H. Gleaton, 5305 Quaker Ave., Lubbock, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee Godfrey of McLean.

Ford Memorial Chapel of the First Baptist Church in Lubbock was the setting for the ceremony. The bride's father presented her in marriage.

Slipper satin and Chantilly lace formed the wedding gown. Lace sleeves tapered to petal points and the stand-up collar was outlined with seed pearls. A Juliet cap of seed pearls and lace held her fingertip veil. The bridal bouquet was of white roses on a prayer book.

Miss Lana Sue Bumpass was maid of honor and Misses Carol O'Connell and Judy Williams were bridesmaids. Their soft pink satin dresses were accented by satin cummerbunds. Pink hats with brief veils and pink rose bouquets completed their outfits.

Knife That Sharpens Itself Has A...

Posed over its freshly baked subject, self-sharpening knife will be just as keen as...

One of the peckiest tasks to fall to the lot of any housewife is that of keeping kitchen knives sharp. It doesn't really matter if you own one of those knife-sharpening gadgets or if you have them sharpened when the scissor grinder comes around. It's still one more small, annoying job to remember.

Housewives will, therefore, welcome the notion of a knife that never needs sharpening. Such a knife has just been placed on the market. It will, the makers claim, wear better and stay sharper. Called the flame edge knife, the blade is coated with a thin layer of tungsten carbide.

through hot broiled chicken, roast and lots of other meats. But this one, the makers will do the job with and without producing slices of thick and thin cuts.

As the knife is used, it sharpens since more of the hard tungsten carbide its advertisements on behalf of U. S. Savings Bonds, the treasury saluted the light and power it said: "Every time we flip on a light or comforts of a home appliance, we can thank the light and power industry for making this possible. Hundreds of thousands of our Americans are proud of their work in the general distribution of electricity for our homes and cities."

It's true—and the treasury could have added that every pays taxes to the tune of more than a billion dollars. However, there is an irony in this tribute that is mentioned.

Branches and agencies of the government are their best to destroy the taxpaying, business-utility companies by socializing them, and huge monolithic government monopolies in their

On top of that, one very important agency of government—the Internal Revenue Service, aided and abetted by the Federal Power Commission—has held that utility advertising cannot be considered a business expense for income tax purposes. This advertising opposes socialization. So, to all intents and purposes the government has decided that a great industry cannot present its case in a battle for survival except at a heavy tax penalty.

It's hard to reconcile this with the Savings Bond advertisement.

PROGRESS CAN BE A TRAP

The word progress is deceptive. It cannot be defined without qualifications.

We cannot go backward, but at some point along the line we have lost something in our rush forward toward ever higher standards of living which demand a tremendous price.

If we could have "progress" that retained some of the peacefulness, security, and traditions of the past we would lead a more enjoyable existence.

The change brought about by progress is illustrated by R. H. Bushnell of Wallowa, Oregon, in a description of the Oregon State Fair of a past generation. Said Mr. Bushnell:

"Within easy walking distance from the main entrance to the fair was a grove of oak trees and under the shade was Tent City, with streets laid out and defined lots, each capable of containing a tent. Shortly before the fair opened, families arrived in wagons from various sections of the Willamette Valley, and they unloaded cots and bedding, stoves and dishes, usually sufficient for camping out. Many of them were fair exhibitors. . . .

"Coming out of the fair grounds in the evening, one could see the white tents lit by kerosene lamps, the flies back, and hear the neighbors talking and laughing. Friends were invited to eat supper and discuss the judging and placing of awards. The Willamette Valley was inhabited by one big family and the fair was a family reunion."

Of course we can't go back but there is something about Mr. Bushnell's descriptions that stirs the memory of more carefree days—less crowding, speed, noise, traffic, restrictions, laws, regulations, taxes. Along with progress it is too bad to lose so many of the virtues of the past which were less conducive to heart failure and nervous breakdowns.

SNEEZES AND OIL

One man's sneeze may be another man's oil field. An incongruous prospect looms strong on the scientific horizon as the result of a new oil hunting technique now being practiced by Standard Oil Company of California oil seekers.

The new method takes its cue from palynology—the

Sphinx

TIGER BY THE TAIL—A Busch Stadium grounds keeper seems to have more than he can handle as he tries to secure a tarp over home plate. Near-tornado winds were whizzing at the time.

study of pollens and spores buried in the ground millions of years ago. These pesky, microscopic dusts are released by plants for reproductive purposes—and incidentally to devil "hay fever" sufferers.

Here's how the new system works: Oilmen can't look for oil directly, only for places where they suspect it to be. Among the ways of looking for such places is to find rock formations which are of about the right geological age to harbor oil.

"Age dating" of rocks is accomplished by examining them for microscopic fossils—petrified remains of minute animal and plant life which, scientists know, lived around the prehistoric times when oil was formed.

Until the science of palynology came along, such oil hunting was confined to areas where fossils were preserved by burial under the sediments deposited by ancient seas. Remains on dry land were generally exposed to the atmosphere and decomposed rapidly.

But palynologists subsequently discovered what every hay fever sufferer knows: that pollens are pretty hard to get rid of. They resist decomposition just as well on dry land as under ocean beds. So their fossils are still around to provide a key index to the age of rocks in areas where marine fossils can't be found. Using this new method geologists can now better understand the geological history of many potential oil basins. This has in turn increased the chances of discovering significant new reserves of oil.

Even with this new technique, however, the time and expense of finding an oil field is still nothing to be sneezed at. You still have to drill a well to make sure, and eight times out of nine you'll probably come up with a dry hole.

Veteran Information

Q—My Korean GI term insurance lapsed two months ago and I understand I can reinstate it now as long as I make two monthly premium payments and am in good health. What kind of evidence of my good health does VA require?

A—You must submit a signed statement which contains enough information to show you are in as good health as you were on the date of lapse of your insurance. VA provides a special form for this purpose if you wish to use it.

Q—Is a veteran with a service-connected disability rated 30% entitled to extra money from the VA because of dependents?

A—No. The law does not authorize payments for dependents of veterans whose service-connected disabilities are found to be less than 50% in degree.

Q—If a child eligible for training under the War Orphans Education program needs special restorative training I understand he can get it. Does this include medical care?

A—No. It includes special courses—such as Braille reading language re-training and the like—designed to help a person overcome his handicap so he can eventually take regular training at school, but does not include medical care as such.

Q—How much longer does a World War II veteran have in which to get a GI home loan?

A—World War II veterans have until July 25, 1960, to apply for a GI loan. The law allows up to a year after that to complete the deal.

The Peripatetic View by CEC

Interest on US Savings Bonds is now up to 3 1/2%, raised another 1/4%. Now the same routine will start over again with tight money, recession worry, a few more hand-outs and we'll end up on top of the cycle again a little more socialized, a little more dependent on the bearded uncle and considerably worse off.

Radios are blazing the big news every day about the sound investment of savings bonds and the upped interest. And sure enough, the big lending companies pretty soon will start buying bonds instead of loaning on business, real estate, etc., since the interest is nearly as high and the risk is (supposedly) eliminated.

This throws the bulk of the lending back to banks and other short term, high interest boys and consequently slows to a drag the money market with its opportunities and building. To see the government pouring on the steam in the bond department would almost qualify me to sell shares in our maneuvers with a clean conscience.

The US only went a "few" billion in the hole last year, so bond buying in this highly secure proposition will probably set an all-time record. Then when the time comes to redeem these bonds, we'll all get taxed a little more, and more will have to be sold to buy up the ones already in. Now, it doesn't seem like too much of a ridiculous assumption to say that after enough years of this, all of everybody's money will be in a losing business that can only dole back out so much. And after the liberals get through making sure some persons are not able to have more than their neighbors, we'll all be put on the same allowance.

So the next time Ralph Yarborough feels the vote blues coming on, he'll dream up another give-away, and the US will need to sell more bonds in order to have more money to give more away, and will, consequently, up the interest rate to sell more—and less money will be left.

HOW PRIMITIVE CAN YOU GET?—Swedish artist Oyvind Fahlstrom glares at two of his paintings hanging in an exhibition in Stockholm. Reason for his irritation: painting on the wall is actually his brush board which he used as a protective backing for his works. Exhibition officials mistakenly hung the board with his other creations.

By Senator Lyndon B. Johnson
 A short time ago I went through an experience which I would like to share with all of you. It was the opportunity to question the communist boss, Nikita Khrushchev, of the White House and at the Capitol, and to hear him be questioned by others directly and indirectly.
 Nikita Khrushchev is a man that Americans should understand thoroughly. If we do not, we will be only half-armed against communism. And the struggle between communism and freedom will not be won by the side which is "half-armed."
 I do not believe the full picture of the communist dictator has been presented to the American people. He has been depicted variously as a bumbler, as a clown, as a man whose mind has no flexibility and is encased in Marxist concrete.
 The man whom I saw and questioned had none of those characteristics.
 He was able; he was skillful; he was adroit. He parried questions with the ease of a man who has spent a lifetime in rough-and-tumble politics. And every time in a while, the ruthlessness flashed across his face that must have been there when the Soviet troops were sent into Hungary to crush Hungarian patriots.
 Nikita Khrushchev is not a man for half-way measures. There can be no question of his strength —or his readiness to use that strength whenever he thinks he can get away with it.

Khrushchev's Generalities
 As a debater, Nikita Khrushchev is the master of the sweeping generality which conceals rather than unveils a thought.
 He can present a disarmament proposal which is so attractive on the surface that only people who patiently read the fine print can find the gimmicks. And he attempts to turn aside a pointed question with a deft phrase so rapidly that the listener does not have the time to point out that the question was not answered.
Outer Space and Peace
 I asked him whether his government was willing to join in a common effort to explore outer space—one of the most important steps that could be taken to peace. He replied, in sweeping form that the Soviets would be delighted.
 I then asked him why the Soviets had refused to take the first practical step toward such an objective—participation in the United Nations ad hoc Committee on Outer Space.
 Instead of replying, he delivered a lecture on why the Soviet Union refused to act as "poor relations." His response had nothing to do with the question. But it gave him the opportunity to claim that he had answered it. Other Senators who participated in the meeting had the same experience. Some questions were met with broad generalities; others with a filibuster.
Freedom Versus Communism
 This, then, is the man who has mobilized the forces that are determined to bury freedom. And we will be making a sad mistake if we assume that the communists do not have the skill to do it—if we give them half a chance.

 We will be making an even sadder mistake if we think the communists do not mean to bury us.
 In one respect, Khrushchev's tour of the United States has been disappointing. Many of us had hoped that he would have an opportunity to really talk to the American people and to learn something about our moral and our spiritual strength.
 But he has spent too much of his time with public officials and at public receptions. He has also spent too much time propagandizing instead of listening.
 There was something else, however, of value to us out of the trip. We had known of the evils of communism. Now we have had an opportunity to take the measure of the man who heads communism.
 We have found that he is skillful, that he is able, that he is alert. And I hope there will be rekindled in the breast of every liberty-loving, freedom-loving American a determination to keep our powder dry and our defenses strong against communist aggression.
 We must be as dedicated to freedom as this man is to communism.

BAPTISTS BELIEVE ...
JESUS "coming up out of the water."
 —MARK 1:10

Stepping down into the water of the Jordan River, Jesus presented himself to John the Baptist for baptism. Jesus' purpose was different from that of others who were coming. They came for baptism to show they had repented of their sins but Jesus had no sin from which to turn. He was not a sinner, but his life's purpose was to live and die for sinners. Therefore, he took his place among them. In being laid beneath the water, he prophesied of his burial a few years later in the grave. In "coming up out of the water," he foretold his resurrection from death to life.
 Those who accept Jesus Christ as the Son of God and who trust him as their Saviour are known as Christians. They should identify themselves as such by following his example in being baptized. They declare by being immersed in water that they believe that he died for them. Baptism is also a testimony of their new way of life in which they will follow Christ. The Bible says, "We are buried with him by baptism into death: that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life" (Romans 6:4). Furthermore, as these baptized Christians come up out of the water, they show their assurance of having a continuing life after they die. In this new life, they will be forever with their Lord.

 This is what baptism means to Baptists. It is a symbol and its very form is significant. Only by entering into the water, by being lowered beneath it, and by being raised up from it can a person demonstrate that central fact of Christianity for which baptism stands. This central principle is that Christ died on an executioner's cross for sinners, was buried in a tomb, and rose triumphantly from the grave to be seen again on earth.
 When a church baptizes, it obeys the last command of Jesus. He said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matthew 28:19). After giving this command, Jesus promised the blessing of his spiritual presence until the end of the world. This means that every Christian should be a baptized believer, at work in a church, learning more about Christ and guiding others to him.
 Baptists believe that baptism is a symbol of salvation and not an aid to it and that every believer in Christ should be baptized. With this conviction they are winning more to Christ every year.
