited one of the stores with which he had traded in the past.

He went to the overcoat department, looked over the articles advertised, then turned to some of higher price. He found what he wanted, at approximately twice the price mentioned in the papers, and he was content with his choice. The process had taken about 10 minutes, during which he had not even been given a "good afternoon" by the lone salesman on the floor, busy with the only other customer. He spent another nervous five minutes, peering at the coat racks. Then he stalked out the door and went home—wearing the old coat.

Next day, he tried his luck at another nearby store. The previous process was repeated to the last detail. Again he went home, wondering why clothiers who pay Times Square rents and New York City advertising rates do not employ enough clerks to extend at least civil courtesy to the traffic which advertising brings through their doors. And he wondered how many times a day these stores permit a customer with money in his pocket and an itch to buy to go out, not only empty-handed, but angry at an inefficient merchant.

Advertising did its job completely when it led the customer in either store, with a satisfied customer and a handsome profit, if either of two salesmen had done his job. It hasn't been completed yet; in fact, our friend may decide to keep his money in the bank and wear the old coat for the remainder of winter. And he'll wonder, if he does so, whether he or a dumb clerk is responsible for "slow business," "poor response to advertised sales," etc., that the retailers will chatter about at their next luncheon meeting.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK—We are quite certain that there is a chipping sparrow out our way which didn't stand still long enough to be counted, but at any rate Roger Peterson's Count Tory Peterson's national bird count of 750,000,000 receives respectful, even admiring attention, and no challenges or quibbles about it.

Concurrently the National Audubon society, of which Mr. Peterson is educational director, begins a drive for the protection of birds and other wild life in defense areas.

At the age of 26, Mr. Peterson proved that bird lore can be made to yield a lot more than mere bird seed. That was in 1934, when he published his book, "Field Guide to the Birds." As bird books go it was a best-seller, warmly praised not only by the somewhat esoteric cult of bird-fanciers, but by a much wider public, which appreciated its clarity and simplicity. There came other editions and then his "Field Guide to Birds of the West," and his "Junior Book of Birds," of 1939. All in all, Mr. Peterson's books and magazine articles were so successful that he has had plenty of time to count birds—even five billions of them.

He not only writes but illustrates his books, having emerged from the New York Art Students' league as a highly qualified decorative artist. He is known as the best American authority on field identification of birds.

Mr. Peterson had an adventure at the convention of the society at Cape May last year, which, so far as we can learn, was not picked up by the news hawks at the time. It seems a group of ornithologists, Peterson included, got up at 4:30 to lock a scheduled hawk migration. It didn't come off and all were downhearted until a rumor got round that a black-necked stilt had been seen near the lighthouse pond. There had been no stilt in this section since 1870.

The party set out for the spot. Finally far across the pond, inaccessible to any dry land approach, the bird was sighted. Mr. Peterson said it would be necessary to approach as near as possible, disturb the bird, and then observe its flight carefully. He and William Fish volunteered to brave the mud and cold. They waded in, and at times were up to their armpits in slimy mud. Finally Peterson waded his arms at the stilt. It didn't move. Approaching nearer, they discovered it was as stiff as a plank.

The convention finally ran down the story. The National Academy of Sciences at Philadelphia had had housecleaning and heaved out a lot of stuffed birds. Some rival birds of the Delaware valley had received the stilt and set it up across the pond.

JP IN Maine, on last summer's holiday, this writer talked with an old road-side philosopher who was concerned with problems arising from the lengthening of life—span in the "Age Movement" of New England.

"They don't do much dyin' up here," he said. "Down at West Newton, they had to shoot an old feller, just to start a graveyard."

Professor Ralph Barton Perry, of the faculty of philosophy at Harvard university, is similarly concerned about old age, but for a different reason. In a brilliant essay in a recent issue of the Princeton Alumni Weekly, he rallies the oldsters against being "hustled around by their juniors in politics; he notes the capitulation of wise old age to presumptuous youth, and challenges Rabbi Ben Ezra by insisting that there's no use growing old with him, or anybody else, if old-age is to be merely tolerated short-ender in the life sweepstakes. "The most striking evidence of the downfall of the aged," writes Professor Perry, "is to be found in the domestic circle."

The authority of the father was broken by the mother, and the children poured through the breach. The last remnant of paternal authority was the period in which the father was an ogre, who came home the end of the day to deal with the offenses. He was no longer a magistrate, only executioner.

But even this role disappeared in domestic criminology was demoralized and the child's insubordination was regarded as a personal problem, to be solved by love, peace and psychoanalysis.

PLAN BOX SILO ON LEVEL LAND

Is Good Substitute for the Trench Silo.

By E. R. EUDALY
(Dairyman, Texas A & M College Extension Service.)

Built above ground, a "box" silo is a substitute for a trench silo in regions where the land is more or less level and where keeping water out of a trench is a problem.

To construct such a feed container, build two parallel levees of dirt any height and width desired, then fill between the levees with silage and cover with earth. This sometimes is called a trench silo upside down. Two—in places where lumber is cheap it might be advisable to build the upside down trench out of lumber and tar paper. This is called a "box" silo.

It is not advisable to build a "box" of smaller dimensions than four feet between walls, six feet high and 20 feet long. Lesser space between walls would be hazardous since a little spoilage at the edges would be too high a percentage of waste. A minimum height of six feet is suggested because of settling and the possibility of some spoilage on top. If the silage settles a whole lot there might be a high percentage of spoilage.

Width and height may be as much as desired beyond the minimum footage as far as keeping of the contents of the silo is concerned. But the width should be regulated according to the number of livestock to be fed, the specialists advise. At least five cows are necessary to obtain the most success from a "box" silo.

The posts should be three feet apart in the row if one-inch lumber is used, but may be as much as 4 1/2 feet apart if using two-inch lumber. Shiplap lumber is best for siding, but rough sawed lumber may be used provided it is laid so that the inside of the wall will not be so rough as to break the lining paper. Tar, or asphalt, paper is recommended for covering the inside of the wall, and No. 9 galvanized steel wire, or the equivalent in strength, to tie the posts together at the top.

The silage at the open end of the box should slope from the ground to the top of the wall so that the end can be covered with earth. Only two or three inches of dirt may be used provided oats or barley is planted in it, and the earth kept moist until the grain makes enough growth to form a good root system and hold the dirt together to prevent cracking.

Seed Winter Oats for Successful Winter Crop

Many farmers have had excellent success in seeding winter oats in the fall as a cover crop, according to J. C. Hackleman, crops extension specialist of the University of Illinois college of agriculture, Urbana, Ill. The only trouble with using winter oats in the fall, he said, is that the crop is more apt to winter-kill than barley or rye. Oats also does not make as good a nurse crop as the other two crops because it makes a more leafy and dense growth and consequently shades the legumes more and probably consumes more moisture and plant food than would be used by a rye or barley crop.

When used as a winter cover crop, winter oats, barley or rye should be seeded a week or 10 days before the average date for seeding wheat, Hackleman said.

Although more apt to encourage chinch bug increases the following growing season, barley makes the best pasture of the three crops. If nurse crops of oats, rye or barley, instead of being harvested as grain, are pastured next spring, the land can be classified as soil-conserving under the AAA farm program.

Farm Notes

Spraying of certain chemicals has been found to hasten the maturity of potatoes on experimental plots at an Idaho research station.

Root rot fungus spreads by slow growth along roots from plant to plant, even when they are dormant, at the rate of a foot or so a month.

The annual output of United States fruit canning plants amounts to about 50,000,000 cases. Peaches lead with over 12,000,000 cases.

More commercial fertilizer was used by American farmers in 1940 than in any previous year.

One hundred per cent water-inflation of farm tires will be possible and economically practical as the result of developments by a large rubber company.

Only by the use of pressure is it possible to get the high temperature needed to kill organisms in nonacid vegetables which, if not destroyed, will likely cause spoilage.

Rayon Fabric Patterns Show New Emphasis on Originality

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NO LONGER are fine fabrics the exclusive property of the few people who can disregard cost. There's luxury for everybody these days, because of the advancement of rayon as a textile fiber during the last few years. Rayon has made possible the reproduction of all the magnificence of traditional quality cloths at prices well within the reach of modest budgets.

To the evening wear field, where luxury has always been the keynote, are contributed gorgeous fabrics worked with all the lavishness and richness the feminine heart could ask. Exquisite, for evening, is crisp rayon taffeta in enchanting colors and new effects. Such novel taffeta finishes as gleaming satin stripes, metal stripes and striking plaid effects with metal stripes and unusual color designs are seen in stunning bouffant gowns like the model pictured in the foreground of our illustration.

Beautifully adapted to the fluid molded lines of the current evening season, sleek rayon jersey brings its lovely draping quality to sophisticated dinner and evening inspirations. Jewel-toned rayon jersey falls in sleeky gleaming folds for the skirt and wide bishop sleeves of the glamorous dinner gown centered in this group.

The vogue for street-length informal dinner gowns has inspired the long-torso style which combines a rich black rayon crepe skirt with a smartly contrasting shaded rayon and metal striped bodice, as shown to the right. The long sleeves and low V-neck of the bodice are excellent fashion points, as is the graceful all-round pleated skirt.

Indispensable in the dinner and evening wardrobe are the rayon crepe frocks. Lovely versatile crepes, such as matelasse patternings, tree-bark effects and mossy finishes give pleasing variety. The exquisite grace of line expressed in the slender tiered frock to the left in the group interprets the beautiful draping qualities of mossy rayon crepe. In this instance the crepe is in a dusty rose, with the refined brilliance of cut steel at the draped neckline.

Large Patch Pockets

Extend the 'New Look'
Dresses and suits are very pocket-conscious this fall. Four seems to be the magic number for pockets and sometimes six—four on the long-torso jacket, distributed in two breast pockets and two hip pockets, with the skirt sporting two pockets on its own account.

Ingenious pocket arrangements are also expressed in connection with peplum flares. There are separate stole scarf affairs made to wear with practical daytime dresses that are finished off at each end with huge pockets. They have zip fastenings, all very practical and usable.

Tip to Toe—You'll

Be Wearing One Color
The latest turn of fashion is to carry out the costume ensemble in one color from head to foot. Very handsome indeed is an outfit that created quite a sensation in the grandstand parade at one of the important games this fall. This stunning ensemble, done in the new gold tone so smartly in fashion, included a fleece boxy top, a perfectly matched handknit two-piece dress and a turban. Costumes all in the widely heralded "black plum" are also outstanding in the autumn-winter collections. Brown and topaz colors are also very effective developed in single tones throughout.

Bangle Bracelets

Young girls are going in for a new hobby. It is the collection of bangles for their bracelets which are for the most part in silver. You can buy cunning little trinkets galore at the jewelry counters, and a most thriving business is going on in their sale. However, it makes it far more interesting to add the personal touch of dropping a hint to dotting relatives and friends that you would rather have a bangle to add to your collection than any other gift they could make to you.

Ostrich Trim

The much-beloved little pillbox hat is taking on new glory this season. Picturesque ostrich goes trailing down one side over the hair in a glamorous "portrait of a lady" manner. The huge profile berets are also dramatically ostrich-adorned.

Be Lovelier

"Only the brave deserve the fair"—and "only the fair deserve the brave." In these times when men are so occupied with defense, women and girls can maintain national morale only if they look their best. Just as soldiers, sailors and marines are required to keep their uniforms neat, to shave every day, to keep their nails in order, and to have good haircuts, so should women be especially careful of their clothes, their complexions, their hands and hair. The selection of stylish, becoming dresses and the use of cold cream, powder, lipstick and nail polish and attention to the hair are more important than ever before. Here is a lovely New York creation that carries out the trend of "dressier dresses" and feminine elegance with its smooth, slenderizing pockets and antique fligree gilt buttons.

CAGED!

Mrs. Waddle was in a state of excitement when the victrola arrived, and thinking to give the parrot a surprise she started the instrument off with "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

At the very first note Polly opened her eyes in surprise, then flew to her perch, where she rocked herself to and fro in astonishment.

"There, Polly!" said Mrs. Waddle, when the song had come to an end. "What do you think of that?"

"My word," shrieked the bird; "we've got the old man boxed up this time, and no mistake!"

Suggestion

The air raid warden had been testing gas masks, and had now come to the three old maids at the big house. Amelia and Jane greeted him and apologized for their sister's absence. The masks were adjusted, and the warden said: "Well, now I hope your masks are OK."

"Yes, thank you, they are," replied Amelia, "but what about our Rose's?"

The warden, taken aback, said: "Oh, that's not my job; but I think perhaps you could spray them."

The uncertainty of Armistice Day plans brought up the thought often expressed in this column, that we should decide at the first of the year just what holidays are to be observed locally, so that merchants and others can make proper plans. Claims are made that in some cases merchants do not observe their promise to close every time, but with everyone on notice that certain days are to be observed during the year, there would be no noticeable trade for anyone to lose on holidays.

The light attendance at last week's football game was disappointing to many. It just about made an all time low for Tiger Field. Of course, it was too cold and disagreeable for lots of people, but rabid fans have been known to suffer through much worse weather. If it was because the Tigers had dropped one game, it was hardly fair, as several things can happen before the season is ended, and second place at this stage is certainly more than most of the teams can boast. If the game is worth anything, it is worth supporting regardless of whether the team wins or loses. In fact, losses are valuable in that when they will find more losses than wins, and they need to discover the secret of being good losers—and this goes for the fans as well.

TEACHERS NOT APPRECIATED

Among the least appreciated professions is the teaching profession. Teachers generally are underpaid, but are expected to render the greatest service for the least reward.

On top of that, every parent believes his son and daughter perfect; that surely the teacher had no right to punish them. But don't do your child an injustice by criticizing a teacher for disciplining your youngster. You are doing him or her a greater injustice than any teacher could ever do—you are destroying his or her respect for constituted authority—the abundance of which we today are lacking—Noian County News.

CHILDISH ATTITUDES TOWARD PRAYER

There is probably more loose thinking and reckless talking about prayer than on any other subject in the realm of religion. This is partially due to the fact that prayer is the most vital experience that can enter into anybody's life. For that reason everybody at one time or another thinks about it and talks about it. I hear many people when talking of their experience in prayer tell about praying for a certain thing and it came to pass. Concerning that they say quite confidently, "God answered my prayer." Then they tell about praying for something else which they did not get. Concerning that they say with evident confusion and disappointment, "God did not answer my prayer." To anyone who thinks clearly, answering or not answering prayer seems almost childish. Does an earthly father answer his child's request only when he gives exactly what is asked for? Is God a churlish boor who hears the cry of one of His needy children and ignores it—giving no answer?

Various Answers

My negro friend was right when he said to me: "God answers all dem prayers what is prayers. To some He say 'Yes,' to some He say 'No,' and to some He say 'Not yit!'"

In the Garden of Gethsemane Jesus made two petitions to the Father in Heaven. One was, "Let his cup pass." The other, just a definite and earnest and sincere, was "Thy will be done." One of them—thy will be done—He received. The other—let this cup pass—was not granted because for Him to receive it would not have been best for Him nor for the world He came to save.

In the model prayer Jesus gave us (Matt. 6:9-15) there are a number of petitions, but did you notice that the first one, and doubtless the pre-eminent one in His thinking, was the earnest plea, "Thy name be revered, thy reign begin, thy will be done?"

I hear the preachers glibly quoting to troubled souls the scripture "If ye shall ask anything in My name I will do it"—or another, "Whatever things ye desire when ye pray, believe them and ye shall have them." The troubled inquirer goes away and formally and perfunctorily makes his request to God and comes back to the preacher dazed and confused and skeptical, saying, "I made the petition on your assurance that I would get what I asked for, but I did not get it—so I have decided that God does not answer prayer."

Should Have Taught

The preacher should have taught him just as Jesus taught in both theory and example, "Put God's will first in your prayers and your own desire second, and you will always get what you ask for. You may get an affirmative answer to both petitions or you may get a negative answer to the second. If you are able to receive it and know how to trust it you will always get an affirmative answer to the first. Later on if you have eyes to see you will understand and rejoice in the fact that you got the first petition and were denied the second."

With most of us the most serious handicap in prayer is that like an impulsive child we want what we want and want it now. Our primary lesson in prayer is to learn to want what God wants. A man has learned a great lesson when he is able to make his request in prayer and honestly say "I will take it now, or I will take it when God thinks best, or I forego it permanently if it is His will; and I shall accept either fortune with a grateful heart."—Jeff D. Ray, in Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Matching for Drinks, Bingo Games Held by Civic and Church Groups Are Cited

Widespread gambling is extending even into civic and religious organizations, a report adopted by the North Texas annual Methodist conference, and vigorous efforts were urged to combat this evil as well as the use of liquor.

The report of the conference board of temperance, read by Secretary Fred Adams, was adopted unanimously in the session held at the First Methodist Church.

Continuation of present campaigns against games of chance and intoxicants were urged by the conference. Recent action of the Texas Legislature in curbing the sale of liquor by drug stores was commended.

With regard to gambling, the report said it "ranges from matching for drinks at soda fountains to games of bingo in civic, and even in religious organizations."—Dallas Morning News.

to investigate. Murder is suspected. It is thought that Isadore, rich for man, has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out. On the way to the Hudson's Bay post they visit Isadore in his palatial home, meet his wife and Lise, Isadore's stepdaughter. Answering an appeal from Lise, Finlay is ambushed and rescued by Malone and Blaise. It develops that they are Mounted Police officers. Blaise returned one night after a fight with some Indians.

"They'll be moving soon, if they're over there," Finlay whispered.

Suddenly the dog stiffened, the hair along his neck and back lifting as he sniffed. Finlay's hands closed on Flame's nose and throat. "Wind something? Steady, boy!"

Then from the murk drifted a faint sound like a splash of water. "Ah, I hear it! They're coming!" muttered Finlay.

Again Finlay strained his ears, with caught breath, for a repetition of the sound. At last he heard what resembled the wash of ripples; as if something was swimming slowly across the strait. What could that mean? He cut the gag and lease and the airdale tore through the alders up the shore.

"It must be a swimming otter or beaver he's winded," muttered the surprised Finlay. "He'd roar at a canoe."

Shortly from the gloom rose snarls, the thrashing of creatures battling in the water, then muffled gurgles. Rigid, Finlay listened, praying for the dog he loved.

"Flame!" groaned the man on the shore. "What's happened to you, boy? What did you meet out there?" Had he lost his dog? Had Flame gone out there in the blackness to his death? It was no canoe. But what was it? Garry waited in suspense, ears still straining. Then something moved swiftly through agnais! Just what is a Windigo, anyway?"

Finlay sat listening, his arm circling the fretting dog.

Blaise chuckled. "Wal, de Injun t'ink de Windigo is beeg, w'at you call giant, who eat Injun and is ver' bad fallar. He like to holler at night and scare dem. Most bush Injun is scare of Windigo and will not go into country w'ere he live."

"They certainly thought a man-eater was loose and hungry to-night," said Garry. "You had me guessing hard, Blaise, when you first opened up. Now before we get out of here I want to take Flame back into the bush and look him over with a torch."

"What's happened?" demanded Red.

Finlay described the dog's strange battle in the water. Then they went back where the light from an electric torch would be masked from the lake and looked the airdale over.

"He's scratched, Garry," said Red.

Brassard peered closely at the surface scratches which crossed Flame's shoulders and forelegs. "No claw or tooth make dem mark," he grunted.

"It was a knife, then," said Finlay. "You think a Montagnais was swimming across the strait? But few of them can swim."

"We put cano' in and have a look," said Blaise.

At their camp they found Moise Wabistan waiting and told him the story. Then the Peterboro, followed by the birchbark, passed through a patch of moonlit water before entering the bank of shadow. From the bow Finlay pointed to something floating ahead of them. "What's that?"

The canoe slid up to the drifting object. Kept afloat by air bladders of moose entrails, fastened under the arms, was the half-submerged body of a man. Blaise reached down and turned the drowned body to stare into an evil, grimacing face.

"What you t'ink?" he demanded, meeting the peering eyes of his friends. "Tetu!"

"Tetu? The side-kick of Tete-Blanche!" gasped Red.

"Ah-nah! And good t'ing, for sure!"

"He was coming across to hunt for us when Flame went out and met him, nose to nose, and the best man won," said Red. "Good old Flamey!"

"Flame pull him undair and drown him before he stick a knife in him," added Blaise. "Dat smart chien. I navare saw so smart. He know more dan most man. But he get foolish w'en he smell beaver castor, eh Flame?"

It was the first week of August. For days the heat, like river mist before sunrise, had hung in the windless forests of the Nottaway country.

"Are you game for a swim, Lise? I'm stifled with this heat. There's an urge in me to mingle my curves with some nice, cool lake water," yawned Corinne Isadore.

"I'm crazy to but since that day at the beach I've been ordered to keep away from there," replied Lise.

"I fixed that with Jules this morning. The king says we can go. Have you noticed him since he returned from that trip? He's worried, Lise. He mumbles and raves in his sleep. One night he kept saying: 'What's their game? What's their game? We've got to get 'em, quick! If they see that plane and get back to Montreal, it's all over!'"

Lise stiffened in her hammock. Had Tete-Blanche got them already? "What could he have meant, Corinne?" she asked with seeming artlessness, wondering just how much the other knew.

"It sounds as if they were hunting for Garry Finlay and that darling Malone, doesn't it—as if they were going to put them out of the way? Lise, I'm terribly frightened."

"I am, too. You saw the Indians who stopped here, yesterday?"

"There were twenty of them. They were hunting for the survey party."

"How do you know?"

"I heard Tete-Blanche talking to them. They acted drunk. Corinne, Jules is giving the Montagnais liquor and it's against the law."

"Jules swears that Finlay's a spy sent from Montreal to jump his gold strike on the river. I suppose that's the reason for it all."

"Has Jules ever talked to you of his gold strike?"

"No. He treats me like a baby. But I'm sure he's secretly shipped a lot of gold south. He's made much money."

"Yes, he's made money. Money's his god."

"But what's going to come of all this? It makes me shiver to think of it. Three men have been shot. What will the police do when they learn of it? Corinne's great eyes were wide with apprehension."

"Where's it going to end? If Finlay stays here and tries to find Jules gold strike, Tete-Blanche'll kill him. It's horrible!"

"Only Thee"

No one can ever become quite solitary, quite poor, quite miserable, who can truly say "Lord, if only I have Thee." That is just the time when God makes his consolation most gratifying and abundant, when we through distress of body and soul have turned from all temporal things to Him, and have learned that royal, overshadowing "only thee."—Theodore Christlieb.

UNION WITH CHRIST

LESSON TEXT—John 15:1-10.
GOLDEN TEXT—Abide in me, and I in you.—John 15:4.

Our lesson presents deep spiritual truths concerning our union with Christ—mystical, but practical; precious, but too often forgotten or neglected.

I. The Conditions of Union With Christ.

There is a sense in which union with Christ is entirely unconditional, one is either united with Him by faith or he is not. However, there are conditions for the fulfillment of all that such union carries with it. It is in that sense we use the word.

1. Cleansing (vv. 1-3). Christ is the Vine, and the believer as a true branch is united with Him. There is a oneness here which is difficult to express but delightful to receive and believe. He who is the Vine needs no cleansing, but the branch needs constant, daily purification by "the Word" (v. 3). Are we permitting God's Word to keep us clean? Only if we are reading it, studying it, meditating upon it.

There is moreover a severer type of purging to which the husbandman subjects the vine that it may bear more richly, and that is pruning (v. 2). It may not be pleasant, and remember whose loving and sure hand it is that wields the pruning knife (v. 1).

Some branches must be cut away altogether (v. 1) and burned (v. 6). They lack the evidence of life—fruitbearing—and must be destroyed. These words are evidently not written to dishearten true believers, but they are a solemn warning to those who bear a false profession of Christianity.

2. Abiding (vv. 4-8). The branch bears the fruit of the vine. It has no strength or ability of its own to bring forth fruit. The Christian cannot serve Christ without abiding, and if he does abide the life of Christ will show forth in His living and serving. There can be no union without abiding in Christ.

3. Obedience (vv. 9, 10). The hall-mark of character in a child is obedience. That is also true in God's household. There is no use in talking sweetly and piously about abiding in God's love unless we obey His commandments. The Christian who disobeys the teachings of God's Word regarding holy living and does not respond to the leading of the Holy Spirit shuts off the blessing of God in his own life and stops its flow out to others.

II. The Results of Union With Christ.

1. Purity of Life (v. 3). "Now ye are clean"—how refreshing our Lord's words sound to us as we live in a wicked and filthy world. We sometimes wonder if there are any pure lives anymore. Yes, there are—those whom the Lord has cleansed by His Word. Would you like to be clean? Turn to Him and to His Word.

2. Prevailing Prayer (v. 7). At first one wonders why our Lord put in that word about prayer, but it is evident that one of the fruits of union and fellowship with Christ must be intelligent prayer according to God's will, in the power of the Spirit, and certain of an answer.

Notice—that the prayer promise here is absolutely unlimited, but that it follows an "if" which states a closely limited condition. Let us fulfill the condition and claim the promise.

3. Fruitbearing (vv. 2, 4, 5, 8). The fruit a Christian bears is the fruit of Christ who is the Vine, but as the branch he does have the joy of bearing "fruit" (v. 2), "more fruit" (v. 2), and "much fruit" (vv. 5, 8). The Christian's phraseology can be borrowed, the Christian's service imitated, but his fruit produced only by abiding in Christ.

4. Abiding in Love (v. 10). We have been talking about abiding all through our lesson and it may seem strange to list it as one of the results of union with Christ, yet it belongs here. Our Lord said (v. 10) that the cleansed and obedient disciple should abide in His love, even as He obeys the Father and abides in His love.

What a picture that is. Christ, the One who knew no stain of sin (II Cor. 5:21), always perfectly obedient to the Father (Heb. 10:7), who knows complete and perfect fellowship with the Father, reaches out His loving arms and draws the believer into the circle of that blessed union and love.

"Only Thee"

No one can ever become quite solitary, quite poor, quite miserable, who can truly say "Lord, if only I have Thee." That is just the time when God makes his consolation most gratifying and abundant, when we through distress of body and soul have turned from all temporal things to Him, and have learned that royal, overshadowing "only thee."—Theodore Christlieb.

Entirely New Principles Employed in Coal Heater

Will Heat All Day and All Night in Coldest Weather Without Refueling.

MANY improvements in furnaces, both oil and coal burning types, have been reported in late years, but little change, until recently, has been noted in the coal heating stove, which still is depended upon in millions of homes for warmth and comfort.

A late development in this field has brought out an improved coal burning heater. It employs a radically new design in firebox and heating flues, advanced ideas in combustion engineering and other improvements that result in greater heating efficiency, fuel economy, and much less operating attention.

A desirable feature of this coal heater is that it may be loaded with 100 pounds of coal at one time. The coal, stored in the magazine, gradually feeds semi-automatically of its own weight to the bottom firebed, the heat making coke of the upper coal layers, when bituminous coal is used. The gases formed in this coking process escape through newly designed flues in the firebox and are consumed by the flames which travel up outside the fuel chamber. The coal burns to a fine ash.

Because of its large fuel capacity and the advanced construction principles employed, it will heat all day and all night in coldest weather without refueling.

Regulation of heat is governed by a simple adjustment of drafts. Because it holds fire so well and so long, the home where it is used is warm every morning. Because of this feature the stove has been named Warm Morning. One who has struggled on a cold morning to build a fire can well appreciate the significance of the name.

Along with the standard models which hold 100 pounds of coal, there is a larger heater with nearly 200 lb. coal capacity made especially for heating schools, churches, lodge halls and warehouses.—Adv.

When McKinley Turned And 'Brought Up' Mother

A short while after her son had assumed the presidency, Mrs. McKinley was interviewed.

"What would you consider most important in raising a child to be President?" asked one reporter.

"That's a difficult question," replied Mrs. McKinley. "There are so many things to teach boys. They should be taught to be honest, reliable, fair." Then she added: "But I didn't really bring my boy up to be President. I brought him up to be a good man. That's all any mother can do. First thing I know my son turned around and began bringing me up to be the mother of a President!"

HIGH PRICES Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

MERCHANTS' RESPONSIBILITY

Hundreds of well located small towns of the nation are fading away because their newspapers are not reflecting enterprise and growth. Their merchants are awakening too late to find that their mirror is broken and that a hustling neighboring city is reflecting the glory that should have been their own. Merchants who do not advertise or who depend on handbills were never known to build up a live town.—Brownfield Herald.

The merchant who advertises is the only man who is inviting people to your town and is responsible for the crowds which throng the streets on Saturday. It is he who extends the trade territory and makes your town a lively, going commercial center. Every town should appreciate the few real advertisers that are keeping it up, for if they should quit, grass would grow in the streets and it would be in the realm of the "Hasbeens." The public should also appreciate them because these live merchants are responsible for the reasonable prices that can now be obtained on the necessities of life. The advertiser not only keeps up the town and himself, but he also keeps up those who resent the advertised specials and who try to appropriate part of the business brought to town by those who are trying to build the town. If you want to help build the town trade with those who are responsible for the trade it has.—Levelland Herald.

After it has been tried for several years, we still think the good old-fashioned plan by which each one through thrift and work and self-denial, looked out for himself and his own, a better plan than the tax-financed scheme in vogue today. There was a pride about independence in those days that is fast ebbing out of society. We can't help but think that the old plan built a stronger, sturdier people, because they made their own way through the world and stood on their own feet. The easy way of life never built a sturdy people. These things all have a way of adjusting themselves in nature. When a people give way to easy living they are brushed aside one day and their place is filled by a race that has chosen to live the nearest to the natural way. The law of the jungle still is in operation, whether we like to think it or not. The elemental law of life is struggle and in the struggle the fittest only survive.

People in desperate straits who are ill or hungry have always been helped in this country and should always be, but promiscuous pensions originating with the Federal government and paid out of the pockets of the thrifty are not conducive to better living nor to a higher type of citizenship.—Star, Campbellsville, Ky.

WHAT A WORLD OF GRIEF IT SAVES YOU!

WE KNOW a seed house that proves each season's crop of seeds in their own trial gardens before they offer them to the public. Flowers and vegetables grown from these seeds must measure up to definite standards, or else the entire crops from which the samples are taken are burned.

We know a manufacturer of dry batteries who tested a new product two years before he sold a single battery to a single dealer.

We know a manufacturer of an anti-freeze solution for automobile radiators who spent two years testing his product under all conditions before he said a word in advertising about the merits of his goods.

We know a manufacturer of household pharmaceutical products whose self-imposed standards of purity and efficacy is even higher than that laid down by the United States Pharmacopoeia and the National Formulary.

If we mentioned their names you would say, "I plant those seeds," "I use that battery," "I use that anti-freeze," "my medicine cabinet contains those products."

The four instances cited are typical of every reliable manufacturer in America. Millions of dollars are spent annually to develop, to improve, to standardize, and to take the guesswork out of merchandise. Other millions of dollars are spent in advertising to tell you about them.

All of which is to say that in putting your trust in advertised merchandise you save yourself the bother, the expense, the disappointment—yes, the danger—of experimenting and discovering for yourself which make of soap, breakfast food, radio tubes, lingerie, gasoline, tea, electrical device, stationery—or what—not—gives you the most service for your money.

The news columns of this paper keep you informed of the happenings in which you are most keenly interested. The advertisements keep you informed of the newest, most advantageous, most reliable merchandise that America's most progressive makers are producing.
