This week the Senate refused to concur in House amendments to the "Fire Murchison" bill by the writer and asked for a free conference committee. The House amended the bill by taking the appointing power away from the Board of Public Welfare and placed it with the governor. It was quoted Lieutenant Gov. John Lee eing opposed to it. The old age assistance problem is much discussed but no one wants anything to do with it. Executive Director Murchison is Texas' largest single spender, having $42,-000,000 per year which he expends istrative purposes. Everyone remembers that it was he who raised his salary $1,000 per year and the per year. Incidentally, the old age assistance division occupies the most elaborate and most expensive air conditioned offices in Austin. The grapevine is that the Board fire Murchison by refusing to confirm him, but will name another man for the place before the free conference committee can act. Rumor has it that three men have already been solicited for the position and all three have refused it, all of which further indicates how wary everyone seems to be about this department.

Once Poor Wastelands Now Yield Profitable Products; Use Farm Crops in Plastics

Chemurgy Opens Industry to Agriculture; Urge Production of Many New Plants.

"The proportion of usable wealth to be derived from an acre's production is becoming larger. Chemurgy has meant maximum utilization of maximum production. It has insisted that ways be found to use the high as well as the low values of the harvest—the stalk as well as the grain, the shell as well as the kernel, the weed as well as the crop.'

With those words, Wheeler McMillen, president of the National Farm Chemurgic Council, describes the revolutionary effect chemurgy promises to have on agriculture. With a national purchasing power to support the new products of this industry, farmers will not only be obtaining additional income from standard crops, but they will derive revenue from the use of the vast submarginal lands now lying waste.

Dandelions, milkweeds and cattails-all of these, and many more, were once considered the useless and even pestiferous embroidery of the lonely plains. But today they have been proven to have real commercial value.

Although American experiments with the dandelion have not been as extensive as those in Russia, efforts are being made here to convert the latex of this colorful little plant into rubber. In this field, we were concerned with the guayule shrub, and although the project later was abandoned because of the steady flow of natural rubber from the Indies, it has now been revived in the sandy Southwest.

But if we have lagged in our development of the dandelion, not so with the milkweed or the cattails.

Milkweed Yields Fiber

According to Dr. Boris Berkman, milkweed produces two fibers. A pioneer in milkweed development, Dr. Berkman says one fiber is tubular with an air chamber. It is 58 per cent alpha cellulose, 20 per cent lignin and is covered with a vegetable wax of a high melting point. This fiber is found in the pod.

Known as milkweed floss, the fiber is buoyant, has a high insulation value and promises to be valuable for soundproofing material. Dr. Berkman predicts its use in life preservers; life jackets; aviator suits combining insulation value for high atmosphere with buoyancy in case of a landing in water; sleeping bags; mattresses; pillows; and surgical

Dr. Berkman says that studies show that Bast fiber ranks second to manila hemp in breaking and tensile strength. Running about three-fourths of an inch in length, the fiber is soft, pliable and much finer in texture. It has good possibilities for use as textile.

Seventy-two per cent of the milkweed found growing wild in Michigan was on No. 4 submarginal land. Approximately 85 per cent of milkweed seed germinates. In experiments last year, milkweed pickers earned from four to seven dollars a day, and they included women and

The tall, somber cattail that stands silently in the marshes today may soon be the base for a flourishing industry. In experiments conducted under the direction of C. F. Burgess, noted chemist, this lowly plant was found to have high heat insulating, sound absorption and water resistant properties.

According to Mr. Burgess, the floss of the cattail can be produced at a cost competitive with cotton. About 140 man-hours of labor are needed

Revive Castor Planting

Loss of territory and reductions of shipping have cut off importation of many products formely received from other countries. The importance of these products to our economy, and the possibility that we may be deprived of them for substantial periods, has led to a movement for the cultivation of these products here at home.

As a result of these movements, it has been learned that many of these products were raised in this country many years ago, but gradually were abandoned as domestic growers found it hard to compete

Belladonna Is Medicinal

The Belladonna, whose reddish bell-shaped flowers and shining black berries ornament the fields. contains medicinal properties which make cultivation of the plant both useful and profitable.

Dr. Alex Laurie of Ohio State university points out that Belladonna is one of a number of plants whose tops and roots yield alkaloids that prevent gripping of irritant cathartics, relax muscles and decrease secretions. One of the alkaloidsscopolamine-is among the most satisfactory materials used in child-

According to Dr. Laurie, belladonna thrives in acid soils. All shade must be eliminated if the quality of the plant is to be retained. A 30-inch spacing between rows and 12 inches in the row required 17,500 plants and produced as high as 1,000 pounds of dry material per acre in cultivations at the Ohio Agricultural Experiment station. It was found that high nitrogen and phosphorus are necessary to secure higher yields, but the alkaloid content was not increased proportionately.

Harvesting and drying demand knowledge of plant growth and adequate equipment, Dr. Laurie says. Since usually three crops may be secured per season, the plants must not be cut down to the ground. It is in the field of plastics that chemurgy has made such great strides in utilizing the product of the farm in industry.

From cotton linters chemurgy has produced cellulose acetate, a molding and extrusion material in the form of sheets, rods and tubes, and also ethyl cellulose, an excellent elastic plastic when used with other

In 1860, castor beans were grown commercially in the Midwest. There was a pressing plant for the beans in Kansas. But when we began importing castor beans from India and Brazil, our own industry died out. The location of India in the war zone and the shortage of shipping to Brazil has led to a bean shortage that has prompted the movement for resuming castor bean cultivation here.

Under the impetus of the department of agriculture, a castor bean seed production program has been designed to build up a stockpile of approximately three million pounds pure variety castor beans for plantings. Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee and Indiana are the eight states that will share in the pro-

In recent experiments, Dr. W. L. Burlison of the agriculture department of the University of Illinois discovered that certain types of castor beans would produce pofitable crops when grown in the right soil and climate. A bean that yielded 475 pounds per acre in one section of the state, yielded 1,748 pounds in another section. It has been pointed out that in this country beans would have to be planted each year and harvested before frost. In Brazil, the plant is a perennial, with blossoms and mature beans growing on the stalk at the same time.

Cascara and digitalis are found in the forests and mountains of the Northwest Pacific area. Over six million pounds of cascara bark yearly are obtained in Washington and Oregon. With a value of $1,250,000, this crop is gathered from wild growth and cultivated groves. Digitalis leaves are also picked from native and planted patches in the same states.

Sage, coriander and anise thrive in the Northwest, but the large amount of hand labor needed for the care of these crops has proven a discouraging factor. The work of thinning and weeding these crops conflicts with the same type of labor in its infancy in the United States then. He took the job of Executive Chief on a six months' trial basis, He stayed 32 years, finally relinquishing the post February 1 last. On Dr. West's 65th birthday in May, 1941, President Roosevelt told him: To you belongs much of the credit for the effectiveness of Scouting in

Dr. West's great interest in youngsters was spurred by the difficulties of his own boyhood. His father died when he was very young, and his mother, when he was six. There were no near relatives, and the boy grew up in an orphans' home in Washington, his native city. To add to his problems, he was crippled and on crutches. He saw to it that he had a good education, though, and he worked his way through the law school of National university. He was practicing in the capital when Scouting called him.

That wasn't his first task in behalf of youngsters, however. His efforts gave Washington its first juvenile court, and in 1909 he persuaded President Theodore Roosevelt to call a White House conference on the care of dependent chil-

He had learned about newspapers long before that, however, from his father, Josephus Daniels, editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer and secretary of the navy under Wilson.

Young Jonathan started out to be a lawyer. He even spent a year at the Columbia law school after graduating from the University of North Carolina. He never practiced, though. He had been rubbing elbows too long with printer's ink. After trying his wings in Louisville, he re turned home to work for his dad.

Later he wrote a novel. "Clash of Angels" it was called, and it helped him win a Guggenheim Fellowship and a couple of years' study in Europe. When the elder Daniels shifted his activities to the United States embassy in Mexico City, his son moved into the editor's chair.

In World War I a Daniels gave the orders to a young assistant secretary of the navy named Franklin D. Roosevelt. Now it will be the other way around.

Dr. Joad, who is also a p losopher and peddles long-haired notions from a chair in the University of London, argues the war will leave so many women without mates that they must be provided with substitutes, even piecemeal ones. Oldsters will remember that the same argument followed the last war but no substitute replaced the timedefying practice of pairing off.

Important on the spring fashion program is the suit or the suit frock that is fashioned of black or navy bengaline or faille, given feminine allure with a lovely, lacy, frilly jabot that billows out at the neckline. See this smart mode illustrated to the left in the above picture. This flattering semi-tailored suit frock is styled effectively in luxurious jetblack rayon bengaline, this rayon weave being one of the choicest, line came as a cub reporter on the cought out this season. Button up this trim jacket, and the costume takes on a conservative tailored look for informal town wear. For the dressier afternoon affair, the becoming jacket top is opened at the neck to show a ruffly blouse of snowy rayon chiffon that flaunts a jabot in all its feminine loveliness. The all-around dress for spring, such as is shown to the right, is given distinction in the unique use of a lace flare on the sleeves. Here rows and rows of delicate white lace form striking bell sleeve cuffs. It makes this lace feature all the more striking that classic simplicity is maintained at the unadorned round neckline save for a self-fabric bow at each side. Given a simple black crepe frock like this, with a whole wardrobe of lacy lingerie collars and other fantasies such as lace bows to be used in sets of three or four on the bodice or a group of lace butter-

This season's collars and various neckwear items are so fascinating on your basic black rayon crepe! include one or more jabots, for jabots are among fashion's pet hobbies this season. You'll prize an exquisite jabot of lovely eyeleted organdy, such as the dainty-as-a-dollie type pictured in the inset to the left below. Note the tiers of ruffled organdy, how they spill out from unde the tiny collar encircling the throat.

Fine lace of intricate patterning is fashioned into a frilled collar of exceptional beauty as shown in the lower-right corner. Semi-circles of embroidered organdy border the deep V-neckline with dainty turnover

There is no end to the ingenuity expressed in terms of lace and embroidery and frills and ruches of filmy sheers. For example, a new vogue is that of the lingerie blouse lavished with lace frills and wee velvet ribbon threaded through lace beading, the artful lace and ribbon being repeated in a perfectly little charming chapeau.

Then there are the new boas of ruffle upon ruffle of organdy, or you will find neck pieces of box-pleated veiling in lovely pastels, the same worked to cuff gloves and more than likely to create a dainty hat to complete the ensemble

"Look your prettiest" is more than ever a feminine must this spring. That is why this youthful coat achieves a pretty look by means of a combination of pastel pink and blue. The coat, shown in a collection from one of Chicago's leading State street stores, is powder blue wool with plastic leaf buttons. The crocheted collar and patch pockets are so distinctively new they fea-ture as conversation pieces — no doubt the forerunner of a wide-

If You're Needle-Wise You Can Make These

Applique prints make interesting news. What's more, if you are deft with the needle and have imagination you can make your own print fabrics. The technique is similar to that used in making applique-on muslin quilts. You cut out flower shapes of tiny bits of calico or per cale. These you form into chister design, proceeding to applique them to the fabric background. Unbleached muslin or sail cloth with the flower appliques works out best. You can achieve a regulation print effect with big round patches scattered with regularity in polks dot

THE 7 ND WAR LOAN DRIVE IS ON!

Come on, Let's Winthis War!

If we should lose the war, life would not be worth living.

"But we won't lose it," you may say.

Listen, brother-in this world nothing's sure, unless you make it so.

This month it's up to us here at home to do our part, and then some, to make Victory surer-and quicker! To do it, we've got to lend Uncle Sam 13 billion extra dollars.

It isn't easy-but war isn't easy and Victory isn't cheap. It takes money-and more money-to buy planes, ships, tanks, guns and a million other things our boys must have to deliver that final, paralyzing knock-

And it's a whale of a lot easier for us at home to lend our money than for our boys to fight through the hardships and dangers of deserts, swamps, jungles, ice-fields and sub-infested seas!

Just think! Every extra bond you buy will nelp provide the weapons to save the lives of many American boys! Isn't that alone worth every effort, every economy you can make? You bet it is!

There are 7 types of U. S. Government securities to meet the needs of every purse. They offer the finest investment in the world -liberal interest, plus securities guaranteed by Uncle Sam himself.

A volunteer worker for the 2nd War Loan Drive may visit you soon. Welcome this unselfish patroit-and buy all the bonds you can. But don't wait for that call. Gotoday-to your bank, investment dealer, broker, post office or bond booth and invest to your uttermost limit. Even if it hurts, it's nothing compared to the agonizing impact of a bayonet thrust, a flesh-tearing torpedo fragment or a bone-crushing bullet.

So dig deep, brother, and do it NOW!

CHAPTER XV

I kept a good lookout, too. I could see Uncle Wylie's bent figure down at the bridge. In the living room, cooler than the porch, the men were gathered, still talking things over. Finally, they decided to get out the least damaged boat and try to put it into shape. Victor agreed; anything was better than idly waiting. Mr. Quincy could sit on the beach and wave his flag to try to attract a passing craft.

"Not the beach!" For the first time I saw Mr. Quincy staring at Victor with genuine suspicion. "Beach isn't visible, and you know it. Anybody could finish me off down there. No, thanks. I'll stay where I can be seen by all. Then, if some killing occurs, you can't blame me." He told me afterward, when the men had left the room, he'd really begun to think Quade was our killer. Stark fear had replaced his former bantering man-

"At first, I only half suspected him," he said. "But it's all too pat. He turns up from nowhere and trouble begins. He could have done all of it. The letter, the money. the fire and the killing. He found Miss Kendall's body. Judy, stay with your aunt. I don't trust Victor Quade.'

"Well, I do!" I returned with some heat. "I guess a woman's instinct is worth more than-"

"Didn't do that unfortunate Kendall woman much good, did it?"

"You're letting this get you, Mr. Quincy. Perhaps I did it. Perhaps you did. But I'm sure Victor Quade-"

'So that's how it is!" If I'd felt the blood flooding my neck before, it crept all over my face now. "I'll get you a red tablecloth from the linen closet and tie it around a broom. That do?" "Nicely," he said. "Then will you wheel me down the ramps, right where I tell you?"

"Uh-huh." I clipped up the stairs. The linen closet adjoined the bath-I found the faded old cloth I wanted and was about to run down again when the sound of crying reached me from up the hall. Poor Bessie Norcross! No wonder she couldn't sleep. I tapped on her door. The weeping stopped immediately. I tapped again. The least I could do was to give her her brother's message. And the least she could do, I thought, was to learn how he was. I tapped a bit louder.

"Miss Norcross!" Rap-rap-rap! "Bessie, it's Judy." I heard her stirring and waited.

but she didn't unlock the door. 'Bessie, I've a message from Hugh, Open the door." I could hear her bedsprings creaking again. Then footsteps. She came close to the door. This time the crying commenced again.

"I'm all right, Judy. For heaven's sake, go away. And give this to the police when they come."

Amazed, I waited for her to open the door. Instead, I heard a shoving sound on the floor, and saw at my feet a white envelope. I picked it up and said, "Did you say-po-

"That's what I said. Have they come yet?"

"No," I said, backing away, as a feeling of horror came over me. "Well, they will. And they'll keep me awake hours asking questions, questions, questions! I've got to sleep, and the medicine won't work." She was fairly raving at me. "Hugh took the rest of it away. Oh, Judy, beg him to give you just one of those veronal-darn him!" I was already heading for the stairs. "I'll try!" But I had no inention of getting veronal or anything else. What kind of a person was she to help trap her own brother? I never heard of anything so old-blooded in my life. Her tone, when she said Hugh had taken her pe stuff, had been full of hate. He was such a good brother to her, and now, in his necessity, she not only locked herself in but helped the

"Come here, quick! Bessie Norross thinks her brother's guilty! Look, she's written to the police. Victor shushed me when I told about Bessie's letter. "Bless you! Want the crew upon us?" He wagged his dark head at the men ho were standing around trying to gure how to get the boat out of the ern loft.

Without . moment's hesitation Victor tore open Bessie's letter. I was tickled mauve that he dared, yet I couldn't help wondering why he didn't let Hugh do it. A fleeting mispicion crossed his mind. If Hugh were right and Victor guilty—!
"End justifies the means, Judy."

barn, while from the piazza Thaddeus Quincy waved a red cloth from the end of his cane and yelled at me.

she say he did it?" I said to Quade. Victor gave a low whistle. "This beats the Dutch! Listen, Judy. It's a confession."

"Not Bessie!" "Bessie." Victor made a quick survey to be sure he wasn't overheard and then commenced to read in a low tone:

" I, Elizabeth Norcross, being of sane mind, do hereby of my own accord, on this Fourth of July, confess to the murder of Rodney Lane Jr., and Lily Kendall. But I did not have anything to do with the death of that poor old man recluse, they call Brown, whom I never even saw, nor the burning of his shack, nor the explosion at the bridge. I feel sure, though, there were no fireworks at the Head the night before the Fourth, both were accidents. The bridge may have collapsed; I don't

" 'But my brother, Hugh, did not have a hand in any of this murder business, nor know that I had. He is entirely innocent in every way, although several things might look suspicious. I can account for all three: The initialed golf club, the blue scarf and his being seen before the crime of Roddy's death, in the vicinity, I mean, by Judith Jason and Thaddeus Quincy. He told one lie-to save me. He said, when he went out, having missed me, last

He fell down the stairs and must have struck his head on the granite night, about the time Judy spoke to a shadow, that he saw my light come on in my room, so he knew I was all right. He couldn't have. My room is on the other side of the house. Go look for yourselves. He did it to protect me."

We glanced at the inn bedroom and saw she was telling the truth. Then continued: "'Now, about the spot on my coat. It's blood. Hugh tried to save me there, also. He didn't borrow any turpentine from Mr. Potter, I did. I tried to clean off the blood, but made it worse, I guess. Mr. Potter's door was open a crack. He'd gone to town. I took the bottle from his table."

"Please, won't somebody help me down the ramp!" I heard Mr. Quincy holler again, but this time I did not turn around.

"Let him quilt," Victor said, resuming the letter:

"To make this horrible story short, I'll say that my motive was vengeance. Five years ago Roddy Lane jilted me after a summer's courtship in this very place. My brother was just a boy, but he saw me have a nervous breakdown and vowed he'd get even with Lane some day. I'd reserved that same pleasure for myself. I take the Rockville paper just to keep track of Roddy. When the auction of the church was advertised I hoped he might show up. Got Hugh to vacation here, ostensibly to prove I could again visit the scene of my broken heart and show him the wound didn't bleed any more. Hugh fell for it. He's been a good brother to me. I told him the sight of the Castle, where I'd laughed and danced and had my romance, didn't give me a pang any longer. It wasn't true. "When Roddy walked into the dining room at Gerry's, all the old bitter-sweet love came back again. And he didn't even pretend to recognize me! I'd never wronged him. I don't have to bare my heart any more. The old adage about a woman scorned is enough. I determined to go through with it. He'd never live to break another trusting heart, " I left the table, passing but not speaking to him. I couldn't bear it if he greeted me like an old friend, which was the way he treated his castoffs. I'd studied his career and found it full of things he'd neglect-"Just a minute!" I yelled back at | ed to mention, such as his wife! him. "Oh, please, Mr. Quade! Does I'd never dreamed he was already married while making love to me.

" 'I picked up the club Mr. De Witt had been using on the lawn and went for a stroll. Everybody, nearly, had gone to town, so I thought. Hugh was in his room. I saw Roddy coming down the Castle drive. He wanted to talk to me, he said, to tell me how miserable he'd been-the mistake we'd made of our lives. Could we ever forgive ourselves! And begin again!

"'I had to steel myself against his passion. All the old feeling came rushing back. I was beginning to melt like sugar. He had to get something out of the church basement before it was auctioned off, he said. I asked him if he'd meant it when he said at supper he was going to buy it. "Buy it? What for?" he said. "I only came to the Head because I knew you were down here." I knew that was a lie. Hugh and I had only just arrived the week before, quite unheralded. We went into the church-the door was unlocked-and he told me to wait but I followed him. "Roddy, are you asking me to marry you again?" I said. He took me in his arms and kissed me. For a minute I was happy. Then he said: "No more wedding bells for me. Sort of companionate, maybe, darling." We were standing at the top of the basement stairs. I was so mad I gave him a push away from me. He fell down the stairs and must have struck his head on the granite floor. Ugh! I can see him now-all smashed. I dragged him to the chest and somehow got him in. I forgot about the golf club, which must have fallen down into the pool of blood. I heard somebody on the steps-Miss Kendall, or maybe it was Judy and Mr. Quincy. Anyway, I ran out the basement door and home. Judy will remember she heard the door squeak, so I must have not quite closed it. I didn't know what to do. I considered jumping into the sea but hadn't the cour-

"I never intended Lily Kendall any harm. She was a bore and a pest, always bragging about her niece-that Gloria Lovelace, and trotting out her pictures. Gloria was her whole life, but I hadn't come to the Massachusetts coast to hear about her. Hugh and I couldn't take a walk but it was Gloria all the way. I knew Lily had seen me before reaching the church, of course. I knew she'd seen me wearing Hugh's blue scarf around my head. I'd lost the scarf while I was with Roddy. When you all went to the bridge to connect with the milkman, Lily didn't go. Neither did I. We took a walk together toward the sea. She told me she'd picked up my scarf and thrown it into the ocean, but the wind had blown it back into the Pirate's Mouth. She accused me openly of killing Roddy. I got her to show me where, and gave her a little push, too. She fell you know where, and I rolled her toward the slit in the rock, where she struck. The hand, kerchief was there, all right, but I didn't tie it around her neck. It slipped out of my fingers beyond reach into the crevice. I had nothing to fish it out with, and hoped when the tide turned it might be washed away. But some wretch tied it around her neck to make it look as if my brother did it. I didn't strangle her. She died, just as Roddy did, from the fall. If she hadn't said I killed Roddy because he jilted me I wouldn't have pushed her in. That word jilted finished me.' "She's crazy!" I gasped. "Oh, no," Victor said, "Just a Httle more of it." And he read the last pitiful explanation of that awful night. " 'I was afraid I might be seen, so I crept out of the Pirate's Mouth, up the other side, the steep way, crawling around the cliff back of the church, and down to the strip of beach to the woods back of Gerry's barn. I got across the road to the inn and back to my room without being seen. And that's all. I'll try to answer police questions-if I'm awake. But, before God in Heaven, my brother is innocent!'

"How dreadful!" Victor sighed. "Yes, how dreadful. What does she mean-if she's awake? Does she take sleeping medicine all the time?" He jerked around and started back. "Hurry, Judy. She's pretty desperate."

"Don't worry. She begged me to beg Hugh for another pill or tablet, or however veronal comes. And I heard her say he'd refused to give her any-darn him. Her words, not mine." "How she must love him!" "Sounded pretty mad at him through the door."

"Poor girl. No wonder she wanted sleeping tablets after writing all this."

"Wasn't she brave to confess!" "Confess? Why, you innocent little baby! This document lets Bessie off scot free." (TO BE CONTINUED)

new lamb crop and getting them ready for an early market is one of the important wartime jobs of the American farmer, according to Dale C. Snodgrass, animal husbandry ex-State college.

By following a few simple, wellestablished practices, the sheepman can be sure of success with his young animals. Snodgrass lists some of these practices as follows:

Have the ewes in a good, strong, thrifty condition before lambing, and be sure that the flock is securely separated from other stock, especially hogs.

Do not disturb a ewe at lambing time, unless she needs help, but be sure to stay on the job. Carelessness may mean the loss of a lamb. See that the young lamb nurses and does not become chilled. Should the ewe disown her lamb, try to get her to Gradually increase the feed given to the ewe after the lamb is about one week old to stimulate the flow of milk. During lambing time, the ewe should be housed at night and during bad weather.

If a new-born lamb becomes chilled, take it to a warm room and put it in warm water up to its neck. After the young animal is warm, take it out of the water and dry it thoroughly before placing it with the ewe in a warm dry place.

Conserving Fuel

It is clear that farmers have a vital stake in the conservation of gasoline and fuel oil. If supplies bor. run too low, not only will production and distribution of essential food and fiber be hindered, but the ability of many farmers to continue operation will be endangered.

Easter has little meaning to weather, for it is a movable festival, but you still hear people talking about an "Easter spell."

It takes only a word to start a rumor, but it would die if others would not repeat it. The rumor that starts from no foundation at all can grow into something serious. It will pay all of us to refuse to spread anything unless our informant can give "chapter and verse."

It would appear that the smaller bond buyers are coming across in a good way for the April quota, but those able to buy in larger amounts need to come in before the closing date. Buying bonds is like putting money in the bank on time deposit, with the difference that in time of need the bond may be cashed with accrued interest.

Victory gardens are an asset, not only to the owners but to the town as a beautification measure. Growing gardens on vacant lots makes a difference in appearance from lots covered with weeds. Not as much can be said of "victory" stock pens and chicken yards in town. The aroma and flies from these pens are just as bad in war time as in peace time.

Where Will Money Come From?

People ask: "Where will the money come from?" to reach the thirteen-billion dollar objective of the Second War Loan. The answer is simple. The people HAVE the income.

When we produce munitions or peacetime goods, or anything else, we likewise produce income. For every dollar of production, there is a dollar of

The problem of war finance boils down to this-if individuals and businesses receive more income after taxes than there are things produced for them to buy, then excess funds arise. The government deficit is matched by the combined surplus of everybody else. This surplus should be put into Government securities to wipe out that deficit.

They give their lives . . . You lend your money.

Something Wrong if RAF Pilots 'Put Up a Black'

The RAF has developed a lan-guage all its own. Many of the terms, such as "Browned off" for bored, and "Put up a black" for doing something wrong, have been adopted now into common usage. Some expressions have been borrowed from the United States, including "Flinging a woo," which means to have a date with a girl, and "Roughneck" which, in the RAF does not mean a tough guy, but an unlikeable person.

"Gen" means the real, inside information on anything, and, similarly, "duff gen" means wrong information. A "flap" is a sudden operation. To be in a "flap" or in a "flat spin" means to be busy on a job, too busy to do anything else.

The "Chief Plumber" is, of course, the Chief Engineer; the 'Quack'' is the doctor; the "Second Dickey" is the second pilot, and a stickyback is an RAF pho-

HARRIS KING RETIRES FROM GAS BUSINESS TO GIVE FULL TIME TO STOCK PRODUCTION

BELOW is his open letter of thanks to friends and patrons:

After fifteen years in the gas business I have sold out to Emory Crockett and I shall not hereafter be connected with the business. I have done this because I wanted to give all my time to the production of hogs, cattle and feed for the Nation. I saw that one hundred per cent of efficiency could not be given if I divided my time. Throughout this fifteen years I have enjoyed a very liberal patronage and my business has prospered. For all of this I am greatly indebted to my friends who elected to patronize me. As I retire, I do so with a deep feeling of gratitude for all of you who have contributed to the success of my business. While I won't be seeing you as often as in the past, I want you to know that I shall always want your friendship. For the new management I want to ask at least a share of your business. In conclusion, I thank you one and all . . . wish for you good luck in every way, and want our friendship to continue as it has been in the past.

Most respectfully,

Your friend,

HARRIS KING

Announcement

The Ben Franklin Store in McLean is now under new ownership. T. J. Perkins has sold the store to A. J. Parker, who is now in active charge.

We want to express appreciation for the patronage given the store while Mr. Perkins was owner and trust that we may merit the continued patronage of the good people of McLean under the new ownership.

We will endeavor to keep a stock of new and seasonable merchandise on hand at all times and our prices will be found strictly in line with the times.
