A legislative committee is compiling recommendations for amending court reforms, including creation of judicial system administrators with authority to send judges wherever they are needed.

Judicial section of the State will detail its proposals at October meeting in Galton.

Judges and practicing at-yers gave the House Judicial sub-committee, at a hearing in the capitol, their plans for improving and speeding up court machinery.

Some sample recommendations include:

Strong court administration, including authority to oversee present district lines in assigning judges to duty where action is.

Giving 14 Court of Civil peals power to handle immediate appeals of criminal, as well as civil, cases to the load on overworked Court Criminal Appeals (which now received direct from district courts all over the state).

Creation of a "unified" court system (a variety of plans have been suggested) to insure an even work load on courts, a way shifting judges to areas where dockets are overloaded.

Automatic judicial redirecting by a five-member board the Legislative refuses to do its job,

removing judges from poli-

"Stiffer fines and jail senses for contempt of court to prevent court disruptions in those which have shocked nation in recent months.

Simplification of the judicial article of the state constitution so the Legislature can make necessary changes without going to submit constitutional amendments.

The climate for judicial reform was never so good," Supreme Court Associate Justice

W. F. Poole told the committee members. "But if reform is passed up this session of the Legislature, it may be too late."

ALLOWABLE AT RECORD

Texas Railroad Commission set the oil allowable for ember to 79.9 per cent of potential -- highest level since October 1951.

Order is seen as likely to bring production higher than the Arba-Israeli war in 87.

Chairman Ben Ramsey noted at the Commission's staff report warned the higher factor would cause pollution, wasting gas and pipeline bottlenecks in some areas.

A major oil company spokesman said Texas crude oil stocks were down 4.5 million barrels in 1969. A rapid decline in allowable at record was noted.

September allowable would provide for maximum daily production of 4,166,870 barrels, though actual production is estimated at 3,409,000 barrels day. Latter is just under the estimated nominations of major producers for 3,428,395 barrels of crude daily. Production in August at 70 per cent factor was estimated at 3,310,000.

SECURITY RULES URGED

Texas Water Quality Board has been urged to adopt tougher mercury discharge limits or out-discharges outright.

Federal Water Quality Administrator recommended evenstricter controls on mercury and other heavy metals than proposed by the Board.

Spokesmen for Diamond-

Ramrock Chemical Company and American Smelting and Refining Company, on the other hand, argued that the proposed limits per billion mercury concentration level is beyond their capacity. They called for a decision in adoption of the standards.

Federal officials took exception to the state Board's order which said there is no evidence of a public health hazard from mercury metals contamination in the state. He pointed to mercury and industrial discharges, some of which are beyond their capacity.

The event was held at this same place in 1962 and at that time there were eighty odd people registered who were raised in the old home area. So we want to revive the incident.

This is our way of meeting our old friends.

For further information call

Clara Menau 213-867-7942.

Thanks alot for the favor.

Sincerely,

Pete

The greatest hazard to range-land during the hot, dry summer months and into the fall and winter is fire, and everyone has a stake in preventing wild, range fires.

The rancher depends upon range vegetation to produce livestock which ends up as steaks, lamb chops and other meat products. Fishermen and water enthusiasts want clear rivers and lakes for fishing and water sports, and those who enjoy the sport of hunting need the forage produced on range-land to provide cover and food for wildlife.

Good moisture in the spring resulted in much vegetative growth, and the hot, dry summer has combined for optimum fire conditions. B. J. Rag-dale, Extension range specialist at Texas A&M University, notes that the proposed standard is exceeded by the state Board's order.

Thousands of acres are bumed, must be managed properly in order to reestablish the range forage. Ragdale said.

The burned-off land should be deferred from grazing for the rest of the year and the following growing season.

Motorists should stuff out cigarettes and place them in the car's ash tray instead of throwing them out the car window," Ragdale advised.

"Recreationists should be very careful with camp fires, and should never leave them unattended.

Sharon Rae Barnes-Thacker Haynes Wed
In Home Wedding

Miss Sharon Rae Barnes and Thacker Haynes exchanged wedding vows Friday evening, August 14, in the ranch home of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Haynes near McLean. Officiant for the nuptial ceremony was the Rev. Robert Brown, pastor of the First United Methodist Church in McLean.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orlin Barnes, 823 North East Third Street in Dumas.

Parents of the bridegroom are Sam Haynes of McLean and Mrs. Bob Beall of Park City, Utah.

The wedding took place before the fireplace in the Haynes' home. The scene was decorated with a large arrangement of yellow and white gladioli, lilies of the valley, daisies and greenery. Seven branched candelabra stood at either side of the floral arrangement. White wedding tapers were lit by Miss Jenny Haynes of McLean, sister of the bridegroom.

Presented for marriage by her father, the bride wore a white crepe dress featuring an empire waist. The bodice of the dress was overlaid with white lace accented with seed pearls, and the full sleeves fell to wrist-length.

Her shoulder-length bridal veil of illusion fell from a Juliet cap of lace and pearls. The ensemble was designed and tailored by the bride's maternal grandmother. Her bridal bouquet featured a white orchid surrounded by white roses.

For the traditional, something old, new, borrowed, and blue, the bride wore her mother's blue garter, diamond earrings, a gift from the bridegroom, and a sixpence in her shoe, which she brought from England in June.

Serving her sister as matron of honor was Mrs. Jerry Ball. Mike Simpson of McLean served the bridegroom as best man.

The bride's attendant wore a pale yellow knit dress fashioned with a fitted waist and blouse top. She carried a nosegay of yellow spider mums.

Mrs. Barnes chose for her daughter's wedding, a lime green crepe dress accented by a white fringed carnation corsage. She wore white accessories.

Mrs. Haynes wore a yellow knit dress with matching yellow accessories. Her corsage was of white fringed carnations.

Following the wedding ceremony a reception was held in the dining room. Miss Sherri Haynes, cousin of the bridegroom registered guests in the bride's book.

The serving table was set under an oil painting of red roses painted by the bridegroom's grandmother. An ecru lace cloth, which belonged to the bridegroom's great-grandmother, was used over yellow, and the table was centered with a sterling silver epergne type candelabra holding five white wedding tapers. Shasta daisies and baby's breath filled the silver vases, and greenery entwined about the holder.

Miss Jenny Haynes and Miss Kathy Raines, sisters of the bridegroom, presided at the serving table. Mrs. Elmer Snyder of Dumas assisted.

A&M Agronomist Makes Suggestions For Fall Forage Production

The shortage of grazing and hay caused by the lack of rain, is creating a real problem for stockmen. A.C. Novosad, Extension pasture specialist, says there are some things which can be done to help solve the problem provided soil moisture becomes available. Perennial grass pastures should have not been fertilized since spring plant nutrients - especially nitrogen - have been depleted and an application now will correct this situation he advises.

There is still plenty of growing time over much of the state, for good production from Bermuda, Klein, Buffel, Love, Bahia and other grasses. Forage from these grasses can be utilized for grazing or hay or left standing and grazed after frost.

Soil moisture must be available and Novosad has gone to the record books for that information. A check of rainfall from 34 stations over the state, covering a 40-year period, shows the chances of receiving two inches of rainfall in September ranges from 50 to 80 percent in the eastern two-thirds of the state. This probability, he points out, increases as you move from west to east. About the same probability also exists for October.

He notes that the probability for two inches of rain in both September and October is about the same as for a like amount in June in this area and is better than the probabilities for July and August.

He points out that there is a risk involved but believes fall pasture fertilization is a good practice. Most of the state enjoys a long growing season for the perennial warm-season grasses but lack of fertilization usually limits the production of quality forage in the fall.

In many areas, fall pasture fertilization, on an annual basis, should prove profitable. It is especially important this year Novosad emphasizes, because of the short forage situation,

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

A deadly lady bore down on the Texas Gulf Coast with surprising fury to initiate the month of August. But the residents there would tell you "Celia" was no lady.

Seeming to pick up speed and fury as she approached the land, Celia left a path of destruction and death in her wake. But if so doing, she proved the value of advanced planning. The Department of Health was on the scene even before Celia made her landfall, preparing aid for what became one of the most devastating natural disasters to strike the State of Texas.

The Department's Division of Disaster Health and Medical Services, under the direction of Charles E. King, worked with other state agencies and organizations in coordinating disaster aid efforts in the stricken areas. Staffers Odell Griffith and Andy Woodward, both wise in the ways of big storms and working from a button up base in Corpus Christi, immediately began fielding requests for emergency hospital units, medical supplies, food, water, sanitation equipment, and mosquito control.

A 200-bed "Packaged Disaster Hospital", a complete field army hospital, was put into operation in a church at Aransas Pass, where the community hospital had been completely demolished. A 50-bed "Natural Disaster Hospital" was rushed to Corpus Christi from Austin. Five babies were delivered by Health Department personnel while the state and local health experts worked around the clock to help restore vital services especially hospital, medical, and water supplies. They manned the Emergency Operations Center at all times, to coordinate all requests for aid. All hospitals were contacted immediately to determine their needs. An emergency communications system was put into service with the help of local ham operators, who had organized the Radio Amateur Communications Emergency Service. A 24-hour telephone connection between the stricken area and the State Health Department in Austin was kept open a full eight days.

Some requests for aid were fairly routine - emergency medical supplies, electric power generators, portable hospitals, ice for hospital use, control of mosquitoes, emergency water and sewer service, and food and shelter.

Other requests were not so routine - gas masks for use in Aransas Pass to help dispose of dead animals, hand bells for hospital use for patients to page nurses, help in locating two escaped elephants!

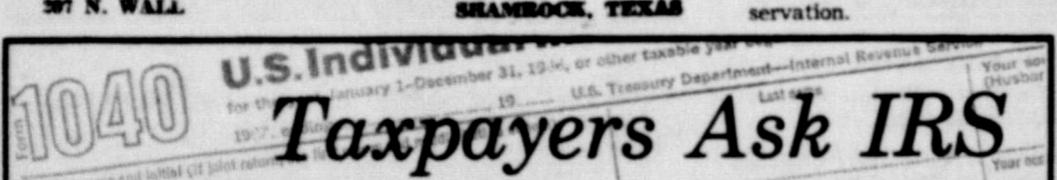

Whatever the request, the State Health Department was prepared to provide the service, or make contact with the agency that could.

Miss Alice Hommel of Dallas visited the past week with her sisters, brother, nieces, nephews and other relatives and friends. She visited here with Mr. and Mrs. W.O. Hommel of Alanreed, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hommel and family of Clarendon and with Mrs. Annie Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Howard Miller of Amarillo. She attended the show "Texas" in the Palo Duro Canyon on Monday night, August 24th with her relatives.

Q I teach school. Can I deduct my room and board for the four weeks I attend a summer class as well as my books and tuition?

A If the course qualifies as an educational expense then you may deduct your room and board for the time you are required to be away from home. Travel expenses to and from the place where the course was given may also be deductible.

To qualify as an educational expense deduction, the course must be required by your employer as necessary to keep your job or status. A course that maintains or improves the skills needed on your present job also qualifies.

No deduction is allowed for courses that help you obtain a new job or one in another field.

Q My income looks like it's going to be higher than I expected. Can I increase my withholding or do I have to pay estimated tax?

A Yes, proceeds from insurance received from damage to crops may be declared as income in the following year.

Matters of Opinion

"This suit," the friendly salesman told Fred, "will wear like iron."

About a year later, Fred brought the suit back and asked for a refund. He complained that the fabric was beginning to show signs of deterioration. When the store turned him down, he went to court to demand damages for breach of contract.

"Their salesman promised me that the suit would wear like iron," he said. "That was a false statement."

Nevertheless, the court rejected Fred's claim. The court said the salesman's statement was merely an expression of opinion, not a binding commitment.

As a general rule, the law permits a seller of merchandise to do a good deal of boasting in statements of opinion. The reason, in the words of Judge Learned Hand:

"There are some kinds of talk which no sensible man takes seriously."

But the law is stricter when it comes to matters of fact. Take this situation:

A home owner, selling his house assured the buyer that it was "in perfect condition." But at the first rain, the buyer found out that the house was honeycombed with leaks. He also found out that the problem had existed for years, defying costly efforts to clear it up.

Here, a court upheld the buyer's claim for damages. The court said the seller's statement that the house was "in perfect condition" had been a deliberate misstatement of fact.

Even a statement of opinion may be held binding, if the buyer has some special reason to put his trust in that opinion.

In one case a promoter of oil stocks, after winning the confidence of an unsophisticated farmer, sold him some shares in an obscure company. He did so after expressing an opinion of the stock's value that was enormously exaggerated.

But a court later nullified the sale. The judge said that, in view of the confidential relationship between the parties, the promoter must have known his statement of opinion would carry the weight of a statement of fact.
