BARON VON CRAMM DEFEATS DONALD BUDGE

LAST OF AMERICA'S NET HOPES

Californian Goes Down By Score Of 4-6, 6-3, 6-2

WIMBLEDON, England, (Sp.)—Young Donald Budge of California lost Wednesday and America's hopes to annex the Wimbledon men's championship went a glimmering with him.

Budge, the sensation of the tournament, went down in defeat against Baron Von Cramm by the score, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2.

The young west coast star was the last of the American contingent in the men's division.

Fred Perry, the defending champion, defeated Jack Crawford of Australia to gain the final round of the Wimbledon championship. Perry won 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-4.

Perry and Von Cramm will meet in the finals Friday.

In the men's doubles, Sidney Wood of the USA and Enrique Maier of Spain defeated H. C. Hopman of Australia and D. P. Frenn of England 3-6, 3-6, 6-1, 6-8, 6-4.

Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of the United States and Mrs. Henrietta of France lost to Miss C. Dearman and Miss N. Lyle of England in the quarterfinals of the women's double division. The English women won by the scores of 6-3, 6-4.

What a tragedy if every citizen of the great state of Pennsylvania were suddenly laid low by an accident! Every person in the bustling city of Allentown killed! Half the people of Pittsburgh crippled for the rest of their lives!

Such a catastrophe, says Accident Facts, the National Safety Council's statistical report, would represent only what actually occurs each year in the United States if all the accidents occurred at one time and in one place. Allentown's population, in fact, is not quite as large as last year's accepted toll of 101,000 deaths. The 370,000 permanently disabling injuries equalled more than half of Pittsburgh's population. Pennsylvania's total population is almost identical with last year's record of 9,821,000 disabling injuries.

Traffic accidents in 1934 killed 36,000 persons, permanently disabled 100,000, and injured a million persons.

Occupational accidents caused 16,000 deaths, 60,000 permanent disabilities, and 1,200,000 other injuries.

In American homes there were 34,500 deaths, 150,000 permanent disabilities, and nearly 5,000,000 other injuries.

In public accidents where motor vehicle accidents were not involved there were 17,500 deaths, 60,000 permanent disabilities and 2,000,000 other injuries.

Was the suffering, the cost, the tragedy any less in 1934, because this toll was spread over 48 states and 365 days, than it would have been if it had all occurred on one day in Pennsylvania?

Houston Buffaloes Nosed Out By Beaumont, 2 To 1

BEAUMONT, (Sp.)—The Beaumont Exporters' fifth inning spurge was greater than the seventh rally by the Houston Buffaloes Wednesday and the former won out by the count of 2-1.

The veteran Cventros weakened in the fifth to allow the Exporters to get their runs, while Hars had the situation under control except during the seventh.

SCRIBES ARE GOING TO GET A BETTER DEAL AT STEER STADIUM THIS YEAR.

Plans for new bleachers include a different sort of press box for these parts. Designed to accommodate 10 working reporters (which excludes those parasites, football scouts and women friends), it will be glassed in to protect the press from fighting off a bribe gale from the north while pecking out accounts of stumbles and fumbles. The box will be wired for night and telegraph and if radio facilities are needed, a sound proof box will be constructed at one end.

ALL THAT IS NEEDED TO make the affair complete is action to keep out those loafers who are about as welcome as indigestion. There has been a time when reporters, who honestly wanted to chronicle what was going on, had to beg or fight a gang of youngsters and chosen few to gain a seat in the improvised chicken coop.

BUT LIFE WILL NOT BE ALL thorns for those who are thrown out of the press box. A system of box seats is to be installed. They will, of course, flock to these.

THIS IS TO BE A BATHER sporty Fourth here. The Big Spring boys, under the direction of Miller Harris, will take on the San Angelo Shepherders in a brace of games east of town this afternoon. West Side is to tangle with the undefeated Artecas on the west side diamond. Brown will journey to Knott and Hixway to blow. Grove. In addition to all this, there are several score duels who simply can't resist an opportunity to spend a day in the rough. This department even knows of a gentleman who is going to play croquet.

REPAIR WORK ON THE HIGH school tennis court wire netting may or may not be beneficial. In the past members of the school tennis squad built up their wind by chasing balls which always found a hole in the netting. With the holes gone, the team may undergo repairs which will place them in A-1 shape. If this is done, and if courts are installed at the city park (we hope to have long enough to see this), tennis will gain it popularity by leaps and bounds. It would be good to see the universal game drawing more interest here.

STAMFORD MAY BE IN THE spotlight today with its cowboy reunion, but it will be Big Spring on Labor Day. The local organization which promoted the first reunion here last year put on a bang up show. They got the crowds. So the management is wise enough to promise another something-every-minute affair. To some there isn't a lot of sport in seeing some raven-bone cowboy digging his spurs into a steer and besting the animal down the side with a ten gallon hat at every jump, but to a dyed in the wool West Texan, that's the scene of fun. We fancy it ourselves when a rider grabs for leather and misce. It stirs us to mirth when a veered steer turns on his tormentor and charges him excitedly to the arena fence.

BY THE END OF THIS WEEK water of the city swimming pool may be poured. Workmen have been putting up forms since the latter part of last week. Even now it is possible to gain some idea of the size of the pool. It is no baby affair. Depths will range from three to ten feet and a circulating filter system will keep the water clear. This is something else for sportsmen to look forward to.

WE LEARN SOMETHING from Dr. C. W. Deats. The English Springer is called "springer" because in jolly old England one simply doesn't flush game, one bally well springs it, wot? Incidentally, the Dr. has a litter or six thoroughbred springer spaniels. Some treasure what with a good bird season in prospect.

New Bleachers Be Constructed

Sealed bids will be received until 7 p. m. Monday, July 15 for construction of bleachers at the high school football field.

The present bleachers will be moved to the east side of the field and rebuilt. The new bleachers, with 1600 seating capacity, will be of steel, modern in every respect. Thirty-four box seats will be built. Two new gates will be placed in a high fence back of the new bleachers on the west side of the field) to facilitate entry and exit of crowds.

Under the bleachers will be dressing rooms for the home team and visitors and showers.

Bids will be opened at the high school. Plans may be secured from Mr. C. C. Holderness, Supt. of Public Works, at the City Hall.

ENEMY'S KISS

Chapter 42
LIES

"Guy Lumley told me himself," there were two bright pink spots in Alison's cheeks, two flames of anger, "that you had whisked your husband off in an airplane because you were afraid!"

"I know! That's his story. The story he told everyone," Daphne was tragically patient. "That I wanted to—to finish what I'd begun and so I carried my husband away! It never seemed to strike Lumley that apart from anything else I'd not much motive, considering that his death left me a beggar!"

"You didn't know about the annuity until your husband was dead!" Alison flung that at her. "You said so yourself, in a restaurant to that man Gompertz!"

"Did Dr. Lumley say that?" Daphne seemed almost shocked. She turned back to Robert pitifully. "You know, I don't believe there's anything that he could say that he hasn't said against me! He's a very convincing man! Why he's even been down to Scotland Yard, prying about and trying to find out if he could get hold of any gossip against me! And then coming down to my house the other night!"

"You know perfectly well that you sent him there!" Alison could not hold herself in.

"I did? My dear, why on earth should I?" Daphne was almost bland. "Do be sensible, Alison! You may dislike me, but you can't imagine that I'd be such a fool as to send a man who hated me to pick up gossip to use against me!"

"You sent him down to Warley because you hoped I'd get killed," Alison! Her father thundered that.

A reproachful little cry from Daphne. "Alison! You promised me you wouldn't tell any more lies if I told the truth!"

She turned hurriedly on Robert. "That's what I mean, Bob. He's absolutely poisoned the child's mind against me, so that she'd believe I mean to kill you or kill her, she'd believe that! He's taught her to look on me as a sort of monster."

"Alison doesn't believe anything of the sort," her father answered for her. "Nor do I. In any case, it doesn't matter what she thinks."

"But it does!" declared Daphne. "That's just it. If you knew the sort of time I'd had, just because of him! Everywhere I went, I'd settle down, hope for a little peace. And then the old story'd start over again. I got so desperate, Bob, that I've have gladly gone to the Home Office, asked for an exhumation order myself! I'd have been glad to face even that sort of publicity rather than go on like this!"

now." Robert touched the bell. The slatternly maid answered so promptly that she must have been just outside the door. Her round face was flushed as though she had been stooping; her eyes goggled at Alison in a scared sort of fashion. Robert looked at her limply, untidy hair and dirty apron with disgust as he said, "Go out and tell the chauffeur, please, to come in and fetch your mistress's Juggage."

The girl obeyed.

Daphne had gone through into her bedroom and she could be heard in there, opening drawers, bumping softly as she put her hat on and gathered up her bag and gloves. The small white Chinese slave dog with his port nose and proud plume of tail came from the bedroom, sniffed at Alison's feet as she stood by the window, looking anxiously up the street.

What had happened to Guy? Why didn't he come? If he would only hurry! It was more than half an hour since Alison had left him in the street—what could he be doing? He had only got to give his name and address to the police! Even now, if he would only come, they might persuade her father that Daphne was lying, that he was in danger!

Robert, whistling, had picked up the little white dog and was stroking it; he lit himself a cigarette. The chauffeur came in and Alison watched him with a sinking heart as he carried out the rawhide trunk.

The little maid followed, from Daphne's bedroom, staggering under two heavy suitcases and a round hatbox, a rug over her arm. Their feet rang on the stone steps outside and from the window Alison could see them reach the car.

There was a woman sitting in the seat beside the driver's place and with a pang of fear Alison saw that she was wearing a maid's grey dress. A big, beetle-browed, coarse faced woman of middle age, with sleek black hair.

Alison, watching the clock hands move forward in sharp, short jerks, almost prayed, "Oh, let him come! Please let him come!"

"Is there anything more, sir?" The man stood at attention by the door.

"One more trunk inside," called Daphne and she vanished.

As they disappeared, Robert said to Alison, "Go on and get into the car." "I'm not going with you." She put no defiance into that; said it flatly. Robert crossed the room and shut the door. He, too, spoke quietly.

"You are my daughter and you're under age. You're going to do exactly what I say."

There was a brisk finality about that statement. And it was true, that was the worst of it! She broke out passionately.

"Father, you don't understand! She means to kill me. Don't you see? Are you blind? You can't leave her any money till I'm dead and that's why she tried at Warley—oh!"

Mr. Roosevelt's Most Dangerous Enemy

Recent events have made it plain that there is one man who can defeat the president. His name is not Herbert Hoover. His name is not Huey Long. His name is Franklin D. Roosevelt. The issue on which he may be beaten has also become clear. He may be defeated if he convinces the people that he is too restless to permit them to resume an ordinary existence. Mr. Roosevelt has reached a point not unlike that which Woodrow Wilson reached in the winter of 1919 when he failed to recognize that the longing for adventure and the appetite for public excitement had given way to craving for peace and a return to normalcy. President Wilson fell from the heights of popularity because the American people were afraid that he meant to keep them distracted and embroiled. A similar fate may easily be in store for President Roosevelt unless he is wise enough to recognize that the mood of 1933 is exhausted. He will be dangerously misled if he attributes to the people at large his own persistent interest in continuous public activity.

But for this one factor Mr. Roosevelt's position is a very strong one. A substantial business recovery, brought on in part by ordinary readjustments and in part by the stimulus of certain of his measures, is under way and should, by all known signs, develop momentum in the course of the next year. Along with it he has put upon the statute books a series of reforms which, if only the people were allowed leisure to appreciate them, would be spectacularly impressive. Moreover, these reforms will not be seriously challenged in principle by the Republican opposition unless there is an explosive reaction against adventure that seems to have no end. With the N. R. A. out of the way, no important Republican leader is on record as favoring the total repeal and complete abolition of any of the other major reforms. Mr. Roosevelt is therefore, in the enviable position where he might go to the people in 1936 with the claim that he had brought about recovery and had achieved reform.

But it would not be difficult for him to destroy his own position. All he has to do in order to destroy his own position is to make the people feel that he does not know how to stop because he has an incurable itch to keep moving. If that belief takes hold in the public mind, the people will not thank him for the recovery they enjoy; they will blame him for withholding the additional recovery they might enjoy. Moreover, the reforms themselves will be jeopardized. For if the time is not taken to consolidate them, to review them where they are legally vulnerable to interpret and administer them successfully, half the people will be angered by their detailed defects and the other half disillusioned because their promises are unrealized.

CONTRACT

BEATING A SQUEEZE
When there is a prospect of declarer making a contract by a squeeze the defense, by cooperation of partners, must do its utmost to retain low cards of a suit in which the declarer is trying to produce a winner. For example: North opened the auction with a club. East passed. Having every suit stopped, a good fit in clubs and no especially good suit with which to trump, South bid three no trump. Because of the singleton, North disliked no trump and offered four diamonds. South went to six no trump and North to grand slam.

East opened a diamond for safety's sake. The declarer could see that he was certain of eleven tricks—four diamonds, four clubs, the two top spades and the heart ace. A twelfth trick possibly could be taken with a heart finesse. A squeeze was needed for the thirteenth. If the heart king and spade honors had to be protected East there were possibilities. The declarer visualized himself as taking the first trick North, winning a heart finesse, playing the ace of hearts and the king of spades and then running all the clubs and all the diamonds, being in the South hand when the last diamond was led. He hoped to promote the eight of spades to the winning rank. A spade would be discarded South on the fourth club. The plan would have worked against any defense if East had originally the queen, jack and ten of spades. With three cards left in each hand the lead of the last diamond would have compelled East either to throw a heart, making South's ten good, or to shed a spade so that the ace-eight would win.

With West holding three spades to the ten-spot the squeeze cannot succeed against proper defense. West should discard no spades. East should hold the king of hearts and the queen-jack of spades for his last three tricks. On the lead of the last diamond East can throw one of the spade honors. Then while the ace of spades will drop the queen, the eight-spot will be won by West's ten. As played by John P. McKnight of New York City in a rubber game. However, the grand slam was made. West in the early stages of the play had no idea of the importance of his spade triplet and discarded one of them. The tip on a squeeze for the defense is to protect the suit in which there is an entry to the faced hand, in this case obviously spades.

Newton Leaves For New Post

Park Landscape Architect Gets Promotion To Two State Job
Harry Groll Newton, landscape architect for the technical service department of the CCC camp here for the past year, left Wednesday for Austin to assume his new duties as head of the landscape architect department over two states in another federal department.

He was elevated this week to the position of chief landscape architect for the federal Rehabilitation Administration over Texas and Oklahoma. Newton won high praise here for his landscaping activities in the mountain park, accomplishing desired effects and still bending improvements with rustic surroundings. He is also well known for his paintings of local landscapes. He was honored Tuesday evening by other members of technical staff and their wives in a dinner affair. Newton may be stationed in Oklahoma City.

profits, in addition to all expenses and extremely high salaries, with a lobby of numerous high-paid men, the sulphur companies defeated an increase from the present 75-cent per ton tax this year, after it was shown they so control prices that their profits are as great from small production as from large production. If a compromise tax of $1.25 to $1.50 had been accepted, everybody would have been happy; but out of the scars of that fight, future unitive legislation more likely will put the tax at $2.50 or more a ton than less.

Certain types of franchises, including exclusive rights to operate utility services and collect rates guaranteed to bring a profit, have constituted immense values that were not adequately taxed. An indirect way of taxing such values will be a future very great extension of municipal operation and control, by which the profits and dividends will be kept at home, in the form of lower rates and lowered taxes. This will enable a citizenship to bear other taxes.

Pipeline have been brought under the intangible tax, and instead of paying off the investment in six or seven years and paying dividends of 25 to 30 per cent at the same time, these properties will have their excess earning capacity capitalized and spread upon the ad valorem rolls, just as railroads have.

It appears the revolution against the "tax on poverty" of the general consumer sales tax has been so great as for the present to prevent the luxury tax, system of levying upon the upper price brackets of commodities, with basic exemption to satisfy the normal necessities of the normal wage-earner. The bitterest of all opposition before legislative committees is that to the state income tax. The Texas house two years ago voted final passage of an income tax bill, but the senate conveniently killed it, both using it as a weapon against the sales tax. Texas will be so busy the next few years trying to recruit new industries and new capital to de-state relief administration dependent on federal money to supplement the final state bread-bond money to feed unemployed, and to supervise certain activities soon to be wound up.

Some of the works progress agencies, such as the accounting functions and personnel, likely will be left in Austin for 60 or 90 days to wind up the vast work-relief program now under way. After that, it is understood Director Drought will concentrate his work in San Antonio.

It was believed Texas rural communities, Inc., in charge of substance colonies, may be relegated either at College Station or with the federal rural resettlement headquarters in Dallas.

A three-way split has been decreed for the work now being carried on—efficiently—by the Texas relief administration. V. R. Smitham, formerly in charge of the rural division, has been made Texas state director of rural resettlement, to work with the extensive new federal organization set up under the general direction of Dr. Rexford O. Tugwell. All work-relief projects and administration have been taken out of the relief administration, theoretically from July 1 and put in charge of H. P. Drought, San Antonio, regional works progress director. Drought will not have his organization ready to function by July 1.

That will leave Adam R. Johnson, relief director, in charge only of direct relief for unemployed, and in charge of finishing the work relief projects already ordered.

This column announced, exclusively for Texas, 10 days ago, that Dr. Carl C. Taylor, formerly of the University of Texas, will take over the rural resettlement program, with the move of Lawrence Westbrook, Texas, over to the works progress administration with Harry L. Hopkins.

That appointment now has been confirmed. The rural resettlement program, to grow into one of the federal government's major lines of activity in shifting relief people back to a self-supporting basis, will have the following set-up affecting Texas:

Under the general direction of Undersecretary Tugwell, Dr. Taylor will be national rural resettlement director. Dr. H. P. Gray will be national director of the land policy section. Dr. H. P. Trent, now of Stillwater, Okla., will be moved to Dallas, as director for the Oklahoma-Texas region of the rural resettlement work. C. N. Evans of Marshall is assistant regional director for rehabilitation of individuals, and O. R. Reeves of Dallas, assistant regional director for rural colonies. V. R. Smitham of Austin will be the state rural resettlement director to work with these regional authorities.

This program will leave the
