THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1930.

Who's your tailor? Who's your grocer, your baker, your banker, your druggist, your clothier?

Any town is just as good as its business houses. If the business section of a town is run down at the heels, fine homes can not make it a good town, a good school is but slight recommendation for it in the eyes of the stranger and expensive automobiles are not impressive.

A town with up-to-date business houses, with a progressive air about them, offering clean, fresh stocks, is an impressive town. That town shows the visitor that its residents are proud of it, just as much as fine homes, well kept yards, paved streets, and the like show it. It shows the stranger that the residents of that town put their town first. It shows that the people of that town patronize their home merchants first, otherwise the business section could not make the showing it does.

If the people of a community do not patronize their home merchants those merchants can not remain in business. Especially is that true in a section like West Texas where there is no thickly settled farming section to draw from.

How long would Ozona remain a town if every business house in it should close its doors? There would be some fine homes abandoned in a very few days. Without the convenience of business concerns, nobody would want to live here.

What would amount to practicality the same thing would be for the business houses of Ozona to descend to such a level that they could not offer their patrons the class of service and quality of merchandise that the modern world demands. And if a merchant's patronage is confined to small purchases that can not be secured from the far away city, he will be starved to that point. If a town is to have up-to-date, neat and complete business houses, those business houses must prosper, they must enjoy a patronage that would justify a stock of such quantity and quality that you would want them to carry.

Now, there is no reason why Ozona people could not buy practically everything they need and use in Ozona. Among the everyday necessities and the common luxuries, what on is there that can not be purchased in Ozona? Ozona has six grocery stores. And yet there are some who buy groceries from city merchants. Ozona has five dry goods and ready-to-wear stores selling practically every nationally advertised brand of merchandise on the American market, and yet we venture the bet that thousands of dollars go out of this community every year to the city merchant for dry goods and ready-to-wear.

Ozona has a laundry operated by an Ozona man who has lived here all of his life. And yet a San Angelo laundry wagon comes to Ozona every day and gets work from Ozona people, charges the same prices as the Ozona laundry, except higher on some items, delivers the bundle later and collects "on the barrel head," money that never comes back to Ozona.

Ozona has two tailor shops, doing all classes of cleaning and pressing work, yet this same laundry wagon takes nearly as much work to the far-away city as is done here by the two shops. These two shops represent larger shops in the city boasting more equipment for particular jobs and if work comes to them that they can not do, they send it to experts and you get it done for the same price as you would if you sent it yourself.

Ozona has two drug stores selling everything that the city drug stores sell. Ozona has four garages doing general repairing, one specializing in battery and tire work. Ozona has one wholesale gas and oil station and eight filling stations. Ozona has two wholesale and retail feed stores. Ozona has two barber shops, five eating houses, two meat markets, two boot and saddle shops, a theater showing talking pictures with as good result as any theater in any city, and a print shop doing all classes of commercial printing and offering the service of the largest engraving house in the South. Ozona has two beauty shops, three hardware firms, three plumbing concerns, a lumber yard, two hotels, a first class bank, a newspaper, a paint shop, a machine shop, two electrical shops, two law offices, one abstract plant, dairy, poultry farm, one dentist and two M. D.'s, and the very latest—two miniature golf courses.

Ozona is a complete town, offering all of the modern business services, the same class and quality of merchandise that can be bought in the city, and when these firms enjoy their share of local patronage Ozona will be a better town than its biggest booster could hope for it.

COMMUNICATION

There are still a few places in the world where a man can be completely out of touch with everybody else in the world, but the number of such places is diminishing so rapidly that it is a safe prediction that before many years have passed we can go anywhere and still keep in communication with home.

Telephoning from railroad trains in motion is now an accomplished fact, in practical use. From any important train on the Canadian National Railways, for a fee of fifty cents in addition to the telephone charge the traveler can call up any telephone connected with the Bell system, which covers the United States, Mexico, most of Europe and a large part of Central and South America. Germany, France and other European countries have similar systems. America has no monopoly on inventive genius, nor are we always the first to put new devices into use. But there is no doubt that eventually this system of train-telephony will be adopted in the United States.

The large passenger liners now have facilities for telephoning from ship to shore and vice versa.

Sooner or later all passenger ships and probably freighters will be similarly equipped.

A portable radio broadcasting set has been devised which takes up such small space and weighs so little that future big game hunters, penetrating the African jungle, can easily take one along with them and so report their safety—or the opposite—to the folks at home every day.

Aircraft in flight now carry many of them—radio equipment for both "code" and voice communication with the earth. Admiral Byrd's Antarctic expedition was never out of communication.

The next step forward is television. That has now become practical. Our children probably, our grandchildren certainly, will be able to see around the world as easily as we talk around it today.

FOUR YEARS
 In The SERVICE OF OZONA PEOPLE

This is our fourth birthday in business in Ozona and we cannot refrain from attempting in some manner to express our appreciation to the people of this and surrounding counties for your friendship and the splendid patronage we have enjoyed during the four years we have been privileged to serve you.

From a very modest beginning four years ago we have grown steadily each year until today we have a business organization of which we are justly proud. You have made it possible for us to grow and we count it a privilege to be able to serve you now better than ever before. By increasing our volume of business every year by increasing our service, we are now in position to offer the people of this section real city service and prices. We appreciate our friends and customers and if we can bring down the cost of living through greater volume we will be happy to express our appreciation in that manner.

Sincerely,

Miss Nobody from Nowhere

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS

She found herself standing on a corner in a strange city; a girl who did not remember her name, past life or anything else. She is assisted by a young man who says he is staying at the same hotel as she is—the Garland.

She is registered, in French, as "Miss Nobody from Nowhere." The young man's name is Hamilton, and he has a specialist to see her.

"Will you tell me exactly what the doctor said, and all he said?" she asked at last.

"Of course." He came and stood beside her. "He thinks that you have had some sort of shock, which made you decide to get away from the scene of it, whatever it was. He thinks you came to the decision very hastily, for you started with no luggage. Yet when you got here you clearly expected to stay some time, for you went out the next day and bought some things which you had left at the hotel."

"When I came up here to my rooms before dinner I went through everything," she confirmed, "but there was nothing to help me, except some money. It's not much, but I hope it will see me through. Anyway, it's probably all I have in the world, for my clothes show I'm not rich. They're 'good but not gorgeous,'" she grimly paraphrased.

His heart leaped over the small jest, but before he could speak her face darkened and she went on:

"The money won't carry me far in a New York hotel if I have a long siege—with a trained nurse at night and a psychiatrist coming every morning," she pointed out. "Suppose this attack lasts longer than my money does?"

"It won't." He spoke with such conviction that she brightened again. "The Garland's summer rates are still in effect, and they're very reasonable," he went on. "Carrick is too good a chap to send you a big bill."

He was talking against time, to keep her panic at bay till the nurse came.

"Oh, what a devilish situation this is!" She turned back to the window, bringing her hands together with an effect of desperation that alarmed him.

"Come, now," he urged, "keep steady! A whole lot depends on that. The more quietly you take this, the sooner you will get over it. He agrees that the thing to do is to sit tight, just as you're doing, and let inquiries come from the other end. If your family and friends don't know where you are, they'll have started on investigation by this time, but they're probably doing it very carefully."

She stood still and stared into the darkness. Suddenly she turned back to the room with a little laugh that broke through their seriousness like a gush of a fountain.

"We may discover that I have run away from a husband and six children," she said lightly, but giving him an effect of breathlessness and tension. "My innocent babes may be crying for me this minute."

"What a ghastly idea!" he began, and stopped abruptly. As if she had caught his thought she looked at him with sudden intensity; but he was on his guard again and his disarming smile banished any suspicion she might have had. However, the little episode seemed to harden some half-formed purpose, for she went toward the inner door with an air of resolution he recalled later.

"If you will excuse me," she said, "I'll make some preparation for the nurse. I suppose since she is coming she must be made comfortable. No, please don't go," she added as he turned to take up his hat. "I'd rather you were here when she comes. There's some light literature on the table that may interest you."

She made a hospitable gesture toward the light literature, and disappeared through the door leading into her bedroom.

He selected a magazine, drew an easy-chair to the reading-lamp, and contentedly sat down. She was only a few feet away, on the other side of the door, and there was something satisfactory in being her sentinel. It wasn't strange that he was immensely interested in her, he mused. Any one would be interested in a girl in that tragic plight. For a few minutes more he casually thought about her while he turned the pages of the magazine, glancing at pictures and titles.

A title on a page of the magazine he held caught his eye and he began to read, with frequent glances at the closed door and an ear alert for sounds in the inner room. As he had already demonstrated, it was not his habit to do anything by halves. He became attentive to the article he was reading, then interested, and finally absorbed.

"Is this Miss Parson's room?" she inquired. "I'm Miss Adams, the nurse, Doctor Carrick sent me."

"Yes, of course. We have been expecting you."

"Doctor Carrick told me all about the case, and gave me full directions," the nurse went on. "It took some time. Otherwise I could have been here sooner. I suppose she's in her room," she suggested. "Hadn't I better go right in and report?"

Miss Adams gave the door panel a soft but decided tap, and when she received no reply, she repeated it without emphasis, calling clearly: "The nurse, Miss Parsons. May

I come in?" But when there was no response to this, she turned and cast a questioning glance at the young man.

"Go in," he managed to bring out, and strengthened the order with an imperative gesture.

Plainly Miss Adams was not the type of nurse who accepted orders from every one who chose to give them. She hesitated, and rapped a third time. Still receiving no reply, she turned the knob and entered the bed-room, leaving the door ajar behind her. Hamilton remained close to the open door, but he did not look into the room beyond it. Instead he wheeled and stared hard at the opposite wall, telling himself there were a half dozen reasons why the girl in the inner room might not have heard those three decided raps.

Miss Adams reappeared, and now she was obviously disturbed.

"We mustn't assume too much," she said kindly, with an understanding look at his agitated face. "You said she was frightened, and in such conditions patients do strange things. I've looked out of the window," she added calmly; and again he felt his scalp prick. "There's nothing wrong in the street. Of course she may be somewhere in the hotel."

He found his voice.

"You're perfectly sure she isn't in these rooms?" he asked.

"Quite sure," Miss Adams smiled austere. "I've looked in the closet and even under the bed."

"May I look?"

"Of course, if you like."

Her manner nicely combined with its professional courtesy an intimation that he would be wasting his time, but he pushed past her even before she could move to one side.

The room had the look of having been unoccupied for several days.

The words of the nurse made him swing around toward her.

"Here's the way she left," she said. He had noticed another door with a bolt on the inside. It led from the bedroom and he had taken for granted that it was part of the adjoining suite and was locked.

Now he saw that the bolt had not been shot. The nurse held the door ajar, revealing a glimpse of a side corridor past its threshold.

"Easiest thing in the world," he conceded. "She packed, stole out through that door and along that back corridor to a rear staircase, and probably got away without being seen by any one. But how about her hotel bill? Do you think she'd forget that?"

Miss Adams looked thoughtful. "She might. They do all sorts of things when they're not normal."

He had been staring down un-

A LETTER TO A YOUNG MAN

You ask me how you can get a better job.

My answer is that you can't.

All over the country as millions of young men who, in a vague sort of way, want a better job; and here and there among them are the worth-while few who want the better job.

And the millions wonder why the few move on, while they stand stationary year after year.

You must first of all pick out the better job—some particular job that is better than yours. Then train your guns on that and capture it.

You tell me that you are a book-keeper and that you earn $25 a week.

I know certified public accountants who earn $10,000 a year and more.

If I were a bookkeeper earning $25 a week, I should go out for a public accountant's job. I might die on the road, but whoever found my body would notice that my face was toward the summit.

Second: You can never make anybody pay you more money until you have more to sell.

I can advertise in a newspaper tomorrow morning and have a hundred bright young men here at eight o'clock. Each one will have just as much to offer me as you have; the same two years of high school; the same experience in keeping books, the same good record. Every one of them will be willing to work for $25, and some of them for $18.

The only way you can lift yourself out of that $25 class is by giving yourself an equipment that the rest of the fellows in that class do not have. In other words, by study—by education—by special training.

ENGLISH—HERE AND THERE

Differences between the King's English and American usage, which strikes the American traveler as amusing, have caused some complication for the secretaries of the American delegation to the London naval conference, according to the New York Evening Post. The British "telephonist" employs an altogether different set of expressions from her American counterpart, the "operator." A busy line brings forth the statement, "The line is engaged." When a connection is made, the expression is "You are through," which means your connection is through and not "Your time is up; please deposit another nickel."

"Hold on there," is used for "Hold the wire." When a call is uncompleted it is announced as "ineffective." A call which is completed "matures." "Information" becomes an "inquiry desk." "They do not answer" is transferred into the more formal, "There is no reply." An "operating room" is called a "switch room" and "long distance" is "trunk exchange." When lines are out of order in New York they are "not working" in London. For what Americans usually designate as "talking" over the telephone, with the British is "speaking"—Exchange.

Rev. J. H. Meredith and daughters, Misses Mary and Ruth, and Mrs. Ray Meredith visited the Carlsbad Caverns last week, returning by way of El Paso and visiting in Jaurez, Mexico.

Miss Lenore Dudley of Fort Worth is here visiting Misses Eleanor and Lucille Ingham.

Misses Beulah Baggett, Wanda and Gussie Watson and Mildred North are visitors to San Angelo Thursday.

W. B. Ransom of San Angelo, head of the chain of Orange Cross Drug Stores in this section, was here the first of the week making an inspection of the Ozona Drug Co., one of the chain. Mr. Ransom was registered at the Hotel Ozona.

Miss Helen Montgomery is visiting with her aunt, Mrs. Chilton, in Marlin.

Construction work was started this week on two new homes in Ozona, one for John Young on the lot just east of his present home, and the other for Hillery Phillips on the lot just south of the Roger Dudley home on Powell Avenue.

Perfect Posture

Miss Ruth Harris, student of Emerson College, Natick, Pa., was awarded the National Ridell Posture medal for the grace and ease of her natural posture. Note that her feet are parallel as she stands at ease and that her carriage is relaxed without any suggestion of slouchiness.

Third: When you have picked out the one particular better job that you want, when you have fitted yourself for it then be careful of your letter of application.

Your letter is your representative. For heaven's sake, if you have in you any spark of originality that other men have not, make your letter a tiny bit different from the other letters that the other men write.

Fourth: I receive many letters of application. In one form or another, they usually say something like this "I want a better job; I am thinking of getting married"; or, "I have a mother to support"; or, "I have been three years in this place without a raise and see no future."

All of which interests me not at all.

The only letter that I read with interest is the letter of the young man who has studied my business, and who points out to me how I can make more money for my employer by employing him.

Idea is the key that unlocks big men's doors.

When you have fitted yourself for the better job, let your letter of application contain an idea.

"OLD SALT" WANTS TO SETTLE IN OZONA

Houston, Texas,
28 May, 1930.

Gentlemen:—

I have heard a great deal of the little city of Ozona and have seen some beautiful pictures of the place and I am of the opinion that I would like to live there.

I am a retired Chief Electrician of the United States Navy and I would like to find a quiet little place to settle down away from the bustle and confusion that is a part of all big cities.

The retainer pay I receive each month as a member of the Fleet Reserve is ample for all my needs but of course I do not care to be idle and depend on that alone.

As a lover of nature I think that I would be greatly pleased to live in the surroundings of a place so far from the disturbing influence of a rail-road.

I am unmarried, have a car and will accept anything in the line of work that is legitimate, salary no object.

"I would thank you greatly if you would bring this inquiry to the attention of anyone who would be interested.

"Thanking you in advance,

Very sincerely,

An Announcement of Interest to Patrons of our Service Dept.

Effective June 1, we are turning over active management and supervision of our repair and service department to Arthur M. Quist and Louis Donaho, supervising mechanics, and after that date our repair department will be operated by these men on a commission basis.

Both Mr. Quist and Mr. Donaho are expert mechanics. Both were formerly connected with the Dudley Motor Company here and Ozona people know their ability as mechanics. We believe that under the new management patrons of our service department will find it more satisfactory to deal directly with the heads of the department where the work is to be done.

This department is thoroughly equipped to do any kind of welding or machine work and to service and repair any make of automobile. Service rates will remain the same as at present and all bills for this work will be handled through the usual channel of the McLeod Motor Co. as at present.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

DOCTOR OF TOWNS

YOU ARE JUST AS "BIG" AS YOU THINK AND DO

There is only one obstacle to the progress of any community that is definitely fatal, and that is lack of civic spirit and team work on the part of its citizens.

A few years ago a small town was in the sticks; today the only towns or communities in the sticks are those made up of sticks and a stick is one who refuses to do anything or get together with those who will.

A town is just as big as the people in it. The trouble is that it is easier to be little than big, and nature, left alone, does not improve without aid.

A big job requires big people, and in this day of keen competition, "putting your town over" is no little undertaking, and if there is an overabundance of "little" people in any community, it won't be done. "Little" people are those who say it can't be done. "Big" people are those who interrupt those who say it can't be done, by doing it.

Thinking Ozona is the best place on earth isn't enough. It helps, but, but thinking so doesn't make it so, unless you follow up "thinking" with "doing."

You say, "I think Ozona should do this;" or "We should have that." You read these editorials and say, "That's a good idea," or "I think that's right," etc. etc, but what do you do about it?

As you read this, you say, "I hope so-and-so sees this. It hits him right on the head, he is always talking a lot, but never does anything," and you may be right, but how about yourself? Maybe you don't even talk, and when you do talk, do you talk your town "up" or "down"? If you are big, you will talk it up; otherwise, you will say to yourself, "Oh, let the Chamber of Commerce, the Lions Club, or somebody else do it."

To be "big" you do not have to be a merchant, a doctor, a lawyer, or a banker. If you think you are little potatoes, you will be little potatoes. No matter who you are or what you do, you are just as big as you think and do.

OZONA MAN SAYS CITIES TO EAST ADVERTISE O. S. T.

B. H. Murphy, manager of the Hotel Ozona, was here Monday in the interest of a plan sponsored by Kerrville, Junction, Sonora and Ozona to make a concerted effort to direct tourist travel over the Old Spanish Trail.

"Some garage men and hotel men at Van Horn are directing travel over the Border route via Marfa, Alpine and Sanderson to San Antonio," Murphy said. "We want to put up signs and do other advertising that will counteract that."

He said the towns to the east had raised $600 and now have the money in the bank to put up signs at San Antonio and between Van Horn and El Paso.

"Fort Stockton is an important point on the Old Spanish Trail, and almost midway from San Antonio to El Paso, a good day's drive from either. You should be interested in this proposition."

"If Fort Stockton wants to help we will throw in with you people and do something, and will put up the money," Murphy continued.

Here is . . . ENERGY

Man's command of energy has always had a great deal to do with his well-being.

The energy of his own muscles, the energy of animals—and finally the energy brought to him over the electric power lines—all these he has commanded in increasing the amount of work he may do.

Most flexible and efficient of these is electric power. It is versatile, it is inexpensive, and it is delivered wherever it is needed, whenever it is required, and in great or small quantities as the user may desire.

Serving 113 prosperous cities, towns and communities in West Texas, this company's transmission lines give an ample, economical and flexible supply of electric energy for farm, factory and home.

SIX-CYLINDER SMOOTHNESS AT LOW COST

seeingly at a little writing stand, but now he caught a faint suggestion of penciling on the top of the pile of hotel paper.

"Here's something," he cried, and picked up the envelope. Then his expression changed. It was addressed to Doctor Carrick.

"Where did you find that?" the nurse demanded. She had been standing on the threshold, looking down the hall, but turned back into the room at the sound of his voice.

"On the table, on top of this little heap of stationery. It looked like all the other envelopes, for the name is written on it faintly, with a hard pencil. I didn't notice it till now."

He felt the envelope.

"Lord! I wish I dared to open it," he muttered.

Hamilton hurried from the room. At the hotel office desk he asked for a match and lit his cigarette with carefull casualness.

"Has Miss Parsons gone?" he asked as he drew in the first mouthful of smoke.

"Yep; she checked out 'most an hour ago," the clerk told him, and added without rancor: "Women make me tired."

Hamilton rested an elbow on the desk.

"Why?"

"Oh, because they're always changing their minds. That girl said when she came that she was only staying one night. She stayed three days. That was all right—the longer the better. But tonight she had a cot put in her room for a woman friend who was to visit her, and after I'd stirred up a chambermaid and a porter and got everything fixed she changed her mind again and cleared out. She left a dollar for the chambermaid and porter, though," he added forgivingly, and ended, on another afterthought, "Nice girl."

Hamilton put on the hat he had been carrying and descended the hotel's front steps to the street.

"Cab, sir?" asked the doorman, who knew him.

"Not yet. . . . See here, Saunders—" Hamilton put a dollar into the man's hand—"did you happen to hear the address Miss Parsons gave her cabman tonight when she left?"

Saunders pocketed the dollar and looked sympathetic.

"She didn't take no cab here, sir," he reported. "It was funny, tonight she was carryin' a little hand-bag and a big bundle. But when I started to get a taxi for her she walked off, shakin' her head."

"Which way did she go?"

"That way," and Saunders indicated the side street. His voice sank to a confidential note, for his was an honest nature and he desired to earn his dollar—in part, at least.

"I got the feelin', sir," he said, "that she walked off because she didn't want to give no address here. If that hadn't been it, why would she carry them things? She give me my quarter jest the same, and I'd bet that quarter she took a cab at the next corner."

Hamilton returned to the waiting nurse. It was easy now to piece together the bits of the puzzle. Miss Parsons had experienced another panic, had decided that she was becoming "a case," and had fled to avoid that horror. Of course she would pick up a cab farther along the street or take one of the scores of cabs plying up and down the avenue, only a block away. By this time she might be in Harlem or on a train bound west or south. In any case she was definitely gone. She was out there somewhere in the darkness. What would become of her? Anything, everything, might happen to her.

He must find her, of course. That went without saying. Even if his interest had been less than it was, he couldn't let her, in her condition, vanish into the unknown

He had not been responsible at first, but now. . . .

He made his report to the nurse.

"She paid her bill and checked out an hour ago."

Miss Adams nodded.

"She would," she confirmed.

Hamilton's strained nerves snapped.

"If it was so certain that she would why the devil didn't Carrick warn me?" he broke out, and immediately apologized again. "Come on, we'll go uptown and talk to Carrick. You don't suppose he has gone to bed, do you?" he asked irritably.

Miss Adams expressed her theory that Doctor Carrick could not have done anything so inconsiderate. It was much more likely, she thought, that the physician might have dropped in at his club on his way home, to have a rubber of bridge with some friends. As a nurse who attended many of his patients, she knew something of his habits. She even knew the name of his club, and mentioned it.

The GOODYEAR
Double Eagle

We are showing a tire such as the world has never seen — the new GOODYEAR DOUBLE EAGLE.

Built without limit as to cost—Goodyear's 30th Anniversary achievement. Admittedly a better, costlier tire than most people need.

It should last as long as the average owner uses his car. Virtually puncture-proof and free from risk of blowout, no tire has ever, we believe, withstood such abusive tests of speed and endurance.

We are Over-Stocked

OUR STOCK must be reduced. Although we have enjoyed a wonderful sale of GENERAL Tires since taking over this line, we now find our racks too full as a result of a recent heavy shipment and we are, therefore, slashing prices in order to move out a part of this stock.

THE PRICES offered in this sale are barely above actual wholesale cost—just enough to pay the carrying charges. Since we have taken off our profit during this 10-day sale, we can not sell at these prices on a credit basis. Prices quoted below, then, are FOR CASH ONLY. We have your size in a new General. You'll never have this opportunity again to buy the world's best tire at such ridiculously low prices.

REMEMBER, this price-slashing sale lasts but ten days. You have been thinking of buying some new tires—now is your chance to save some real money and get the best tire money can buy. At these prices you can equip your car with Generals for less money than ordinary tires would cost.
