A Mountain Grows In Ozona

by W. Evart White

No use crying over spilt milk, the saying goes. But I'm goint to cry a little anyway. I'm going to cry over spilt rock rather than milk.

Interstate Highway 10 construction in the south center of Ozona has created an unsightly, inconvenient and ridiculously huge mountain of rock traversing the entire distance across town. Not only is it unsightly, it is town divisive in that it chops off four or five streets that formerly crossed the area linking the south and north sides of town. Now only two narrow ways remain for contacts between the two areas of town, the Highway 163 underpass, which, by the way, caused all the rock-fill elevation, and the Avenue B underpass through

The new, long, skinny mountain is not pretty to look at, it cuts off the view of the north from south and of south from north, and it cuts off the summer breezes for residents of the o much for what's not good about it. Talk was that the highway traversing the city's center and allowing a number of exits to lure travelers to stop would be good for town business. That may or may not be true but it's a reasonable assumption. Anyway, most of us were pleased that it did not by-pass the town and thus remove nearly any chance for tourist trade.

But I daresay that no one visualized the type of construction we have wound up with. Most had presumed that the highway would be elevated through town---over two draws and a highway---not lifted with a 17-foot high mountain of earth and rock. Most highway construction in cities like Dallas, Fort Worth, Waco, Houston, etc., is elevated, high enough to allow ground level traffic to proceed unimpeded.

That was the type of engineering all of us had hoped for. spent by the State Highway Department engineering crew in frawing plans for the interstate. We have no way of knowing the difference in costs of aerial and earth fill construction, but after undergoing the months and months of blasting, pounding and zooming dust-raising dump trucks and other forms of huge machinery clanging up and down, we can hardly believe it would have been much more expensive and certainly would have been worth a great deal more to have

Budget Blues

WASHINGTON-The Congressional alternative to fiscal responsibility, the Senate Budget Committee, has come up with its proposed budget for the next fiscal year

Sit down, Relax. Take a deep breath. It's for $365 billion. That's right, $365 billion. That's an increase of $50 billion, or 16 per cent, over federal spending during the current fiscal year, and it will result in a budget deficit of at least $70 billion.

Congressional liberals say this is holding the line on spending. Let's hope they never take it into their heads to bust the budget.

What are the likely consequences of so huge a budget, containing so large a deficit?

First, the federal government's share of the gross national product (GNP) is certain to grow. That almost certainly means there will be less for you and me.

GNP is the sum total of the value of all the goods and services produced in the country. If the economic "pie" remains static, the bigger the slice the government takes, the less is left over for business and consumers. This is because government has no income-producing resources of its own. Every dollar it spends it has to take from us in taxes, or take from the nation's capital markets by issuing Increasing federal outlays have so far not lowered our standard of living, because the economic pie has been increasing. The production of goods and services by business and labor has been outstripping increasing taxation. But this is likely to change. Taxes and indirect costs forced on business by government regulations are increasing faster than business' ability to increase production.

The danger threatened by huge budget outlays is magnified by the size of the proposed deficit. Government has only two ways to make up the deficit. It can borrow the money, which would just about dry up the money available to lend to businesses which need it to increase production. Or it can print more money, which would set off another round of skyrocketing inflation.

The only real answer to our economic problems is to cut government spending. This will be hard on special interest groups that have come to depend on federal largesse rather than on honest labor to earn their living. And it will be hard on politicians who have come to depend on those interest groups for votes and campaign contributions. But it must be done. The other courses lead to disaster.

I intend to fight for a much lower budget level, the that would impose a moratorium on new spending programs and would put reasonable ceilings on existing ones. I know I'll hear from the special interest groups on this. I hope also to hear from you.

AUSTIN - The Legislature is racing toward its closing date with most of its major assignments unfinished but with reasonable hopes of finishing many of them. School finance debate began this week in the House, while the Senate Education Committee wrestled with its version of how to help equalize educational opportunity.

When all is said and done, bill in the $600 million range seems likely to emerge, with school teachers assured of a starting pay of $7,600 to $8,000 a year.

The Senate has passed a bill to establish a threemember statewide utilities regulatory commission, and the action this week switches to the House where a rival measure is pending.

Conference committees will get the job of working out differences between the two houses over both school finance and utilities regulation. Final agreement on a utilities bill is a reasonable expectation.

Two-year budgets have now been drawn by both the Senate Finance and House Appropriations Committees. Both are expected to leave close to $600 million in unobligated revenues-most of which will go into the schools. Some expect Comptroller Bob Bullock to revise his income forecasts to show $677 million in unspent revenues over and above the budget.

Qualified veterans can now borrow up to $15,000 to purchase a minimum of 10 acres of land under the State Veterans Land Program.

A new law raised the limit from $10,000. The down pay-lid of the motor well has been raised and ample time allowed for all gasoline fumes to exit. That's fine—as far as it goes!

But, outboards have been known to catch fire too. That's where the small boat owner is concerned. Here's where spilled gasoline can be the trap. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Dear Editor, in recent weeks, the Reading and Bates Drilling Company tried to pass through the Lima Cemetery Road. The Mexican-American community objected to such a move. Then, Monterrey Street was considered when the people objected, I would like to bring to the readers' attention the determination of the Mexican-American people to oppose the entrance of the drilling company through either Lima Cemetery Road or Monterrey.

We would not like to use strong measures but if such a time comes, we intend to form picket lines and even stand in the path of the trucks to stop them from passing.

I hope that this will not be necessary and that the company will find another way of passing to their field of work. I just want to let the rest of the community know how we, the Mexican-Americans, feel about this problem.

Mideast: The Next Act

The dangerous Middle East situation is looking no better. Urgent warnings are again sounding that if there is no movement toward peace by mid-summer another war will break out. The communique following Syrian-Russian talks in Moscow calls the situation "explosive" and calls for yet another increase in the already huge Syrian military build-up. The Egyptian foreign minister warns that the Arabs will not be patient forever. It is hard to find anyone who is optimistic.

The case for war rests upon grim fundamentals. The Kissinger peace mission failed because it ran head on into these fundamentals. Egyptian President Sadat cannot give a categorical pledge of non-belligerency to Israel without a full Israeli withdrawal from all captured Arab lands and satisfaction of the claims of the Palestinians to their own state. If he did so, he would be accused of betrayal of the Arab cause and would almost certainly be assassinated. And on his part, Israel's Prime Minister Rabin cannot make even a partial withdrawal from the Sinai without getting such a non-belligerency pledge. If he did so, he would be turned out of office. Israel's generals argue that whatever line Israel withdraws to will be the starting point for the

Neither side will yield to the other because in each side's eyes its position is wholly just.

Given the circumstances, there is only one way that we can suggest that would offer a reasonable prospect for avoiding war. That would be for the U.S. to say to Israel, "If you attack the Arabs, you will find the U.S. on the side of the Arabs." And for the U.S. to say to the Arabs, "If you attack Israel, you will find the U.S. on the side of the Israel Realistically, it does not seem likely that the U.S. will do this. And so, realistically, we must join those who fear that a new war, not peace, may be the next act in the Mideast drama.

High Plains Eliminates Castor Beans

AUSTIN-Farmers on the High Plains are getting out of the castor bean business.

According to Agriculture Commissioner John C. White, farmers have not indicated intentions to plant any acreage in the castor plant in 1975.

The High Plains is the only area in Texas where castor beans have been raised. The oil of the castor bean is used in the production of castor oil paints, varnishes, hair oils and hydraulic fluids.

Production of the plant, which has never been a popular crop among High Plains farmers, decreased significantly last year. Only 800 acres were harvested in 1974 compared to 11,000 a year earlier. White explained that the high prices commanded by cotton, grain sorghum and soybeans in 1973 and 1974 helped to draw farmers away from the relatively poorly-prices castor bean.

On the whole, the entire country seems to be moving away from castor bean production. Most castor oil is obtained from South America where the beans are grown and crushed into oil before importation into the country.

Finally our trees have shed the old frozen leaves and are almost filled out again. The mesquite is at its most colorful yellow-green stage, displaying its lovely lacy texture. To check for freeze damage, scratch bark and look for signs of life undemeath. Healthy wood will be green and moist beneath the bark. Dead wood is brown, tan or black and looks dry. Cut back dead wood to live growth or to healthy side shoots just beginning to emerge down the stem. Severely damaged plants may take two seasons to grow back to normal. Several have called about their magnolia trees losing so many leaves and somewhat wilted tender new growth. Evergreens naturally lose leaves before new leaves appear, suitable--rather than trying but the freeze may have damaged new growth, causing them to fall as well as the old leaves. The trees are putting on new leaves again, so don't be too disturbed. If you haven't its home there are several fertilized your tree with magnolia fertilizer that is available, this should be done now and watered in well. Be sure not to use too much.

If you want some fragrant flowers for planting near a door or patio, choose from perunias, four o'clock, phlox, snapdragon, scabiosa, sweet alvssum or dianthus which has a pleasing spicy fragrance.

There are many new varieties of sunflowers to be used in sunny borders as background or screening plants, in addition to the tall varieties. there are 15-inch dwarfs (Dwarf Sungold) to more moderate-size plants 4 and 5 feet tall (Sungold). Flowers also vary from small heads with single rows of petals to fully double flowers. Colors vary from yellow to chestnut red and almost a pure white.

Another annual that may be little-known is the matricaria. it is a striking bedding plant that offers quite a show of during the summer. It likes full sun or filtered sunlight and rich, friable soil.

That's the way Grandma described things that were absolutely clear. Religion was one of these!

Of course, she knew that theologians debate certain subjects. She some; times lamented the fact there were so many denominations-which in her day weren't cooperating as they are now. And Granny was fully aware that a few individuals claim to be atheists or agnostics

But the idea that God created us ... loves us ... seeks us ... saves us. To Granny that was plain as the nose on your face.

As Granny often added: Even a child knows that! Every Sunday millions of them are proving her right.

The energy committee on which I serve is preparing a major comprehensive energy bill. One part of the bill would establish average fuel efficiency for car manufacturers by 1980. The total production of a manufacturer in that year would have to average 20.5 mpg or else the manufacturer would have to pay a penalty. Thus, for example, if one car averaging Sometimes with the many 17.5 mpg is produced, another

> Under the original proposal, trucks under 5 tons would have cars. This seemed to me grossly unfair and unwise. Trucks are intended to haul heavy loads, to cover rough terrain, and to be service vehicles that primarily move goods rather than people. Therefore, the engines and exle ratios of trucks are geared for power rather than simply for fuel economy. Trucks might have to have engines too small to move the loads for which they are required if they had to meet the same fuel economy standards as cars.

Therefore, I offered an amendment exempting all trucks from the specified standards for cars. The amendment passed unanimously in committee and I am confident that pick-up trucks can now be designed and manufactured to carry loads rather than just transport people. Since there are 227,564 pick-ups driven by rural Texans compared with only 162,343 cars. this amendment, minor as it might seem in the national scheme of things, could have a major impact for our district. I believe that with this amendment. Americans can expect both more economical cars and trucks that fit 000000000

Some serious talk about West Texas gas By K. B. "Tex." Watson, Pioneer presiden

> Living in the middle of an area known for its abundant gas deposits, it's hard to imagine West Texans threatened by a shortage of natural gas. However, there is the possibility that governmental regulations could create a shortage here. If we are not vigilant, we could see much of our gas supply allocated to other areas. Or we could see price controls make it impractical for producers to drill additional wells in this area. What can the average citizen do to prevent that from happening? I would suggest that he be aware of the problem and support Pioneer's efforts to maintain our gas reserves.

Brought to you By Lillian Brown

An old theory in furnishing the north part of town, while was that rooms had to be decorated around some big center of interest such as a picture window, a fireplace or a large sofa, etc. But, actually, you can use a center of interest that includes none of these major items,

One thought would be two love seats, or two chairs, and a table in a setting with an area rug and special lighting making it a successful "decorative island",

Or, you could use a long, low buffet accessorized with a lamp and pictures for an outstanding center of interest. If you like books, you might consider having not one, but two or more bookcases or cabinets full of books as a center of interest.

Sometimes a surprise element can add a wonderful center of interest such as a distinctive piece of furniture, outstanding in its own right and placed in an eye-catching area.

There are many pieces of furniture and decorating ideas that can be used to add a different center of interest to a room -- and make a room more appealing and more beautiful. If you'd like to explore this further, why not stop in and look around here. We'll be happy to see you, and you can browse to your heart's content,
