115 Dead; Windstorms Sweep South, Blizzard In North

CHICAGO, Jan. 20. (AP)—Tornadoes swept Alabama, Florida and Georgia while blizzards lashed the northern tier of states from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast, as the nation counted at least 115 dead, including 38 in traffic accidents.

Colder weather was forecast in the north. Schools were closed and traffic was impeded seriously by snow and ice.

Simultaneously with the arrival of bitter cold in the deep South, the tornado winds dipped first into North Alabama, killing four persons and shifting to the Southeast causing 13 deaths in the vicinity of the Georgia-Alabama-Florida state lines Saturday night.

A family of six was wiped out by the terrific winds which roared into Northern Florida near Leno, two were killed in nearby Alabama and five lives were taken in Southwest Georgia.

Winds Cut Wide Path After skipping from the extreme northern part of Alabama to the extreme southern part, the winds cut a wide path near here and passed on into Georgia, where the victims included five negroes whose tenant homes were blown away.

Swollen streams, pushed from their banks by four-inch rains, and freezing winds hampered relief work. Telephone and telegraph lines were down and roads were blocked in many places.

An Atlantic Coast Line passenger train en route from Montgomery, Ala., to Jacksonville, Fla., ran into a washout near Bansey, Ala., injuring a number of passengers. A steamship was driven aground by gale winds Saturday night off Panama City, Fla. The ship was not believed in immediate danger.

Council Set Up To Handle Royal Duties

Additional Oxygen Administered; Crisis May Come Tonight

SANDRINGHAM, England, Jan. 20. (AP)—Physicians announced late today that the strength of King George V is "diminishing" and additional oxygen was administered.

Earlier today, the king, propped up in bed, signed a document setting up a council of state to assume most of the royal duties during his grave illness.

The council consists of Queen Mary and the royal couple's four sons, the Prince of Wales and the Dukes of York, Gloucester and Kent.

Physicians announced that the king passed a more restful night, but said "there is no improvement to record in his condition."

A possible crisis in his illness was looked for tonight.

It was emphasized that the setting up of the council of state should not necessarily be regarded as indicating a grave change in the king's condition, or that such a change was expected. Rather, it was said, it indicated only that the monarch's illness was likely to be prolonged.

The members of the council of state will have the power to sign all state documents in behalf of the king.

While the king slept peacefully Sunday afternoon, the Prince of Wales hurried to London.

Queen Mary, for the first time since the king's illness, left the house before dark for a short walk in the snow-covered gardens with the princess royal.

Not since Friday, it was learned, had the queen been out of earshot from the king's sick chamber.

Wales, the man who will be king if his father dies, was accompanied to London by the Duke of York. He went at once to No. 30 Downing Street to confer concerning summoning of the council, which was called together in 1928 during the king's last serious illness.

The king's illness began with bronchial catarrh, an ailment to which he has been subject since his grave illness of 1928. But it was the heart weakness and attendant "embarrassment of circulation" that gave most concern.

Fisher To Seek To Correct New Salary Statute

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 20. (AP)—C. Fisher, representative of the ninety-first district in the state legislature, has announced he would ask Gov. Allred to allow him to introduce a bill at the next called session of the legislature to correct the new general salary law passed by the legislature last year.

It appears now, Fisher's statement said, that the word "earnings" as used in the law for salary statutes must be specifically defined to mean actual collections as of 1935.

This statement followed an interpretation by the Tom Green county commissioners court that the new law said "earnings" and not "collections" and increases which may aggregate more than $15,000 were made last week in Tom Green salary schedules.

STATUTES DO NOT MEET INDIVIDUAL ESTATE PROBLEMS; WILL THEREFORE IS NECESSARY

(This is one of a series of articles in the Write-a-Will Week campaign, conducted this week by The Daily Herald as a service to its readers.—Editor's Note.)

By THOS. J. COFFEY

"The subject 'Why Should I Make a Will?' is rather broad; the motives and reasons which should actuate one person in making a will naturally would not apply to another person differently situated. It is therefore necessary that the discussion be confined largely to generalities.

The heirs of a person leaving no will. These provisions necessarily are made in view of what will ordinarily be the most desirable disposition to make of property of a person dying intestate, and of course, leaves out of consideration what might be the desire or wish of the person whose estate is being distributed, and also leaves entirely out of consideration any special circumstances which might exist with reference to the family of the deceased or with reference to his property. The statutes of the state of Texas also give to every person of sound mind the right to make a will, and in such a will, determine according to his own wishes and ideas what disposition he wishes made of his property after his death. There are no limitations whatsoever upon what a person may provide in connection with the disposition of his property by will, his wish as to what is done with his property being the sole determining factor.

Both Husband and Wife The kind and character of a will which should be made by a person is, of course, dependent upon his or her particular ideas and upon the peculiar facts or circumstances relating to himself or herself, family and property. The most usual situation is that a person at the time of his or her death leaves a wife or husband and one or more children. If the property is community property, and such person leaves no will, the surviving husband and wife will inherit one-half of the property and the balance goes to the child or children. Unless the deceased leaves a considerable estate, it is usually important that the surviving hus-

Contents Cotton Case Of Gov. Talmadge Should Be Dropped

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. (AP)—The United States supreme court adjourned today for two weeks without passing on the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority after the government asked dismissal of the suit of Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia against the Bankhead cotton control act, and asked a rehearing on the court decision on processing taxes.

U. S. Is Defendant

The Bankhead dismissal was sought because "the United States is the real defendant in the case and may not be sued without its consent."

Situation Complicated

The processing tax situation, supposedly clarified when the court found the levies unconstitutional, rapidly grew more and more complicated.

Some federal judges were refunding to processors money which had been held in escrow by the courts pending determination of the tax question. Others were refusing to refund the money until the 25-day waiting period had elapsed.

Meanwhile, other questions concerning the taxes flooded the information bureau of the AAA. Producers wanted to know if they could collect any money from processors; retailers wanted to know the same thing; consumer organizations wanted to know if they could collect from retailers.

THE PASSAGE of the 19-year age limit with retention of the 8-semester rule was sweet music to Big Spring school officials.

IN THE Colorado Record there appeared a write-up of the Colorado high school basketball tournament, and in the story mention was made of our visit to Colorado at that time.

OUR COMMENTS on the tournament were evidently not entirely clear to the Colorado reporter.

WE HAVE attended Colorado tournaments for the past three or four years, and as long as we are in this section of the country we will continue to "cover" Colorado basketball tournaments when possible.

AN INTERESTING story of a kid football league in Denver has been called to our attention.

Scanning NEW BOOKS

CALEIDROGRAPH January

The first 1936 issue of this poetry magazine that has made such a courageous stand and has endured as its reward is devoted almost entirely to centennial poems.

Georgia C. Eader's "At San Jacinto," a tribute to the painting of that famous scene, is an extremely well-worded poem. One of the strongest poems, however, one with least sentimentality places her in the immortal company of the few whose gifts of golden words to clothe their golden thoughts came with them into this world, as a birthright.

In it Carr tells of a trip to Yucatan. The experiences have the sketchiness of a letter and one wonders if they were not once letters.

The photographs illustrating the book are exceptionally fine, better than the writing. An especially good one of Mexico is "Dawn on Popocatepetl," which shows the mountain named in Mexican for the sleeping woman in beautiful profile.

Of the chapters in the book that about a bull fight is the most memorable. The author felt keenly every moment of the experience and he has related in an ironic fashion an authentic report of a North American's reactions—probably as good a description of how the average visitor feels the first time, as one can find in a dozen books on Mexico.

THE MASTER-KEY FOR LIFE'S PROBLEMS By Paul A. Liebelt

The Christopher Publishing House "This is such a thrilling story, although totally new in plot and treatment, that it seems almost a pity to consider it from any other standpoint, even the estimable one of a "New Philosophy." It is a story so replete with stirring situations, with vivid characters who might provide the plot for a dozen novels of first class calibre, that one reads it, inevitably at first without the least thought of philosophy, new or old, which perhaps is just what the author intended. At any rate, it is a splendid story, full of color and interest not only attaching to the host of well-drawn characters themselves, but to the philosophy which the author weaves from their experiences, and makes a part of all that they do. For all the delight of the story, which will surely hold any reader to its satisfactory end, there is bound to be equal interest in the truly new idea the author is expounding, and which has its bearing upon the actions, the problems and the dilemmas of his very lifelike characters. He has given us people who will stay with the reader, and he has given us ideas that have the validity of scientific facts, that will appeal to all as a welcome addition to that store of knowledge with which man meets the conditions affecting his life and happiness. The author says of this work: "That the success of my researches went far beyond my original aim, that I also found it necessary driving power to undertake the difficult task of subduing human nature, to make it worth while, is beyond my grasp. But afterwards, I felt an untiring impulse to impart this knowledge to humanity for its welfare, and it is for this reason that I wrote this book, although I am not a writer in the acknowledged sense." Readers will agree that, although the author disclaims being a "writer," he has given us something well worth reading.

GLASS MOON By Brownell Carr

This is an unusual sort of book, unusual because it has a spiral binding and because of its contents.

In it Carr tells of a trip to Yucatan. The experiences have the sketchiness of a letter and one wonders if they were not once letters.

FIRELOSOPIHY AND INSPIRATION By Mary McGowan Slappey

The Christopher Publishing House "This volume of narrative, poetry and drama greets the reader with a freshness of viewpoint that gives new value to the high ideals that make life worthwhile. One senses in it at once the fine and generous tonic of youth, which speaks, however, with the wisdom of the ages. It is of commanding interest to know that Mary McGowan Slappey is not yet 21 years of age—a fact more difficult to realize as one reads through these stories and dramas of singular beauty, veiling the profoundest truths of human life. But, one must not get the impression that the work is simply unusual for a girl of her age; it is unusual, and superior for an author of any age, and undoubtedly places her in the immortal company of the few whose gifts of golden words to clothe their golden thoughts came with them into this world, as a birthright.

CHANGES POSSIBLE

Another situation which illustrates the importance of a will is when a person owns property as his separate estate; under the law of descent and distribution, in the absence of a will, the surviving husband or wife, if there are children, only inherits one-third of the personal property and a life estate in one-third of the real estate. If there are no children, still the surviving husband or wife will inherit all the personal estate, but only one-half of the lands of the intestate, the other one-half of the lands going to the collateral kindred of the deceased. As a rule, a husband and wife after living together for years, with no children, desire that all their property go to their survivor on the death of either; but the only way to accomplish this desire is for them to band or wife receive the entire estate so that they can carry on and continue to provide for themselves and child or children. In the absence of a will, this cannot be done since one-half of the estate is tied up so that it cannot be handled or disposed of by the surviving spouse. It is apparent that, under the circumstances detailed above, a will should by all means be made. The character of will to be made in such case would of course depend upon the relevant facts as well as upon the wish of the testator. It might be wise to leave everything to the surviving husband or wife, without restriction or limitation or, under other circumstances, it might be wise to provide for a trust estate. In any event the laws of descent and distribution leave an estate of the intestate just mentioned in very unsatisfactory conditions and it is very important that the husband and wife both make wills.

Are you interested in seeing that your wife gets the full benefit and enjoyment of your estate if, and when, death terminates your ability to provide for her? If so, you should make a will containing appropriate provisions to that end. Are you interested in assuring that your children are provided for to the fullest extent possible out of your estate? Do you want your estate to be divided with a minimum of trouble and expense? Do you want to know how your estate shall be handled and disposed make a will. As stated in the beginning of this discussion, it is impossible to more than touch upon the subject without consuming entirely too much space. The specific situations outlined above merely illustrate the importance of making a will. There are a number of other situations which render it important that a person make a will, and it is difficult to see any reasons or arguments against the making of a will. A will is an instrument which does not pass title until the death of the person making the will. If, after making a will, a person decides to make a change, all that is necessary is to add a codicil showing such changes, or destroy the old will and write a new one, the will being in the possession and control of the person making it until death.

For the Small Estate

It should be mentioned that oftentimes, delays and large expenses in connection with the handling of an estate are incurred when there is no will, which may be avoided by means of a proper will. It is not within the scope of this discussion to go into the question of what kind of will should be made; but there are several different types of wills, and persons in making a will can have their property handled and disposed of after their death as they desire, subject to certain legal limitations. The smaller an estate, the more important it is that a person leave a will. If an estate is large, there will perhaps be enough to care for the family of the deceased, under any contingency; but if the estate is small, it is highly important that it be devoted to the maintenance of the family of the deceased in the proportion and manner which will most benefit them.

Are you interested in seeing that your wife gets the full benefit and enjoyment of your estate if, and when, death terminates your ability to provide for her? If so, you should make a will containing appropriate provisions to that end. Are you interested in assuring that your children are provided for to the fullest extent possible out of your estate? Do you want your estate to be divided with a minimum of trouble and expense? Do you want to know how your estate shall be handled and disposed of after your death. If you want to determine any of these things yourself, rather than let your estate be disposed of by a general statute, then make a will. The Descent and Distribution Statutes are intended as the most equitable disposition to make of an estate when the deceased has failed to express his wishes by a will; these statutes being applicable to all persons alike do not exactly fit the situations or needs of any; and it is contemplated that the great majority will make wills, the general statutes providing only for those who do not assume the responsibility of determining for themselves the disposition to be made of their property after their death.

Should make a will

This question of whether you should make a will is important, and, whether you make a will or don't make a will, merits your study, and consideration. If you make a will, try to be sure that it actually expresses your wishes and will accomplish the results you desire; if you do not make a will, then you should feel confident that under the particular facts and circumstances relating to yourself, family and property, a will would not best serve and accomplish the results you desire. In any event let the question of whether you make a will be determined by careful investigation, thought and study rather than by mere neglect and failure to act.

Cardui Helps When Nerves Seem on Edge Every Month

Women who find themselves in a painful, nervous fix, suffering every month, may have some unusual trouble which Cardui should benefit. "At times, I felt like I must scream if a door slammed or there was an unusual noise," writes Mrs. A. Ordun, of Haines City, Fla. "I did not feel like doing my housework and as I had other work besides, I felt more like lying down. A friend of mine asked me to try Cardui, which I did. After my first bottle, I felt much better. I continued taking it until I had taken six or seven bottles. By this time I was so much improved I was able to leave it off." If not benefited by Cardui, consult a physician.

Officials said the producer would have to sue the processor, and prove to the satisfaction of the court that the processor had passed on the tax to him. In that event, it was said, the court would award a judgment to the producer against the processor.

Thus, processors who passed on the tax to the producer openly and who now may get part of the tax back, either from courts where the money has been impounded or through new suits against the treasury, may eventually be forced to repay part of that refund to producers.

The outstanding allegation is in connection with the leasing of the state oil lands in north Louisiana to a private corporation composed of high state officials. These officials, who included Gov. Oscar K. Allen, were alleged to have made profits of more than $300,000 in the deal.

In answering these charges, Leche, the machine candidate for governor, replied:

"We brought the people of this state more benefits than they have ever enjoyed before."

The Home Rule faction also pledged itself to the repeal of Long's dictatorial laws which strip parish and city officials of most of their power.

An element of weakness in the machine faction's position, observers believe, is that it is headed by Robert Maestri, second-generation Italian, who has been linked with the gambling element in New Orleans. He is one of the wealthiest men in the state.

Those Admitted To Relief Rolls In November And December Eligible

SAN ANTONIO, Jan. 20.—State Works Progress Administrator H. P. Drought today opened an avenue of employment to able-bodied family heads admitted to relief rolls between November 1 and December 31, 1935.

Barred from participating in the Works Progress program by a national regulation which restricted employment to those admitted to relief rolls prior to November 1, these "employables" became wards of their own communities January 1 when the Texas relief commission dropped all except incapacitated cases from the relief rolls.

Drought authorized district directors throughout Texas to accept these family heads, expected to number between 4,000 and 5,000, for employment on projects, declaring that "when we have done this, we will have fulfilled the original purpose of the Works Progress program, which was to offer employment to all able-bodied family heads on relief rolls."

The state administrator asserted the regulation had discriminated against many worthy cases who had made every effort to sustain themselves throughout the depression years and who had come to ask public aid only after exhausting all personal resources.

"After January 1," Drought said, "there was no federal agency to which they could turn, and municipal governments complained that they were not able to help these unfortunates."

Instructions have been issued by Texas relief commission officials to case workers to certify all employable cases not found to be ineligible for aid prior to the automatic closing of their cases as of December 31. These cases then will be registered with the national reemployment service and from these offices they will be assigned to Works Progress administration projects. It was pointed out, however, that these persons will not be assigned until previously certified workers have been placed.

"It is important," Drought continued, "that local governmental officials do not misinterpret this order. There will not be any general relaxation of the essential employment regulations of the Works Progress administration. The requirement that 90 per cent of all labor on projects come from relief rolls will continue to be strictly enforced."

"While we realize there are other needy unemployed throughout the state who have managed to stay off the relief rolls, there is nothing we can do for them except provide jobs for such of those as may be placed on our projects through the 10 per cent allowance for non-relief labor."

Two Assistants In US Treasury Department Quit

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. (UP)—New deal financial policies dealt a new blow from within, in the resignations of Undersecretary of the Treasury Thomas Jefferson Coolidge and Assistant Secretary L. W. (Chip) Robert, Jr.

Coolidge, youthful Boston banker, resigned, it was said, because of irreconcilable objections to fundamental administration fiscal policies. Robert, in his letter of resignation, indicated ardent sympathy for new deal policies. He will return to private business.

Administration leaders withheld comment on the resignations. President Roosevelt in his letter to Coolidge's resignation expressed "sincere regret" and commended him for having "rendered conspicuously able service to the government for the last two years" and for having been "of great personal assistance to me."

Funeral services for Caswell Samuel Bull, 49, who died shortly after noon Sunday following an extended illness, was to be held at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon from the Eberley Funeral home chapel, with Rev. R. E. Day, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating, assisted by Rev. O. A. Bickley, pastor of the First Methodist church.

Mr. Bull succumbed at 12:45 p. m. at the home of a cousin, Mrs. E. E. Jones, one mile east of Big Spring. He had made his home at the Jones residence for some time.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. L. A. Jones, a sister, Mrs. H. C. McDaniel, and a brother, S. C. Bull of Ackney. Other relatives who were to be here for the funeral include Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Henderson, Corpus Christi; Mrs. Johnny Spencer of Sweetwater and Mrs. J. J. Louder of Stanton. Today one of the finest bunches of antelope in this section is on the Ed Douthit ranch 25 miles southeast of Big Spring. Twenty-three miles south on the Joe Carter ranch is a modest herd of buffalo.

Walter Winn, Big Spring, inspected the Douthit antelope Sunday and said that there were 56 in the group, approximately all of which were bucks. There are 15 kids following. Winn said the animals were comparatively tame and that he and a cowboy were able to see 44 of them during the day.

They were fenced in a 3-section pasture and have become the pet of Douthit. No person is allowed to enter the premises with a rifle. According to Winn, the pasture was not stocked but the animals are of a herd which has been in that area since the early days of the country.

Carter's ranch is just over the line in Glasscock county and is the owning grounds for one bull and a buffalo cow. They are much tamer than the antelope. Winn said it is possible to get within a few yards of the buffalo.

In the courthouse yard at Garden City several pet deer roam unmolested and sometime seek shelter in the courthouses.

Other wildlife generally believed to be extinct in this area is the bobcat. Trappers running lines in the rugged country southeast of here regularly catch these scrappy animals in their traps.

Negro Suffers Knife Wound

Is Stabbed During Altercation At Cafe On North Side

Bernadine Maxwell, negress, was being held in the Howard county jail Monday afternoon while James Murray, negro, fought for his life with a knife wound in his abdomen.

Murray was stabbed and slashed Sunday at 2:45 p. m. in an altercation at a cafe on the northside. Officers said he had been cut across the hip and stabbed in the abdomen, the latter wound producing internal bleeding.

Bernadine told officers that Murray had entered the cafe and started an argument, knocking her to the floor with a bottle. She said she feared for her life and fought back with a knife. Edna Ellis, her companion, substantiated her story.

The victim was rushed to a local hospital for emergency treatment but died when another negro, a shooting victim, died while he was being treated. Murray was located sometime later in a negro shack by officers.

Charges have not been filed pending a definite turn in Murray's condition.

Investigators of the bureau of air commerce concluded their inquiry in Memphis after completing an investigation in Forrest City, Ark., near the scene of the disaster. Technical experts who testified at the concluding hearing agreed that the wrecked plane, the "Southerner," was in perfect operating condition when it crashed into a swamp.

All agreed, after studying the scene of the wreck, the plane struck the trees in a full power dive and the pilot and co-pilot apparently did not know they were going to crash.

A theory that carbon monoxide in the control cabin might have affected both pilots was ruled out.

Cause Of Crash Remains Unknown

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Jan. 20. (UP)—Official investigators of the crash of an American Airlines luxury liner that killed 17 persons abandoned their inquiry without having gained an inkling of the catastrophe's cause.

The investigation was not officially closed, and American Airlines officials will continue their own inquiry, but agreement was unanimous that probably no one ever will know why the transcontinental ship, leaving Memphis in apparently perfect condition last Tuesday night, dived into the ground at 300 miles an hour half an hour later.

DOUBLE YOUR MONEY BACK

if it isn't the finest cigarette you ever smoked

LAST OCTOBER we issued a daring challenge to the smokers of the nation. We said, in effect, if the new Double-Mellow Old Golds don't give you a thrill, we'll pay the bill and pay it double.

Never before had such an offer been made on a cigarette. But we made it with our eyes open. The prize crop tobaccos in Double-Mellow Old Golds fully justified this 2 to 1 wager.

For the benefit of those smokers who overlooked this offer, we repeat it again today. Smoke half a pack of Double-Mellow Old Golds. If it isn't the finest smoke you ever tasted... just mail us the remaining cigarettes and the wrapper, at any time before May 1st, 1936, and we'll send you double the price you paid for the full package... plus postage.

No change in the package, BUT, BOY... wait 'til you taste these DOUBLE-MELLOW cigarettes!

Coughlin Offer To Back Inquiry Is Turned Down

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20. (AP)—Senator Nye today refused money offered by Father Charles Coughlin, the radio priest of Detroit, to keep the munitions investigation from being killed by indignant senators demanding to replenish committee funds.

Nye said the priest had no right to finance the inquiry, although he spoke "the mind and will of a great many people."

Collapse of the investigation was seen because senate democrats have become tired over attacks made on the Wilson administration and its attitude on war affairs.

Mrs. Summers Is Still Gravely Ill

Mrs. Burke Summers, who is seriously ill of blood poisoning at her home, 807 East Thirtieth street, spent a restful night Sunday it was reported. Attending physicians reported, however, her condition remains grave.

Mrs. Emma Barron, Dallas, is visiting here with her aunt, Mrs. J. H. Hefley.

City Manager E. V. Spence returned Sunday from a business trip to San Antonio.
