Free Folder Tells How to Catch Fish

Be you carp or catfisherman? The Texas Game and Fish Commission has some red hot information for you. In pamphlets just issued there is expert advice on how to catch both catfish and carp. The publications also tell you how to cook them.

Carp fishing has become quite a fad on many Texas lakes and streams, where fishermen have found them to be plentiful and real batters. Biologists of the commission are doing everything they can to eradicate carp as "rough fish."

fishermen who like to catch carp. Many private dock owners bait holes for carp fishing. They grow big and fight hard.

The folder on catfish describes the individual fish and tells how the fisherman can identify them. It also tells of methods of taking catfish, and the kinds of baits best suited to catfishing.

Copies of these pamphlets can be had by writing to the Game and Fish Commission, Watson Building, Austin.

Turkey Still Tops Plentiful Foods List

Turkey, for the second straight month, is the featured food on the U. S. Department of Agriculture's August plentiful foods list.

Supplies of turkeys are abundant, reports the USDA marketing service, and consumers may look for excellent buys on these birds.

Fresh fish is another protein food chosen for the plentiful group, as August is in the height of the fishing season, both in Gulf waters and in inland streams. Supplies probably will vary with the region.

August plentiful foods also will include numerous summer vegetables, although some will be found more abundant in one region than in another. Fresh peaches and pears will be in excellent supply. Lemons and limes will continue on the USDA list.

Vegetable fats and oils and peanut butter are shelf items which will remain on the plentiful list through August.

SPEAKING & CARDS

PRESTO! YOU'RE A BRIDGE PLAYER

Today, everything we do is speeded up. So maybe it's logical for us to be able to start playing Bridge in just 22 minutes.

At least that's the claim of a bright, colorful booklet just made available by the Association of American Playing Card Manufacturers. Titled "How to Start Playing Bridge in 22 Minutes," the booklet is called by the Association the "clearest explanation yet of how to get started in Bridge."

Cartoons and colorful diagrams are used to amplify many of the points described in its 20 pages. Simplicity is the watchword. "It takes four people to play Bridge—no more, no less," states the booklet. "The player seated across the table is your partner; the others, your opponents. Aside from the fun of playing, the object of the game is to score more points than your opponents."

The booklet emphasizes that Bridge needn't be feared as a complicated game. Its pages, the booklet says, are "designed to get you over the first hurdle and into your own Bridge game. You can read through it in 22 minutes. After that, the game's own appeal will probably supply all the incentive you need to learn how to play better as the days go by."

For clarity, the booklet uses comparisons with business dealings in explaining how bidding and play are conducted. An example is a paragraph describing what happens after cards have been dealt. "Before play starts," the booklet says, "the 'contract' has to be established. This is done by bidding, and as in most business deals, the contract goes to the partnership which is the highest bidder." Following this is a list of the three things the player can do when it is his turn to bid—pass, bid, and double.

Referring to various card playing systems, the booklet says, "The many systems for playing Bridge are merely methods of applying the greatest probability in your favor. Many people create their own systems. But most people, after they have whetted their appetite for Bridge, learn one of the accepted systems."

However, the book concludes, "The best way to learn Bridge is to play it—as often as you can." If you'd like a copy send ten cents to cover cost of mailing and handling to Playing Cards, Dept. M, 423 Lexington Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.

CONGRATULATIONS to the more than 1,000 workers in "Evac 12," Binghamton, N. Y.'s recent evacuation exercise, were given by Lt. Gov. George B. DeLuca (right), and New York State Civil Defense Director Lt. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner at a press conference following the huge test. Crediting three local civil defense directors for execution of the state-devised plan, General Huebner concluded from the favorable and serious public response to the test that "its value will be immense not only to the 16,000,000 people of New York 'state' but to the entire nation." Gunfighters Fable Shattered by Star

Joel McCrea, one of Hollywood's foremost cowboy stars, has knocked the props from under a cherished Hollywood tradition—the fast draw.

He claims the deadly gunslang-ers of the early west weren't necessarily fast on the draw.

The fast ones were usually the dead ones," said McCrea, who stars with Barbara Hale, Brad Dexter and Gloria Talbott in Allied Artists' CinemaScope production, "The Oklahoman," which opens Sunday at the Derby Theatre.

"Wyatt Earp, Bat Masterson and the other gunmen of frontier days didn't depend on the quick draw," he continued. "They were sure-shots, who stressed accuracy rather than speed.

"The real gunmen of the old days, whether they were lawmen or outlaw killers, were steady, steady and steady, but they concentrated on the target instead of on the time.

"The usual result was that while the trigger-happy opponent grabbed for his gun and started blazing away, the more accurate gunman may have been a split-second behind but his bullet was right on the target. Hollywood has gotten away from the facts, probably on the grounds of dramatic license."

Henry Clay was credited with saying "I'd rather be right than president."

'This Could be the Night' Coming to Derby Drive-In

When a young pretty and impressionable New England-bred school teacher takes a part time job as secretary in a rowdy New York night club run by a tough ex-bootlegger, anything can happen—and does. "This Could Be the Night," showing next Wednesday and Thursday at the Derby Drive-In Theatre, with a cast headed by Jean Simmons, Paul Douglas and a handsome new leading man, named Anthony Franciosa.

The assortment of characters introduced in Isabel Lennart's laugh-a-minute script is a priceless one. Among the personnel of the Tonic Club are its owner, Rocco (Paul Douglas), former racketeer gone "legit" but with plenty of the old bite left; his young partner and protege, Tony (Anthony Franciosa), a ladies-man if there ever was one; and Ivy (Julie Wilson), the club's torchy chanteuse.

Then there are Patsy (Nelle Adams), the stripper who yearns to be a cook, against the wishes of her ex-burlesque queen mother (Joan Blondell) who is determined that she follow in the footsteps of her own hooper career; Hussein (Rafael Campos), the Turkish bus boy, whose happiness depends on his passing an algebra test; Leon (J. Carrol Naish), the temperamental chief; and a flock of typical night club habitués, ranging from a nosy columnist to a noisy playboy.

Into the rag-tail atmosphere enters demure school teacher Anne Leeds (Jean Simmons), whom everyone feels called upon to "protect" from the sordid side of life, as represented by the Tonic Club. But before she is through, Anne has demonstrated that she cannot only take care of herself but of the problems of most of her rowdy associates. Through her efforts, luscious Ivy uses her sex appeal to find a mathematician in the joint to aid Hussein in mastering algebra (this is one of the picture's howling sequences); she encourages Patsy to enter a cooking contest to emerge a triumphant ribbon-winner (another hilarious sequence); and finally, she opens Tony's eyes to the fact that a decent girl is not necessarily a dull one, even though it takes a punch flying police raid on a bookie joint to do it.

SOIL CONSERVATION DISTRICT NEWS

OUR SOIL ★ OUR STRENGTH

By Jim Smathers
Work Unit Conservationist

Most of the wheat and barley in the district has been harvested by now. Most yields have been rather low due to poor stands, rust and the hot dry winds. S. D. Winegeart, who lives just south of Pampa, thinks he has a yield which is above average for dry land wheat and barley.

Winegeart made an average of 182 bushels of wheat per acre weighing 56 pounds to the bushel on 24 acres, and 15 bushels of barley per acre on 24 acres. Winegeart attributes his wheat yield to getting the wheat started early last fall and to his crop-land practices. He was able to get his wheat started early and to get it to live through the winter by proper handling of crop residue and contour farming.

Crop residues were maintained on or near the surface of the soil for protection against wind and water erosion, and to conserve valuable moisture, permit greater penetration, permit surface decay of organic matter and reduce runoff.

Contour farming was used to save what little moisture that fell. Winegeart did get a small rain after his wheat was planted. There was no run-off due to the level drill furrows which held the water where it was needed. This spring when the rains came his wheat grew off early enough so that the loss from the rust was not so great.

Winegeart's barley was also planted on land that was contoured so that when the hot dry winds started he still had plenty of moisture to make a good yield on barley.
