THREE LITTLE WORDS

A prominent salesman, now retired, summed up his success in three simple words: "And then some." "I discovered at an early age," he said, "that most of the and top people could be explained in three words. The top people did what was expected of themthoughtful of others; they were considerate and kind-and then some. They met their obligations and responsibilities fairly and squarely-and then some. They were good to their friends-and then some. They could be counted on in an emergency-and then

praying of Potatoes

Will Increase Returns spraying of potatoes is a paying grearch specialist in potato producpor at Michigan State college. "We have proved in experimental and test plots that spraying with DDT mproves the quality of the potatoes ed steps up production from 60 to 00 bushels per acre," he stated.

The specialist says the time to tart is when the plants are four to five inches high. Spraying every to 10 days is recommended, and ore frequently if the season is wet. ppT will control the flea beetle very rell. The potato leaf hopper, which to turn brown and curl, also is efectively exterminated with the new iller. This hopper causes severe samage after having time as it eaves the hay fields and migrates to the potato fields after hay is cut. Contrary to the opinion of some, pDT can be used effectively with Bordeaux mixture or a fixed copper solution, Moore says. The Bordesux mixture or fixed copper so-lution will control blight. DDT should be added last and the solution sprayed as heavy as 125 gallons to The tractor operator should drive slowly to get adequate

Too often, Moore has observed, farmers quit spraying too quickly.

Combat Photographer Hunts Congo Gorillas

Experience gained by Kenneth Ek of New York as a combat photographer in Europe will be utilized in a projected trip to the Belgian Congo where he will fulfill a longcherished ambition to make color pictures of gorillas. Elk, who rose n the army from private to first lieutenant, won the bronze star and cluster and the Purple Heart.

He has invested $12,500 in a big motion picture camera, a hand movie camera and two still cameras, a sedan car and a trailer, besides other necessary equipment.

He will be gone about 11 months. Going via North Africa, Elk intends to follow the Nile river as far as he can on his way to East Africa. When he gets to the Congo he vill leave his car. Then, with two helpers he will climb the mountains in the hope of getting pictures of the gorillas, which, he said, have never been photographed, except for brief flashes.

Elk said that the gorilla is an elusive animal and that the mountain species is the largest. Their lairs are in the jungles about 4,000 to 10,000 feet up the mountains, on the orders of British Uganda and the icipal ranges are located h the Lake Superior ore region. they are the Marquette range in Michigan, the Menominee and Gorebic ranges which lie across the Michigan-Wisconsin border, and the Mesabi and Cuyuna ranges in Minnesota. Possession of most of these important areas came to the U. S. through interesting circumstances. Under the Treaty of Paris in 1783 the northern boundary of the United States was fixed roughly. Inaccurate maps and a pencil in the hand of Benjamin Franklin played a part in locating the wilderness inside the United States. In 1842 the boundary was fixed definitely by the Webster-Ashburton treaty

Magnetic Hill

The so-called magnetic force in nilis is imaginary. Cars do not climb them without power frontheir engines. There are several of these "magic or magnetic hills" in the United States but the magic exists solely in an optical illusion Usually the hill is that part of a long steep slope which has less gradient than the slope as a whole and the sharp contrast to the incline of the surrounding territory contributes to the impression that the hill slopes slightly upward instead of actually sloping slightly downward.

Any Poles, Transformers or Wire Today?

We need poles, transformers, and wire-lots of them to complete the extensions of electrical service planned, and contracted for, months ago. Our suppliers would like to provide them, too. Production simply isn't enough.

All three are prime necessities in providing new services ... rural, urban, industrial, and commercial. Manufacturers are unable to make deliveries of poles, transformers, and wire. Even the equipment and fixtures which enable you to use electricity after it reaches you are now far below demand.

We want those who are now awaiting electric service to know that poles are being set, wires strung, and transformers installed just as fast as they can be obtained.

Our job is to bring you the advantages of economical and dependable electricity. We are eager to be on with our job ... and promise you that we are doing all in our power to execute it with the least possible delay.

CHIC LANE nodded approvingly as Dixie Lee, with a flourish or the baton, brought to a close the soft music of her Dixie Belles. The sweetest band that ever lipped mouthpiece," Chie boomed enthusi astically. "It's big-time swing and I'm the lad who'll put you there to swing it."

Dixie's eyes narrowed as she pushed back a refractory blonds curl, studied the angelic grin that creased the boyishly blunt features of her press agent and asked "When?"

Chie drew a deep breath and ex plained that radio advertising executives were auditioning musical and novelty acts for Fall programs. "A publicity push and you're in," he bubbled confidently. "Headlines like 'Orchestra Leader Elopes With Press Agent.'

Dixies eyes spanked Chic's en-"What a perfectly gruesome way to fame," she drawled

An hour later, in the oriental atmosphere of the Golden Cat Tea Room, a deflated Chic stared sourly at the leaves in the bottom of his teacup. A turbaned figure moved to his side. By courtesy of the management, he, the Maharajah of Panio, Prince Rahee, would gaze into the future. Chic, with a dejected wave of limp fingers, dismissed the prince.

Suddenly the fingers stiffened waggled, and the prince flowed back. Chic talked. A dollar a day to the potentate to be temporarily and or publicity purposes, engaged to Dixie Lee. His imperial majesty. in throaty tones-accent Brooklyn

Mournfully Chic admitted, before reformation, having slightly exaggerated the facts of a story or two but now, in truthful and humble atonement, he was offering a "And, Wolfe," he coaxed, 'think of the headlines. 'Maharajah Lays Heart and Fortune at American Beauty's Feet."

Wolfe thought and licked his lips. "Because I'm a sucker," he finally snapped, "I'll print the tale. But if this is one of your gags-and I find it out-brother, you'd better

In the following days Chic dwelt in a press agent's paradise. He bathed in a shower of desirable publicity and basked in the sunhine of Dixie's smiles. He coyly toyed with tempting contracts and allowed the belles to audition for two of the best.

Then his majesty became mer-Royalty, he'd decided, should not work for a miserable pittance. He demanded a double fee.

In Dixie's apartment Chic prepared matrimonial suggestions. The telephone jangled and Chic lifted the handset. He listened and paled. Wolfe Barton in no uncertain terms demanded Chic's immediate presence at the Journal.

Wofe was baying at a copy boy as Chic slipped up to the desk. Wolfe whirled. "That prince of yours is a phony!" he howled. "Came in offering his history and your story for fifty bucks. Well, chum, your story I'm buying and printing. I'll have you and that band laughed out of Chic folded into a chair. "Wolfe," he begged tearfully, "think of Dixie and her belles!

"May they toll for you," Wolfe growled heartlessly. "But," he added slowly, "there might be a way."

Chic gulped, wiggled and sputtered, "Whatever it is, I'll do it!"

Wolfe explained that he'd thought of some headlines himself. "Dixie Lee Jilts Royalty. Marries Press Agent" would, he declared, make very nice reading. Also, he'd fix the sheik and serve as best man at the ceremony. What did Chic think?

So an hour later, perched on Dixie's divan, Chic poured out the tale of the barricades that lay on the road to fame. "Don't worry," he cheerily told Dixie, "we'll still fool that newshound. I know a ham actor who'll play parson for five dollars. Boy, am I clever!" He called the actor, then dialed Wolfe. Arrangements were complete for nine a. m. the next day.
