Consolidation of several small enterprises to make a single large one is not confined to manufacturing industries. Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, who knows what he is talking about most of the time, says that more than a million acres of Kansas farm lands are now owned by corporations, and that recently one corporation bought thirty farms in the winter wheat region and merged them.

Corporate farming is more of a business enterprise and less of a mode of living than farming by an individual is. According to Senator Capper, these farm corporations hire men who leave their families behind, to go out in the fall and put in the crop. In summer they hire other men to come in and harvest the crop. The rest of the year nobody lives on the big farms.

That seems menacing to the Senator from Kansas. He thinks it will result in depletion of the soil, through lack of crop rotation, maintenance of fertility and diversification. It is hard to believe that any group of capital engaging in business on a large scale would be so short-sighted as not to take those things into consideration and apply the most modern principles of agriculture to their enterprises.

TRADEMARKS

It would be interesting to make a list of words which were invented to serve as trademarks for a particular product, but which have come into general use to describe anything resembling the original article. "Celluloid" is one of those words; it strictly means only the product of the Celluloid Company. "Kodak" is another; the same belongs to George Eastman's camera but we use it to mean any small camera. When you say "Colt" everybody knows you mean a large-caliber pistol. Probably nine men out of ten in the region where "five-gallon" hats are worn refer to their headgear as "Stetsons."

"Winchester" is almost a synonym for "rifle." And everybody refers to the abbreviated masculine underwear which is now in such general use by the trade-mark of the first of its kind, "B.V.D.'s"

The adoption of such words in general usage is one of the ways in which language grows. A hundred years from now probably, nobody will say "dirigible" but everybody will know what you mean by a "zeppelin."

LONGEVITY

Human life is not getting any longer, according to the men who make a business of studying vital statistics. The average life is longer because a larger percentage of babies live to grow up. Fewer people die in childhood and early life than formerly, but the man who reaches fifty-four, which is the average expectation of life of every new-born baby in America, has no better chance of living to seventy than his grandfather did; not so good, according to some.

Certainly the average life of a President of the United States is shorter than it used to be. Col. Leonard P. Ayres of Cleveland, one of the world's famous statisticians, points out that Mr. Taft lived longer—to 72—than any other President since Millard Fillmore, who died 56 years ago. Out of the first eight Presidents Washington, who died at 67, had the shortest life; John Adams, living to 90, the longest; the others were 85, 83, 78, 73 and 68 at their respective deaths. The average life of the eight was 80 years and a half. The four latest presidents who died averaged only 66 3/4 years

LIONS ELECT NEW OFFICERS ON JUNE 9TH

Nominating Committee To Submit Ticket Of Nominees

FULMER TO RETIRE

Two-Year President Announces Will Not Accept Office

Members of the Ozona Lions Club will elect new officers for the coming year at the second meeting of the club in June, on Monday, June 9, it was decided at this week's luncheon of the organization.

New officers will be selected from a list of nominees to be submitted on that date by a nominating committee appointed Monday by President M. M. Fulmer. The nominating committee is composed of L. L. Bewley, chairman, J. H. McClure and Jack Sharp.

President Fulmer, who has held that office since the club was organized two years ago, announced that he would not consider the post again for the coming year. The president announced, however, that he would continue to be identified with the club and would continue as an active member, but preferred to be "in the ranks" a while.

Mr. Fulmer gave a brief report on the business sessions at the state Lions Clubs convention in Austin. He announced that the state of Texas would be divided into four districts with a district governor over each district. Up to this time the entire state of Texas has been considered one district with a district governor in charge and deputy governors over the field. President Fulmer of the local club now holds the office of deputy district governor for this district. This office will be abolished with the expiration of the terms of present officers.

Old Timers Beat Giants 5-4 Friday

Supple Lads Of Other Years Take Third Of Series Here

The Old Timers won a game at last.

Sam Cox's fighting has been nosed out the Ozona Giants by a 5 to 4 toll at Powell Field last Friday afternoon in the third of a series of seven games being played between the Old Timers and the town team, proceeds from the games to go to a fund for the construction of a grandstand on the local athletic field.

Friday's game was the best of the series between the two teams, the contest being marked by fewer errors than usual and a better brand of baseball all around.

The Old Timers started things off in the first inning when Madden Read connected with one of Tot Grimmer's offerings for a two-base wallop and scored a few minutes later on Sam Cox's single.

The Giants went them one better in the second when W. T. Childress walked and Tot Grimmer was hit by a pitched ball. Then, with two men out, Frank Russell singled, scored Childress and Grimmer on the throw-in. But in the same frame the Old Timers evened the count when Walter Augustine, pitcher, doubled and scored on Madden Read's single.

The old folks took a healthy lead in the fourth when Tommy Hunter hit safely, stole second, third and home while Joe Davidson was hit by a pitched ball, and Arthur Kyle and Walter Augustine struck out. Davidson, who had advanced to third, scored when Madden Read hit a high fly to center field, but Read stepped off the bag when he thought the ball had been

110,000 Pounds Of Wool Sold

Price Understood To Be 25 1/2 Cents; Bids Rejected On Balance

A price understood to be 25 1/2 cents a pound was paid yesterday afternoon for 110,000 pounds of the 6,035,000 pound wool pool that was offered for sale at the warehouse of the Woolgrowers Central Storage Company by the Texas Wool & Mohair Warehouse Association. The pool consisted entirely of eight months wool.

The sale, made by March Bros. of San Angelo to H. D. (Kid) Allen for Charles J. Webb Sons Company, Inc., of Boston, came at the close of an all-day session in which the attempt to sell the entire pool "all or none," was abandoned when the association's sales committee failed to receive a satisfactory bid on the "all or none" basis.

Practically every big pool buying house was represented when the auction was opened at 10 o'clock in the morning and more than 100 growers were on hand to watch the proceedings. The entire pool was offered "all or none," and sealed bids received, but when the sales committee, composed of Robert Massie, A. C. Schreiner and C. C. Belcher had examined all bids they announced all had been rejected. The highest amount of which was not made known, was made by D. E. Hughes of San Angelo for Studley and Emory of Boston.

It was then announced that at 2 o'clock all accumulations would be put on the line and any buyer would be privileged to bid on any accumulation. The bid of Allen of the March Bros. accumulation was the only one accepted.

A warehouse meeting was held and announcement made that the balance of the original pool would be thrown back into a single pool, which contains 5, 925,000 pounds of wool, and held for sale on the "all or none" basis. The sales committee is authorized to sell it on this basis to any buyer at any time between now and June 17, when, if it has not been sold, another auction will be held here. —S. A. Times.

Approaching Marriage of Miss Gussie Watson Announced At Party

Mrs. Joe Pierce entertained with a delightful bridge and forty-two party Friday afternoon at which the approaching marriage of Miss Gussie Watson and Henry Hugh Carden of Belton was announced for the sixteenth of June. On the bridal tally cards was the announcement that "something is in the air". After the playing had started the guests were showered with balloons carrying the date of the marriage.

Miss Watson was presented with a piece of lingerie. Miss Hester Bunker won high score prize, a bottle of bath salts. The honoree was presented with a piece of lingerie. Refreshments consisted of molded heart-shaped ice cream ornamented with a red cupid and angel food cake with green icing. The favors were small vases filled with sweet peas.

Those present were: Mesdames Marbury Morrison, Marshall Montgomery, Evert White, Roy Henderson, J. W. Henderson, Jr., Lee Childress, Hugh Childress, Sr., Early Baggett, Bright Baggett, W. West, H. B. Cox, Basecomb Cox, Tom Smith, V. I. Pierce, Paul Perner, Mary Perner, Bryan McDonald, Joe T. Davidson, Garnett Miller, Horace Friend, A. A. Perry, Jr., Tommy Hunter, Ralph Watson, L. J. Vaughan, Misses Beth Davidson, Beulah Baggett, Mildred North, Lucille Ingham, Mary Augustine, Kathryn Baggett, Mary Childress, Hester Bunker, Mary Kincaid, Wanda Watson, Gussie Watson, Helen Montgomery, Kaleta Glee Cox and Tommy Smith.

Judge and Mrs. Chas. E. Davidson will leave the last of the week or the first of next for Winfield, Iowa, where they will visit Judge Davidson's brother, R. P. Davidson. Miss Beth Davidson will accompany them as far as Tulsa, Okla., where she will spend the summer visiting her sister, Mrs. J. Marshall Brown.

Mrs. J. C. Montgomery is remaining in San Antonio with her mother, Mrs. John Mitchell, who is confined to her bed with a broken hip suffered in a fall six weeks ago. Mrs. Jim Mitchell is also ill in a San Antonio hospital.

Alamo Shows To Be Rodeo Feature

Company That Staged "Battle Of Flowers" Coming Here

A contract was awarded Wednesday by the Crockett County Fair Association to the Alamo Shows of San Antonio for the carnival concession here during the fifth annual Crockett County Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show to be held July 3, 4 and 5.

The Alamo Shows staged the "Battle of Flowers" celebration in San Antonio this year and its offering in the carnival line is considered one of the greatest attractions available in the South.

The concern offers seven feature shows, five riding devices and thirty concessions.

The carnival tents will be pitched on the rodeo grounds as has been done in the past and this class of entertainment will be offered during the afternoon and night on each of the three days of the celebration.

Miniature Golf Comes To Ozona

Two Courses Open For Business Here This Week

Miniature golf, the game that has taken cities and towns by storm lately, has come to Ozona. And when it came it came strong, two courses being opened here this week.

The first to open is that being operated by Ray Phillips, formerly of Fort Stockton. Mr. Phillips has located his course on the Adams lot opposite the Humble Oil and Refining Company station at the intersection of Powell Avenue and the Fort Stockton road.

The other course is being operated by A. J. Serrells on the lot just south of the West Texas Lumber Company. Both courses are now open for play.

Each of the new local courses is 18 holes and there are plenty of hazards and rough play on each. Local addicts of the new game are going in for the sport in large numbers. The two courses are lighted for night play and will remain open each night until 12 o'clock.

Alleged Daylight Sale Of Liquor Here Results In Arrests

TRUCK MAN HELD

A. M. Fuller And Hallie Hubert, Negro, To Face No Charges

An alleged liquor transaction, consummated in the heart of the business section of Ozona during a rush business hour Tuesday morning, wherein one gallon of whiskey changed hands as did $10.50 in cash payment therefor, resulted in the arrest of the two principals in the alleged deal a few minutes after it was completed.

A. M. Fuller, owner and operator of a motor freight line between San Antonio and Ozona, was arrested by Sheriff W. S. Willis and charged with possession, transportation and sale of intoxicating liquor. Hallie Hubert, local negro shine boy, was charged with possession of liquor for the purpose of sale. Both charges were filed with Justice of the Peace W. M. Johnigan. Fuller's bond was fixed at $1500, which he furnished, and Hubert's was placed at $500.

The alleged sale took place within sight of Sheriff Willis, according to the latter's statement before the justice of the peace. The sheriff stood a short distance away and watched delivery of the package and the transfer of the money, he said. Fuller refused to make a statement at his examining trial, but Hubert declared that he bought the gallon of whiskey for a local ranchman who the day before gave him the money to pay for it and a dollar "for his trouble." Hubert also said he had purchased a gallon of the truck line operator a week before, delivery being made in the same place and at the same price.

"Mr. Fuller arrived in Ozona this morning and I went down and asked him if he had a package for a fellow he didn't call any names," Hallie said in part in his statement. "He said it was there on the front seat. I handed him $10.50. He said 'I guess that's right. I don't know.' He stuck the money in his pocket and I picked up the package and walked off."

Hubert added that Tuesday a week ago he got one gallon from Mr. Fuller in the same place and at the same price.

"Will Allen and I drank the gallon I got from Mr. Fuller last Tuesday," the statement continued. "On Monday evening Will Allen gave me $5.25 to pay for the whiskey and Tuesday morning when Mr. Fuller came by I asked him if he had anything. He held up one finger and I knew he had one gallon of whiskey."

Organization Of A Kindergarten Here Sought By Petition

Organization of a kindergarten to be operated as a unit of the Ozona Public Schools and under the direct supervision of school authorities is sought in a petition filed with school authorities here this week.

The petition, which pledges a minimum of 25 pupils who will be 5 years of age by the next school term, is signed by parents of children who are or will be within the age limits to attend kindergarten, according to Mrs. W. J. Grimmer, who circulated the petition.

The matter will be considered by the school board at its meeting on June 23, and Miss Julia Lipscomb of G.A., at Denton, in charge of kindergarten demonstration work, is scheduled to be in Ozona on that day to advise with the school board on the organization work.

THURSDAY, MAY, 29, 1939.

We are in receipt of "Ma" Ferguson's announcement for governor, written by Jim, of course, and the opening sentence is "Confronted with another 'family' crisis, it again becomes necessary for me to announce myself a candidate for governor."

Jim evidently thought that "family crisis" business was a little too frank, so he marked out the "family" with a blue pencil. Now, the state penitentiary is overcrowded, and Jim's finances are low, in other words there's a "family crisis", and Jim shoves "Ma" out to seek the throne so he can cut and slash from behind her petticoats, immune from impeachment or criminal proceedings.

And in that connection, here's what Jim has "Ma" say in her announcement, "Let it be understood once and for all that I will receive the aid and advice of my good husband who is not only dear to me, but to the people of Texas as well."

Verily, he is so devoted to the people of Texas, like the barnacle to the ship's hull, and no sooner is he scraped off than he attaches himself again. Impeachment didn't stop him, but it is our fervent hope that the voters of Texas will stop them both at the polls this year. They'll be back again in two years, no doubt, and we'll have to listen to his longshore language all over again, but when Jim is definitely and finally relegated to the scrap heap of political has-beens this state will be a better place to call home.

Boys will be boys, as the saying goes, but W. R. Phillips, caretaker of the city park, wishes some of them were girls. Especially those who have attained proficiency in air rifle marksmanship.

A number of Ozona lads go "hunting" frequently in the city park, Mr. Phillips declares, and as a result of their marksmanship hundreds of birds have been killed from trees in the park this spring.

Now, most of the birds in this section may be without value from any standpoint, but since this is not a farming country and there are but few backyard gardens they do practically no harm. There are many of the English sparrow species that neither boast fine feathers nor the ability to yodel, but they are harmless and since the city park is such a limited area even these should be accorded protection there.

Mr. Phillips is making an effort to attract birds of all kinds to the park. If they find protection, water and occasionally food there, all kinds of birds, including those of fine voice and feather, will make it a haven and add to the attractiveness of the plot.

With the wide pen spaces all around, Mr. Phillips can not see why the boys must have a space a hundred or so yards square as their hunting grounds. There are probably more birds on the hills and in the mesquite thickets around Ozona than there are in the city park and nobody would object to the air rifle experts using these as hunting grounds. Help make the park a bird haven.

THE DEADLY AUTOMOBILE

The cost to the people of the United States of automobile accidents in 1929 was more than $850,000,000, according to the chairman of the traffic accident statistics of the National Street and Highway Safety Conference. Mr. J. H. Parmelee, whose authority we quote, states that 33,060 persons were killed in motor accidents last year, an increase of 8 per cent over 1928 and nearly double the number of deaths from that cause in 1920. And so far in 1930 the rate of fatalities is increasing.

These fatal motor accidents are not a peculiarity of any particular section or of any class or size of community. On the whole, there are fewer of them in the large cities than in the country districts, in proportion to population. The temptation to careless driving when out of sight of a traffic policeman, with no signal lights to be obeyed, is much greater than in crowded traffic, as every motorist knows.

Statistics compiled by the Nebraska State Press Association for 1929 show that in that state, where population is less concentrated than in almost all of the rest of the states and there are only two or three really large population centers, there were 368 motor fatalities last year, besides 123 persons disabled, in 3,636 automobile accidents.

Every victim of a motor accident is a victim of somebody's carelessness. Out of the total number of accidents in Nebraska last year by far the most were collisions between two cars. There is never any possible reason for a collision except carelessness on the part of one driver or both. Sixty-three of the dead in Nebraska were pedestrians, struck by cars. Thirty-nine deaths were of motorists trying to beat a train across a railroad crossing. Twenty-six were killed while speeding. Twenty-four deaths resulted from trying to pass another car, without swinging wide enough. Blinding headlights forced 127 cars off the road, killing ten persons. Twelve were killed by reckless driving.

The remedy for this increasing toll of death on the highway is partly in improving the roads, eliminating blind curves and dangerous crossings, but mainly in a closer supervision of licenses to drivers. Today in a few states children, mental incompetents, cripples and irresponsible persons are forbidden to endanger the lives of others by driving cars. In most states, however, anybody can commit manslaughter by this means without restraint.

THE TARIFF AND POLITICS

President Hoover on April 16, 1929, more than a year ago, asked Congress to make some limited changes in the tariff law, especially for the protection of agriculture and as a part of his program of Farm Relief. The response of Congress was to throw the whole subject of the tariff wide open and inject the tariff issue again into national politics.

The Senate seized upon this opportunity to make another effort to arrogate all Governmental power to itself and to make the President a rubber stamp. The Senate coalition undertook to write into the tariff law a provision that all decisions of the Tariff Commission should be subject to affirmation by Congress. Such a procedure would keep the tariff to the front a political issue all the time, at every session of Congress. What the President specifically asked for in this respect was a simplification of the Tariff Commission provisions of the law, so that readjustments in rates could be made with less delay than is now the case. The Senate's plan would have ruined all the efforts of leaders of both major parties in the past ten years to put tariff-making on a scientific basis.

The Senate also inserted into the tariff bill a provision for a rebate on exported farm products.

The House of Representatives stood fast against those two provisions of the Senate's, and the Senate has finally yielded on both points. It was not statesmanship entirely, however, that dictated the House's attitude. It is largely politics in the simple, plain sense of the word. Every member of Congress comes up for reelection this year. Every member has got to explain to his constituents how come some other part of the country got more out of the tariff bill than his own district did. For the tariff is, after all, a local issue; it is bound up in sectionalism and selfish interests, and one result of all the agitation of the subject in Congress during the past year has been to increase sectional bitterness to a degree we have not known in America for decades.

The only convincing answer any member who voted for the tariff bill can make, when the schedules unsatisfactory to his constituency are criticized, is that the rates in the bill are not permanent. The Tariff Commission and the President can change the rates whenever it is shown that they should be changed in the interest of international parity. Nobody, broadly speaking, is satisfied with the rates in the bill itself; but everybody who believes that a scientific readjustment of rates by an

Miss Nobody from Nowhere

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

SYNOPSIS

She found herself standing on a corner in a strange city; a girl who did not remember her name, past life or anything else. She is assisted by a young man who says he is staying at the same hotel as she is—the Garland.

"Yes," he told her, thinking it out as he spoke. "We can do it like this: I will get out of the cab a block from the hotel and walk the rest of the way. When you reach the Garland, go to the desk in the main hall, and ask the clerk if there's any mail for you. If there is, it may give you all the information you need. Anyway, it will give you your name. If there isn't any mail, the clerk may mention your name as he tells you so. In any case, go from the desk to the writing-room at the left of the entrance, and sit down at one of the tables. I will come into the hotel just behind you, and after you have left the desk, if I see that you haven't got anything, I'll ask Robinson, the day clerk, who you are. He'll tell me. He's a nice chap, and we've talked a lot since I came here. Then I'll come in and sit down opposite you at the desk you have chosen, and if there's any one else in the room I will cater to convention by asking you to lend me a blotter or something of that sort. We can fall into a low-voiced chat, and I'll tell you what I've learned."

"You think of everything," she assured him, with relief; and again there was a faint suggestion of a smile around her mouth.

There was no trace of a smile ten minutes later, however, when the clerk, having greeted her with evident recognition but without mentioning her name, turned back from his inspection of the mail rack to tell her there were no letters. It was a heavy blow, but she left the desk without signs of its effect. The hotel was strange to her.

Nothing she saw suggested that she had ever been there before, except the attitude of the clerk. He had gone to the mail-rack with the assurance of one who knew exactly what he was looking for, and he had also run over a few letters that had just been dropped on his desk. On a second thought she turned back to him.

"My key, please." He took a key from the rack and handed it to her, and when she had found the writing-room and sat down at a table she looked at the number on the brass tag. One hundred and twenty-eight. So the young man with the nice face was right that far. She was registered guest at this hotel; and the hotel itself, though a trifle passe, was reassuring in appearance and atmosphere.

Her slight delay had caused her to pass her new acquaintance in the lobby and he stepped aside to make way for her, raising his hat with conventional courtesy as he did so. She responded with an almost imperceptible negative sign, but he saw it and approached his friend Robinson.

"Who is that girl?" he asked casually, nodding at the slight retreating figure, as he lit the match he had asked for and applied it to a cigarette. "She sits at the table next to mine."

Robinson gave him an understanding grin.

"Easy to look at, isn't she? Her name is Parsons, I think—Miss Eve Parsons. At least, it's as much like that on the register as like anything. She begins a word with one big clear letter and goes on with a wavy line. But we've called her Miss Parsons ever since she came and she answers to it," he added philosophically, "so I guess it's all right."

"Where's she from?" The young man lounged against the desk in the manner of a visitor to the city, talking without much interest but to kill time; and the clerk good-humoredly bore with him, having nothing else to do at the moment.

"That's another queer thing," Robinson remembered. "I can't make out her home town, except that it begins with N. I meant to ask her, but I forgot. Jenkins, the night clerk, was here when she registered three nights ago, and he didn't pay much attention because she said she was leaving again the next morning. I suppose she changed her mind, the way women do," he ended with large tolerance. "Anyway, you see she didn't go."

"How about her letters? They would settle the matter of the name, at least," the guest suggested.

"She hasn't had any yet." "I wonder if I could make out the names. I'm rather good at reading scrawls. Do you mind letting me look at the register?"

Robinson produced the book, turning back two pages with a smile.

As he talked he ran a finger down the short list of entries, but his companion, whose interest seemed deeper now, found the name they wanted, before the clerk did.

"Here it is," the guest exclaimed, adding absently, "That's odd," as he studied the wavy line of the last word.

"Can you make out the town?" The clerk was beginning to think there might be more in this than appeared on the surface. The guest's face took on its most matter-of-fact expression, and he glanced at his watch as if abruptly reminded of the flight of time. "It seems to be Nilport," he indifferently suggested; one of those small towns one never hears of unless one lives in them.

The young man strolled away into the writing-room. It was empty except for the girl, so he wasted no time but went directly to her and seated himself in a chair beside hers.

"Good afternoon, Miss Parsons," he began.

She drew a quick breath.

"Is that it?"

"No, but that's what they call you here at the hotel."

She looked confused and puzzled.

"It doesn't mean anything to me," she bleakly admitted, "but what makes you think it isn't right?"

"Because I happen to know a little French."

As she waited incomprehendingly, he took a card from the desk rack, wrote a line on it, and laid it before her.

"Your signature on the register isn't very legible," he explained, "and the hotel people interpreted your name as Parsons. But this is what it looked like. Does it mean anything?"

She shook her head.

"Evidently you know French; don't you?"

"I think I do, I'm not very sure about what I know and what I don't know."

"Then let me write it more clearly as I interpret it. Does this mean anything?" He wrote another card and she read it in a low voice.

"Miss Eve Personne, Nulle part." "Miss Eve Nobody, Nowhere," she slowly translated, and looked at him with a whitening face. "What does it mean?"

There was a note of actual hysteria in her voice, and he quieted her with a quick gesture.

"Don't be frightened," he begged. "We're getting our explanation, but we've got to do some guesswork. It may mean that you were rather desperate when you came here. Perhaps you were afraid of a nervous breakdown and felt it coming; perhaps you were hiding from some one; anyway, you certainly registered in a way that gave no clue to who you are."

"Then we're just where we were!" she cried out. "What shall

I do?"

He found his card-case and taking a card from it, laid the bit of paste-board beside the two already on the desk before her.

"First of all, remember that this little episode won't last long. Then remember that I'm here to see you through," he said comfortably. "I am your friend and brother for the time, if you will

"IF A MAN DIE, SHALL HE LIVE AGAIN?"

It is the age-old question, asked at the side of every bier.

And what can one say in answer to it?

Every one of us is taught in childhood to believe in God and an after life.

"The world just happened," say some men. "It created itself through the operation of natural laws."

But who or what established the natural laws and set them to operating?

When you can dump a load of bricks on a corner lot, and let me watch them arrange themselves into a house—when you can empty a handful of springs and wheels and screws on a desk, and let me see them gather themselves together into a watch—it will be easier for me to believe that all these thousands of worlds could have been created, balanced, and set to moving in their separate orbits, all without any directing intelligence at all.

Moreover, if there is no intelligence in the universe, then the universe has created something greater than itself—for it has created you and me.

Is it easy to believe that a universe without personality is a little part of the great pervading Personality that has created and now permeates the universe?

And if there be a personality in the universe—a God—what kind of God is He?

He must be at least as good as you or I. He could not have made us better than Himself. The worse can not create the better.

And if He is a God, is it reasonable to suppose that He would have placed in human hearts this unquenchable yearning for immortality, and left that yearning unsatisfied?

You and I would not have done so.

Go where you will, from the most savage race to the most cultured, you will find that same instinctive assurance that death is not the end. Would a good God plant that assurance in his creatures merely to mock them?

Without immortality the world is an answerless riddle. We are born; we struggle up through slow years of development; and just as we have reached our highest point of usefulness—we are cut off!

It is hard for me to believe in a universe that made itself, and that ruthlessly casts away its most precious possession—human personality.

It is to believe that behind the universe is a guiding Intelligence, of whose personality my own is a tiny spark that shall not go out while He lives.

If I cannot prove that this is so, neither can any one prove to me it is not so.

And, until some one can disprove it, I find it easier, more helpful, more efficient, to believe.

of Interest to Patrons of our Service Dept.

Effective June 1, we are turning over active management and supervision of our repair and service department to Arthur M. Quist and Louis Donaho, supervising mechanics, and after that date our repair department will be operated by these men on a commission basis.

Both Mr. Quist and Mr. Donaho are expert mechanics. Both were formerly connected with the Dudley Motor Company here and Ozona people know their ability as mechanics. We believe that under the new management patrons of our service department will find it more satisfactory to deal directly with the heads of the department where the work is to be done.

This department is thoroughly equipped to do any kind of welding or machine work and to service and repair any make of automobile. Service rates will remain the same as at present and all bills for this work will be handled through the usual channel of the McLeod Motor Co. as at present.

THE TOWN DOCTOR

"DOCTOR OF TOWNS"

Neighborliness is the Basis of Community Life

Those factors that, of recent years have robbed us of our neighbors, have struck a hard blow at real community unity. While the automobile has enabled us to go places and see things, while it has enlarged our little personal world and shoved the horizon of everyday life further and further away, it has at the same time made strangers of our neighbors.

In the next few weeks throughout the length and breadth of the land there will be thousands of celebrations in the form of fairs, home comings and festivals. Such are American institutions—they are good for the community, good for the people in the community, and good for those who attend them from other communities.

Should the progressive business men and women of your town plan for you a celebration this year, show your appreciation and manifest your good judgment by doing everything within your power to help them make it a big success. If you can't do anything else, here is one thing you can do: stay at home that day and meet your friends and neighbors. Better acquaintance with them will increase your interest in them and theirs in you, and a better understanding of each other's problems will help much in the work you may do together for all your neighbors.

But above all, what a splendid time it is to invite visitors on those days, what an influx of visitors your town would have! The new friends that will be made will be an asset all the rest of your life.

The money they will spend in your town will add just that much to the capital in circulation in your town, and before the end of the next week every individual in town will have benefitted by money thus left behind.

The community gains by becoming more neighborly, by introducing visitors to the charms of the town you call "your town" by the money spent by them while there, and finally, by the greater community spirit developed by everybody joining in the performance of a worthy, common task.

When your home town opens its doors to its people and their friends, be community minded and take advantage of the opportunity.

Diphtheria Disproved In Death Ozona Girl

First reports that diphtheria was a contributory disease in the death of little Lois Deland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Deland, who died in San Angelo last week were later disproved by laboratory examination of specimens, according to word received here by Dr. G. Miller from San Angelo physicians who attended the patient.

The little girl developed measles and scarlet fever and complications from these diseases caused her death, the San Angelo physicians reported. Thorough diphtheria tests showed negative, they reported.

Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Ingham, who left for Temple, are now in St. Louis where Mr. Ingham is undergoing further treatment for an X-Ray burns on his back suffered more than six months ago at the hands of a San Angelo physician who was attempting to remove a piece of steel from his shoulder.

Private Ownership of Utilities

Capital for the development of electric companies comes, after all, from the public.

These companies may be owned either by public investors or by local governments. The chief difference between the two is that ownership by the investors means working on a business basis, while municipal ownership too often results in political operation.

Private ownership keeps them out of politics, puts a premium on efficient operation and encourages service satisfactory to you.

The West Texas Utilities Company, with its three major generating stations, fifteen auxiliary plants and more than 2,500 miles of transmission lines, insures you dependable service, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

have me." It was hard to see that look of terror in her eyes. "Memory may come back any minute, you know, as suddenly as it left," he again reminded her.

To steady her he pushed his card directly under her eyes and went on talking.

"Eric Hamilton, The University Club," he read aloud, and added the penciled word "Chicago" to the address. She gathered up the three cards without comment and dropped them into her handbag.

"Evidently I have a room in this hotel," she said. "Perhaps when I go there I shall find some papers or other clues in my luggage."

He looked at his watch and casually added that he had a suggestion to make. He had been thinking hard.

"It's quarter of six," he said. "Suppose we dine here together at seven. You must eat something, you know, to keep up your strength. Then, if you haven't found any more clues in your room, I shall ask you to let me look up the best psychiatrist in town and have him come here this evening."

As she began to protest he raised his hand.

"Just hear me through," he begged. "I know a little about such cases, and my theory is that you will be all right in a day or two, or in a few days at the most. I mean to stand by till you are. But I want to find a reliable man and have him see you and give him all the facts we know and show him my own credentials, so that he'll let me act as your counselor and friend. If you insist, we will wait till morning to send for him. If you seriously object to a doctor, we won't have one. I am not going to risk losing, by officiousness, any confidence you may have in me. But I've simply got to tell you what I think we ought to do, and then let you make your own decisions. You see that, don't you? I wouldn't be worthy of your trust in me if I didn't do it."

She drew a deep sigh that was half a groan.

"It's amazingly kind of you to take all this trouble. I wonder if I've ever had an attack like this before. Somehow, I feel that I haven't I know you are being a Good Samaritan. And," she slowly admitted, "I suppose you are right about sending for the specialist."

Mr. R. Stephen Carrick, who dropped in at eight o'clock with the casual air of one making an evening call, was as human as he was distinguished. He listened patiently to Hamilton's preliminary recital, asked a few leading questions, and made a thorough examination of his patient in a manner that was not too impressive. He left Miss Parsons very much encouraged—they had decided to adopt the hotel's name for—when he found himself alone with Hamilton in the hotel writing-room his manner was less care-free.

"It's a case one can't safely make any predictions about," he confessed. "If we knew what had caused the condition, or what the patient's previous life has been, we could do some guessing; and one's guess would be about as good as another's."

"Her general health seems to be good. She's a highstrung, temperamental creature, but she has dignity and poise, even in this condition, and I'd wager she's kept herself pretty well in hand all her life. I'm guessing that some big jolt caused this—something that just about sent her off her head."

On the whole, their talk left the Good Samaritan glad he had shared his responsibilities; and later, in Miss Parson's up-stairs sitting-room, he gave her a carefully edited report of Carrick's conclusions.

"He thinks as I do," he robustly announced, "that this is merely a temporary matter. He told you that himself. Your memory may return any minute, or it may not come back for some time—possibly not for several days," he optimistically added, observing the quick change in her expression.

"As I expected, he wants a nurse with you at night," he went on, "and he will send a good one within an hour. He knows of just the right person. I'll stay with you till she comes. She is an understanding, tactful woman, and she realizes that she is engaged simply as a companion."

When she stopped she rose and walked to a window of her sitting-room, where she stood for a moment with her back to him, staring out at the night. He had too much understanding to speak or even to approach her. But he could watch her, and he did.

She was very slight and girlish, and in the rather dim light from a shaded bulb near her gave her bobbed bronze-tinted hair the effect of a halo around her small head. Her situation moved him profoundly. Life was a queer thing he told himself as solemnly as if the discovery had been unique. Last night at this time he hadn't known that girl was on earth. Tonight she was his biggest interest his greatest responsibility.

Law Observance Rather Than Enforcement Is Modern Need, Rev. J. H. Meredith Declares

Notes from a sermon preached by Rev. J. H. Meredith at the Methodist Church, May 25th, the second of a series on social subjects.

In this nation of ours we have three general stratas of folks. On account of the power and influence they wield we will call the top strata the very rich. Those whom we might call the idle rich, tearing the world, setting the pace for the social life, and the fashions of the land. It is from this class most of the money is coming to further the cause and movement of doing away with the constitution of the United States. Their

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"TWILIGHT SLEEP"

Sounds almost alluring, doesn't it? Gives one a sort of dreamy feeling just to think of it. Yet, as used in medicine, and quackery as well, it is one of the most deadening combinations of drugs we have at our command.

The originators of the formula known as "H.M.C." claimed at first that a thigh might be amputated without pain under its influence. The attention of the medical world was attracted. That was a good many years ago; and the best surgeons of America are still using the safer method of ether anaesthesia; "twilight sleep" dropped back to its very limited sphere and stayed there.

Hyoscin, Morphine and Cactin are the ingredients of the compound; the first two are most powerful drugs, and the more so when used in combination; the latter has, if any effect at all, a very negligible one. My experience with "H.M.C." led me to abandon it early in its history as too dangerous to tamper with.

For instance, a patient of mine, an inebriate, was in delirium tremens—alcoholic mania; he had not slept for four days. Having tried everything else in despair I gave him a dose of the new "twilight sleep." Well—it worked; within five minutes the man was snoring loudly, and almost blue from cyanosis; he breathed only six times per minutes! I stayed at his bedside fourteen hours, until the poison were away—never more anxious before or since. When he awoke he declared, looking wildly about him, that he had been drugged!

I told him if he hadn't, then there never had been a man drugged. He immediately ordered his belongings packed and left town and I didn't blame him. I blamed myself and the new "twilight sleep." Now I only use the stuff in eighth-grain doses, to soften the terrible pains of childbirth—and I haven't used it even that way in fifteen years.

The quack, however, uses "twilight sleep" as a slogan, and dopes his dupes in his own sweet way with the deadly thing.

Pecos Co. To Vote On Million Dollar Road Bond Issue June 14

An election to decide whether or not Pecos County will issue a million dollars worth of road bonds to match twice that amount from state and federal highway funds has been ordered in that county for June 14, according to an item in this week's issue of the Fort Stockton Pioneer. The petition for the election, signed by approximately 400 voters was presented recently to the Commissioners Court and the election ordered immediately.

If this election carries, and the Pioneer seems confident it will, it will add more than a hundred miles of pavement along the Old Spanish Trail, making a stretch of unbroken pavement of more than 150 miles in length through Crockett and Pecos Counties over this historic Trail.

Following is in part the Pioneer's account of the move:

It looks like Pecos county is going to be almost unanimous on the program for building hard surface highways in the county.

About 400 voters living in most every section of the county signed petitions to the commissioners' court, which were presented last Monday, asking for an election on a million dollar road bond issue for Pecos county.

The court readily granted the petition and ordered the election for Saturday, June 14.

Under the proposal, as we understand it, if the bond issue carries, this county will be granted two dollars for one aid from the State and Federal governments for building designated highways in the county. This will make approximately $3,000,000 available for road construction in this county, counting the funds already on hand in the county treasury for this kind of work.

The Old Spanish Trail through the county will be paved, Highways 67 and 82 and the Iraan section of the county will also receive paving, we are informed, and possibly other roads will get some surfacing. At any rate, the county will have an opportunity to complete a network of hard surface highways with the State and Federal departments furnishing two-thirds of the money, thanks to the work of Judge C. E. Caselcer, who has been working on this plan for several months.

Members of the road committee who circulated the petitions say they encountered virtually no opposition. It was said that only two voters refused to sign the petitions. Imperial, Buena Vista and Iraan voters are anxious to vote for the bond issue, it is said. They expressed the belief that it would be good business judgment on the part of local taxpayers to vote the bonds and get the roads built.

sidered. They want and will have their own way regardless of the influence it may have on the rest of the world. It's against this class that the Labor Union has had to organize. It's against this class that our greatest law suits have been, trying to protect the common property of the nation. It is this class that has furnished the cash for the big bootlegger, the rum runner, the smuggler. It is a class of folks who want to have their own way to do as they please and will go most any limit to get it. Fifty-two millionaires furnish money for liquor movement, 75 per cent of the sixty millions to nullify the eighteenth amendment.

Then because of their helplessness and lack of initiative and weakness as well as wickedness we have the lower strata of life. These are the shifters, the irresponsible, the folks who pay no taxes nor add to the general good of their own interest, those who are satisfied for their children to be schooled on the charity of the nation. They vote for the highest price. Many of them are foreigners with no democratic ideals of freedom for all, license for none. These consumed the greater part of the booze in the old saloon days, and would yet if they could get it. But you know them as well as I do; they need help and we must learn how to help them.

Then there is the great middle strata of life or folks. Here we find the thousands of thrifty farmers, the country merchants, the school teachers, lawyers, ranchmen, the great army of god-fearing industrial workers, carpenters, brick layers, mechanics, etc. To this class of common folks we look for the hope of the country. From this class has come the greater number of our presidents, our great statesmen. I feel that about sixty-five per cent of the folks will pass in this class. Here is where we look for men and women to protect and carry on our religious life, man our schools, and produce our political leaders. This is the "Hope of Israel."

We live in a day when both of the other stratas are making a bid for the middle-of-the-road folks.

Riches and their glittering appearance, their call to idleness, their promise of power, their protection from poverty, fine homes, automobiles, clothes, trips abroad, protection for the law which money has bought, have made a temptation that has caused some to cast away morals, conscience, responsibility, time-honored customs to get rich quick, any way just to get rich. Neither the bodies nor souls of men or women are counted of as much value as riches. And some have fallen for all this, and in doing this some have failed and gone the lower route, become jail birds, refugees from the law of the land and members of the skum of society.

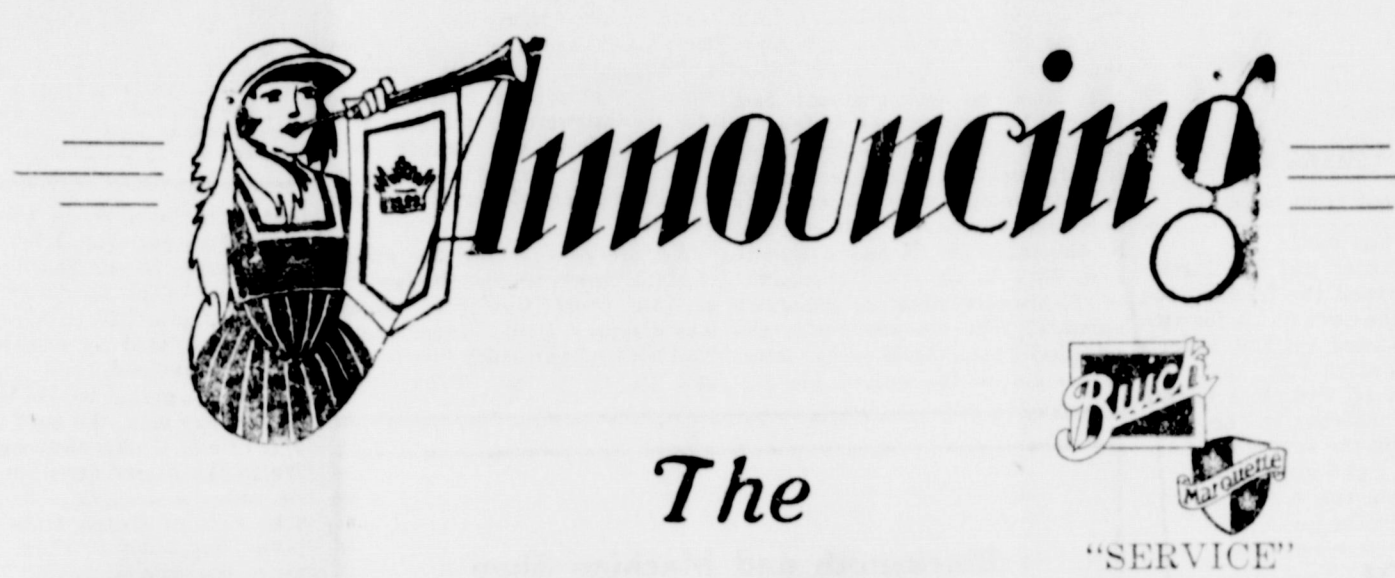

The age-old cry for personal freedom has always been one of the cries of those who would escape responsibility for the general good of the country. But there has never been a nation built on this principle, and there never will be until human nature is changed for the better.

I am not making a plea for law enforcement. I am making a plea for law observance. God pity us when we have to be forced to observe the rights of others, when we have to be made to be good. Our nation is on a tottering foundation when we fail to observe the laws of personal safety, and the rights of our neighbor and our property rights, and even our moral and spiritual rights. Things that undermine the general health of our nation must be destroyed. In order to do this every member of society must necessarily surrender some of his privileges and rights for the general good. To be first class citizens of a country every other citizen must have the same rights as we have and no more.

Take the condition of the present prohibition movement. As I see it here is how we have arrived where we are. Back in the past we had the saloon with all its evils and its immoral force. There came a time when the majority of the citizens of the nation said we won't tolerate the saloon business

Ozona Motor Company

John R. Johnson, Mgr. Phone 54

Wilson Motor Co.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we make our official bow to the people of Crockett County under the name of THE OZONA MOTOR COMPANY, successors to THE WILSON MOTOR COMPANY. Transfer of management of the company has been completed and we are now ready to serve you with a new and larger stock of tires, tubes, accessories, gas, oils, etc., and our service department is now in position to service and repair any make of automobile promptly and efficiently.

The new management of this firm intends to continue the same high class, courteous and friendly service that you have been accustomed to receiving at the hands of our predecessor, Mr. Lee Wilson. Now that we are established in Ozona, our most sincere and earnest effort will be directed always toward the upbuilding and betterment of this community which we now are privileged to call our own. We will endeavor to carry through the same high ideal of community progress, service and satisfaction that has been the guiding policy of Mr. Wilson during his years of business in Ozona.

In connection with this general announcement we take pleasure in announcing a new line of of life each: McKinley and Harding died at 58, Roosevelt at 61, Harrison and Wilson each at 67, Hayes at 70, Cleveland at 71 and Taft at 72.

The job of President of the United States is getting harder for one thing. For another, nearly all men work more intensively and wear out their hearts and nervous systems earlier than men did a hundred years ago.

GASOLINE

The average motorist uses 571 gallons of gasoline a year. Every state now imposes a sale tax on gasoline, ranging from two to six cents a gallon. The highest rates are in Florida, Georgia, South Carolina and New Mexico. That is natural, since those states have the largest highways systems in proportion to population and taxable property values. In Massachusetts, where the tax is only 2 cents and distances shorter, the average motorist uses only 400 gallons a year and pays $8 toward highway maintenance and improvement. Last year the total gasoline tax collected in this country was $449,731,000.

The gasoline tax is one tax at which few persons grumble seriously. It is a tax the benefits of which are directly enjoyed by those who pay it.

caught and was out.

Tommy Hunter and Joe Davidson again turned the trick in the sixth when the former hit for two bases and scored on the latter's single, accounting for the Old Timers total of five. The Giants pushed over another in the sixth and another in the seventh but the Old Timers tightened down in time to retire the regulars with one marker to the good.

Law Observance

any longer. Then when it came to making laws that would stop the saloon business it was found that there was something back of the saloon, that was but the faucet that turned the stop loose that was so defiling, and then laws were made that cut off the supply. Many folks were temperance folks until you got after their supply, and when the laws began to tighten down, many folks were rather surprised I think to find themselves classed as law-breakers.

The top strata furnished the money for the big boot leggers and the lower strata cried for their share but hadn't the money to buy it. Therefore they received the greatest blessing from it as their savings deposits will show.

We as a nation are just now awakening to the fact that the whole intoxicating liquor business is damaging. License was a failure. Government control is a failure, as Canada is now showing us. It has always been an unlawful element not willing to abide by any laws since the day of the Whiskey Rebellion in 1791.

In a daily paper of May 20th, 1930, we read the printed memorials of three of the great religious bodies of the United States, the Southern Baptist Convention at Miss Sally Sensick is shown looking at the first edition of Shakespeare's plays, worth over $100,000, in the treasure room of the Boston Public Library.

New Orleans, the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and United Presbyterians of Texas, all upholding the eighteenth amendment, and urging their members to observe the laws of the land to the letter.

It isn't the laws that are bad, it's the liquor business which the laws try to keep from corrupting the citizens of the land that's bad. Why do we kill rattle snakes? Why not just doctor the patient and let the snake go. He has a right to live. Why do we spend thousands of dollars exterminating predatory animals? Why not just doctor the crippled sheep, build some better fences and let the wolves, the coyotes, the bob cats go? Poor fellows, they can't help it if they like sheep and calf meat. LEAVE the stuff alone. Why make any more or let anybody else make any more, if it causes so much trouble. Let's practice a little common sense about this as well as about other destructive things. Who wants to have a neighbor who keeps a few pet rattle snakes about. Clear 'em all out, bootlegger and all.

We are now seeing the effects of slack observance of the laws regarding protection from contagious diseases. Every citizen should visit two of our state institutions and see there the 1000 children

A Solemn Warning To Motorists

Just to remind drivers that their luck doesn't always hold, Boston has put warning signs like this at street intersections. Last year 35,000 people were killed by automobiles in the United States.

that have been made blind, and many deaf and dumb by measles and scarlet fever. The loss of a few days' work is cheaper than funerals, or a life in silence and darkness caused by diseases that might be avoided.

What is going to be the attitude of our men, the men who belong to our Ozona churches, relative to the liquor question during the rodeo and stock show? Shall it be said of Ozona citizens that it has happened to them according to the true proverb, "The dog is turned again in his own vomit;"

and the sow that was washed white to her wallow in the mire?" When it comes to protecting the morals and the sobriety of the citizens of the county at this time we will ask again the question of the Master, "How much better then is a man than a sheep?"

War makes thieves and peace hangs them—old saying.
