A Thought WORTH REMEMBERING

There are two worlds—the world that we can measure with line and rule, and the world that we feel with our hearts and imagination. —HUNT.

There being no immediate prospect for street paving in Ozona, it strikes us that some temporary method might be devised to settle the dust on principal streets in Ozona. In addition to the personal discomfort resulting from dust, thousands of dollars worth of damage is done each year to household furnishings, to merchandise in stock in Ozona stores and to machinery by the dust.

Oiling streets to keep dust from flying has been found successful in many places and no doubt would prove of great benefit here. A simple means of oiling the streets with very little expense would be to have a pipe, in which small holes have been drilled, fitted into an oil barrel and mounted on a truck. The waste oil from garages in the city could be utilized in oiling the streets and this could be obtained without cost. A few hours, time every week or two weeks would no doubt be sufficient to lay the dust permanently and thus save the discomfort and loss resulting from the flying clouds of dust.

A princess from the realm of Ozona has been chosen to represent this city at the coronation to be held at Del Rio during the annual convention of the Sheep and Goat Raisers Association to be held in that city July 31, August 1 and 2. On account of the short time between now and that meeting, it was necessary to act at once on the appointment of the young lady for this event, but a happy choice was made and the city will be well represented.

Now another choice must be made, this time for a duchess to represent Ozona at the coronation ceremonies to be held during the West Texas Exposition at San Angelo in September. Officials of the San Angelo Fair organization are anxious that this choice be made by the middle of August. A little more time is available for this selection than was that of Del Rio, but the time is not too long at that. Consequently, The Stockman is starting this week with a new ballot on the front page of this issue for voting on the Ozona representative at this ceremony. Ballot boxes will be placed at convenient locations in the downtown section and everybody is urged to vote for some young lady for this honor. An escort is also to be selected either chosen by the young lady who is elected or by popular ballot, the method for this choice not having been decided. Clip the ballot from the front page of The Stockman now and fill it out with your choice. Then the next time you are downtown drop it in one of the boxes which will be provided.

THE NEW MONEY

There has been a mad scramble on the banks to acquire some of the new, unfamiliar, attractive currency. The treasury is prepared to meet the demand only to a limited extent, because of the big problem of distribution.

So if you have not any of these new bills yet, don't be worried. Twelve months from now the old bills will be a curiosity, not the new ones.

The new ones, by the way, are expected to save the government about $1,500,000 a year, due to their smaller size. The new bills are more convenient in every way, make counterfeiting more difficult and are more durable than the old bills, which will improve the sanitary condition of the money we handle.

ANOTHER USE FOR NEWSPAPERS

What is more useful than a newspaper? When new, it supplies news and advertising that give its readers essential information. When old, it is used to wrap things in, in place of a tablecloth at picnics, etc. Now another use has been found that should interest every housewife.

May Kiehlme, of the South Dakota State College, has discovered that old newspapers make an excellent substitute for moth-proof bags for storing clothing during the summer months. She says if clothing is wrapped carefully in several thicknesses of newspaper, protection is provided at very small cost. Newspapers make especially good moth-proof wrappings because printer's ink is objectionable to moths.

She recommends that garments be dry cleaned before being stored away for the summer, since soiled clothing attracts moths more than clean clothing. Garments should also be brushed to remove moth eggs which may have already been deposited. Thoroughly sun the garments—then put them away—and, if you are inclined to believe in the efficacy of Miss Kiehlme's idea, use the newspaper.

(P. S. Newspapers also keep businesses from being moth-eaten. The secret lies in wise, effective advertising.)

BIBLE THOUGHT AND PRAYER

NECESSITY OF A SPIRITUAL BIRTH

John 3:3, 6, 8. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God. 6. That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit is spirit. 8. The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

John 1:12, 13. As many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name; 13. Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

PRAYER: I will rise now and seek Him whom my soul loveth.

Marquette

BUILT BY BUICK BODY BY FISHER A GUARANTEE OF EXTRA VALUE

"Built by Buick"—only the Marquette in the moderate-price field can offer that priceless recommendation. This remarkable new six provides in every feature the unstinted goodness that has forever established Buick in the public mind as a master builder. Extra quality is everywhere—to provide extraordinary brilliance in performance, unfailing dependability in service, and unlimited satisfaction in ownership.

On its staunch and sturdy chassis the Marquette carries closed Bodies by Fisher—the latest expression of the artistry and craftsmanship of the world's greatest body builder. Smart, low-slung lines—the last word in modern good taste. Interior and exterior finishes of pleasantly blending colors. Tailoring and appointments of exceptional quality and completeness. And such value features as a remarkable new non-glare windshield, to be found on no other automobile; adjustable driver's seat and beautiful new rubberized mohair upholstery, waterproof, dustproof and wearproof—shown for the first time on Marquette.

The great resources and unparalleled facilities of Buick and Fisher have combined to provide a greater measure of extra value than any car of comparable price offers.

At the first opportunity see and drive the Marquette. Check every feature, make every test.

The Marquette is easy to own. Talk to your dealer about it. You will be surprised at how economically you can buy a Marquette on the liberal G. M. A. C. terms.

EIGHTH INSTALLMENT

WHAT HAPPENED BEFORE

The Sheridan Dramatic Club, of which Tom Bilbeck, the narrator, Maryella, the girl he cares for, and Jim Cooper, his rival, are members, start a performance of Pygmalion and Calatea at the Old Soldiers' Home, but are interrupted by a fire. During the rehearsals Tom Bilbeck is accused by the husband of one of the actors, Mr. Hemmingway, of being in love with his wife.

Riding away from the scene of the ill-fated play in their costumes and overcoats, the group of players is held up by two escaped convicts, one of whom is captured by Bilbeck after a struggle.

The captured thief is tied to a chair at the Old Soldier's Home. Unable to leave the home as the car refuses to budge, the players must stay there, and Mr. Hemmingway, hearing this over the phone, says he is coming right to the home—as he is suspicious of his wife and Bilbeck. Meanwhile the Sheriff arrives.

He stopped in amazement as he saw our group.

"You've got a lot of prisoners, ain't you?" he commented.

"These aren't all prisoners," the colonel explained hastily. "There's only one."

He led the way to Bill who, trussed up in his chair, had fallen asleep peacefully.

The entire situation was explained to the sheriff while he peeled off a layer or two of clothing and revealed himself as a small old man, with watery blue eyes and considerable foliage in front of his face. His beard was white, except where it was stained with tobacco-juice.

"If you don't mind," said the sheriff, "we won't go back until morning. It's storming so hard out now that I doubt if we could get through. I'll just put my horse in the stable."

"You can't," said the colonel. "The stable is burnt up."

A compromise was effected by quartering the horse in the cellar. As it happened, there was an outside runway leading to the basement, down which supplies were usually wheeled in trucks. After considerable persuasion the horse was induced to negotiate this and was tied to a post in one of the small store rooms below.

That done, the colonel assigned us quarters for the night. Fortunately, there were enough vacant rooms so that each of the ladies could have an apartment, while the men were billeted on cots in the general dormitory, where most of the veterans slept.

CHAPTER VIII.

"Help!"

Mrs. Hemmingway refused to retire until her husband came. I offered to sit up with her, but she declined vehemently.

"You know what John would think if he found you and me sitting up alone together," she explained.

I agreed with her heartily so we fixed a good warm fire in the stove and left her alone to welcome her spouse. It would be only a few hours until morning, and I did not bother to undress, but threw myself exhausted, on the cot.

I did not sleep, however. The storm outside was making a continuous racket around the eaves and corners of the building that nearly drowned the chromatic snores of the veterans.

The excitement of the evening still kept my blood racing and my nerves at high tension. I listened for the opening of the door which would indicate that Mr. Hemmingway had arrived.

The gorgeous slumbers of our country's ex-defenders began to fray my temper. What right had everybody to sleep while I struggled in vain to woo Morpheus?

I might have become accustomed to a regular snore, but there was one—Comrade Pirk Henwether, for a dollar—who gurgled in his sleep. The exasperating part about it was that he didn't do it all the time. Only occasionally above the diapason of his fellows came this unearthly gurgle, as if dishwater were disappearing down a sink.

I tried to calculate the interval between explosions and finally thought I had him timed to twenty-eight seconds. Then he fooled me by missing on one cylinder and remaining quiet a full minute. It was almost a relief when he burst forth again.

Something had disarranged his timer, for he became erratic from now on, sometimes firing twice in succession and sometimes failing me for two and three revolutions at a time. His compression was wonderful. The trouble was in his spark.

At last my brain grew curdled with futile exasperation. I may have dozed, or possibly I had a fever delirium. I don't know. Anyway, it was not a refreshing sleep that came to me and it was crowded with nightmares.

Suddenly I opened my eyes and listened intently to a new sound that had been beating against my eardrums for several minutes during my doze. A series of irregular tappings, accompanied by a low moaning, became audible above the steady roar of the storm. My relaxed nerves became alert once more.

MAKE SUMMER A SEASON OF BEAUTY

Will you make your summer a season of greater beauty—or will you let it be a period of neglect, when your good looks "go off" and your greatest beauty is submurged by the effects of exposure to sun and wind?

It can be one of two things for you—this summer season. It can be a time of reclaiming beauty, or it can be a time when you lose much of the charm and youth you now have. It is for you to decide to make it a period of beauty-reconstruction. Begin now to plan a summer beauty program that will add to your attractiveness and bring you an autumn completely free of summer regrets.

In spite of the disadvantages of summer—the weathering drying dangers of sun and heat-fatigue—there are some distinct advantages, from a standpoint of personal beauty. First of all, the summer is a splendid time to improve your figure, whether you want to reduce or to gain. For exercise will do either, and the very exercises that you take naturally are good reducing or gaining measures. Swimming, the favorite of summer sports, is perfect for developing beautiful, graceful bodies. And, golf, tennis, riding, rowing, walking and dancing are all excellent aids to health and beauty.

Then, too, the diet that most of us prefer at this season is of the type that benefits both figures and complexions. Fresh vegetables, salads, fruits and cool drinks made with fruit juices all do wonders for your looks and your dispositions in warm weather.

If you are trying to reduce, live for six weeks on fruits, vegetables and dark, coarse breads, and see what inroads it will make on your girth. If you wish to gain, add to this diet plenty of eggs, milk, cream and cereals. But in any case, try to do without meat in warm weather and all rich foods and sweets. Drink lots of water—it's good for your bodily health and your complexion. And drink fruit drinks—particularly lemonade—or ginger ale. They are excellent for you and are both easy and pleasant to take on a summer's day.

Above all—protect your skin—

that is the first law of summer use—a sun and windproof cream complexion care. We will suppose that you are carrying out your regular program of cleansing, clearing and toning, daily, with the proper preparations. Then add to it one or more protectives. If you "go in" for outdoor sports strenuously, —HELENA RUBENSTEIN.

1930 Buick Has New Body Lines

The 1930 Buick makes its debut this week on the showroom floors of approximately 4,000 dealers throughout the country and, according to factory officials at Flint, Michigan, this new creation will prove one of the outstanding sensations of the year in both performance and appearance.

The Buick line, as in former years, is divided into three series. The wheelbase and the horsepower of all models of the three series have been increased. The wheelbase of the six models of the 40 series has been increased from 116 to 118 inches and the engine has been stepped up to 80½ horsepower.

Wheelbase on the two models in the series 53 line is increased from 121 inches to 124 inches and on the six models of 60 series from 129 inches to 132 inches. Models in the 50 and 60 series have an engine which will develop 99 horsepower. All models in all series have an actual speed well up in the seventies.

In addition to lengthening the wheelbase, the car has been built lower. Body lines and contours have been refined, the shape of the radiator revised, the margin of the radiator shell diminished and thermo-statically operated shutters added to the front. The result is a car of unusual beauty, sleek lines and obvious comfort. The body bears the stamp of Fisher craftsmanship.

Many mechanical advances have been embodied in the 1930 Buick. A steering wheel road shock eliminating device is one of them and this feature, coupled with a fully adjustable worm and roller type steering assembly, makes the new car singularly easy to steer and handle at high speeds on the open road and in slow moving heavy traffic.

Semi-elliptic springs and double acting shock absorbers are used, together with four wheel inter-expansion controlled Servo brakes, redesigned transmission and clutch, improved rubber motor mountings and a wider and sturdier chassis frame. A sloping non-glass windshield is another advancement incorporated in the new Buick.

Performance tests, conducted over a period of several months at the General Motors Proving Ground, have demonstrated that its speed, hill climbing ability and riding comfort set a new all-around precedent in the field of automobile travel.

Legislature Gives Livestock Industry Big Appropriations

By Raymond Brooks
In S. A. Times

AUSTIN, July 19.—The livestock industry of Texas has been given greater recognition by the legislature in appropriations made by the session just closing than in any previous year, the appropriations bills indicate.

Earlier in the year the legislature authorized uniform statewide tick eradication work, subject to cooperation of counties. Funds have been provided not only for tick eradication work but for other major phases of furthering the livestock industry.

Heading pleas of the sheep and goat raisers, the legislature has made $70,000 a year for the next two years for control and extermination of predatory animals.

This will supplant the old bounty system of paying for scalps of wolves, and permit scientific, consistent and continuous trapping and extermination work by experts, in which the federal government will cooperate with the state.

The legislature granted the livestock sanitary commission $1,063,640 for its work in the next two years, including the predatory animal item. This includes $25,000 for dip material to be furnished free for dipping of animals to be shipped out of quarantine zones. It includes $90,000 additional for dip material used by the sanitary board. It includes $601,549 in salaries, which includes $18,000 for five district supervisors, $525,000 for the inspectors who will carry forward the work in every section; $14,400 for four assistant veterinarians, $4,000 for a chief assistant veterinarian, $6,000 for chief veterinarian; $4,800 for chief scabies inspector, $4,800 for chief tick inspector.

An item of $30,000 was placed in the bill as indemnity to owners of tubercular cattle which may be destroyed. The commission was given $14,000 for investigation of contagious diseases.

Working in cooperation with the livestock sanitary commission, scope of activities of the A. & M. ranch experiment station at Sonora expanded. The station was given $25,700 for two years, and an additional veterinarian was authorized at a salary of $2,400, so that when the veterinarian is called out to investigate threatened disease epidemics the valuable experiments at the station will be continued.

The state department of agriculture was given appropriations of $147,110 for the two years to carry forward its same work.

Tables Turned After 15 Years

"Sargon turned the tables for me after I had tried for 15 years to get well of stomach trouble. Now I am gaining every day. I went from 119 to 139 pounds, a gain of 20 pounds in three weeks on just three bottles. That's pretty good for a man 62 years old."

"I suffered day and night for almost 15 years and spent many hard earned dollars for medicines, but none of them reached my case until I got Sargon. I felt weak and sick from morning until night. I would just drag myself around but now I feel years younger and can keep going all day. I eat anything I want and have no trace of stomach trouble, headaches or dizzy spells any more."

"The Sargon Soft Mass Pills straightened out my liver and I no longer suffer from biliousness and constipation. It sure is great to be feeling like my old self again and I will always praise the Sargon treatment. There never was any medicine equal to it."

JINGLE BELLS

What was it?
The irregular thumping was repeated. It sounded far away, and yet strangely near, as if it might be in the walls of the building. Was it a spirit rapping?
I had never believed in such things, but then I had never had proof of any kind to convince me. One hair-raising supernatural incident will make a spiritualist of anybody.
A sudden sound of some one strangling made me sit up in bed. This last was in the room, so I soon decided that it was my friend the eccentric snorer, who quite by accident had hit upon a new specialty.
But the thumpings and moanings continued. I threw off the covers and got out of bed, determined to investigate. I had no matches—there were no pockets in my tights; but I felt my way to the door, barking my shins only once on an iron cot.
Faintly came a cry for help.
I made haste. I am a chivalrous fool; no one ever yells for assistance without getting it from me. I rush in blindly where even angels would pause to put on goloshes.
I stumbled down the stairs. Came again the faint cry:
"Help!"
It was Mrs. Hemmingway's voice.
I peered in at the door of the great living-room, which was faintly illuminated by a single oil-lamp on the table—the electric current was supplied only until one o'clock, I discovered later. The room was chill with the penetrating cold of a winter's morning when the fires have reached their lowest ebb.

Mrs. Hemmingway was walking up and down frantically screaming, "Help!" every time the thumping and moaning would recur.
Suddenly she saw me as I advanced out of the darkness. As she did an almost inarticulate cry of desperate fear escaped her lips and she pitched forward.
I jumped quickly enough to catch her. She had fainted.
While I looked around anxiously for a place to deposit her at full length I became aware of a new sound—a rapping at the front door. I was too busy to bother about it then. I picked up Mrs. Hemmingway bodily and started for the table where the lamp was. In the absence of a couch I could put her on that.
I had nearly reached it when the outer door was flung violently open, admitting a swirl of flying flakes. With them came a gentleman who strode in unannounced. He was wearing a derby hat tied onto his head with a muffler and was otherwise ineffectually bundled against the storm in a black broadcloth overcoat with the collar turned up. On his feet were a pair of snow-shoes.
"Good Heavens!" I exclaimed. "Who are you?"
"John Hemmingway, confound you!" he growled, stepping toward me with upraised fist and tripping over his own snowshoes, which he had forgotten he had on.
That gave me a second to place my burden on the long table before he could reach me. Just in time I straightened up to find myself in his grasp.
We wrestled back and forth silently. Twice he kicked me in my bruised shin with his snowshoes. The only way I could prevent a repetition of those tactics was to stand on the broad webbing of the shoes myself. As I weighed something over two hundred and effectually anchored him to the floor.

While we stood embracing one another in a deadlock a low moan escaped the lips of Mrs. Hemmingway.
"Hadn't you better take care of your wife?" I panted, apprehensive lest she roll off the table.
"You seem to be able and willing to do that," he hissed vindictively. "You home-wrecker!"
"You're mistaken," I returned hastily.
"Of course," he sneered. "I didn't walk in just now and find her in your arms at four o'clock in the morning! I only thought it was you! In reality it was some one else and you were up in your own room fast asleep!"
To emphasize his remarks he hauled off with his right arm, which I had carelessly allowed to escape me, and belted me energetically in the ear.
I don't know what might have happened further between us had we not been separated by a willing assortment of half-dressed old gentlemen.
"Stop this racket!" shouted the sheriff, displaying his star conspicuously. "I represent the law and order around here and I'm going to have peace!"
I was dragging off from Hemmingway's snowshoes. We stood glaring at one another. It is impossible instantly to forget a ringing blow on the ear. I find, even if it is delivered by a very good friend. On his side I suppose that his resentment toward me was at least partially justified by appearances. It was hard to think of those things just then, however, and as a matter of fact, I didn't.
"Good morning, Mr. Hemmingway," greeted Jim Cooper, arriving in what I thought at first was an abbreviated sleeping-garment, but which I later discovered was his Greek tunic. "Glad you got here at last. Why—what the deuce—?"

His glance had rested on the prostrate form of Mrs. Hemmingway.
"Mrs. Hemmingway fainted," I explained.
"Oh, I see," he considered thoughtfully. "I suppose it's all for the best. I imagine that is the only way any one could get any rest in this institution."
Evidently Jim had noticed the snoring too.
Mrs. Hemmingway opened her beautiful blue eyes.
"Oh, John!" she exclaimed joyfully as she recognized her husband even in a derby hat and snowshoes.
He made no move to respond to the entreaty in her voice.
"Why, what's the matter?" she pleaded.
"You know very well," he returned savagely. "When I arrived I found you in Tom Bilbeck's arms."
"Me?" she said interrogatively.
"Impossible. It must have been Maryella you saw."
"It was not," he hastily disclaimed a voice in the rear of the group.
My heart sank. I was in hopes that I would be spared Maryella's participation in this scene.
"I don't know what happened," Mrs. Hemmingway went on, slightly bewildered, "but I'm sure that I can explain everything."
While they were talking the floor trembled violently and there was a muffled crash beneath us. Soon followed a prolonged breaking of glass as if a brick chimney had fallen through a skylight.
CHAPTER IX.
The Gay Deceiver
Conjecture was superfluous. The disturbance was in the basement. We piled down by the inside stairway.

Some one had been thoughtful enough to bring the lamp from the table. By its light we discovered a wreck that impoverishes description. The post to which the sheriff's horse had been tied had been torn out bodily and a tier of shelves containing several hundred glass jars of fruit which was supported by the post had collapsed and slid its burden to the cement floor.

The horse, whinnying continually to himself, had retreated to a corner of the basement followed by the uprooted post.

GUIDEPOSTS TO Health & Happiness

By Bernarr Macfadden

For several years now the country has been swept by a reducing craze. Listen to any group of women talking, and invariably the conversation turns to reducing. They are, of course, referring to the reduction of weight, but in most instances health or reduced strength or reduced brain power—and sometimes death—accompanies reduced weight.

That is because women are so eager to be in fashion that they become indifferent and reckless toward everything except what the scales show.

No woman has any right to attempt to reduce her weight until she has learned from experts whether or not a reduction of weight is desirable or safe in her particular case. We are not all alike; some of us require less food and more exercise than others. No one is up to par physically or well formed unless he is carrying around the amount of flesh that his bony structure requires. All women were not intended to have boyish forms or sylphlike grace and it is folly for all women to try and attain them. Often the woman who has decided of her own accord that she is too "fat" actually needs a few extra pounds to give her body the proper contours. I have seen women who were but little more than human hairpins talk about reducing!

But the lazy woman who desires to reduce her weight is in the gravest danger of all—for she is the one who wants to get something for nothing. She wants to get rid of surplus flesh and have a beautifully rounded form and the accompanying vitality without exertion or self-denial. It is women like her who have encouraged men to put on the market expensive, powerful and destructive pills, which guarantee the desired reduction in a phenomenally short time. She might better save her money and buy a mild form of slow poison. Any woman will lose weight quickly if she begins to put into her system drugs designed to fight the health-giving propensities of good wholesome food.

"Eat all the pastry and candy you want," the reducing pill manufacturer advises. "Let our Sure-Thin Pills do the work."

They do their work, all right, only it is a deadly form of work that often causes nervous breakdowns, melancholia and permanently ruins the digestive powers and assimilation. The vital organs give way next—and often the coveted sylphlike form is borne off to the cemetery in a wooden box. Bath powders in which the patient is told to empty one of the powders into a steaming hot bath and lie there anywhere from half an hour to an hour are equally dangerous. They cause heart ailments and leave the flesh flabby and unsightly.

This is not exaggeration and I am no alarmist; I am citing truths, well known to every physician. The only safe, permanent and satisfactory way to achieve a beautiful figure is through hard work—regular exercise and an intelligent diet, rigidly adhered to, that provides sufficient nourishment to the bony structure of the body. No other method can be adopted without serious danger to health and to life.

"WOBBLIES"

Wear and What to Do

You see tires "wobbling" on many cars—perhaps yours too, are guilty. If so, the rubber is being "wiped" off the tread—you'll soon have worn spots in the center.

Tires "out of line"—a less noticeable condition—drag with a side motion as they revolve. Rubbing the tread with a file is just as healthy for a tire.

Many things may cause your wheels to track improperly. Often the cure is simple. It's expensive to neglect. Without charge we'll gladly test the alignment of your front and rear wheels. Drive in any time—we have a special instrument for the purpose. It requires only a few moments. You may save yourself many dollars in avoidable tire wear.

You have your oil and water checked regularly—why not give your tires the same fair chance to perform? Goodyears, we believe, have the toughest treads and the most miles built into them of any tires today. Even Goodyears, however, can have their lives shortened by lack of attention.

RANCHERS MEET ON PREDATORY ANIMAL WORK

Several ranchmen had mentioned as a menace to the livestock industry, has been known to do some damage but he expressed the hope that this noble bird would not cease to soar through American skies. Its control must be a local project, he declared. Mr. Reddington outlined briefly some of the bureau's studies of migratory birds and gave some interesting results of observations of the long flights made by such birds each year, and pointed out the department's work in providing refuges in different parts of the country.

"I bespeak to you the interest of thousands of people in the United States in the conservation of bird life and especially in the hundreds of specimens that may go the way of the dodo birds unless the work of our department is continued," Mr. Reddington said.

Congressman Hudspeth, before introducing the next speaker, declared that predatory animal control work used to be a joke in Congress. He recalled a sally made by Congressman Mann of Illinois when this matter was up for discussion.

"Why does Texas, with all her resources and wealth, want the federal government to help her kill her wolves," Congressman Mann was quoted. "Let Texas kill her own wolves."

"Then why doesn't Illinois kill her own corn borers. We have just appropriated ten millions of dollars for you," Congressman replied. "It is the same proposition," Congressman Hudspeth cited this incident to show the misunderstanding that is prevalent in other parts of the country he said. It is a matter for educational propaganda before the issue is finally disposed of in the manner that it should be.

Dr. L. C. Whitehead was next called upon to give some facts concerning the prairie dog and rat control work in the state. Dr. Whitehead said that there had been a total of 166,800 pounds of poisoned grain distributed over a total of 337,000 acres in Texas during the past year in prairie dog extermination work. Crockett County in the last four months has distributed 21,000 pounds, he said. He called attention to the damage that is done by the jack rabbit in reducing the carrying capacity of the range and invited West Texas ranchmen to call on his department for assistance in controlling this pest.

Stanley P. Young, in charge of wolf extermination, declared that his forces are accounting for the destruction of approximately 70,000 wolves a year. He described some of the more famous wolf chases over the country and compared his field men to the Northwest Mounted Police, that when they go after an animal they usually get him.

"Nothing would please us more than to have Congress appropriate the money so that we could shoot it to Texas and do what we want to do," he declared, "but, of course, we must do the best we can on the money we get."

Besides the representatives of the federal bureau of Biological Survey the following Crockett County people were present: Judge and Mrs. Chas. E. Davidson, Mr. and Mrs. Pleas Childress and John William Childress, Mr. and Mrs. George Harrell, Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Graham, Mr. and Mrs. Evert White, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Kincaid, Ele Hagelstein, Mrs. Chris Hagelstein, E. B. Baggett, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Jones.
