State Capital NEWS

A new year-round voter registration law went into effect for Texans on October 1. Predictions are that it will make significant changes in the political structure of the state. New rules governing the operation of political party conventions also will be in operation next year.

These major provisions in the new voter registration act are noted: * Voters can register at any time (except for a temporary cutoff 31 days before each election). Registration is good for three years, and is automatically renewed by participation in an election during that period.

AG OPINIONS -- Atty. Gen. Crawford C. Martin held a new statute attempting to exempt churches and veterans organizations from lottery laws is unconstitutional.

In another recent opinion, Martin interpreted incidental expenses which the comptroller may pay state employees in connection with their travels as those "reasonably necessary to performance of official duties" while away from their desks.

Special rangers hired by state-wide organizations to promote cooperation with law enforcement agencies are peace officers and must meet minimum standards of selection and training established by Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Officer Standards and Education.

House Speaker Gus Mutscher pleaded "not guilty" to bribery charges, and a jury trial has been set for Jan. 10.

Rep. Tommy Shannon and S. Rush McGinty, close friends of Mutscher who were also indicted for conspiracy to accept a bribe, will be tried at the same time.

Mutscher tried to get a trail setting in November. He will apparently continue, for time being at least, carrying out his duties as speaker, although the House "Dirty 30" Liberal-Republican coalition is urging a special session for his removal as presiding officer.

Mourning Dove Hunt Held In Matador Area

A total of 72 hunters took part in a rather unusual dove hunt on a Texas Parks and Wildlife Department Wildlife Management Area this year.

Since mourning dove hunting is generally a local affair, little publicity was given the hunt and gunners were issued permits as they arrived.

They spent 160 hours bagging 382 birds for an average of 5.3 birds per man. Each hunter averaged 2.2 hours hunting per day, said Don Davis, manager of the area.

The department uses such hunts as opportunity to gather biological data on the birds, especially in references to weight, sex, age, stage of molt and the type of food being consumed.

SCHOOL ACCREDITATION VISITS

Accreditation visits to local schools are part of the regular work of the State Department of Education. These visits are made for two purposes: (1) to discharge the legal responsibility of the State Board of Education for setting accreditation standards and evaluating the extent to which schools meet these standards, and (2) to assist schools in a continuous program of instructional improvement. It is not mandatory that school systems be accredited, but if school officials elect to operate an accredited system, they become responsible for maintaining a program that meets the minimum standards listed and described in Bulletin 560 (Principles and Standards for Accrediting Elementary and Secondary Schools) published by the Texas Education Agency.

The first requirement for developing and maintaining a sound school program is self-evaluation, a procedure preferably designed to maintain recognized standards continuously, rather than during occasional periods of intense effort separated by periods of inattention. Self-evaluation should be a part of the school's day-to-day operation, continuing at all times, whether or not the school's self-evaluation program is one of the items considered in State evaluation. The program is evaluated by the extent to which problems have been recognized, solutions suggested and available resources identified and used in meeting such problems.

Operation of a fully accredited school program is the responsibility of all members of the school staff and requires the cooperation and support of the citizens of the school community. Each of the groups concerned should be aware of its responsibilities, because its activities and attitudes have a direct bearing upon the total school program. Members of accreditation teams are staff members of the State Dept. of Education. Most teams have two members, an most visits are completed in one day. Three or more staff members may be assigned to visit larger school systems, for which three or more days may be required. Near the beginning of each semester, notice is sent to the superintendent of each school to be visited during that semester. Soon thereafter, he is advised of the exact date or dates suggested for the visits and is asked to propose alternate dates if those suggested are not satisfactory. The following items should be available for examination:

1. Minutes of meetings of the board of trustees.
2. Policy statements of the board of trustees.
3. Administrative policy statements
4. Teacher personnel files
5. Pupil personnel files
6. Current schedules for departmentalized classes.
7. Self-evaluation report of most recent date
8. Copies of local teaching guides.

Upon arrival at a school, an accreditation team's first contact is with the superintendent, and the exact plan of operation is decided, discussed, and clarified in conference with him. Arrangements are made for examining records maintained in the administrative offices of the school and for visiting all campus units or divisions, all campus units usually are visited.

The basis for an accreditation visit is the principles and standards found in the current bulletin 560, entitled Principles and Standards for Accrediting Elementary and Secondary Schools. All phases of the school program are involved in the evaluation. In the short time allotted for each school visit, it is sometimes impossible to visit all the classes operated in a school, but every effort is made to visit classes representative of each area and level of instruction. Other aspects of the school program are evaluated by examining physical facilities such as the library, classrooms and science laboratories, the gymnasium, and school building facilities in general.

Classroom instruction usually is observed for short periods, but comment concerning the work of individual teachers is not included in the accreditation report. Frequently, the total impression gained by the accreditation team from classroom visits will indicate the adequacy of in-service programs and supervisory services. Instructional materials used by individual teachers help to indicate the scope and quality of instruction. Visitors may ask to examine samples of work done by pupils in notebooks, workbooks, tests, and single-sheet assignments, along with progress charts, models, and projects made by students. Instructional plans, course guides, outlines, class schedules, and records or extracurricular activities also provide information concerning the instructional program. When information from all these sources is added to that gained from conversations with students, teachers, and administrative personnel, it is possible to gain a reasonably accurate estimate of the school's instructional program.

Following each accreditation visit, a written report is prepared by members of the visiting team. Because of the large number of school systems visited each year, accreditation reports must be brief. They are not intended to cover all the good and bad aspects of a school's operation, but emphasize those areas in which standards may not be met fully. A copy of the report is mailed first to the superintendent of the school visited, along with a request that he make any suggestions or comments that he feels are needed to present a fair and correct evaluation of his school. Later, after the report is completed, copies are prepared for the State Commission on School Accreditation and for the president of the board of the school visited. When common school districts are visited, a copy of the report is sent to the county superintendent.

An accreditation visit is of maximum value when the school concerned is visited under normal operating conditions. To insure more complete by visitors, it is desirable to avoid scheduling events not typical of the usual daily program on the day of the accreditation visit. Unless they are an integral part of the regular daily schedule, assembly programs, extensive field trips, and other activities of similar nature might be avoided on the day of the visit. Activities of comparatively infrequent use, such as tests and examinations, particularly those involving a large number of students, are likely to give a distorted impression of a school if they are the major activities during an accreditation visit. Information concerning the use of such instructional methods and devices may be obtained by visitors from conversations with staff members, examinations, particularly those involving a large number of students, are likely to give a distorted impression of a school if they are the major activities during an accreditation visit. Information concerning the use of such instructional methods and devices may be obtained by visitors from conversations with staff members, examination of school records, class schedules and instructional outlines, rather than from seeing them in operation.

Few schools should need to make special preparation prior to an accreditation visit, except, perhaps, to make certain that teachers and staff members have prior knowledge of the visit and understand the desirability of handling their jobs according to the usual pattern. They should know that the visitors all have been teachers and that nothing in the visitation program will point to the individual teacher. All should be assured that the visit is an attempt to evaluate over-all conditions in the school, not the effectiveness of the individual teacher.

Records and reports needed for examination are those in regular school operation: physical facilities to be evaluated are those used in daily school operation; and evidence to be noted of students' learning activities are those used in and resulting from the daily classroom activities of students. It is helpful if areas, materials, or condition meriting special attention are called to the attention of the visitors.

Most accreditation visits follow the same general pattern, but details are varied to fit specific situations. In a school that has been visited previously, observation of some phases of its operation may be shortened or omitted. On an initial visit, all phases of a school program are examined. To facilitate visitation and to guard against overlooking some elements of a school program, the work of the accreditation teams is usually divided into five areas:

1. School plant and facilities: buildings, campus and play areas, classroom furniture and equipment, lighting, gymnasium and auxiliary areas.
2. Instructional aids, materials, supplies, and equipment; library and library materials, science laboratories, maps, globes, charts, models, projectors, record players, tape recorders, duplicators.
3. The instructional program: subjects offered, time schedules, staff preparation for teaching assignments, guidance and counseling, student activities, course plans, textbooks.
4. School records: student records, placement and follow-up system, community data.
5. Administration: administrative and board policies, school finance, district tax structure, self-evaluation procedures, supervisory practices, in-service programs.

SWCD To Have State Meet In McAllen

The role of conservation districts in environmental improvement is the theme of the 31st annual statewide meeting of conservation district directors to be held in McAllen October 19-21. Curtis Schaffer, Chairman of the Board of the local Gray County Soil and Water Conservation District, said plans are being made to send a delegation from the local district. The annual meeting is sponsored by the Texas State Soil and Water Conservation Board.

"Our District is involved in a wide range of activities which benefit the environment," Schaffer said. "Conservation measures reduce sediment, the state's biggest pollutant. Sediment fills lakes, streams, bays and estuaries, it kills fish and ruins their spawning grounds. Treatment of land subject to wind erosion cuts blowing dust, the state's worst air pollutant. We also try to tailor our work to enhance wildlife habitat, outdoor beauty and recreation."

Schaffer also pointed out that upstream watershed protection projects sponsored by conservation districts, counties and cities have vast environmental benefits. Floods not only damage homes and other property but they also kill people, wildlife and livestock.

Conservation districts are trying to step up all environmental activities. Schaffer said he hopes the discussion at the annual meeting will point up ways this can be done.

Speakers during the conference in McAllen will include David Brune, general manager of the Trinity River Authority; State Representative Bill Clayton of Springlake; State Senator Murray Watson of Mart; Clyde W. Graham state conservationist for the Soil

As a 2-year-old with just two months of public showing behind her, Poco Coed, young mare owned by Neville and Ruby Beck, is catching the eyes of judges wherever she goes. Accent on Health A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

Doctors are increasingly worried over what seems to be a general confusion among the public about measles and German measles. They are two distinct diseases, caused by two different viruses. Measles, or rubella, is perhaps the most underrated of all childhood diseases. Measles can kill or, more often leave a lifelong legacy of brain damage or deafness. Since encephalitis occurs in a small but significant number of measles cases, and permanent disability occurs in a fair proportion of these, this year's upsurge will sentence several thousand children to some sort of brain damage. Rubella most frequently strikes preschoolers. Until 1963, measles was virtually unstoppable. Today, one dose of measles vaccine given to children 12 months or older offers almost 100% protection. It's the best odds a parent can find anywhere in child health care these days. German measles, or rubella, is less contagious and occurs more frequently among young adults. Women taken with rubella during first three months of pregnancy run a great risk of bearing retarded or handicapped children. Sometimes called German measles (though it has no relation whatever to the other variety), rubella is one of the mildest infectious disease of childhood. Many youngsters actually go through rubella without knowing they have it. But when the virus is transmitted to the pregnant mother the results can be devastating. Following the 1964-65 rubella epidemic, an estimated 20,000 babies were born with severe birth defects. With another epidemic predicted for 1972 and 1973, the only way to prevent an equally large harvest of deaf, blind, and mentally retarded infants is immunization of children between 12 months of age and puberty. The epidemic is expected because rubella outbreaks historically run in cycles of seven to ten years. Separate immunization shots are available for both rubella and measles. Unfortunately most mothers are unaware of this and assume that a single shot protects children against all types of measles. This misconception leaves the children open to infection by one or the other of the viruses.

Have Fun! By Lee Bryan The sad, quiet, big-eyed little lady sat in the psychiatrist's office. The good doctor questioned her gently as to why her family wanted her locked up. "Now, tell me," he said, "just what is your trouble?" "It's just that . . . just that I'm so fond of pancakes, doctor." "Is that all? Why, I'm fond of pancakes myself." "Oh, doctor, really?" she thrilled, clasping her hands together with joy. "You must come over to our house. I've got trunks and trunks full of them!"

Excuse me sir, did you happen to have seen a policeman anywhere about here? "I'm sorry, but I haven't seen a sign of one." "All right, hurry up and give me your watch and pocketbook then." Caller: "Madam, I'm the piano-tuner." Pianist: "I didn't send for a tuner." Caller: "I know it, lady; your neighbors did." Smith: "Shall we have a friendly game of cards?" Brown: "No, let's play bridge."

MARKETING REPORT Before making out your food shopping list this week, consider these marketing guidelines from Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist. Store specials on beef and pork continue to offer appealing values for budget menus. At the beef counter, look for good buys on chuck roasts and steaks, round steaks, ground beef and liver. And, popular steak cuts are highlighted in some markets. "You'll likely see good pork buys on Boston butt roasts, fresh picnic roasts, shoulder steaks, rib chops, and smoked hams and ham portions," says Mrs. Clyatt. Attractive prices may also be found on fryer chickens in many markets. Good egg supplies continue, with very reasonable prices, the specialist reports. However, Grade A large and Grade A medium eggs are about equal values this week. A wide variety of milk products is available to help you serve the family an adequate diet economically and attractively. "The simplest way to get milk into family meals is to serve it as a beverage," she says. Choose to suit your family's taste - fresh whole milk, fresh skimmed milk, buttermilk, chocolate or flavored, reconstituted dry milk or canned milk products. Whatever the kind used, remember extra chilling enhances the flavor. At the produce counter, items in best supply at most economical prices include prunes, apples, bananas, grapes, avocados, cabbage, carrots, yellow onions, hardshell squash varieties, potatoes and celery. Foreign Wars Posts 1475, 6147, and 7869; World War I - Barracks 21; and Cooties Pup Tent 10, Commander of the Veteran's Council is Joseph Murphy. Matching units will include high school bands from the Panhandle Area and marching units from various area organizations. The residents of the Panhandle area are cordially invited to view the parade which will start promptly at 10 a.m. Monday, Oct. 25. The parade will proceed North on Polk Street from 11th to 3rd and east to the parking lot of the Civil Center.

The Wage-Price Freeze

Questions and Answers

This column of questions and answers on the Wage and Price Freeze is provided by the local office of the U.S. Internal Revenue Service and is published as a public service. The column answers questions most frequently asked about the Wage and Price Freeze announced August 15 by President Nixon.

Q. During the first week of August, my union reached agreement with my employer on a new contract giving me a wage increase. However, the agreement has yet to go into effect. Can I still get the additional wages?

A. The new rate can be paid if labor and management had reached an agreement and work was performed or wages accrued prior to Aug. 15 at the new wage rate.

Q. Does the Internal Revenue Service have any publications giving information on the freeze?

A. Yes. Copies of "The Wage-Price Freeze; Some Questions and Answers" can be obtained without charge by dropping a postcard to your IRS District office. The booklet is also available at many post offices throughout the country and from the 10 Emergency Preparedness Regional Offices.

Q. My apartment lease specifically provides for me to pay for any increases in property taxes. Can my landlord now raise rent on the basis of a property tax increase?

A. No, this is not permitted during the freeze.

Q. My employer hired me on a probationary basis. The established practice of the company is to increase wage rates at the end of the probationary period. My probationary period ends in two weeks. Can I still receive a wage increase?

A. Yes. The probationary period is similar to an apprenticeship or learners' program and the wage increase may be granted if the probationary period for the job doesn't exceed three months. Q. Can a landlord evict a tenant for refusing to pay a rent increase during the freeze?

A. No. A landlord is in violation of the freeze if he attempts to evict a tenant for refusal to pay rent in excess of the ceiling rent applicable to his rental apartment or house.

A tenant threatened with eviction over an increase in rent during the freeze should immediately consult the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS has 360 offices throughout the country to investigate complaints and provide information about the freeze.

Q. Does the price freeze mean an end of special sales or reductions in prices?

A. No. The freeze simply sets a ceiling. Normal clearance sales and price reductions can take place.

Q. Are advance ticket sales for sporting events occurring during the freeze covered by the President's order?

A. Yes.

Q. Can insurance rates be increased during the freeze?

A. No. The freeze applies to insurance rates. However, if a rate increase was announced before Aug. 15 and a substantial number of transactions occurred at the increased rate, the increase becomes the established rate. No additional rate increases are permitted during the freeze.

SWINE SALE

Freddie Vanderburg Jr. held his third annual production sale of registered Poland Chinas and Duroc hogs at the county show barn last October 9th. The sale grossed over $9000. Freddie was well pleased with his sale. This was a desperation sale on his Poland Chinas. Freddie sold the first boor ever sold for $10,000, in the U.S. several years ago. Since then several have brought this figure. Freddie farms and has a modern swine out fit approximately 14 miles south of Pampa.

PRAIRIE DOGS

Prairie dogs have just about taken over the northwest corner of Gray County. The rodent control service discontinued any control work a few years back. Presently there is one pest control operator around McLean that is doing a fine job on these pest. He guarantees a kill and is reasonable on his price. Should you have a prairie dog problem, I would be glad to put you in touch with him.

WHEAT CONDITION

Ninty five percent of the wheat is now planted. I would say over half of it in the Pampa area was planted after the rains. There is a possibility it would make some pasture if we could obtain a one inch rain soon - followed with some nice warm weather. The wheat planted before the rains will make pasture soon.

MILO HARVEST

Both irrigated and dryland wheat harvest is getting well underway. The very dry hot early September weather speeded up the harvest date. No doubt it also cut yield figures as well. We think the much talked about big corn and milo crop has been over played. When the harvest is in, I believe it will be well below government for cost. This will be an excellent year to hold your Milo under storage.
