LIBRARY NEWS

By Lady Bryant, Librarian

How long has it been since you visited your library? If you haven't been recently, you owe it to yourself and to your community to pay a visit. Your library offers you the world's greatest bargain in a free education and entertainment.

A library is a storehouse of ideas, of all that is best in our country and our civilization. Weapons of the mind and spirit without which no war, hot or cold, can be finally won. Besides having books to offer, the library has records to keep, daily circulations of magazines and maps, materials on file, fiction and non-fiction books, films received, books lost—which brings us up to the point of our story.

We have the library, but you have our books (some of them). Why don't you return them and keep your borrower's card in good standing and our record clear? We did not get mad at you when you asked for the use of the books, so don't get mad at us when we ask you to return them and pay the fines for overdue materials.

Your reference of time is dated in the book for your convenience. As a parent and reader, you should know the library rules and remember your pledges you agree to when you sign the application card to become a borrower. A library card represents the greatest of all the free book offers. As a citizen, you should help us improve and increase its services to your community.

TWO ARE HURT IN CAR CRASH WEST OF TOWN

Two North Carolina people were injured, but not critically, when their car overturned on Highway 66 about 18 miles west of McLean Tuesday morning at about 10:30 o'clock.

The injured were A. Z. Funk, 65 years of age, and his wife, Mrs. Mildred Funk, 53, of Fletcher, N. C. Funk suffered two broken ribs and a severe laceration on his forehead; Mrs. Funk had multiple cuts and bruises. Neither was pronounced in serious condition by the attending physician at the Groom hospital, where they were taken by a Claborn ambulance.

Investigating officers were Patrolman R. C. Parker and Joe O'Rear of McLean.

Mrs. Funk, who was driving, was going down grade and was attempting to pass a car driven by John E. Shirey of Douglasville, Pa. The Funk car hit a portion of the highway flooded by Tuesday morning rains, went out of control, skidded about 45 yards, and then turned over, landing on its top. Pains had flooded about 200 feet of the highway near the scene of the accident.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Funk were thrown from the car and knocked unconscious. They were taken to the Groom hospital for treatment.

Shirey, driver of the other car, was exonerated from responsibility in the accident.

PAMPA RODEO PLANNED FOR AUGUST 1 TO 6

With another nation-wide guest star, the 11th annual Amateur Top o' Texas World's Championship rodeo will go into full swing August 1, in Recreation Park, Pampa, with Goat Mayo of Petrolia as stock contractor and arena director.

The Top o' Texas Kid Pony Show and miniature rodeo will be held on Monday and Tuesday, August 1 and 2, at 8 o'clock, with the main rodeo performance on Wednesday, August 3, through August 6 at 8 daily.

With a guitar and a song, Jimmy Wakely, a smiling Oklahoman, has won for himself star status in show business, and will make personal appearances at each rodeo performance.

It all began when Jimmy decided to enter an amateur contest on a local radio station in Oklahoma City. Teamed up with two other singers, he called his act "The Wakely Trio." After the contest they were given a steady job on that station. Gene Autry was a guest on their show, and immediately signed them for his "Melody Ranch" program, which ultimately brought Wakely to Hollywood.

With his keen sense of showmanship, Jimmy grasped every opportunity and steadily has built for himself a secure position in his profession. He is one of America's top ranking singers and number one artist in the western and country field for Capitol records, for whom he records exclusively. Wakely calls himself an Oklahoman, although he actually was born in Mineola, Ark., and moved to Oklahoma when he was 4.

The Amarillo Air Force band will be on hand again this year to furnish that "just right" music for each rodeo performance, as well as participate in the main rodeo parade to be held in downtown Pampa on Wednesday, August 3, at 4 o'clock.

Paul C. Crouch, president of the association, states that there will be 300 cowboys and cowgirls from all over the southwest participating in the main rodeo events which include calf roping, double muggin, bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, bulldogging, bull riding, cowgirl sponsor's contest, and an NCHA approved cutting horse contest.

Making their appearance for the first time at the Top o' Texas rodeo will be "The Henrys," with their world famous dog act.

A show is never complete without the cowboy's assistant, the clown. Jake Mitchell, popular rodeo clown, will be on hand to take charge during the bull riding contest to see that each cowboy is safe from the charging Brahma bulls.

500 CITIZENS ARE WANTED AS DELEGATES

Five hundred area citizens . . . more or less . . . are wanted to go to Pampa Friday morning to meet with the Gray County commissioners court to request that $50,000 for a branch hospital in McLean be added to the $300,000 enlargement bond issue proposed for Highland General Hospital in Pampa.

Those people interested in having a hospital here, and who will attend the Friday meeting, are urged to be at the City Hall in McLean at 8:30 o'clock Friday morning. The court will convene at 10 o'clock at the county courtroom in the courthouse in Pampa.

Heading the delegation will be Mayor E. J. Lander and members of the city council.

"We want everybody who will attend to be on hand. If you do not have transportation, there will be plenty of cars there to take you. We feel that the more people we have, the better our chances will be in getting our request fulfilled," Mayor Lander said.

The decision to meet with the commissioners Friday was made following the appearance of two groups of McLean citizens in Pampa earlier this week. Tuesday afternoon, a group met with the commissioners, and last night another group met with the hospital board. Workers in Pampa have their petition for the $300,000 issue just about ready, and are due to present it to the court Friday. It is hoped that an election for one issue of $350,000 will be called, with $300,000 designated for Highland General and $50,000 for a branch hospital in McLean.

The legality of a branch hospital was more or less established by a letter received by County Attorney Don Cain from the attorney general's office Monday. The opinion is based on a different portion of the statutes from that opinion of about two weeks ago which stated that a city-county hospital was not legal for McLean.

The steps taken thus far are as follows: The hospital board, the group which governs the operation of the county-owned Highland General Hospital in Pampa, decided some time ago that the facilities at Highland General were in need of enlargement if all patients were to be cared for properly.

The board took its problem to the Gray County commissioners. Since the commissioners did not know whether the general population of the county favored expanding the county hospital, it was decided to take the question to the people.

A committee of 25 people (five from each of the four precincts and five appointed by the county judge) met with the commission-

Wheat Growers Okay Crop Controls

Wheat farmers throughout the United States—including those of Gray County—voted in favor of continuing the present rigid controls on their crop for next year.

Unofficial tabulations indicated that 77.5 per cent of the wheat growers favored the controls, and the resulting price support. A majority of two-thirds was necessary, and government officials had expected the vote to be closer. Last year, the per cent majority was 73.3.

In Gray County, 178 wheat growers favored the quota system while only 47 opposed. The voting in McLean was 17 for and none against; in Grandview, 59 for and 3 against; in Laketon, 15 for and 28 against; in Pampa, 87 for and 16 against.

The vote throughout the U. S. was 254,197 for and 73,852 against. Agriculture department officials were expecting about 500,000 out of 950,000 eligible wheat growers to vote, and were also expecting the final result to be closer to the two-thirds margin than it was.

Under the approved program, the government will apportion 53 million acres among individual farms for production of wheat. In general, each farm's marketing quota will be the quantity of wheat grown on its share of the national planting allotment. The total is the same as this year's but about 30 million acres less than that planted in the peak years.

The department proposed the quotas because present reserve and surplus supplies total about one billion bushels, or more than enough to supply market demands for a full year.

In approving controls for another year, growers also accepted the government price supports for the 1956 crop at 76 per cent of parity or a national average of $1.81 per bushel. This compares with $2.5 per cent, or $2.06 for this year's crop. Had they rejected the quotas, the support rate would have dropped to 50 per cent of parity or about $1.19, unless Congress changed the law to write a new wheat program.

Parity is a standard for measuring farm prices declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices they must pay.

SPEAKING OF CARDS

THE NEWEST CARD GAME

Don't believe it the next time someone tells you that Calypso is only a combination of Canasta and Bridge. Nothing could be farther from the truth as you yourself will discover the very first time you play the game.

Calypso, of course, is the exciting new card game currently sweeping the country which gives each player his own personal trump suit and is played with four decks of cards shuffled together to form one giant pack. Conceived in the romantic island of Trinidad, Calypso has already been described by one well-known card expert as the first really new card game since Whist. Whist first appeared way back in the sixteenth century.

If this isn't enough to convince you that Calypso is an entirely new game, a few comparisons with Canasta and Bridge may help.

How does Calypso differ from Bridge? For one thing, there is no bidding in Calypso. For another, there is no "dummy"; all four players play every hand. But Calypso's biggest distinction is that it gives each player his own personal trump suit, determined at the beginning of the game by drawing cards and unaltered by any of the cards received in ensuing deals.

Calypso is a game in which tricks are taken, but unlike Bridge, the number of tricks captured has no significance and they are frequently broken up in the process of forming Calypso. Calypso also differs from Bridge in that no one suit ranks higher than another.

What about Canasta? The games are similar in that the main object in Calypso is to complete as many Calypsos as possible during the four deals comprising a game. But you cannot add to a Calypso (a complete run of 2, 3, 4, etc., up to the ace of your personal suit) by melding from your hand; you build the Calypso only with cards in tricks won by you and your partner. There is no melding or discarding in Calypso, no wild cards or bonus cards; Jokers aren't even used.

Perhaps the best news for most card fans is that a Calypso game is completed in a half hour or less while a game of Canasta can sometimes run several hours.

You can get a free, pocket-sized leaflet containing the complete rules for playing Calypso merely by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Playing Cards, 420 Lexington Avenue, New York 17.

EYE CATARACT DIMS VISION

Though cataracts are considered a rather common affliction of older people, there is no longer any reason to fear them, declared Dr. Henry A. Hollé, state health officer. Many think that once cataracts appear they are doomed to either blindness or an ordeal of surgery which may destroy what sight is left. Such notions have no basis in fact.

An advancing cataract brings on a dimming of the vision, and, in some cases the individual sees spots before his eyes, or sees double. If a cataract is left to develop long enough, it will appear as a faint grayness in the pupil of the eye. With complete development, the grayness will turn to dead white. Cataract is not a disease but a clouding of the lens of the eye.

Cataract can be well under way before the patient notices any visual defect. In such cases, only a physician or eye surgeon can discover the condition in time to arrest the process. When the fogging moves to the center of the pupil, the individual becomes conscious of a reduction in vision. The cataract is now well on its way. It grows more rapidly with ill health, focal infections, overwork and neglect of one's health. Another contributing factor is defective vision resulting from astigmatism, and neglecting to use properly fitting glasses to correct such defects. Eyestrain, conscious or unconscious, can play a major role in cataract formation.

Cataracts which are the result of some infection or injury can be prevented. Cataracts resulting from aging cannot as yet be prevented. The important thing to know about cataract is that doctors can keep it from being incapacitating. Cataracts can be removed when they first appear. They need not interfere with a person's work, or embarrass him in any way—they can often be cured. Cataracts should be treated early, before important skills are lost or unnecessary years are spent in frustration. Without fear of blindness, disfigurement, or unbearable discomfort, a person can put himself in the hands of a good eye surgeon, when cataract begins to cause trouble.

Built in 1792, it was one of the first houses erected in the frontier town of Knoxville, and is said to be the first weatherboarded house west of the Appalachians. Its appearance is much the same as when it was first built, except for the modern asphalt shingle roof, which also protects many other historical monuments from both weather and fire. The mansion was built by William Blount, first governor of the territory of Tennessee, and one of the first senators from that state.

PATROL NEEDS YOUNG TEXANS

Homer Garrison Jr., director of the Texas Department of Public Safety, announced this week that the Texas Highway Patrol will accept applications between now and July 25 from young Texans for appointment to the Texas Highway Patrol.

Garrison said that examinations for appointment to the patrol recruit training school will be given at various points in the state early in August. Some 100 vacancies, due to the action of the Texas Legislature in increasing the patrol personnel, will be filled from the roster of those qualified.

The public safety director invites all young men who are interested in a career of law enforcement to make application as early as possible. He pointed out that they must be between 21 and 35 years of age, inclusive, have a high school education, be at least 5 feet 8 inches in height and weigh not less than two nor more than three and one-half pounds per inch of height.

Garrison emphasized, too, that applicants must have been citizens of Texas for at least a year and that they must be of good moral character and in perfect physical and able to withstand a rigid character investigation.

Application forms, Garrison said, may be obtained from all Texas highway patrol district offices or by writing directly to W. J. Elliott, chief, Texas Highway Patrol, at Austin.

Dr. and Mrs. Buell Wells and daughter Lequita attended a training union meeting last week at the Baptist encampment at Glorieta, N. M.

Earliest Peaches

To T. A. Cooke goes the distinction of having raised the earliest peaches of the season. Mr. Cooke favored the News with a sample of this luscious fruit the first of the week that was grown in his orchard and so far as we were able to learn the only ones to ripen so early. It is said the current crop will be a bumper one unless some unforeseen accident prevents.

Donnell to Move

Dr. C. E. Donnell has closed a deal whereby he relinquishes his practice in this vicinity to Dr. W. C. Montgomery. He also includes his residence property in the transaction and contemplates moving in the near future to Swisher County, where he has ranch property.

Dr. Donnell has been here for a number of years and in the practice of his profession has attained a marked degree of success. As a citizen he has ever ranked among the most popular and he and his family will be sorely missed from our midst. Hosts of friends join us in wishing him unlimited success in his new field of labor.

Dr. Montgomery formerly practiced medicine here and bears an excellent record as a physician. We gladly welcome him and his

Lawn Supper

A large party of young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Richardson Monday afternoon, each bringing a dish and announced that they desired to spread their supper on the lawn. After enjoying an hour in trying over a number of popular songs, the entire crowd repaired to the pretty lawn at the Veach home and carried out their plans. A delicious repast was spread by the following young ladies:

Misses Maude Gardenhire, Vida Montgomery, Teresa Snider, Ina Hearn, Mabel and Leona Watkins, Bettie Lee Christian, Mary Henry, and Maudie Wilson. Their guests were Messrs. Vester and Charlie Cooke, Josh Turner, Bill Bundy, Roy Richardson, E. B. Guertin, and the Holt, Richardson, and Veatch families.

An artillery company was on maneuvers in the backwoods of South Carolina trying out the new atomic cannon. Firing it at a fairly close range target, the shell detonated with a tremendous explosion. As the familiar mushroom cloud started to form a bearded old man dressed in a tattered Confederate uniform and carrying an ancient rifle came running out of a nearby woods. Dropping his rifle, he raised his hands and addressed the soldiers, "Ah don't know what Lee's gonna do, but Ah'm going to surrender."

LOTS OF HORSES

OWNERSHIP OF INDUSTRY is being rapidly democratized—diffused throughout the population," said Henry Ford II in a speech before the American Newspaper Publishers Association. "More and more white- and blue-collar workers own more and more of the business firms for which they work, through profit-sharing plans, direct stock ownership or indirectly through a wide variety of pension and retirement funds."

Mr. Ford—who is strongly optimistic as to the soundness of our American economy and our future prospects—then went on to list some of the other great changes that have taken place in the capitalist system, including the emergence of the professional manager, the greatly expanded role of government as a moderator or referee, and the development of private and governmental social security systems. Then he made the suggestion that "we look upon capital not as accumulated wealth or goods but as the productive power potential stored up in machinery. . . . By studying the distribution of horsepower among our people, we can perhaps learn something new about American capitalism and just who it is who controls the real wealth of our country."

At this point Mr. Ford presented some remarkable and little-known facts. Excluding that in military use, this country has at its command something like 6,250,000,000 horsepower, in machines ranging from the biggest electric generators to little home appliances. That works out to about 40 mechanical horses for every man, woman, and child in the country.

That's certainly impressive—but the way the horsepower is owned is more impressive still. Industry and agriculture own about 1,500,000,000. State and municipal governments have a small amount—around 75,000,000. What Mr. Ford calls "home capitalism"—everything from your automobile to your electric razor—accounts for the largest amount by far—4,700,000,000 horsepower. To quote him again, "I submit that when you find people possessing many times more capital goods than industry; when you find that industry itself is being owned by ever greater numbers of the people; and when you see the opening to all Americans of new horizons of comfort and pleasure and experience which short years ago were available only to the well-to-do—and the very well-to-do, at that—then you've just got to conclude that our system is, after all, being run for the benefit of the capitalists—all 160,000,000 of us!"

Mr. Ford also observed that antagonism to distribution businesses has crept into our thinking, and that retailers, salesmen, and others are sometimes accused of being economic parasites. He said, "We speak often of the 'high costs' of distribution. Seldom do we think in terms of value added by distribution. It should be perfectly obvious that the whole distribution process, including advertising, promotes more consumption, more production and more employment. In so doing it effectively lowers the cost and adds to the value of the goods. . . . In this connection, another little-known fact is worth noting. Getting goods to market is one of the biggest jobs in our whole economy. Strange as it may seem, the horsepower used for this purpose, in our railroads, merchant ships and trucks is more than 10 times that of all the machines producing consumer goods."

By LESTER

Although I've never lived in anything but a community devoted largely to farming, I have never actually lived on a farm and helped till the soil. And, with the knowledge I have of the heartbreaks and disappointments which go with farming (I've a lot of close kin who have always been farmers), I don't believe I ever do want to farm for a living.

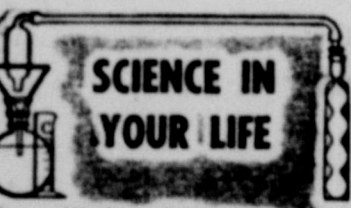

Farmers work hard getting the crops all planted; then along comes a high wind to blow out the crop, or a rain to wash it out, or a hail to hurt it. Or perhaps it comes up (maybe after replanting a couple of times), and then rain doesn't come in the right spots, and the crop burns up. Then, if that doesn't happen, maybe so the bugs come along and eat the crops up.

It's my belief that to be a successful farmer (and there are thousands of them), you've really got to like farming, and experience a certain thrill when you see your handiwork popping out of the soil and getting green and growing larger. To me, that wouldn't offer much of a thrill, but I'll bet it does to a farmer.

The above paragraphs were written because during the past few months, farmers have been having quite a time. At first, there was no moisture, and then it got here. Then came the replanting, and more moisture, and then hail in some spots.

Like the old boy told me that time, "there sure are lots things to do in this old world of ours. But there sure are lots of people to do them."

Pat and Mike, touring Switzerland, were caught in a sudden

Victim of Progress

The world-famous Trudeau tuberculosis sanatorium in Saranac, N. Y., has closed its doors as a treatment center, the victim of medical progress. When the hospital found itself operating with only 60 patients, a third of capacity, the directors decided to abandon the treatment program in favor of research.

It was the U.S.'s oldest TB sanatorium and a model for many others throughout the world. Founded in 1885 by Edward Trudeau, himself a tubercular patient, the sanatorium had cared for thousands since two consumptive factory girls entered the institution as its first patients.

When Trudeau was established, a diagnosis of TB was equivalent to a death warrant. The manly was well known as long ago as 460 B. C., when Hippocrates wrote the first medical code. In the 17th century John Bunyan wrote, "the captain of all men of death . . . was the consumption." It has affected our music and our literature, taking the lives of Chopin and Paganini, Chekhov, Keats and Balzac.

Most TB experts credit the closing of Trudeau and the empty beds at other sanatoriums to the new anti-tuberculosis drugs developed since World War II. Although TB began its retreat sometime after 1860, it is only within the past 15 years that new drugs like the combination chemical, streptomycin, have put the killer to rout. This tandem drug links two powerful weapons, streptomycin and isoniazid, so that they can be given in a single injection.

Tuberculosis is not entirely beaten yet, but Dr. J. Burns Amberson of Columbia University, dean of U. S. tuberculosis experts, recently declared, "Altogether, prospects seem good for what may be described as the conquest of tuberculosis in the foreseeable future. We certainly have the necessary means. It is only a question of using them."

blizzard. Half buried in the snow, Pat was about giving up hope. Suddenly up came bounding a St. Bernard dog with a large cask of brandy fastened to his collar.

"Look, Pat," said Mike, "cheer up, here comes man's best friend." "Aye, Mike," said Pat brightly, "and look at the big dog that's with it."

It is said that a woman is getting older when she begins to worry more how her shoes fit than her sweater.

The new paratroopers were going up for their first trip. Before they boarded the plane, the sergeant briefed them on the procedure.

"All you gotta do is jump out of the door when you get the order. Start counting by ones until you get to ten. Then pull the ring on your chest. That will open the chute. If it doesn't, there's an emergency ring down at your belt. Pull it. When you land, fold up your chute and wait until a truck comes to pick you up. Nothing to it."

As the last rookie bailed out and counted ten faster than anyone had ever counted it before, he pulled his chest ring. Nothing happened. Frantically he felt for the ring at his belt and pulled it. Still no billowing chute. "Ain't that just like the army!" he gulped. "I'll bet that truck won't be there, either."

The deaf mutes had been having an argument. When a friend intervened in an effort to smother things out, he noted that one of the mutes was standing with his back to the other, laughing uproariously.

'Oak Worms' Cause Serious Skin Rash

It's been a great year for the "oak worms."

The thick-set, 2-inch long caterpillars with the stinging hairs have been out in force in Texas this spring—notably central regions of the state. Curious youngsters see the crawling leaf-eaters on low hanging limbs of oak trees or on lawns, pick them up and get ugly looking welts for their trouble.

When mother notices the welt or rash, her first worried reaction is to seek advice from health officials on control measures. The reaction is the right one, for State Health Department entomologists know "oak worm" character from one end of its stubby chassis to the other.

Here's what they say about the caterpillar:

As in the case with immature stages of several types of moths and butterflies, the oak worm has poison glands scattered over its body from which arise large, hollow spines.

The tips of the spines readily penetrate human skin and break off, liberating some of the poison. When this happens, a serious rash may be produced—especially in children—resulting in system disturbances requiring medical attention.

People up east call these stingers "back moths," presumably because they are most active in the fall of the year—during deer season.

Females deposit eggs on oak leaves and twigs, and occasionally on the trees and shrubs. The larvae get along very well together, frequently feeding in clusters.

In addition to their harmful effect on humans, the worms are economic pests in that they damage young foliage. After completing their larval development, they drop to the ground to transform into the harmless adult stage.

The caterpillars have chewing mouth parts and that's the thing that gets them into trouble, entomologists say. It means they can be controlled with most insecticides of the stomach poison type which can be purchased commercially.

The Living Test Tube
 Accidents sometimes play a curious role in the history of science. The fleck of mold that settled by chance on Sir Alexander Fleming's germ culture and opened the door to the discovery of penicillin is one of the best-known cases.

A little more than 100 years earlier another accident led to a revolution in the knowledge of digestion. In 1822, a young French-Canadian, Alexis St. Martin, was accidentally shot in the chest on Mackinac Island. A U. S. Army physician named William Beaumont was called to treat the wound in the stomach, torn open by close-range firing. Beaumont worked hard but failed to close the wound. Nevertheless, he was able to apply bandages in such a way that the stomach could still do its normal work.

A year later the boy needed a cathartic, and Beaumont gave it to him through the hole in the stomach. It worked as well as if it had been given by mouth! With great daring Beaumont then decided to launch a series of experiments that won him honors as one of medicine's greatest researchers.

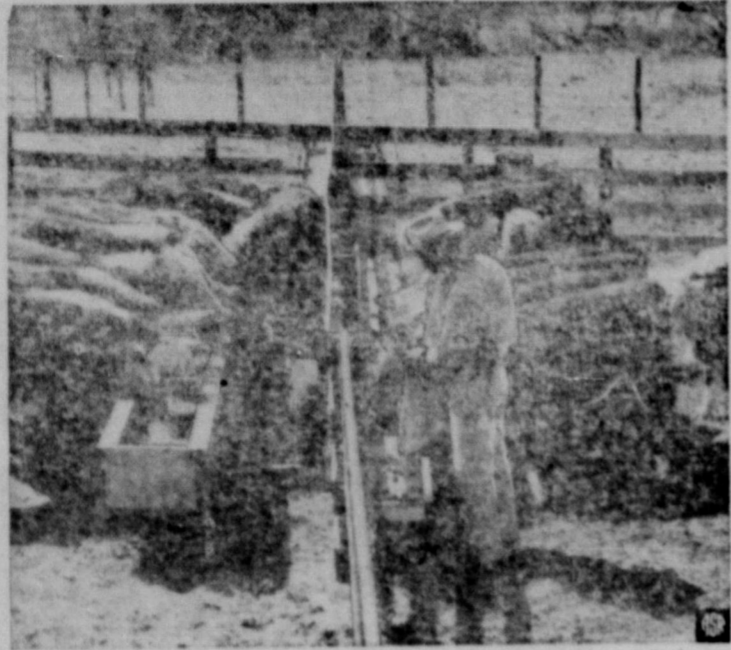

Out of St. Martin's open wound he made a living test tube. He dangled small bits of food on string into the hole and hours later withdrew from the stomach what he saw. In seven years Beaumont executed 238 experiments on an often rebellious subject. He proved man's digestive process was purely chemical and that emotional disturbances could affect digestion or even stop it.

St. Martin lived long after Beaumont died, earning his living from medical schools.

Salted Meal Saves Labor And Dollars

Cattle on left self-feed salted meal without fretting as compared with the hand-fed group on the right where nervous, hungry animals fight for a place at the trough as food is poured into bunker.

Even cattle are taking up the modern idea—"do it yourself"—and saving American stockmen labor and dollars. Salted meal is the key; it keeps the cattle from making "pigs" of themselves and leads them into what might be called good "trough manners" which benefit the smaller and weaker animals.

Extensive research in control of supplementary protein feeding is being carried out under co-sponsorship of the Salt Institute at the USDA Southern Great Plains Field Station at Woodward, Oklahoma. E. H. Melvain, superintendent at Woodward, explains it this way:

Cattle will eat just so much salt in a day. By mixing salt with cottonseed or other meal, the amount of supplementary feed the animal will eat can be predetermined. The animal will eat until it reaches its salt saturation point and as the heavier animals move on to graze, supplementary feed becomes available to the weaker, more timid animals.

The greatest advantages and saving is accomplished since the feed may be put out for large numbers of cattle once a week. When placed in troughs mounted on wheels, it may be spaced over wide ranges. In this way, one man in one day can do most of the work formerly done by two men in a week.

This method has been found specially advantageous on western ranges where large numbers of cattle and wide rough or timbered grazing areas are prevalent.

Salted meal in a mobile trough saves labor, facilitates less disturbance of grazing animals, more uniform consumption of protein, and better distribution of grazing.

Detailed information on mixing and feeding of salt-meal to beef cattle may be obtained from the U. S. Southern Great Plains Field Station, Woodward, Oklahoma.

ers to discuss the problem. As a result of this, the 25 agreed to make a survey of the feelings of county citizens by having them signify (at least a representative portion of them) whether they favored enlarging the county hospital. It was at the meeting with the commissioners that C. P. Callahan suggested that a smaller clinic or annex be built in McLean.

The survey indicated that a big majority of the citizens did feel that Highland General should be enlarged. So plans were made to go ahead with the idea of a $300,000 bond issue, and perhaps with one which would include about $50,000 for a smaller structure in McLean.

In the meantime, however, County Attorney Don Cain wrote the state attorney general, John Ben Shepperd, for a ruling on the legality of a city-county hospital in McLean. The attorney general's opinion pointed out that the statutes do not allow city-county hospitals in towns of less than 10,000, or city-county clinics in towns of less than 5,000.

This ruling was construed to mean that the possibility of a county hospital annex in McLean would be legally impossible. However, Arthur Teed, acting as attorney for the city of McLean, referred the matter to a well-known bonding attorney firm. This firm pointed out that in 1948, a similar case arose in another county in the state. The attorney general at that time, Price Daniel, had ruled that although there was no authorization for such cases, the bond issue could be sold. Cain then wrote for an opinion for such a branch hospital, and the ruling was sent to him. He received it Monday, and notified J. C. Claborn and Boyd Meador by letter to that effect.

In the meantime, petitions had been in circulation asking for the $300,000 bond issue election, and the county had advertised that bids on the bonds would be taken in Pampa July 1.

A group of six men met Tuesday with the commissioners, and then with the hospital board, chairman, George Scott, to see if McLean could get the $50,000 on with the $300,000—for a total bond issue of $350,000. There was one other alternative—to have a separate issue for the $50,000 only, but it was feared locally that such an issue might be defeated. So the meeting with the hospital board was held last night to determine whether the board would be agreeable to delaying their petition to the commissioners, changing it to read $350,000 instead of $300,000, and re-circulating the petition.

Texas Sage Recommends Old Pioneer Beef Dish

J. Frank Dobie

J. Frank Dobie's all-time favorite beef dish is a modern-day legend. Reminiscing a bit of local color from the fabulous history of Texas, the illustrious and near-legendary historian of Texas folk-lore says of "jerked" beef: "It has always seemed especially wholesome and is certainly nourishing.

"My way of cooking it is to chop it up and boil it with potatoes, plenty of onions and a few Mexican peppers. It makes a whole, satisfying and balanced meal."

"Jerked" beef, not to be confused with dried or corned beef, is a cured meat which is still very much in evidence around cow camps, even in this era of refrigeration. During round-up time, cow hands feast on the forequarter cuts the first few days after killing an animal, after which they rely on "jerked" beef for their meat supply.

To preserve freshly killed beef by the "jerked" technique, it is boned and stripped in one-half inch lengths, seasoned and stretched over wire or rope to dry in the sun. The sun-cooked beef, called "jerky," keeps indefinitely.

Some cowboys like to chew on a hunk of jerky as a substitute for the less-nutritious black-horse tobacco.

The Texas Beef Council, in its search for authentic pioneer jerked beef recipes for inclusion in the Famous Texan Cookbook, asked Mrs. A. C. Jones of Beville, a third generation Texan and family friend of Dobie, for her "Picadilla" (jerked beef hash) recipe. The following measurements will serve four:

4 cups chopped jerked beef
 1/2 cup shortening
 1 cup chopped onion
 3 cloves garlic
 Chilipetines or jalapenos (optional)
 2 cans tomatoes
 2 tablespoons chili powder
 1 tablespoon pepper
 1 Salt to taste

Soak jerky in warm water until softened; place on meat board and chop into small pieces. Sauté lightly onions and garlic in shortening in heavy skillet; add beef, tomatoes. (4 cans tomato sauce may be substituted for tomatoes.) Add seasonings; cover and simmer for about one hour.

For Carne Con Arroz, another Dobie favorite supplied by Mrs. Jones, add two cups uncooked rice to shortening with onions and garlic and brown slightly; add potatoes, canned corn or hominy.
