Summer's The Time For Hunter Safety

Once the magic of the first day of summer vacation wears off, things get pretty boring for most unoccupied school kids.

With a little foresight and a couple of telephone calls, you could help your youngsters pass the summer hours and prepare them to be safer hunters in the fall.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department offers a Volunteer Hunter Safety Program to everyone 12 years of age or older.

Contact the nearest TP&WD office or your local game warden for the name of a hunter safety instructor.

The instructors are the backbone of the program and devote considerable time to helping Texas youth become better and safer hunters.

As yet, hunter safety training is voluntary in Texas.

Colorado makes such training mandatory for those who were born after Jan. 1, 1949, and the instruction is a prerequisite for issuing both resident and non-resident hunting licenses to those born after that date.

Sixteen other states also have a mandatory training program: California, Connecticut, Delaware, Michigan, Kansas, Minnesota, Montana, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Utah and Washington.

Texas' Volunteer Hunter Safety Program is a six-to-eight-hour course and helps each student learn safe gun and how handling, hunting ethics and responsibility, game laws and regulations, game identification and the concept of a quality outdoor experience whether a limit is bagged or not.

The 1,100 volunteer instructors have certified some 8,500 students since the program was started in February, 1972.

TAKE TIME TO BE PROUD

FLAG DAY—1974

On June 14, Americans will pause to honor their flag. Much has changed in America and her people since 1771, when Philadelphia seamstress Betsy Ross produced the first national banner with its 13 stars and alternating red and white stripes. Yet "Old Glory" continues to hold deep meaning for patriotic Americans. It was President Woodrow Wilson who first proclaimed that Flag Day would be observed each year on June 14. That was in 1916, and he emphasized: "We celebrate the day of the flag's birth, and from that day until now it has witnessed great history; has floated high—the symbol of great events, of a great plan of action worked out by a great people." This June 14, as we repeat the Pledge of Allegiance at meetings and sports events; as we salute our flag when it passes on parade; as we see it waving over our nation's homes and schools and places of business; let us remember the proud heritage for which it stands: "One Nation, Under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

FOREVER BEAUTIFUL

"He will beautify the meek with salvation." (Psalm 149:4)

Meekness! vice or virtue? Most of us are not quite sure. We normally pay our compliments to the self-confident and aggressive, those who will stand up for their rights and take a back seat to no one. After all, self-assertion seems to be a cardinal rule for success in our society. And meekness? That sounds like sissy stuff. At best, it's a petticoat virtue.

But look at Moses! "Now the man Moses was very meek, above all the men which were upon the face of the earth," (Numbers 12:3). But no one has ever called him a Mr. Milquetoast. He wasn't the sort of man to walk around with his head bowed in bashfulness or timidity. At the age of 40 he had such fiery passions that he killed an Egyptian. At 80 he made his appearance before Pharaoh and demanded that the king release his slaves. And until he was 120 years of age Moses exercised strong leadership over 600,000 men, not counting women and children. His meekness was compatible with great strength. With passions controlled, he became a bold leader of men and an humble follower of God.

Strength at its strongest is power held in restraint. Look at our Lord. He possessed amazing power, and yet could say, "I am meek and lowly in heart." At the very beginning of the ministry of Jesus, in the wilderness temptation, He settled certain points about the use of that power. Even His death was a sign of strength rather than weakness. He said, "I lay down my life...no man take it from me." Had our Lord so desired, He could have called legions of angels to His side to defy His crucifiers. But this potent power was held in check, submissive to the will of God.

We admire strength. But strength is not necessarily the possession of the self-willed creature who demands what he wants when he wants it. The mark of godhood is on the man whose powers are under control.

What do the meek get? The psalmist answers that God "Will beautify the meek with salvation." There humble, submissive souls have found the proper ingredient to be forever beautiful.

A man on horseback has a little better chance in dealing with a recalcitrant 1,600-pound steer armed with a five-foot horn spread.

The horses have also proved useful in rounding up steers which break through fences.

They could possibly be used in emergency situations such as search and rescue in remote areas of many parks which are inaccessible to vehicles--and the mileage is good.

Farm-facts

A Weekly Report Of Agri-Business News

Compiled From Sources
Of The Texas Department of Agriculture
John C. White, Commissioner

Estate prices Up... Peanuts More Popular... Demand for Cotton Increases... Watermelons on Market... Hay Cutting Underway.

FARM REAL estate prices jumped over the United States by 21 per cent during the past year, from $233 to $280 an acre. Although the per-acre prices may be higher in some areas of Texas, latest figures show Texas farm real estate prices climbed by a more modest nine per cent. The jump was highest in Colorado, 33 per cent, and Pennsylvania was second with 31 per cent, followed by Alabama, Iowa and South Carolina with 30 per cent.

PEANUTS AND PEANUT BUTTER are being consumed by Americans more than ever, the USDA reports. There were 524 million pounds of shelled peanuts used in edible products from August through December, 1973, an eight per cent increase over the same period for 1972. Experts think the increased demand for peanuts came because of the higher prices for beef, dairy products and poultry. Growers received about two cents a pound more for peanuts in 1973 than they did the previous year... Peanut planting in Texas is more than 35 per cent complete, but moisture is short for planting in the Cross Timbers area.

COTTON CONSUMPTION is up over the world by about two million bales, to about 59 million. The carryover in the United States August 1 is expected to be 3 1/2 million bales, below a previous USDA estimate because export volume now is expected to increase. Cotton planting in Texas is about 70 per cent complete, compared to 75 per cent at the same time last season. Planting is making rapid progress on irrigated fields on the High and Low Plains, but more rain is needed on the High Plains to complete planting. Boll weevils and flea hoppers are reported in cotton in the southern half of the State.

WATERMELONS are ripening in the Coastal Bend area where labor and truck shortages have been reported. Watermelon harvest is expected to begin in the San Antonio-Winter Garden area, according to Texas Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, and vines are in the bloom stage in East Texas... Sweet corn and tomatoes are beginning to ripen in Central Texas, and harvest of peppers, eggplant, squash, potatoes and cucumbers continues on the Upper Coast. Squash and cucumber harvest is over in the Coastal Bend and sweet corn and carrot harvest is almost over in that area.

HAY CUTTING is underway all across Texas, and yields of this first cutting are reported good. Prospects for a second cutting are good in East Texas but most of the western half of the State needs rain for the second crop. Rainfall during the week ending June 1 helped many areas in East Texas and Southeast Texas. Areas north of Beaumont were reported to have had five inches during the week.

NUMBER OF broiler chicks placed and the number hatched were down slightly during the week ending May 25. There were 3,839,000 placed, which is two per cent below the same time last year and also for the previous week. Chicks hatched totaled 3,942,000, down one per cent from a year ago and two per cent below the previous week. Eggs set for broiler production numbered 4,584,000 which was four per cent below a year ago.

Mr. and Mrs. J.L. Parr visited over the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lacy, Laurie and Kimberly, and Vickie Parr.

Chiggers, Ticks Not Much Fun

Chances are that if you took your most environmentally aware citizen and set him down to what was known to be the last chigger or tick on earth, the guy would bash the little pest with whatever was handy, facing the ecological consequences with a smile.

The eradication of ticks and chiggers could hardly be mourned by anyone. Unfortunately, says Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials, these annoying arachnids are not on anyone's endangered list, so if you plan to go on an outing this spring and summer, you had best take some precautionary measures.

First, know your enemy. You might say that ticks are born blood-thirsty. From the instant they hatch, the larvae (seed ticks) begin their search for a blood meal by mounting grass stalks and other vegetation. They "feel" the air for the warmth and scent of a warm-blooded creature to which they can attach themselves.

After feeding, the larvae fall to the ground, molt and become nymphs (yearling ticks).

The nymphs must find a meal the same way as larvae do to become adults which will lay more eggs. This hit-or-miss way of doing things may take several years before the cycle is completed.

Chiggers are the larval form of very small mites which like to crawl around on your body a little while before they find an especially succulent spot. When they find a spot they like they insert their mouth parts into the skin and inject a fluid to dissolve the tissues upon which they feed.

Unfortunately for the victim there is no such thing as one chigger bite. If you get into a bed of chiggers, you are going to be itching in quite a few places, and this itching can be maddening for up to two weeks.

The best way to deal with ticks and chiggers is to avoid the places where they lurk, high weeds and grass and brushy areas. If this is not feasible, then there are some other measures you can take.

An application of rotenone dust or some other commercially available products on clothes, especially to the cuff and legs of your pants and around your ankles, will sometimes keep ticks and chiggers off.

Chiggers are repelled by sulfur dust and insect repellent. One sulfur cream-of-tartar tablet ingested per day, beginning the day or so before going out, makes your skin repugnant to chiggers. One drawback to taking the tablets is that your perspiration will smell of sulphur, making you repugnant to some humans as well. However, most experienced outdoorsmen will tell you this is a small price to pay for a chigger-free day.

Since it takes quite a while for chiggers and ticks to make up their minds as to where to have their banquet, an inspection of your body as soon as you get home from the woods can save you some misery. Ticks can be found still crawling around. A hot, soapy bath will kill most of the chiggers on you before they start to dig in.

Embedded ticks must be removed carefully so as not to leave the mouthparts in the skin and therefore cause infections. The idea is to make it impossible for the tick to breathe through its body by covering it with alcohol, lighter fluid or nail polish remover. Hopefully, the tick will remove its head from your skin.

If the chiggers bite, you will be willing to try anything to get relief. Rubbing alcohol, or some other commercial applications offer temporary help. There have been some encouraging reports from persons who have taken a hot bath in a weak solution of ammonia water or a weak solution of pine oil, bleach or lysol and water.

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

School's out, and the summer ahead will bring travel, swimming, boating, picnicking and other happy leisure hours. BUT, for the careless or the unfortunate, that long-awaited vacation can be spoiled by intestinal problem which may be prevented.

Summer food poisoning can be carried with you in your picnic basket or obtained at a cafe, cafeteria or a church supper. Or, says the State Health Department, it can be gotten at home.

At the bottom of this pain and misery may be a bacterial infection called salmonellosis. It is commonly known as food poisoning and often is credited by individuals as being a 24-hour virus.

Health authorities can tell anyone what causes salmonellosis and how to prevent it, but it continues to be a health problem.

The term "salmonellosis" refers to infections caused by any of the numerous members of the genus salmonella.

Some 900 varieties are known and they may inhabit most species of warm-blooded animals and many cold-blooded vertebrates. Major reservoirs of human salmonellosis are in domestic livestock, swine and poultry. Organisms may be transmitted to man either directly from animals or through contaminated products of animal origin. Not overlooked in importance is the human carrier.

The most dramatic and highly publicized aspects of salmonellosis are the food-borne infections which occur in large groups of persons who have consumed a common contaminated food. In this type of contamination, the food most likely has been prepared in advance and then held in such manner that the bacteria had an opportunity to multiply. Perhaps you've read or heard of such outbreak which followed a banquet or picnic.

The State Health Department is so concerned with the problem of foodborne infection that it sponsors courses in teaching food hygiene. Its regional offices and local health departments help carry out training programs for food handlers. And, films and literature are available on the subject. In addition, periodic inspections are carried out at food handling establishments.

Many of the foods you buy raw and prepare may have salmonella in them. But by proper handling, you can neutralize the dangers from infection. You home cutting board could be the source of illness unless it is properly washed using hot water after cutting up raw meat and poultry. Bacteria can build up in cracks and crevices and contaminate other foods--or even the meat after it is cooled and placed back on the cutting board.

In some ways, food-borne illness is a matter of chance. Five factors must come into play to produce it. You must, of course, have bacteria present, and you need growth-supporting temperatures, suitable food, moisture and time.

Improper sanitation or improper refrigeration and heating are the main causes of food poisoning in humans. Almost without exception in food poisoning cases, the food was contaminated after having been cooked and allowed to stand at temperatures which encouraged bacterial growth.

These bacteria thrive at temperatures ranging from 45 to 140 degrees Fahrenheit--from cool to warm. So keeping food just barely cool or warm doesn't help. A cold product, says the Health Department, should not be allowed to exceed 40 degrees Fahrenheit. And, a hot dish should be kept above 140 degrees.

Once introduced into foods under proper conditions, the bacteria begins growing. So time is important between fixing and eating the food. The shorter period the better. And, beware of leftovers which have been off refrigeration for long periods.

Some of the things you are most likely to take on picnics are the high protein, moist foods in which germs thrive. These include milk, milk products, eggs, meat, poultry, fish, shellfish and such

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Motel and Your Car

Melvin's restful night at a motel came to a jarring end when he looked out the window in the morning. His car, which he had parked just outside the room, had disappeared. In fact, he never saw it again.

In due course, he tried to collect reimbursement from the management of the motel.

"I was their guest," he argued in a court hearing, "and my car was on their premises. Therefore, they are legally liable for the loss."

However, the court tossed out Melvin's claim. The court said his argument did not stand up because he had never turned over possession of the car to the management. He had parked the car himself and kept the keys in his pocket.

It is true that motels--and hotels as well--bear a substantial responsibility for the property of their guests. This rule dates all the way back to the Middle Ages in England, when inns were considered a kind of safety zone for the travelling public.

But the rule does not go into effect until the property has been transferred to the possession of the management. In the case of automobiles, possession is ordinarily transferred when the guest surrenders his keys to a company employee.

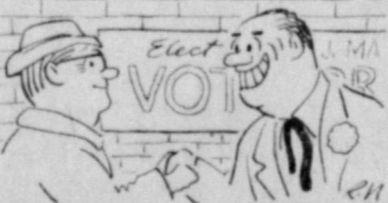

The exact moment of transfer may become crucial. One woman left her car at the entrance to a hotel and went in to register. When the bellboy asked her for the keys, she replied that she had left them in the ignition.

Shortly afterward, a thief slipped into the car and made off with it.

Had the woman delivered possession of the car to the hotel management, making it responsible for her loss?

A court said yes, even though the keys had never been physically handed over to the bellboy. The court said the woman's words had given him the right to take possession of the car--and along with the right went the responsibility.

favorites as cream pies, custards and potato salad.

The extent of the salmonella problem is so great that the federal government is launching an attack on salmonella and other food-borne diseases. Consumer education is being given top priority.

Luckily for Texans, the quality of food handling in the state is such that few large outbreaks occur. But there's always that possibility. And with hot summer temperatures already here, the State Health Department advises everyone going camping or picnicking: keep those cold foods cold and the hot foods hot. Picnicking is a great summer time pleasure, so add to the pleasure with proper food handling.

Going Native? Watch Out For Poisonous Plants

Those long, slender shoots from the Oleander plant sure are tempting when you're looking for a skewer for your weiner roasts, but using them could be a fatal mistake.

The oleander is a deadly poisonous plant. There have been several instances of death to persons who contaminated their food with oleander skewers.

It is one of several poisonous plants in Texas which can kill you, according to the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials.

Here are a few plants to watch for:

The horsetail, a primitive, rush-like plant found in swamps and steam-beds which is also known as the scouring rush, pipes, joint grass or foxtail. Although this plant is not likely to be eaten by humans, the young shoots have been mistaken for wild asparagus.

Fly poison, a plant which is sometimes mistaken for the wild onion because of its multi-layered bulb. Found in deep East Texas in sandy bogs and open woods, this extremely toxic plant lacks an onion-like smell. Hands should be washed thoroughly after handling this plant because of the possibility of poisoning yourself by touching your hands to your mouth.

Death Camass, another plant which can be mistaken for the wild onion but which also lacks the characteristic smell of onions. This plant can be found all over Texas in sandy pinewoods and bogs, limestone gravels, meadows and prairies. It has a potent alkaloid which causes vomiting, diarrhea and death in many cases.

Blue flag, a wild iris found in meadows, swamps, bottomlands and forest borders. It is sometimes confused with sweet flag, calamus or young cat-tail by wild food collectors. The plant can cause digestive upsets.

Bouncing bet, found in waste areas, roadsides and ditches. Its mucilaginous juice, which can be used as a soap substitute because it lathers, causes severe digestive irritation.

Poison hemlock, a potent killer imported from Europe. It is found in waste areas, fields and roadsides. It bears a superficial resemblance to the parsley family, particularly the wild carrot.

Water hemlock, found in swamps, stream banks and wet, low ground. A single bite of the roots of this plant can kill a man. Unfortunately, this plant resembles many members of the parsley family which it belongs.

Dogbane, found in open ground, stream banks, and borders of woods. This plant looks something like a milkweed and contains a milky juice. It is related to the oleander.

Horse chestnut, found in woods, stream banks and bottomlands. The starchy meat of the nut has a toxic substance which works on the nervous system.

There are many wild plants which can serve as a nutritious supplement to the outdoorsman's diet, and there are several books which can tell which ones are safe.

Texas Parks and Wildlife Department officials advise that this literature be consulted by would-be wild food gatherers. It could save their lives.
