MUSIC TO HIS EARS

I was waiting impatiently for my train at the Fort Dix station, just discharged after almost three years overseas, when two whitehaired women sat down beside me and started to gossip at a lively clip. As this was the first gossip I had heard for years, it was music to my ears, and I listened so intently that one of the women at last turned and glared at me. "Young man," she said, "I hope you are enjoying our conversa-

I hastily apologized and explained. She nodded approvingly. "Keep listening," she said. "We haven't come to the best part yet.

Wait till we begin discussing that hussy, Mrs. Johnson!" New Office Boy-I have added these figures up eight times, sir.

COULDN'T READ ENGLISH

Recently an AAF mechanic was buying a gem from a native salesmen in India, who assured him that his rupees were being spent or a rare gem, worth a hundred times the purchase price. The mechanic was reaching for his billfold when the salesman, who obviously couldn't read Engish, made the mistake of proudly exhibiting a "letter of recommendaton" from a customer. It read: "To Whom It May Concern:

"Beware! This thief took me for over half a month's pay. He sold me a sapphire and I sent it to my girl. She sent it back and said: 'I drink cokes out of better glass than this."

Then there is the lady clerk who wears something with checks in it twice a month to remind the boss of payday
