

A man we know said he was getting afraid to pick up the big town papers now-adays. Seems to him that all you see in scream-

Some of the recent ones that started his day off wrong were: "Sham-rock Beats McLean," "Six Die in Wreck East of Shamrock," and "Ike Stricken With Heart Attack." But all the news is not bad news and we have dug up some little bits of information to prove it:

Neil Shull was telling us about going to Amarillo last week to buy supplies for the store. After the nickup was loaded the Shulls decided to take in the fair. When they approached the entrance the gateman, thinking they had a booth, waved them on by without charge. It almost backfired though, when two fellows asked if they needed help putting up their booth. It worked out all right after they told the two they didn't believe they were quite ready yet. .

At the football game in Panhandle last Friday night we believe more fans from McLean were present than there was from the Panthers' home town. One fan remarked that it looked like most of McLeans backers who followed the team on the road belonged to the Church of Christ. Another said that from the number of cars parked in front of the church each Sunday it looked like most of McLean belonged to the Church of Christ.

Both teams will be looking for their first conference win as both were on the low side of the score last week-end. McLean bowed to the Panhandle Panthers, 18-13, while Lefors was downed 31-20 by the Clarendon Bronchos.

MORE MEAT FOR MORE PEOPLE

According to a University of Nebraska report, per capita meat consumption will reach 159 pounds this year, four pounds above 1954 consumption, and the highest figure of the last four decades. Beef and pork, it is expected, will be the leaders in bringing about the rise.

In future years, more and more increases in per capita consumption can be anticipated. People like meat and it is essential to our mental and physical wellbeing. And this trend, coming at a time when the baby boom is still in full flower and our population is soaring, means that the meat industry has a real job on its hands.

How, over the years, can we best assure a meat supply adequate to meet a heavy demand? The answer to that is simple and basic. It is to keep the system of livestock and meat production we now have-a system rooted in the free, supply-and-demand market, as against an artifically controlled market with rationing and price fixing and quotas and all the rest of than here. All you can eat is than the National Capitol; 308 the hamstrings that are inevitable when government promised for the very small sum feet compared to 287 feet, 41/2 tries to establish the rules.

In this connection, it is pleasant to report that the meat people are a competent lot-they've proven that they are good merchandisers as well as good producers. An example is the Harvest Festival September 22-October 1. During this period, the meat and vegetable industries will work together to promote their succulent foods. And they'll do it in the soundest possible way -by offering excellent buys to the housewife.

A MEASURE OF CONFIDENCE

Many people undoubtedly believe that when a man borrows money to buy stocks it is for speculative purposes. Some characterize this as gambling, pure and Henry, Bessie Earp, Velda and simple.

That outmoded view has been challenged by someone who knows his subject-President Keith Funston of rows, Robert Jones, Charlie Cook the New York Stock Exchange. The exchange has made Rob Harlan, Charlie and Walter Saye, Doyle Foster, Dean and studies of margin transactions-that is, stock buying Wesley Beard, Floyd Johnston which involves the use of credit. Mr. Funston said, "The Otto and Teddy Mayfield, and fact is that most people who use credit to invest in securities do so because they want to save . . . because they want to add to their income through regular dividends . . . because they want to build an estate and had. hope to see their capital appreciate . . . and because they want to protect their purchasing power." This statement is substantiated by a recent study which showed that three out of four-75 per cent-of margin transactions were for investment purposes, either on a tong or short term basis, not for speculative purposes.

Mr. Funston also stressed another point of top importance when he said, "Credit is, after all, risk-taking . . . it is a measure of our national willingness to take a calculated risk on the future, and a measure of our confidence in that future . . . it is time for us to recognize that a reasonable use of credit in the market is no different from a reasonable use of credit in other areas of our economy.

Credit, of course, should be employed wisely and cautiously. That is true whether the purchase is stock or a home. When employed in that way, credit is a constructive and potent force in the operation of the American economy.

THE BRIDGE AT WAYLAND

More than 300 years ago, in 1641, a stone bridge was built at Wayland, Massachusetts. For all that time it took and survived everything the Sudbury River had to offer. Then came the terrible floods of last August and the historic bridge was destroyed.

Nothing is so durable as to be automatically safe from ravages of one kind or another. And that principle also applies to human creations which are not material.

Many of us, seemingly, believe that because our constitutional system was designed to give maximum freedom to all, we are safe from tyranny and oppression so long as we can defend our borders from foreign enemies. Nothing could be more blind than this attitude. For freedom must be actively and eternally defended if it is to survive. A little socialism here, a little more socialism there—and the structure starts to crumble. The greatest enemy of freedom is ever-growing, ever-more powerful government.

The old stone bridge at Wayland, now gone, was more than 100 years the senior of this government. A vast destructive force swept the bridge away. The forces within our own borders which would, little by little, whittle away our individual freedoms in favor of more governmental authority could do exactly the same thing to our constitutional system.
