READING AND WRITING

'THE BIG FOUR,' By Oscar Lewis (Knopf, $4.00). Oscar Lewis' 'The Big Four' is by no means the first book about the four men who created the Southern Pacific and administered its affairs according to their pattern for so long. We have not read them all, and have no idea whether it is the best book of the lot. But certainly it is one of the most entertaining, because Mr. Lewis has not allowed his indignation to force him past the point of irony. There is so much in this story to breed indignation...

THE BRITONS COMING TO JUDGMENT

LONDON, Aug. 8.—I want to England having been told by all sorts of men who are supposed to bear things at first hand that British ruling class had made up its mind to give Hitler a free hand for the conquest of Central and Eastern Europe and to give Mussolini a nod Hitler a victory in Spain.

It is supported also by argument. Thus it is said that Hitler in his book "Mein Kampf" declares that Germany must not again go to war with Britain, and that therefore, by letting him satisfy his ambitions in Eastern Europe, the empire can be made secure.

Having come to England again, I have come away convinced that if this conception of Britain is believed in Berlin, it is perhaps the most dangerous delusion now current in this feverishly deluded world.

The British today are confronted with a supremely great issue—only three before, at the time of the Spanish armada and at the time of Napoleon and in 1917, have their possessions, their position in the world and their ideals been challenged so fundamentally as they are today.

For what the world thinks is the British attitude is something very different: it is the British policy of the moment. And that policy is the ancient policy of an experienced ruling class beset by great dangers.

The danger of misunderstanding the British today lies in thinking that their Fabian policy represents their final and fixed conviction, that because they seek to avoid decisive issues, they will never reach a decision.

We are so used to seeing the fate of nations decided by the arbitrary impulses of a single man that we have almost forgotten what happens when a free people goes through the agonizing process of making up its mind.

The temper of England today is ominous to any one who saw the British collect themselves in 1914 and see again the signs appearing of their terrible anger when their profoundest moral convictions are completely outraged and fully aroused.

Love on the Range: Chapter 33 Sudden Death. The Amos told himself, as in the darkness he turned back toward the fireplace, was the very thing he had hidden into this country to avoid—murder, battle and sudden death.

Chapter Two

An Unpleasant Celebrity: I felt a queer little chill run down my spine. I swung around in my chair, staring at the surrounding tables, but no one seemed to be taking the slightest interest in our movements or those of our late guest.

His costume alone would have marked him out even from that varicolored throng, for he wore a pair of rust-red, fisherman's trousers, bell-bottomed over his bare and bony ankles, a gray-blue shirt, opened to show a neck as thin and elongated as a Christmas turkey's, and over that a yellow coat of the local peasant linen.

"Good Heavens!" I said to Hugo, my thoughts, for the moment, completely diverted from our late guest. "The things you see when you haven't got your gun! I've struck a lot of peculiar specimens in my time, but none as peculiar as that."

"You wouldn't—under his own name; but if you haven't heard of Shevr, the cartoonist, you're more of an ignoramus than I took you for."

"He's like a goat himself," I said. "All you've got to do is to put horns and a beard on him."

"Do not intrude!" he asked politely, in a toneless voice that made me think of wind through a reed.

"He bowed graciously. 'A friend of my dear Hugo's must be a friend of mine,' he informed me. 'But tell me, my loved one, he added, turning to Hugo, 'how is it that I find you here today, you who disdain so much these haunts of pleasure?'"

"The Little Eve": The cartoonist shrugged. "It is true, but for me, alas, there is no choice. These people are my material, the stuff that an entire life is made of, and every so often I must sit here, alone at my little table, watching them and replenishing my store."

"I was about to tell him the truth when to my amazement, Hugo cut in. 'At Le Touquet, wasn't it?' he said quickly. 'That's what I said,' I agreed, profoundly puzzled but willing to follow him. 'I see your year, then, the little Eve! It is long since you saw her last!'"

SEARCH ON FOR WIFE KILLER

SHELTON, Wash., Aug. 8 (AP)—The craggy and wild back country of Mason county were searched today for Bernard R. Leuch, 46, escaped convicted killer and former St. Cloud, Minn., policeman.

Leuch, a powerful man, pounced on Deputy Roy Daniels when the officer brought him his dinner in the county jail yesterday. The ex-policeman quickly overcame the jailer and took his keys, leaving the deputy locked in a cell.

On his way out of the jail, Leuch met and seized Mrs. Olive Tucker, mistress, and forced her into a cell. Bill Hoyle said he saw Leuch run out of the jail and head east on the highway toward Olympia. At the time almost the whole population of the town was watching an American Legion state junior baseball game at the ball park.

Women's Friend Proving To Be Just That

SAN ANTONIO, Aug. 8 (AP)—The boy with the goose which laid the golden egg had nothing on the San Antonio lady with the "dollar-a-day dog."

Each afternoon for two weeks he has come, his nose dirt covered, to drop a dollar bill from his mouth into his mistress's hand. He will give the money to none other.

Where his supposed buried treasure is folks have been unable to find. His hiding place, like his pedigree, is shrouded in mystery.

Some of the bills are of the old-time large size, but none of them are on the "wanted" list. The dog's name? It's being withheld from publication!

loss of some ground at Changku-feng, but a Tokyo communique denied loss of the hill.

The Russian terms for a truce were listed by Tass (official Russian news agency) as:

1. Hostilities would be discontinued after both sides pledged not to cross or fire over a definite line, and recalled their troops if they went beyond that line.
2. That line should be the frontier fixed by the Russian treaty with China of June 28, 1896. (Japan wants both the treaty and other data possessed by Japan to be used in determining the line.)
3. After peace is restored, a frontier bi-lateral commission of two Russian representatives, one from Japan and one from Manchou-kuo, would go to the frontier and negotiate for redemarcation on the basis of the 1896 agreement.

Start New Offensive

It was considered significant in some quarters that it was an army communique which announced Sunday that Japanese had been driven from Siberian territory, (disputed in Tokyo).

Herbert reports had come from the news agency, Tass, or as government informative bulletins.

Headed "Staff Report of the First (Primorsk) Army," the communique said Japanese started a new offensive on August 5, one day after Japan proposed a truce.

Advancing Japanese infantrymen were met by heavy fire from Soviet artillery in a several hours' battle. Japanese artillery was silenced, whereupon Russian soldiers launched a counter attack and "cleared our territory of the remnants of Japanese troops."

The Russian troops then encircled themselves in strong positions.

Man About Manhattan
by GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Long Island Sound used to be an easy avenue of escape for thieves and fugitives, but it isn't any more. Too much coast guard. Too many fast, armed cutters on the water and too many fleet ships in the air.

Until a few years ago it was a commonplace for bank and jewel robbers to race out to hidden points on the sound and make their getaway in speedy motorboats. The most classic example on record was that half-million armed-truck robbery in Brooklyn a few years ago. They never have solved that one. They followed the trail to a ragged point on the sound, where a boat had been cached. But there the trail ended.

Now the Coast Guard has any number of ships, some as long as 300 feet, and armed with heavy guns and anti-aircraft equipment. They have crews of over 100 men and depart regularly on five day cruises. Their range is from New London, Conn., to Cape May, N. J., and as far as 500 miles out to sea.

That must be an exciting task, that job. Because you never know what the next assignment will be. You may be cruising calmly off Nantucket one minute and be after runner runners the next. Narcotic runners have to be taken care of too. And the Coast Guard does a lot of rescue work.

Just the other day a call came through that a robbery had taken place and they thought the robbers were making for the Sound. Within five minutes fast boats were racing to that point from New York and from Connecticut. And at that moment planes began dropping over head, blanketing the Sound and taking cognizance of every ship in sight. If they saw a boat they couldn't identify, no matter how small (and that means rowboats and canoes) they made it their business to find who they were and where they were headed.

On this particular call no prisoners were taken because the bandits didn't take off that way. They probably knew better. Once a haven of escape, the Sound is now about as healthy for fugitives, as a crocodile slough.

Short Story: About a year ago she won a beauty contest and went to Hollywood to become a glamorous actress. They gave her a bit, and then another bit, and probably she could be playing bits yet if she cared for them. But this girl was smart. She realized she knew next to nothing about acting. So she came back to New York . . . And got a part-time job, and signed up in a school of the drama.

The job she had was selling cigarettes on the roofgarden at one of the hotels. She wanted to learn all the little tricks of acting before she went Hollywood again.

But sometimes even an actress' plans get changed. And this girl's certainly are. For she fell in love with the drama teacher and married him. And today she is his assistant, giving instructions to students who want to learn how to act.

TESTIFY DWYER FEARED FOR HIS LIFE

SOUTH PARIS, Me., Aug. 8 (AP)—The lawyer who defended Paul N. Dwyer, 19, on a charge of strangling Dr. James G. Littlefield, testified today that Dwyer pleaded guilty in fear for his own life and that of his mother.

E. Walter Abbott, who represented Dwyer, told a superior court jury trying Francis M. Carroll on the same charge, that on the third day of Dwyer's trial last November, the youth told him he "had to plead guilty."

"My life has been threatened," he quoted Dwyer as saying, "my mother has been threatened, and I've got to get out of here."

Abbott said Dwyer told him Carroll had made the threats.

Two weeks before that trial, at which Dwyer pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment, Abbott said Dwyer told him a story "substantially the same as at this trial."

In nearly three days of testimony last week, Dwyer charged not only Dr. Littlefield's slaying but that of his wife, Lydia Littlefield, 63, to the stolid, 43-year-old Carroll, father of Dwyer's erstwhile sweetheart, Barbara Carroll, 18.

Dwyer previously had confessed strangling Mrs. Littlefield as well as the doctor.

Carroll, said Abbott, was the officer on guard while Paul told him what Dwyer not contends is "the true story" about the slayings.

The same night, Abbott added, Dwyer called him to his cell and told him "not to believe the story he had told me that afternoon."

LUMBER DEALERS TO SPONSOR MEETING AND DISPLAY

Lumber dealers of Big Spring will present displays of new construction developments this evening at 7 o'clock in the Crawford hotel.

The display will remain open for study during Tuesday at the Crawford ballroom.

Coincident with installation of the display, there will be a meeting at which matters concerning application and construction will be discussed.

In addition to the new developments, their practical values will be analyzed for visitors. The public is invited to attend the Monday evening session and to view the display Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Perry and his sons have moved to Midland to make their home.

Misrepresentations To Come To Halt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8 (AP)—The federal trade commission said today that the Interstate Cotton Oil Refining company of Sherman, Tex., had agreed to discontinue certain alleged misrepresentations in connection with the sale of a product designated "Mrs. Tucker's Shortening."

The commission said the company had agreed to cease advertising that its products "makes all foods easier to digest, unless it is compared with shortenings made from animal fats; that foods fried in the product are never greasy or heavy, and that it is one-third, one-fourth or any definite percentage more economical than competitive shortenings."

Anne Martin, county superintendent, is attending the state county superintendent's meeting at College Station.

Memories Of Polar Explorers Are Recalled As Tourist Surveys The Frozen Land At Top Of The World

By HOUSTON HARTZ

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen (By Mail)—This is where Santa Claus starts out on his annual trek on Christmas Eve and if one can imagine in summer what a place like this would be like in winter, he can realize why this spot was picked for the mythical location.

It was from here in 1926 that Commander Richard E. Byrd flew to the North Pole. Here Roald Amundsen, in a gallant attempt to Admiral Umberto Nobile flew across the pole to Alaska in the dirigible "Norge" later in the same year. Here Sir Hubert Wilkins landed after his flight from Alaska across the pole, and here Admiral Nobile and Amundsen had their ill-fated dispute over a second trip to the pole. From here Nobile flew away only to go down and Amundsen, in a gallant attempt to rescue his former companion, took off in an airplane, never to be heard from again. Nobile and the most of his party made their way back to Kings Bay—but never to peace of mind.

A Village Of Belies

As one looks out on the bleak and narrow, if sheltered, bay, the whole gamut of modern North Pole exploration comes up before one's eyes and he cannot help but reflect that here, these men whose names will always be remembered when Arctic history is discussed, planned and dreamed and from here they made their daring leaps and happy landings.

It is a village of relics. Before one realizes where he is, the skeleton of the hangar for the Norge stands out like the yawning bones of a dead monster against the chocolate soil of the narrow tableland that lies between the glaciers and the sea. There are the local chutes where tons of coal were moved in the days before the East Texas oil field put crude into the holds of all ships on the sea. This country up here is a massive coal field, nine billion tons having already been discovered. Today it looks like a deserted oil town. The equipment is stored, for someday the Norwegians will be back and work the mines. How did the coal get here? That's a question for the geologists, but if coal comes from decomposed forests, once the Arctic was a jungle.

Byrd's Home There

At Kings Bay is the former home of Byrd, as well as the houses occupied by the other big names of exploration. The radio station and weather bureau operate the whole year long. The snow gets over house tops in winter and the sun does not rise from early November until early February. It is daylight 24 hours a day from May to August.

A boat load of August to look after the tourists. About 20 boats put in here during those two months and they sell a lot of stuff made in New York and Norway at about 10 times what it cost. Knit mittens sell at $1.60 a pair. They must have cost 20 cents at Oslo. The biggest racket just came up this year. That is the stamp collecting business. An attractive Norwegian stamp that sells for 5 cents, a cheap post card that sells at two for a nickel anywhere else, and the date line of the most northern post office in the world, all goes for 23 cents American money. One could almost have heard a tourist yell down out the Conchos when he found out that the 55 cards he had just marked with the Kings Bay cachet were sold to 10 cents a throw. He had bought the cards in Reykjavik, the stamps on the boat.

Land Of Midnight Sun

The S. S. Reliance came to Kings Bay after having been from 100 to 125 miles north to the ice barrier which was found at 820 degrees latitude. There was bright sunshine, day and night, for 49 hours. The first ice was seen at 4 in the afternoon and at midnight the ship was close to the ice barrier as it was safe to go. From this point to the North Pole is about 515 miles. There is nothing but packed ice from the barrier north. The old explorers would sail to the barrier, find a place where they could get on top of it, and start the trek to the pole.

The greater part of the Arctic Ocean is covered with drift ice which is compressed, through action of wind and the current, into solid pack ice which is constantly moving. The great outlet for the masses of ice advancing from the pole toward the Atlantic is the sea between Spitzbergen and Greenland.

LIGHTNING BOLT FATAL TO THREE

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (AP)—Five bathers, injured by a freak lightning bolt that killed three other persons and stunned 15 in a crowd of 80,000 at Jacob Ritz park beach, remained in a hospital today for treatment.

The bolt struck yesterday out of a clear sky and raced 300 yards along the thronged beach front, throwing thousands of bathers into a panic.

"There was a blinding flash and a smell of electrified air," said Rutli Melton, 20, one of the injured. "People all around me began toppling over like ten-pins and I felt myself falling too."

The dead, all from Brooklyn, were Cesar Ceto, 38, Peter Cava, 23, and his wife, Mary, 24.
