Gasoline Cuts Civilian Supplies
Recent shortage of many civilian supplies may be attributed to military demands of the forces of liberation. Examples are radio tubes and parts, gasoline and oil. In spite of a radio manufacturing output over 10 times as great as pre-war military demands for tubes and repair parts have increased. This explains why civilians are finding it hard to get these items, the War Production Board says. Every military plane has radio equipment, some as much as $100,000 worth each. Ships tanks and other mobile equipment also use radio equipment. A five-month supply of 100-octane aviation gasoline is required for each of the 11,000 planes backing up Allied liberation forces, the Petroleum Administration for War reports. Heavy and imperative demands for oil by General Eisenhower as early as last winter almost made New York, Boston and Philadelphia the first indirect invasion casualties. Increased production by East Coast refineries, the "big inch" and "little big inch" pipelines, and emergency deliveries helped avert civilian shortages of oil and gas in the East.

More Farm Implements
Certain manufacturers are permitted to produce unlimited quantities of any farm machinery, equipment and repair parts made entirely from surplus materials or materials needing no allotments or priorities assistance higher than AA-4 preference rating, WPB announces. Items most manufacturers will be able to produce under this relaxation, include corn shellers, feed grinders pitchforks, hand cultivators, rakes, hoes, shovels and barnyard poultry equipment.

Round-up
Farmers bought and accepted early delivery of the largest tonnage of commercial fertilizers and fertilizer materials in the nation's history during the past 12 months, the War Food Administration says, thus enabling plants to keep working at the capacity permitted by available labor and also avoiding a critical shortage of fertilizer on farms. Ration certificates issued for purchase of men's rubber boots and rubber work shoes are now good indefinitely, OPA says. . . . Householders should fill their coal bins during the summer months because the shortage of motor trucks and drivers for distributing coal is expected to reach a critical stage by the beginning of the coal season the Office of Defense Transportation advises. . . . Candy production of more than 2 1/2 billion pounds reached an all-time high in the U. S. last year, according to the Department of Commerce. No large-scale resumption of bicycle production will be possible until the war in Europe has been brought to a successful conclusion, WPB says. . . . Carry-over of feed grains at the end of the present feeding year probably will be the smallest for any year since 1937, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics predicts. . . . A new type of cotton gauze bandage developed at Department of Agriculture Laboratory, tends to fit and cling better than ordinary gauze and it allows greater freedom of movement in bandaged joints, the Department of Agriculture reports.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Green had the following week end guests: Joe Green and three sons from Childress, Mrs. Allie Mae Graves and three children from Dalhart, Wald and Ann Green from Brenston, Wash.

AMERICAN HEROES BY LEFF

Major Lyle J. Deffenbaugh, Infantry, of Omaha, earned his Silver Star for gallantry in action in Tunisia. Under heavy machine gun fire aimed directly at his position, which silenced the radio, he disregarded all personal safety, and remained in full view of the enemy within close range to shout directions and orders to two of his companies. Our praise for his heroism is not enough, we must buy War Bonds and hold 'em. U. S. Treasury Department

To the People of this Community

The next time you write to your fighting man or fighting woman tell him or her what you have done about the Fifth War Loan. You can take the word of General Eisenhower that your man or woman in uniform will be deeply interested.

Your War Bond buying is a good tip-off to them about the state of affairs in your home. The headlines in this newspaper on the progress of the drive, the items about participating individuals, the character of the Fifth War Loan special events—all these things reflect the morale back home.

Do you like to read a sorry headline about the invasion fronts. Our fighting forces, made up of individuals with the same reactions to good and bad as you, will not be heartened to read "Fifth War Loan Lags."

Your silence in your letter about your part in the Fifth War Loan will mean non-interest, perhaps non-participation to the recipients. It's up to you to make your letters cheerful. Write today. Write often. Write about your war work, your war support. Double your best previous War Bond buying record and then shout it to the rooftops—just to that special service man.

THE EDITOR.

The raiders get their arms and ammunition by raiding houses where German soldiers on leave are staying.

German "D" Rules for French

The Germans had worked out several "D" day measures for the French civilian population, the French Information Service says. On the first day all men were to be called into centers for verification of their identities, civilian vehicles were not to be allowed to circulate, and supply depots were to be occupied. After the first day civilians were to be authorized to circulate only with an armband and with hands folded behind their necks under penalty of being immediately shot. All houses were to be searched, and persons not on service rolls were to be shot immediately.

Business Men Back Bond Sale

The treasury department asked that sponsored advertising be run on the 5th war loan, and McLean business men have responded in a fine way, as is evidenced by the sponsored bond ads in this and last week's issues of the home paper.

If anyone has been overlooked and desires to assist in this matter, there is plenty of treasury department copy at the News office and it can be run any time this month.

People are talking about the war and not nearly so much about one another.

Many a man must exceed the speed limit to keep up with running expenses.

A community go-to-church movement requires personal support to be successful.

Many people are wonders at talking. The only trouble is that wonders never cease.

It doesn't seem fair to make the kids go to bed when they are not sleepy and make them get up when they are.

One can be thankful that his conscience confines its impressions to himself and does not run to the neighbors about it.

The 5th war loan bond drive is now on in earnest. Every McLean citizen must buy to the limit if we are to meet the community quota. It is a matter of civic pride that we have always been able to meet our quotas. May it be so in this instance.

You hold the proof in your hand. You can tell whether you like to read the home paper or not, right now. You can help us publish a better paper by handing in your subscription. Occasional buyers are disappointed each week. You can save money, your time and ours, by subscribing by the year.

A good season in the ground is one thing, a flood is another, and we have had three rains that reached flood proportions in the past two weeks. Land that never washed before has been badly damaged and most crops are being planted over the second and third time, all due to too much rain. It has been many years since old timers have seen rains in such proportion.

Flies never get very far from their breeding place, so if you are bothered with flies, it is certain that you, or a close neighbor are allowing some kind of filth for flies to breed in. The prevailing wet weather has been ideal for flies. It does not take but a small bit of manure or garbage to add to the fly population in this kind of weather. Chicken and stock owners should be careful to keep their premises clean.

The POW camp is probably closed for the duration, but regardless of that fact, the final disposition of the camp and equipment is of concern to local citizens. It is claimed that the camp hospital is one of the best equipped in the state and if it is not later used as a veterans' hospital, it would be a fine thing for local citizens to buy it and retain it and the camp grounds. It is said that the camp cost around two million dollars and can be bought after the war for a few cents on the dollar. Another suggestion is that the beautifully landscaped grounds could be used as a country club. Either plan calls for some advance work and contributions from interested people.

REMEMBER WHEN—

You wore elastic in your panties?
 Zippers were taken for granted?
 You were convinced that any car on which the monthly installments had ceased was fitted only for a trade-in, because anybody could prove that it cost more to run a car that old than monthly installments on a new one would be?
 The drug store had masculine "soda skeets"?
 The feminine personnel of grocery stores was limited to owners' wives, with maybe a daughter here and there?
 Women donned slacks for care-free recreation times, never for downtown work?
 The wash came back from the laundry in never more than two days—delivered to your door?
 "Driving around" was among the major pastimes?
 Dried fruits of most kinds stayed on "the surplus commodity" list and were available to "food stamp" patrons?
 "Whipped cream" was just whipped and not coaxed by means of soda, lemons, etc.?
 You could threaten "I'll take my business elsewhere" and anybody cared?
 You were quite sure that a child or so would keep any man free of the draft?
 Women gave 16-table bridge parties?
 You could, if you were a "boss," straighten out the lacks of an employee by just implying the threat that you could get plenty of others to do the work better?
 You liked having your name in the paper when you went motor-ing places, instead of demanding that everything be kept strictly on the q. t. so as not to arouse any gasoline card wonderings?

POLITICAL THOUGHT

Senator Edwin C. Johnson Democrat from Colorado, recently appeared on the lecture course of a college in Chicago, and his address was his views of the dangers of a fourth term for President Roosevelt. In the course of his speech he referred to the fact that President Roosevelt has appointed more Federal judges, district circuit and supreme, than any President has appointed, and

In a short time every Federal judge in the country over will have been appointed from one school of political thought, a school that is decidedly in the minority in this country.

Senator Johnson apparently does not gauge the thought of the country correctly when he claims that the adherents of the New Deal are decidedly in the minority. It may be that he meant those who really think, and in that he may be right, for most of the adherents of the New Deal do not think except as to what they can get out of it. The others of that group just go along with the thinking. When they get something from Government they believe is free, they are really saying for it. Government has nothing to give that is not paid for by the people. The New Deal's efforts are to take from those who earn and give it to those who do not earn in the old-fashioned and still proper definition of that word.

The reason for the fourth term demand is plain, and should be apparent to Senator Johnson. Only by a fourth term, or a term by one selected by the New Deal, can these gifts be continued, and the fishpots of America like those of ancient Egypt, are very attractive. The price for their continuance is to vote for their continuance and that means a fourth term.—Paris News.

Dear Jim:
Sorry this letter is late, but I'm up to my ears in the 5th War Loan Drive.
As head of the town's committee, I'm busy almost every waking moment selling bonds. This is, by all odds, the most critical period of the war. Everything is at stake—everything (As if I needed to tell you that.) Our quota calls for two billion dollars more in this loan than the last—everyone's got to buy two or three times more than he's ever bought before—if things are to go as we solemnly pray they should.
Thank God most of the people I talk to seem to realize the critical need. They do without things they actually need in order to plunk down another hundred or two. I guess they feel as I do. With a man you love over there, the least you can do is your utmost.
I want you to know, Jim, that the folks here at home are with you—and their money is fighting with you—every last dollar they can scrape up. Mother and I send love.
Dad.

Forest Fires Sabotage War Plans by Destroying Lumber, Hastening Erosion, Diverting Manpower

Over 90 Per Cent Of Conflagrations Called Preventable

Each year loyal American citizens, through carelessness and thoughtlessness, start an average of some 190,000 forest fires in the United States. This tremendous annual destruction of our timber resources has been going on relentlessly year in and year out. Now that these resources are so critically needed for the successful prosecution of the war, the number of forest fires must be reduced drastically in the interest of national security.

In addition to its effect on our war production activity, forest fires further complicate our manpower shortage problem by draining away from critical war industries those wasted man-hours necessary to extinguish and fight the thousands of fires that rage yearly throughout the country. The problem is one of personal interest to every American.

Forest fires speed up erosion of farm land by denuding watersheds. On millions of acres, forest fires induce swift run-off, and heavy seasonal flooding, resulting in serious property damage, less water stored for irrigation or power, and thus less food to fight for freedom.

These fires also destroy wild life along with its food and cover. Untold numbers of deer, birds and other wild life as well as fish (in streams polluted by wood ashes) are crippled and killed annually because of forest fires.

Prevention

Objectives of the 1944 forest fire prevention program are to help speed victory by:

1. Reducing greatly the more than 210,000 forest fires occurring each year, 90 per cent of which are man-caused and therefore, preventable.
2. Releasing manpower—of which nearly one million man-days are tied up yearly in fighting forest fires.
3. Cutting down on actual and potential dangers and losses to such critical war materials as timber and feed for domestic stock and wild life.

One Third of U. S. Is Forest.

The forest empire of the United States, exclusive of Alaska, is larger than the combined area of France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Belgium, The Netherlands and the British Isles. It constitutes one-third the area of the continental United States.

No region or zone is without its forests, although 60 per cent is east of the Great Plains in an area containing four-fifths of our population. The other 40 per cent is west of the Great Plains and includes most of our remaining virgin timber. It is evident therefore, that forest fires constitute a national problem which can be solved only by nationwide action.

Statistical information on hand which was gathered over a five-year period, 1936-41, shows that an average of 210,970 forest fires rage each year throughout the nation and burn over an average of 31,233,000 acres. This represents an area much larger than the land area of New York state. This wartime waste represents three billion feet of timber killed—or enough to build 215,000 five-room homes for war workers.

Ninety per cent of all forest fires are man-made. The remaining 10 per cent are caused by lightning. Careless smokers and campers are responsible for starting 30 per cent of all our forest fires. Other forest fires are INTENTIONALLY set for such purposes as clearing plowland, burning off weed patches, logging slash, brush or debris, and although many of these fires are started lawfully, great numbers of them get out of hand because of carelessness and ignorance on the part of the burner or because of his willingness to "take a chance." Forest fires in this category constitute 40 PER CENT OF THE TOTAL.

In its wartime activities for 1942 the United States used more wood than steel. According to R. W. Patterson, undersecretary of war, 120,000,000 tons of wood were used as against 100 million tons of steel.

As a further indication of its importance in our wartime activities, we have the statement of Rear Adm. E. L. Cochrane in the International Woodworker, 9-22-43 that "Every naval vessel, from the log battleship of the North Carolina class to the small mine sweeper, depends on wood."

It is a problem then of national concern when the production of lumber (estimated in 1943 to be four billion board feet below requirements of that year) is slowed down every time woods and mill crews fight fires.

Forest fires are real and potential threats to war plants and cantonments, many of which are located in and near forest, woodland or brush-covered areas. They are potential threats too, to the efficient operation of defensive air and sea patrols, training pilots, etc. They threaten the nation's war program by diverting manpower from war industries, training camps and farms to the fighting of fires.

Every patriotic citizen should regard helping prevent forest fires as an essential wartime duty. Lieut. Gen. John L. DeWitt, while head of the Western defense command, listed reasons why the forest fires endanger our national security:

- (1) Smoke-palls from forest fires along coastal areas limit visibility of air and sea patrols.
- (2) Smoke haze reduces visibility from aircraft warning stations and fire lookouts.
- (3) Many defense plants and military establishments are located in or adjacent to forest areas and might be damaged or destroyed by major conflagrations.
- (4) Forest fires serve as beacons for the enemy.

The Government's Part.

There are 160 national forests with about 178,000,000 federally owned acres in 42 states and two territories. All are under 10 regional foresters (one in Alaska) and their staffs. National forests are protected from fire by a decentralized organization that is in close and constant touch with local conditions, problems and people.

Normally, this organization includes about 4,000 year-long forest supervisors, forest rangers, forest guards, etc., and another 4,000 short-term smokechasers, lookouts, etc. But the manpower situation has been so acute during the war that the Office of Civilian Defense established the "Forest Fire Fighters Service" to help the established forest fire protection agencies. It is reported that more than 185,000 recruits have joined the FFFS to date.

There are 281,000,000 acres of state and privately owned forest land. Federal aid, through the Forest Service, goes to 41 states to help state foresters and private owners give organized cooperative forest fire protection. Funds from state and private sources are greater than those from the federal government. However, there are over 146,000,000 acres that need, but still lack, organized forest fire protection.

In their efforts to prevent forest fires, the federal government and state governments have operated on a regional and state-wide basis. Their educational efforts on a local level have been carried through the media of newspapers, radio stations, motion picture theaters, civic organizations, etc. And in addition, they have used exhibits, lectures, pamphlets, admonition signs and posters.

The Public's Part.

Above all else there is need to impress upon the public that every individual has a patriotic stake in this EMERGENCY—that the problem can only be solved through individual action.

- Specifically, the need is:
1. For the public to be careful with matches, smokes—including cigarettes, cigars and pipe ashes—and campfires.
  2. For victory gardeners as well as farmers, ranchers, stockmen and forest industries to ask about a permit—and the law—before burning grass, brush, fence rows, ferns, trash, or before starting any fires in forests.

3. For everybody to put out small fires and to report all others quickly to the nearest ranger or fire warden.

Geographical Aspects.

With an eye to the tremendous value of timber in our all-out war production activities, the United States has been divided into three broad zones, each of which has been weighed and its relative importance indicated on the map—which also shows the Forest Service administrative regions. Before the broad zones and administrative regions were determined, war industrial activity and national defense considerations were studiously reviewed.

Zone I, with a relative importance of 60, includes:

1. Three Pacific coast states plus western Montana and northwestern Idaho.
2. Most of the three Great Lakes states.
3. All or parts of 26 states from Missouri, Arkansas, east Texas and Louisiana to Maine.

Zone II, with a relative importance of 30, includes:

1. The area lying east of the Pacific coast portion of Zone I and west of the Great Plains states.
2. The area lying between the Lakes states and the Atlantic coast-Gulf of Mexico portion of Zone I.

Zone III, with a relative importance of 10, includes parts of Montana and Minnesota, and all or parts of the Great Plains states of North and South Dakota, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Texas and Oklahoma.

These zones have been subdivided into regions as follows, with the particular fire hazards briefly listed:

Region 1: (Montana and Northern Idaho): Ninety per cent of all fires here are caused by lightning, with the greatest damage done to white pine timber. The resident problem is more important than the visitor problem.

Region 2: (Colorado, Wyoming, South Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas): Thirty four per cent of all fires in this region are man-caused. The visitor problem is more important than the resident one, with carelessness more of a factor than intentional fire setting.

Region 3: (Arizona, New Mexico): There is less of a fire problem here than in any other region.

Region 4: (Utah, Nevada, most of Idaho): In this region man-caused fires run from 17 to 57 per cent, varying with the locality. Careless smokers, logging operators, campers, land-clearing farmers and ranchers are the causes. Serious erosion is often caused by fires in many localities. Grass fires are a great hazard.

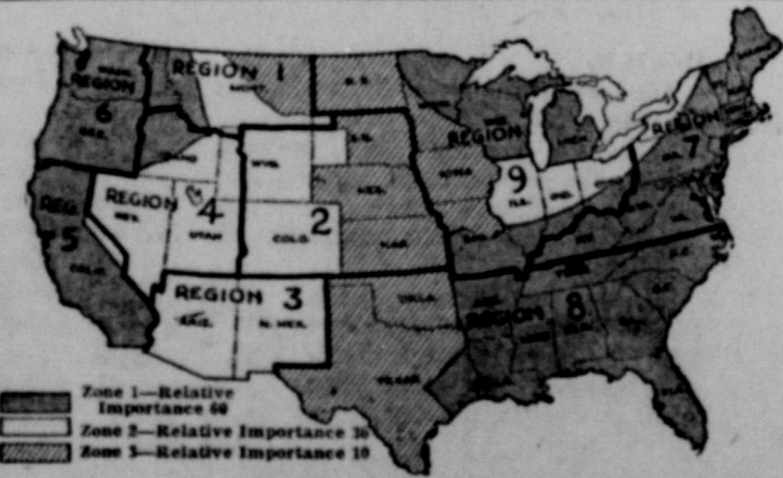

Region 5: (California): Three-fourths of all fires are man-caused. Part of this is due to the great influx of war workers, but the majority of fires are caused by residents rather than newcomers.

Region 6: (Oregon, Washington): Most forest fires here are due to careless smokers, but forest industries and incendiaries cause the largest area burned and the greatest damage.

Region 7: (New England and Middle Atlantic states plus Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia): Again the local resident and the smoker are mainly to blame—also the farmer who burns to clear land.

Region 8: (The South, from North Carolina south and west to and including Texas): The intentional burner—who has believed in burning for years—is the greatest problem. He is the local resident, not the visitor—the white man rather than the Negro.

Region 9: (the Great Lakes states, North Dakota, Iowa, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio): Diverse conditions exist in this region with large numbers of fires and tremendous acreage burned. Ninety-seven per cent of all fires are man-caused in the following order of importance—the smoker, the incendiary, the debris burner.

Observing These Precautions Would Greatly Reduce Fire Losses

Campers:

- Before building a campfire—Observe the state laws. If a permit is necessary, get it from a ranger or state fire warden.
- 2. Scrape away around the fire all inflammable material in a circle at least five feet in diameter.
- 3. Dig a hole in the center, build your fire in it, and keep your fire small.
- 4. Before leaving campfire, stir the coals and soak them with water.

Forest Industry Workers:

- Build and maintain safe fire lines around mills, logging camps, etc.
- Keep efficient spark arresters on locomotives, tractors, etc.
- Comply fully with state laws.
- Keep fire patrols on the fire job—especially during dangerous fire weather, and make frequent inspections for fire hazards.
- Be extremely careful to put out all matches and cigarettes before throwing them away.

Farmers and Ranchers:

- Never burn to clear crop land; Without getting a permit from a ranger or fire warden, if state laws require it.
- Without scraping a trail or plowing around for safety.
- Without having plenty of help on the job.
- During unusually hot or dry or windy weather.
- Without beating out all smoldering grass after burning is finished.

Twelve Elements Control Fertility

Vital Soil Chemicals Determine Growth

Fertility was described as the "fourth dimension" of the soil by Dr. William A. Albrecht, chairman of the soils department of the University of Missouri, in a recent statement.

"The soil has taken on a new meaning in the light of present war conditions," he pointed out. "Ration points on food and the scarcity of items like meat, milk and butter are giving soil a significance beyond that of mere dirt."

"Soil has long had two dimensions—length and breadth. As land, it has commonly been measured in terms of acres. The Soil Conservation service first emphasized that our lands have a third dimension—depth. Erosion studies as early as 1914 by Dean Miller and Dr. Duley at Columbia made us see the soil profile with its rich surface being scraped away and washed to the sea."

"To these three dimensions, however, should be added a fourth—fertility—for food production essentially depends on this factor."

"Crops are a form of creation. Like the Biblical story of creation itself, crops must also begin with the soil. About a dozen different chemical elements are required of the soil by any crop. These make up the ash, amounting to approximately 5 per cent by weight of the dry matter. Yet, it is this small amount contributed by the soil that determines whether the plant can gather from the air and water, by means of sunshine power, the other 95 per cent of its total content."

The Controlling Elements.

"These 12 chemical elements making up 5 per cent by weight are thus able to control the other elements which make up 95 per cent of the total weight of the plant. Consequently it becomes evident that the soil rather than the weather wields the controlling hand in crop production."

In discussing further this "fourth dimension" of the soil, Dr. Albrecht pointed out that in a series of tests for producing soybeans as a seed crop, plots without fertilizer treatment on one farm yielded 20 bushels of seed, whereas adjoining plots supplied with extra soil fertility plowed down as fertilizers, yielded 25 bushels, or an increase of 25 per cent.

"When it is considered that both plots had the same weather," he concluded, "there should be little doubt that the crop depends on the soil fertility more than on the season. We thus need to see our responsibility to the soil more, and to blame the weather less."

Sulfaguanidine Saves Chickens and Calves

A new addition to the sulfa drugs, all of which are derived from coal, will soon be used to increase the nation's supply of poultry and dairy products by combatting cecal coccidiosis, deadly disease of chickens and dairy calves, which costs farmers millions of dollars every year, according to the Bituminous Coal Institute.

The drug is sulfaguanidine which, in tests supervised by the United States department of agriculture, not only prevented development of the disease in healthy birds but cut the mortality rate among infected poultry to 12 per cent of the former figure, the announcement said. In each case, the chickens were fed a mash containing from one-half to one per cent of the drug.

"One of the advantages indicated by the experiments is that the treatment builds up immunity against reinfection," the institute pointed out. "Instead of killing all of the infecting organisms, the sulfa compound merely arrests development of the disease, thus enabling the body mechanism to build up an immunity."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Synthetic inner tubes need lubrication before being inserted in a casing. Partially inflate the tube and use ordinary pure soapuds as a lubricant in the absence of a special tube lubrication preparation. Dry synthetic tubes do not "slide" in the tire and unless lubricated may not adjust themselves properly.

Proponents of the continuance of our synthetic rubber insurance policy after the war hold that jungle growth on the rubber plantations and the probability of the Japs wrecking the plantation equipment may mean a loss of two years before normal levels of rubber production can be realized.

331 AT DRUGGISTS

THE OLD GARDENER SAYS:

Neighbor Brown was as busy as a beaver last week running to the county agent's office, then to the drug store, and back and forth like a chicken without a head. Seems that he got advance notice on a cutworm invasion of his garden and wanted to have some "ammunition" on hand at the first hint of trouble.

Mamie says cutworms will be plentiful this year and we know from past experience that they can cause a lot of trouble by cutting down young plants. Last season, after spending a lot of time making certain that we had home grown cabbage plants, the cutworms invaded our garden on a week end while we were out of town and just about left us cabbageless.

Usually they live through a long fasting period then just about the time the cabbages and other young vegetables are getting all set to score a record production year, here they come and bingo, they've gobbled down half the garden plants. Mamie says they're hungry as forty thieves and twice as destructive when they wade into a garden.

Last year Neighbor Brown carefully hunted at the base of each vegetable plant until he had found the hole where the cutworm stayed during the day and destroyed most of those in his garden, one by one, but he was stooped over for a week after spending a day hunting them. This year he'll follow the advice of the county agent and mix up a batch of poison bran for them.

Since cutworms feed during the night, the bait must be spread out in the evening to furnish the pests with plenty of feed that won't be so good for them. To make certain that the livestock don't gobble up the poison and die as a result, the bran bait must be scattered rather evenly and thinly over a large area.

The bait is made by mixing 5 pounds of coarse bran and 1/4 pound of Paris Green, or white arsenic, with 1/2 pint of water and 1/2 pint of molasses, then add approximately 3 quarts of water. Just enough water should be used so that it will be moist and crumbly but not sloppy.

Neighbor Brown sometimes wraps paper around the base of each plant as he transplants it and this sometimes foils the cutworms. This paper must be extended a slight distance below the soil and up as far as the stem of the plant will permit.

Mamie says to caution you folks about spreading poison bran. She says that the best way to distribute it is to take a handful at a time and throw it slantingly along the ground along the rows. That way it will break up and be scattered into small particles so that livestock or people cannot be poisoned so easily by it.

5th WAR LOAN

Back the Attack—Buy More Than Before

What news will Gen. Eisenhower get from us?

You know now what we've heard from him.

We've heard that Eisenhower and his Americans have hurled themselves like a thunderbolt against the bristling defenses of Hitler's Wehrmacht!

We've heard that they are smashing at our foe — sparing neither steel nor sweat nor blood in one final, furious assault that marks the supreme military effort of this War!

And what news do Eisenhower and his men expect from us?

Men and women of America — what the Invasion is to our fighting men, the 5th War Loan is to us at home!

For us, as well as for them, this is the crisis — the time for tremendous, overwhelming effort! Make no mistake! The 5th War Loan will undoubtedly be the biggest, most vitally important financial effort of this whole War!

If the 5th War Loan is to succeed, each one of us must do more than ever before — must buy double . . . yes, triple . . . the Bonds we bought last time.

Our men expect to hear that we are buying double — that we are matching their sacrifice as best we can — that the American nation, soldiers and civilians together, is making one gigantic effort to win this War!

That's the news our men expect to hear from us. Will you personally see that they get it?

- And here are 5 More reasons for buying Extra Bonds in the 5th!
1. War Bonds are the best, the safest investment in the world!
  2. War Bonds return you $4 for every $3 in 10 years.
  3. War Bonds help keep prices down.
  4. War Bonds will help win the Peace by increasing purchasing power after the War.
  5. War Bonds mean education for your children, security for you, funds for retirement.

Cottons Beautifully Styled For Bride and Bridesmaids

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SIMPLICITY is the keynote for summer bridal fashions. Even for the most fashionable weddings lovely cotton sheers or stunning high-style piques are first choice for the bride and her attendants.

It would almost seem as if fashion had been conspiring with brides-to-be this year in seeing that dreams come true (even if the budget did not allow a whole lot to spend) of the traditional lovely all-white wedding gown with the brides' attendants winsomely arrayed so as to form an unforgettable picture that would radiate happy memories through all the years to be.

As to the answer to this problem for beguiling wedding outfits that do not cost a fortune—it's given in most eye-appealing cotton sheers, piques, filmy marquisettes and chiffon-like airy-fairy weaves. Also starched and eyeleted cotton laces, and organdies (so inexpensive and lovely) are offered, likewise diaphanous nets—and this year sees a revival of the ever-so-dainty lace-trimmed hatistes, some of which are exquisitely hand-embroidered. So enchanting have the season's cotton sheers proved, they will hold forth this year at some of the smartest weddings of the summer.

There's something about the lovely cotton sheers that breathe the very essence of romance and the beauty of it is that a "picture wedding" can be realized with no extravagant outlay. The pretty bride's gown, pictured, gives evidence of the persistent call for the longer wedding dress rather than the less formal short effects. The gown as here shown is fashioned of organdy. Its outstanding style feature is the tier treatment of self ruffles down the back, with corresponding ruffles across the bodice. These fluted little ruffles are perfectly charming in effect and the slenderizing lines of the dress are extremely figure-flattering. The simple starched net headress is attached to a pearl beaded skull cap. Brief little veils of this type are the wanted kind this season. The cunning short gloves are an innovation. They also are embroidered in seed pearls. Either long or short gloves would be correct.

Cotton nets make up ever so fetchingly in bridesmaids' gowns. The picturesque bouffant frock shown to the left is of delicately dotted white net. It is cut with a sheer yoke. Net is applied in scallops on the basque bodice. A fetching net headpiece has a bewitching flower trim. An old-fashioned bouquet of roses completes the ensemble.

With this same bride's gown, the bridesmaids' dresses would be delectable made of shadow print or organdy, the delicate white-on-white flower shadow print contrasting the bride's simple white frock most effectively. Velvet ribbon in turquoise blue, or a different color for each gown if desired, tied with long streamers about the waist, would give entrancing color accent with bouquets made up with a prominence of long wispy sprays of maidenhair fern.

There's a decided flair among brides-to-be for simple gowns of plaster white waffle pique. This classic cotton weave yields delightfully to stately uncluttered princess lines for the bride, contrasting quaintly picturesque dresses for the attendants with starched full skirts and fitted bodices enhanced with eyelet embroidered yoke tops and cap sleeves.

This charming gown is made of a perfectly stunning border print done in multi-striped poplin that can be tubbed successfully because of its everlasting color processing. Note the freedom of the new sleeves and gathered top of the skirt, all very much a la Mexicano. "Neckery" goes very well with this dress as the many-strand necklace tells you. The necklace picks up the many colors in the stripes of the dress.

Flattery of Large Hats
The large spring hats and brimmed models resembling cartwheels are flattering and easy to wear. They're to be found in bright colors and white, together with the summer classics of pale brown, beige, and natural tones.

Watch Your Kidneys!

Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery. Symptoms may be nagging headache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination. There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful patients the country over. Ask your neighbor!

BARNs

Fire Hazards

Prohibit smoking in or around the barn. Careless smokers have destroyed many barns.

Do not strike matches in the barn. Light the lantern before entering, and if matches must be carried see that they are safety matches that can be ignited only on the box or cover.

Provide hooks or wires from which to hang lanterns. Don't set the lanterns down where they can be knocked over.

Correct size fuses and solid, clean, well insulated electrical connections are prime essentials of safe wiring.

Never put damp hay in the barn. Whether the hay ignites or not it will be damaged as feed.

Lightning rods protect buildings, but only when the connections to the ground are good.

Store gasoline and kerosene outside the barn. The tractor might well be kept out of the barn, too.

Sparks from fires outside the barn often cause barn fires. Keep ground around barn free from needless litter. Fire retardant roof coverings are advisable.

AMERICAN HEROES

When war broke out, Marine Sgt. Maier J. Rothschild of New York City was studying journalism at night, selling stocks in Wall Street day-times. On December 31, 1941, 24 days after Pearl Harbor, he enlisted. He's been awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in hand to hand bayonet combat, and the Navy Cross for fighting off and killing 95 out of 150 of the enemy storming a machine-gun emplacement. He's not giving up until we win. And you? Are you still buying that extra War Bond?

The Sinews of War

BY VICTOR SCHOFFELMAYER

Agricultural Editor of The Dallas News

THE farms and ranches of Texas are still producing a breed of people whose patriotism, courage and faith have no superior.

The indomitable spirit of the Alamo, of San Jacinto and Tarawa still permeates the wide open spaces where for a century Texans have enjoyed the freedom won by their heroic forebears.

The devotion and sacrifice of thousands of Texas farm and ranch boys on the farflung battle fronts in Europe and Asia will serve as a challenging pattern to their fathers, mothers and sisters on the home front.

As their Country again calls for aid in the coming War Bond Drive, Texas farmers and ranchmen will not fail to meet their responsibility to the fall. No group knows better that a sure way to stop inflation is to invest a substantial sum in Government War Bonds, thus not only providing its Country with the sinews needed to carry the war to its ultimate success, but as a hedge against the uncertainties of the future.

The men and women in rural Texas who have given their sons, husbands and brothers to the war effort will not fail them in this perilous hour. They will meet their responsibility not only only as patriotic, loyal Texans but as loyal Americans!

U. S. Treasury Department

THE 75 DOLLAR QUESTION

Editor Mary Cain of the Summit Sun, submits this biographical sketch to "I. Q."

He was born of wealthy parents. He showed no scholastic aptitude.

He early identified himself with the Democratic party.

He was almost a consistent failure in business enterprises.

He devoted most of his adult life to politics.

He was later elevated to the highest office in the land.

He used this high office to make vast social experiments.

He tampered with the calendar.

He instituted purges against those who opposed him.

He packed the law bodies with men who would do his bidding.

The Senate deliberated but he drew the most important powers into his own hands.

He spent unprecedented funds of public money with the unreserved approval of the common people.

His popularity established him as a permanent dictator and with that came the end of the Republic.

He was Calus Julius Caesar???

CHILD LIFE

Visitors were present at the home.

"Daddy, may I have a dime?" asked little Marilyn.

Dad obliged with a smile.

"This time you won't make me give it back after the company's gone, will you, daddy?" was Marilyn's loud remark.

"Yes?"
"Yes—I must look at you more often."

ARE COMING BACK

Littleton Upshur, editor of the Greenwood Commonwealth and member of the legislature from LeFlore county (Miss.) says:

"Maybe after all these years since the carpet baggers left us in 1876, we'll find the carpet baggers coming back with their New Deal wallets, and instead of displaying pictures of Abe Lincoln, they'll be riding the Democratic donkey.

"And if we Southern Democrats just lie down and take it, I reckon the donkey will be a proper emblem to display over our remains when the elections are over."

The picture isn't overdrawn. New Deal leaders, headed by the White House family, are determined to foist race equality on the people of the South, and they are foolish enough to believe Southern Democrats will continue to vote the ticket.—West Point (Miss.) Daily Times Leader.

TRADE IN McLEAN

What can you say to a wounded soldier?

Never mind the sympathy—he doesn't want it! In his mind, he did his duty, and part of his duty was stopping an enemy bullet.

You have a duty, too, in this war. Part of your duty is to buy War Bonds with every dime and dollar you can.

So simply say "thanks" to a wounded soldier, by buying your full share of War Bonds in the Fifth War Loan. Don't expect credit—you can't match his sacrifice by merely lending your money. But don't be ashamed, either—if you've done your duty, you've shown your gratitude—the way he wants you to.

Say "thanks" to every American soldier—double the Bonds you bought before.

SCHOOL BUSES

A few months ago I was asked to do substitute teaching in a large rural school near my home. Although I had taught for many years before the war, I had not realized how changed conditions were, especially in regard to the buses. In this school which covers a very large area, all the buses except one were driven by school boys—boys sixteen and seventeen years old—and many of these conveyances are loaded with as many as sixty-five pupils. I taught during parts of August and September, months when the weather conditions were favorable, when there was no snow or ice and practically no rain; yet, even then, the buses would reach school anywhere from 8:30 to 1:00. My first class each morning was tenth grade literature, and I had an enrollment of thirty-five. Many mornings there would be five present to begin class, and the others would come in all during the period or not at all. It was very annoying to the teacher and to the conscientious students.

Then there was the problem of the bus drivers, the boys who too often used their bus work as an excuse to stay away from class or to come unprepared. Those boys were the only ones who could be hired to do the driving, as men said the pay was not enough for them to undertake a job that broke into their morning and afternoon work. I was told, and I repeat this as hearsay, that the drivers would sometimes run races when on them depended the safety of dozens of children, and again I was told that some of the boys would let younger children drive while they rode in the back with their girl friends. We are in war; our schools have to do the best they can, but is this the best? What about the lives and education of the hundreds that ride to school in these conveyances?

Perhaps I would not consider the matter so seriously were it not that our own three-year old will soon have to go to school. Of course the war may be over, new buses may be available, adult drivers may be plentiful, but again these things may not be. What is the solution? Children often wait for endless hours for a bus that never comes. A very conscientious youngster who lives only a few miles from school never reaches home until 5:30 or 6:00 o'clock every evening. In days long gone Mary or Tom rode old Nellie to school. It was slow and often miserable, but they knew when to leave, and there was practically no guess work as to whether or not they would arrive. I have nothing against rural schools, consolidated high schools, etc. I think the facilities are as good and the children as dependable as those found in city systems, but I do, most heartily, disapprove of the transportation as it now is; and as a mother as well as a former teacher, I feel many a child would make a far better showing were he able to avoid the irregularities of the modern bus.—Mrs. Allen I. PEOPLE WILL TALK

You may get through the world, but 'twill be very slow if you listen to all that is said as you go; You'll be worried and fretted and kept in a stew. For meddlesome tongues must have something to do— And people will talk.

If quiet and modest, you'll have it presumed That your humble position is only assumed. You're a wolf in sheep's clothing, or else you are a fool. But don't get excited—keep perfectly cool— For people will talk.

And then if you show the least boldness of heart, Or a slight indication to take your own part, They will call you an upstart, conceited and vain. But keep straight ahead—don't stop to explain— For people will talk.

If threadbare your dress and old-fashioned your hat, Someone will surely take notice of that, And hint rather strong that you can't pay your way; But don't get excited whatever they say— For people will talk.

If your dress is in fashion, don't think to escape, For they criticize them in different shape— You're ahead of your means, or your tailor's unpaid; But mind your own business, there's naught to be made— For people will talk.

Now, the best way to do is to do as you please, For your mind, if you have one, will be at ease; Of course, you will meet with all sorts of abuse; But don't think to stop them—it's not any use— For people will talk.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Rogers had as guests last week their children, G. G. Rogers and family of Amarillo, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Rogers of Sunray, S. Sgt. and Mrs. R. G. Rogers and baby of Alliance, Nehr, Mrs. H. L. DeShazo and daughter of Kermit.
