Citizens Industrial Club

In response to a call published in last week's News for a meeting to organize a commercial club, about twenty citizens gathered at the Odd Fellows Hall on Monday afternoon at three o'clock and a temporary organization was perfected with A. A. Callahan as chairman and Rev. J. C. Carpenter as secretary. After much discussion it was decided to name the body the Citizens Industrial Club.

After enrolling as members those who wished to identify themselves with the movement the body adjourned to meet again at the same place at seven-thirty in the evening.

At the adjourned meeting the books were again opened for the enrollment of members and about forty names were secured. A motion was then put and carried that the admission fee of the club be placed, for the present, at twenty-five cents and the monthly dues twenty-five cents.

The organization was then perfected and the following permanent officers elected:

A. G. Richardson, president.
J. C. Carpenter, secretary.
Clay Thompson, treasurer.
C. C. Cook, C. E. Donnell and C. S. Rice, together with the president and secretary, will constitute the executive committee.

A committee on membership was appointed as follows: W. M. Massay, J. C. Carpenter and P. J. Spencer.

By motion the executive committee was constituted a committee to draft a set of by-laws for the approval of the club.

The organization will meet again on Thursday, October

30th, and on each Thursday following for four weeks, after which a definite meeting time will be set. The hour of meeting will be 7:30 in the evening and the Odd Fellows hall will be used for that purpose.

It is the intention of the club to make a strong campaign for membership with the ultimate idea of enrolling the names of every citizen in the bounds of the McLean trade territory, and this should not be a very difficult task as the club will assume for its function the promotion and development of our every resource, being interested alike in the welfare of the merchant, the farmer, the doctor, the lawyer, the laborer and every other class of citizenship.

At the Monday evening meeting several matters were discussed which will likely claim the attention of the organization, principal of which was "good roads," a subject that today claims the attention of almost every city, village, hamlet and municipality in the entire South west. It is our big problem and the activities of the Citizens Industrial Club shall be exerted along practical lines for the accomplishment of much road improvement in this vicinity.

P. J. Spencer also gave a skeleton outline of a proposition which he proposes to make for himself and associates concerning the further prosecution of oil and gas development. Briefly stated his proposition is for the citizens to guarantee a certain sum of money to be paid in case he brings in a producing oil or gas well. The money is merely to be guaranteed and if he brings in the well, producing a certain amount of oil or gas per day under a ten day test, then it is to be paid over to him. If he fails the contract to be null and void. This kind of proposition will doubtless appeal to those who are financially able to promote the guarantee and the club will undertake to push this matter to a definite end.

Other things of more than passing importance are continually arising and it shall be the purpose of the club to exert its influence for their development if they prove worthy.

Every citizen should identify himself with this movement and we believe the membership campaign will be an eminently successful one.

Pleased With Fair Results

Mrs. R. E. Dorsey, who had charge of the local textile exhibit at the Clarendon fair, expresses herself as delighted with the splendid treatment accorded her at the hands of the officers of the fair as well as the success of her entries for prizes in the textile department.

The following is a list of the local winners:

Wallachian center piece, first prize—Mrs. W. J. Pennington.
Coronation center piece, first prize—Mrs. W. J. Pennington.
Rambler rose center piece, first prize—Mrs. H. M. Alagood.
American Beauty center piece, first prize—Mrs. H. M. Alagood.
Punch work center piece, second prize—Mrs. H. M. Alagood.
Mrs. Dorsey will likely have the same department in charge next year and expects to obtain a splendid exhibit from this point.

At the time when the United States and Mexican governments made that temporary treaty which allowed the troops of either to invade the territory of the other when in the pursuit of hostile Indians fleeing across the border, James Tracy was a second lieutenant in the 10th cavalry. It was during the height of the Geronimo trouble, and Tracy, with his troop, dismounted, and after a soul and body wearying march on the trail of the wily Apache, found himself in the heart of one of the dreariest, most God-forsaken mountain countries in the whole range of the southern country.

The troop was exhausted and practically without water, the men having not a drop to drink save what was in their canteens. They had cut loose from a river in the early morning, expecting to find another when the day was done, but not as much as a rivulet had they found. There was no coffee that night and there wasn't a light heart in the whole outfit.

Tracy was unhappy. It wasn't wholly his suffering condition and that of his men which weighed upon him. Just before leaving the Arizona post he had received news that his younger brother, John, had been committed to state's prison in a far northeastern state. The officer had seen his home only once since his graduation. He had stayed away purposely. Then came suspicion, then conviction and a sentence. John Tracy protested his innocence of the crime charged against him, and his family, knowing the lad, believed in him, but the circumstantial evidence was overwhelming, and in spite of the efforts of the aged father, who spent his time and his money in the boy's defense, he went to prison.

Before the troop had left Fort Banks with its nose to the red-hot trail of Geronimo there had joined as an enlisted man a strapping young officer who said that he came from St. Louis. His name was Barlow, and he was assigned to the troop of which Tracy was the junior officer, and he went with it on its chase across the border after the Apache chief.

Barlow on every occasion possible attached himself to Tracy's person. Whenever there was a scouting party detached from the main body and put under the second lieutenant's command Barlow asked that he might be assigned to it to share in the scouting duty. He was a reserved fellow and apparently of superior education. There were no camp jokes for him. He was grave and taciturn. Tracy had noticed the evident attachment of the man to him, and as he was a capable soldier and willing to dare and to do anything he was glad to have him a part of his outfit when on detached and dangerous service.

On the morning following the night that the troop was practically without water and in a country devoid of all green things save the foraging cactus, the troop commander told Tracy that he had better make a short reconnaissance, feel out the country for the enemy and, above all, try to locate water. To attempt a march under that hot Mexican sun with the men, and with any idea of effective service, was foolhardy.

Tracy told his captain that he would take but one man with him; that they would strike southwest, where it was thought a better prospect of water lay, and that they would return as soon as a find was made. He selected Barlow for his companion, and the two struck out through the black, sun-baked country.

They went on for three hours. Not a drop of the element of which they were in search. Their tongues were blistered. They drank sparingly of the water in their canteens, pressed on for another hour and then knew that they must return.

"Ask them if they started," they followed their onward trail as well as they could, but at times it was lost, and then circling was necessary to take it up again. At noon they were lost and could not find it again. Then they lost it and could not find it again. They were a great jagged rock rising to the westward which neither recognized.

"Lieutenant," said Barlow, "we're going wrong. We never came this way. The sun doesn't bear right. It should be more to our right. I believe that we are going almost directly at right angles to the camp."

They circled again and again, but no trace of the trail. Then the conclusion forced itself on Tracy that they were lost. They wandered on until the sun went down beyond the black rocks. Then they each drank sparingly of the precious contents of the canteens, and lay down on the gray desert to sleep.

The sun came up like a red-hot round shot. Tracy and Barlow ate the last of their single ration, and took one swallow of water apiece. Then on they went again. Twenty-four hours passed. The sun came up once more, and with its coming they staggered forward. The canteens were empty. They looked for the cactus whose leaf yields a juice that helps fight off the demon of thirst. They could not find it. The only vegetation were occasional clumps of stunted prickly pear cactus, the juice of whose leaves accentuates thirst.

Another twenty-four hours. The men cheered each other in like the soldiers they were. Tracy began to feel the coming of delirium. Oh for a draught of water! He looked at Barlow. The old fellow's eyes were burning, but they had a courage about them, and something else in their depths no surgeon's cover before had seen there. On he looked to Tracy. Tracy said no further. And then a land is deluged with rain. A voice following said that it was 82.30 for the Lone Star Independent School District. This was the first rain in the district since...

Barlow shook the canteen, and Tracy heard the splash of the water within.

"Drink, Barlow," said Tracy. "Drink; you saved it and it should be yours. Drink, drink it, I say. It may give you strength to go on. If you get back, boy, and the men strike water, ask them to come after my body."

Tracy was reeling. His brain was awfully and his whole system on fire.

"Lieutenant," said Barlow, "I had more in my canteen than you had in yours when we started. Men in an extremity like this should share and share alike. I'll take my cup and we'll divide the water."

"Is there enough for the two and to do any good?" asked Tracy.

"Yes," said Barlow, "one good drink for each."

"Drink first," said Tracy. "I'll not touch a drop until my command is served."

"All right, sir," said Barlow.

Tracy turned away for a moment. He heard the gurgle of water. Would it never come his turn to drink? Barlow spoke: "Lieutenant, I'm afraid I took more than half. Here is what's left."

He poured the water surging from the canteen into the cup. There was a good round drink.

"Take it, lieutenant," said Barlow. "I had more than that."

Tracy seized the cup and drained it. Oh, the joy of it! New life went surging through him. His eyes cleared. He looked at Barlow. There was no new life in the man's eyes. His lip was drooping.

"Barlow," said Tracy fiercely, "you deceived me. You never drank a drop."

Something like a smile came into Barlow's face.

"Forgive me, lieutenant," he said, "but there was only enough for one." And then he staggered and fell forward. Tracy caught him in his arms, and, weak though he was, managed to support his burden.

"Lieutenant," whispered Barlow, "go on. You are strong enough and may reach camp. If you do, just come back and bury me here."

Then the man drew his officer's head close to him and whispered something. Barlow almost let fall his burden. "Yes, it's true. I was the guilty one and your brother was innocent and a sacrifice. Take this," and he drew a paper from his blouse and put it in Tracy's hand. "Forgive me, lieutenant," he said, and as he spoke his empty canteen swung from his side and struck against Tracy's knee.

"Forgive you? Yes, Barlow," he said.

The enlisted man looked up, smiled and died. Tracy let his burden gently to the earth, and then he pressed on, for now there was an added life in his veins and an added interest in living.

He reached the top of the ridge and looked down. The camp was below him. Not the old camp, but the old troop and a new camp and by the bank of a stream.

Refreshed with food, sleep and the yet more precious water, Tracy recovered. The paper which Barlow had given him contained proof of his brother's innocence. Tracy led a squad back to the point where he had left Barlow. They found his body. There was peace in the man's face. He was given a soldier's burial, and on the little wilderness grave Lieutenant Tracy planted a cross and a little, suffering flag.

BEEF TEA AS AN INTOXICANT

We find it difficult to believe the cable report that Liverpool physicians are very much exercised over the case of the traveling salesman with delirium tremens induced by too much beef tea, says a writer in the New York Times. Food analysts and nutrition experts have long been aware of the high stimulating power of meat proteins, which, Dr. Chittenden says, are approximated by one sort of protein from the vegetable kingdom, that of oatmeal. The vegetarians, in fact, base their most effective arguments on the fact that the stimulation from meat is in a way like that from alcohol, effecting tissue change or metabolism rather than affording nutriment. Beef tea is the highest stimulant among the most common. Physicians have long since abandoned the notion that it is a food capable of sustaining life. The laboratory tests have Indeed, dogs fed entirely on concentrated beef juice are so overstimulated that they die within a few days. Experiments conducted by the United States department of agriculture on losses in cooking meat showed that beef which has been used for the preparation of tea or broth had lost practically none of its nutritive value, while most of the "flavoring material"—the toxic and stimulating part of the beef—had gone into the extract. It is doubtful if the medical men of Liverpool are greatly surprised at the drummer's discovery of the hilarious consequences to be derived from beef juice. Beef tea has never been regarded by those who know as an innocuous beverage; those who don't know and who have been experimenting in their own kitchens for their own consumption may well take warning from the sad case of the Liverpool salesman.

Electricity in a Bowl Protects a Bunch of Coin

then, as he is now, and was always fooling with anything from wireless to high frequency currents. He noticed at one time that a good many of his small personal possessions disappeared if he did not lock them up, and as he seldom thought to lock anything up, the lost list increased to an annoying extent.

One day he built a large lyden jar out of a big china bowl and a little tin foil. He dropped a lot of pennies and nickels and dimes into it and charged it with enough "juice" to kill an ox maybe, or at least enough to make the ox think he had been killed. He left it on a sheet of glass and walked off, leaving the door of the laboratory open.

It was not long before one of the outside laborers slipped in and took a look around. That bowl of small change was an irresistible temptation, and he evidently thought a few would not be missed. He ran his hand into the bowl, but before he could grasp a nickel he felt as though some one had hit him on the funny bone with an ax. He gave a wild yell and landed in the middle of the property yard. Since that time it has been well and generally known that Mr. Woods "puts conjures" on anything that belongs to him and you could not hire anybody at the capitol to touch a thing of his.

WASHINGTON—"Conscience doth make cowards of us all," remarked Mr. Shakespeare, which only shows that Shakespeare was big to humanity and wrote a good many things that other people merely thought. This philosophy on morals may not have been written with a particular view to jailbirds, but there are several cases in Washington where it would apply. There is one widely discussed at the capitol, where it is well known that Superintendent Elliot Woods can leave jewels and precious stones or anything else he happened to have lying around with a perfect looseness, and there is not a laborer on the place who would not walk around the block to avoid going near them.

Quite a while ago the senate laboratory was not the commodious structure it is now, but merely a private laboratory and workshop for Mr. Woods. He was an electrical expert

This Model Shop Was Rather an Eerie Place

WHEN the model shop of the Smithsonian Institution was down by the railroad tracks in South Washington, Harry Handley and the late Mr. Palmer, who were in the shop, had the surrounding population "buffaloed" to the extent that it was never necessary to lock a door. The model shop was rather an eerie place, anyhow, with its atmosphere of plaster of paris, half-dismembered bodies and statues and rugs and skins and almost anything else queer that happened to float through the museum. There were a lot of life masks in plaster, and the residents of the shop were believed by all the small boys and many of the adults of the vicinity to be body snatchers and to make their living by questionable and occult arts, including human vivisection.

The thing that made the place sacred, or rather fearful, to illiterate neighbors was a human skeleton that lived in the back of the shop and that by a simple arrangement of overhead cords could be made to get up off a chair and walk into the shop.

He found, finally, that it was impossible to keep any tobacco on hand and whenever he wanted it in a hurry the jar was sure to have been emptied. The inhabitants of Ireland have nothing on the sons of Ham when it comes to dreading snakes. All snakes look alike to them and they are all deadly, merely because they are snakes, quite regardless of the species. The clerk knew this quite well, and carefully washing out the tobacco dust from the jar, he one day dropped a perfectly harmless grass snake into it and put on the lid.

There is one of the clerks up in the war department who is an amateur naturalist of some attainment. He is also a smoker and is in the habit of keeping a small reserve supply of tobacco in a jar on his desk, so that he can replenish his pouch if he runs short during the day.

Hidden Wealth Lost; Stove Is Worst Offender

THE United States has made millions of dollars through the efforts of thrifty people to place their surplus wealth beyond the reach of thieves. Goats, calves, dogs and other animals have eaten hundreds of rolls of bills that would have been far safer in banks. Parlor stoves also appear to be a profitable source of loss.

either lost or hoarded up by curio collectors. Dogs, cats, pigs, goats and calves appear to be the chief offenders when it comes to eating paper bills. Recently the redemption division was compelled to examine the stomach of a dog that had swallowed a $20 bill dropped by his owner. The bill was thought to be worth more than the dog, so the animal was killed. Calves mutilate paper money worse than any other animal. Goats appear to give it a "lick and a promise" and swallow the whole roll.

But for the work of the redemption division of the treasury department the loss in many cases would be total. As it is much of the money is redeemed, but to date Uncle Sam is $14,000,000 richer than he would have been had he never issued paper money. Millions of the fractional currency notes have been offered for redemption and together with later issues, are

Men in the redemption division assert that in cases where animals swallow bills the proper course is to get the bills as soon as possible and to ship the whole mass to Washington to be unfolded and tested as to its genuineness.

Decidedly the larger part of money sent to Washington for redemption is said to have been mutilated by fire. The parlor stove is a great source of loss. During the summer months money is concealed in the stove and in the fall is sent up in smoke in the first fall fire.

Congressman Drove a Mule and Was Proud of It

IT is not often that a mule will help a man to get into congress, but this very thing happened in the case of William N. Baltz, who represents the Twenty-second Illinois district. He is the man who succeeded Representative Rodenberg.

Baltz is a farmer, and he is proud of it. In 1915 he was offered an opportunity to obtain a college education, but he declined, saying that he preferred to devote his time to his farm. So he went to work and farmed right up to the minute that it became necessary for him to come to congress. Furthermore, he will farm some more, whenever congress adjourns.

There were those people in his district who were politically opposed to him that thought it would be a fine scheme to expose the fact that he drove a mule around home, and they spread this "scandal" far and wide. After the story had been going the rounds for two or three weeks Baltz was called on one night down at Baltimore to make his first political speech.

CHILDREN LOVE SYRUP OF

It is cruel to force nature's harsh physic into sick child.

Look back at your children. Remember the "dose" mother gave—castor oil, calomel, etc. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old physic simply don't realize what it does. The children's revolt is a do. Their tender little bodies are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, if bowels need cleansing, give California Syrup of Fig. Its action is positive, but gentle. Mothers keep this harmless laxative handy; they know love to take it; that it never cleans the liver and bowels and eases the stomach, and that a given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask at the store for a 50-cent bottle of California Syrup of Fig. It has full directions for babies of all ages and for grown-ups on each bottle. Adv.

Improving Constantinople. Constantinople's scheme for a metropolitan electric line is well advanced. It includes the formation of what is known as the Ottoman Metropolitan Company, capital $5,000,000 for the purpose of financing and operating the line. It is to be finished as far as the city center is concerned in 1912, according to the terms of the contract, and the rest within a ten-year period. A bridge over the Golden Horn is part of the work.

Business Change.

Messrs. J. A. and Thos B. Lee have recently purchased the dry goods business of R. A. Thompson in the Christian-Cousins building on the east side of Main street and arrived the first of last week to take charge. The firm name will be Lee Bros. and they propose to conduct the business along the same progressive lines established by Mr. Thompson.

J. A. Lee has been in the mercantile business at Aspermont and is an experienced business man. Thos B. Lee was formerly teacher of piano and violin music in the local school and is well known to most of our people. We predict for the new firm a liberal share of the business of the community.

Mr. Thompson has not yet decided definitely where he will locate, but will probably go to central or North Texas. For the present he is visiting with his brother at Dalhart.

Notice.

On account of the absence of Mrs. Fast we have been delayed in securing the recipes for our Cook Book. We desire EVERY lady in this vicinity to contribute one or more recipes.

Please send them to Erwin's Drug Store, the News office, or hand them to any member of the society at once.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save Your Hair! Get a 25 Cent Bottle of Danderine Right Now—Also Stops Itching Scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

HENPECK HAS LITTLE JOKE

For Once He Turned the Tables on His Wife, and Surely Had a Right to Laugh.

Henpeck was in a state of delight all the evening; it was so evident that at last he asked whether some one had left him a fortune. "No, but it is the joke of the age. I have been laughing all day. This morning when I went into the dining room at breakfast time there was no meal visible. I went into my wife's room and there she was still asleep. So unlike Bertha, you know. I called her: 'Say, Bertha, it's eight o'clock, I want my breakfast.' Not a movement, I shouted, shook the bed; brought in the frying pan and beat the reveille upon it. All to no purpose. What was I to do? Time was passing and I didn't feel inclined to go to work hungry. Get my own breakfast? Not on your life. What am I married for? Then a bright thought struck me. I took off my shoes, crept as quietly as I could along the passage; a board creaked; in a moment Bertha was awake. 'James, where have you been?' 'And you should have seen her when she realized the truth. Ha! ha!'

No "Let Up"

There will be no 'let up' in that distress after eating until you first help the stomach and digestive system back to health and strength. For this work HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS is particularly well adapted. It brings back appetite, aids digestion, keeps the bowels open and improves health in general. Try a bottle.

There is an unnecessary prejudice against lumpy-jaw cattle, according to Dr. M. H. Reynolds of the Minnesota station. A considerable percentage of these cases are passed by government inspectors as fit for food purposes. Only the very bad cases, especially those where the disease affects several organs or parts of the body, are condemned.

DON'T TAKE CALOMEL FOR LIVER TROUBLE!

Have You Heard of the New Constipation Remedy from Hot Springs, Arkansas, that Thousands are Joyfully Praising?

Just go to your druggist to-day; say I want a 25 cent box of HOT SPRINGS LIVER BUTTONS; use them as directed and soon all your stomach, liver and bowel troubles will be over.

The great physicians in Hot Springs prescribe them for constipation, sluggish liver, indigestion, sick headache, dizziness, blotchy and sallow skin and they certainly are fine.

Take safe, gentle, blissful HOT SPRINGS LIVER BUTTONS for a week. They will tone up the liver thoroughly, cleanse the bowels of poisonous accumulations and make you eat better, sleep better, work better.

They are great for nervousness and as a body tonic. Postal brings free sample from Hot Springs, Ark.

Industrial Club to Meet

Attention is called to the fact that the second meeting of the McLean Industrial Club will take place tonight (Thursday) at the Odd Fellows hall and it is expressly desired that a full attendance of members and prospective members be present. There is much business of importance to be transacted. Probably the most urgent proposition that presents itself for discussion is the building of a road and there will be some time for discussion of this matter at the meeting tonight.
