Crockett County people have at least two things to be thankful for this week—the rain and the promise of more rain, and the approval by voters of the $375,000 road bond issue which will provide for paving 82 miles of highways through this county and the expenditure of a million and a half dollars in the county.

Although the rain was more or less scattered over the area, it breaks a drouth of several months standing and has relieved a strained situation by demonstrating it can rain again. The scattered falls this week will be worth many thousands of dollars but the main thing is that the rains have started and the drouth will no doubt be definitely broken throughout the section in the next few weeks.

Passage of the road bond issue again means one of the greatest forward steps this county has ever taken. Not only will it place this county in the front rank among progressive counties of the state, not only will it save residents of the county large sums of money each year in transportation costs, but it will be an invaluable aid to business in this section through the expenditure of this big sum of money.

Prominent men of Sonora have indicated that Sutton County is making plans to vote on a bond issue at an early date to meet the Crockett County paving on the Old Spanish Trail and when this is done it will mean a paved road outlet for this county to San Angelo and the whole eastern part of the state, besides closing one of the worst gaps in the Old Spanish Trail from coast to coast.

The President and the Laws

There are times and occasions when honest people can honestly disagree about the policies of the President of the United States. They may disagree on personal or political grounds, and express their opinions freely without being subject to criticism therefor.

On one point, at least, of President Hoover's policies, it is difficult to see how honest people can disagree. On the question of law enforcement the only possible disagreement is between honest folk and criminals.

Honest men may dislike any particular law, for any number of reasons. It is not only their right in such a case to agitate for its amendment or repeal, it is their duty. There is nothing inconsistent with honesty and good citizenship in taking part in any lawful effort to change the laws, even the Constitution itself.

But so long as any law is a law, the effort of the Executive to enforce it to the utmost of human and administrative efficiency calls for the support of everyone who regards himself as a good citizen, or who wishes to be so regarded by his neighbors and his community. If each of us is to select which laws he will obey and which he will violate, the foundations of our democratic system of government begin at once to crumble.

President Hoover has asked Congress to put better tools into his hands for the enforcement of the Federal laws. The procedure in the Federal Courts today necessitates long delays and inadequate attention to the majority of criminal cases. The Commission of Law Enforcement, composed of many of the ablest men in the nation, has recommended many changes in the laws governing the Federal Courts. The legislation necessary to effect those changes should not be made the basis of a partisan quarrel in Congress. The issue in this instance is not between political points of view but between honest citizens and criminals.

THE BROOK
 By Alfred Tennyson

I come from haunts of coot and hern.
 I make a sudden sally,
 And sparkle out among the fern
 To bicker down the valley.
 By thirty hills I hurry down,
 Or slip between the ridges,
 By twenty thorns, a little town,
 And half a hundred bridges,
 Till last by Phillips farm I flow
 To join the brimming river,
 For men may come and men may go,
 But I go on forever.

I chatter over stony ways
 In little sharps and trebles,
 I bubble into eddying bays,
 I babble on the pebbles.
 With many a curve my banks I fret,
 By many a field and fallow,
 And many a fairy foreland set

With willow-weed and mallow,
 I chatter, chatter as I flow
 To join the brimming river,
 For men may come and men may go,
 But I go on forever.

I wind about, and in and out,
 With here a blossom sailing,
 And here and there a lusty trout,
 And here and there a grayling,
 And here and there a foamy flake
 Upon me, as I travel,
 With many a silvery water-break
 Above the golden gravel,
 And draw them all along and flow
 To join the brimming river;
 For men may come and men may go,
 But I go on forever.
 I steal by lawns and grassy plots,
 I slide by hazel covers,
 I move the sweet forget-me-nots
 That grow for happy lovers,
 I slip, I glide, I gloom, I glance

Among my skimming swallows,
 I make the netted sunbeams dance
 Against my sandy shallows,
 I murmur under moon and star
 In brambly wildernesses;
 I linger by my shining bars,

I loiter round my creases;
 And on and on I curve and flow
 To join the brimming river,
 For men may come and men may go,
 But I go on forever.

COPYRIGHT BY EDGAR WALLACE

That morning, before he had left on his fatal expedition, Mrs. Fraser had handed him a little blue-covered book.

"A driving license, eh? You weren't by any chance driving a car today around Bond Street, were you?"

Luke's heart sank within him. And then he heard one of the detectives say:

"That's the fellow! He had a beard this afternoon. I saw him driving with a woman in the park."

He whispered something to Gorton and the inspector nodded. All the time Luke was thinking rapidly. That simple explanation of his was no longer possible. If he declared himself to be Luke Maddison, he must also explain what he had been doing since he disappeared. The realization of that came with shocking emphasis. And he knew that below, Margaret was waiting and would recognize him instantly in spite of his mustache.

Ahead of him was the open door leading to the hall. To the right door flung open. The inspector saw a man with grimy face and disordered clothing standing in the little room he had used as a dressing room. The window was right above the first landing of the fire escape. Luke had a horror of fires, and it was his favorite amusement to plan out how he would escape from a burning building. If he could get to that room. . . . It did not seem possible.

Somebody spoke from the landing outside. It was the hall porter, who had called to discover what the commotion was about. The two detectives who were guarding the door turned their backs for a moment, and in that instant Luke Maddison leaped. He was something of an athlete; had played for his fifteen at college, had nothing to learn about the art of avoiding a tackle. He dashed through the door of the dressing room, banged it tight, and shot the bolt as the weight of two men was flung against it.

This was no moment for caution. He flung up the window and his legs went out almost in the same motion. In another second he dropped into the darkness. He had calculated well. The steel platform of the fire escape clanged under his feet. In another instant he was flying down the steps and was over the wall before the first of the detectives reached the head of the escape.

A man was lounging in the mews and he turned with a shout as Luke dropped. But Luke was off like the wind. His long stay in the hospital had thrown him out of condition, but he had all the technique of a runner. As he emerged from the narrow entrance of the mews he saw a cab passing, and leaped on the running board.

"Paddington," he said, and swung himself deftly inside.

Evidently the driver was in some doubt as to whether he should continue. He went about two blocks and then pulled the car up by the side of the curb.

"Where have you come from?" he asked. "I can't take you, governor. You look as if you were running away from somebody."

"I was," said Luke.

It was not a moment to argue. He threw a two-shilling piece to the man, turned down a narrow street conveniently near, and doubling back, reached the main road. Here he found a taxi moving at leisure, and a driver who did not question his bona fides.

The cab drew up at the entrance of Scotland Yard and Luke went swiftly down the declivity and into the gloomy entrance hall. A police officer on duty challenged him and asked his requirements.

"Mr. Bird's been gone for two hours, sir. I think he's gone into the country. Would you like to see anybody else?"

Groaning inwardly, Luke shook his head.

He came out on to the Thames Embankment at one end of the Yard as Gorton and his Flying Squad came in at the other. Turning left, he walked toward Waterloo Bridge. At Charing Cross Underground he made another attempt to get into touch with the Sparrow. There was a chance that the policeman was wrong and that Bird was still in town. He went to the telephone directory, but there were so many Birds that it was impossible to tell which was which. And then he remembered one of his initials—an unusual "Z" (Mr. Bird's middle name was Zachariah). He scanned the list again and going into the telephone booth, gave a number.

At first he thought his luck was in.

"Yes this is Mr. Bird's house," said a voice, "but he's out of town. Who is this speaking?"

"It is vitally important that I get in touch with him as soon as possible," said Luke urgently. "Can you tell me where he can be found?"

"Who are you?"

"Will you tell him it's Mr. Maddison speaking? I have been to Scotland Yard . . ."

He felt a sudden draught. The door of the telephone booth was ajar; an unconcerned man was standing near by, and apparently had no interest either in him or his conversation. Luke shut the door again, and then, to his annoyance, found that whoever had spoken for Mr. Bird had hung up her receiver. Still, that was a start. He almost felt a sense of relief as he came out on to the cold Embankment and pursued his way toward Waterloo.

He had not gone twenty yards before two men, walking quickly, overtook him, and fell in one at each side.

"Hullo, Smith! Connor wants to see you."

He had never seen the man before. His tone was offensive and peremptory.

"And who may Mr. Connor be?" asked Luke coolly. "My name is not Smith, it is Maddison."

"That's all right, sir," said the other more respectfully, "but Mr. Connor does want to see you pretty badly."

"Where is he?" asked Luke after a moment's thought.

"At the top of Savoy Hill—there goes the Squad."

A car flashed at that moment; the red light disappeared along the Embankment.

"They call 'em buses and they are busy," said the second man bitterly.

They did not go up Savoy Hill but turned aside, passed one entrance of the Savoy Hill and up a steep and narrow street. They turned again to the right.

"Where is Connor?"

"I'll tell you in a minute, when I have got a light for my fag," said the smaller of the two.

He struck a match and Luke's eyes instinctively went to it. That is all he remembered. He did not feel the pain of any blow, but dropped limply to the pavement under the impact of a rubber cosh.

His head was splitting when he came to his senses. He was lying on the hard floor of a jolting motor car; he discovered afterward it was a little Ford wagon that bore innocently enough the name of respectable firm of greengrocers. The two men were squatting at his side; one was smoking, and they were carrying on conversation in a low voice.

"That's what Connor told me," said one. "But then, Connor always thought this nut would put up a squeal."

Luke lay motionless; his head was throbbing, but he felt no other discomfort. Apparently, although he could guess there was a bump as big as an egg on his skull, the blow had not drawn blood.

The car stopped. There was the creak of a gate being opened, and then they went forward again, jolting over uneven ground; presently the car stopped and the engine was shut off.

"Are you awake?" "I'm awake all right," said Luke.

"Then get out of this. Why was you so foolish, Smith?"

A mild question, from a man who, only ten minutes before, had stunned him.

He found himself in a room not only furnished by overfurnished.

Texans Are Proud of Their Concrete Pavements—

There is a reason for that! Portland cement concrete pavements meet every demand of the motorist. They are smooth, even surfaced, rigid, pleasing in color and skid-proof.

For the taxpayer it's significant that the greatest amount of portland cement concrete pavements have been built by those communities having the heaviest traffic and the most experience in building and maintaining pavements.

Portland cement concrete is truly the aristocrat of street and road paving materials.

Montague Seeks Dist. Judgeship

Appointee Asks Election To Office He Now Holds

Judge Joe G. Montague of Fort Stockton authorizes the Stockman this week to announce his candidacy for the office of Judge of the 112th judicial district, which office he now holds under appointment by Governor Dan Moody upon creation of the new district last fall.

Judge Montague was born in Bandera County and was graduated from the Bandera High School. Later he was graduated from the St. Louis College in San Antonio and the University of Texas at Austin.

He volunteered for service during the World War and was commissioned as an officer in the Field Artillery. He served overseas until the close of the war.

Returning from the battlefields of France, Judge Montague took up the practice of law. He served Bandera County as County Clerk and later as County Judge. He has served as District Attorney of the 83rd Judicial District.

Judge Montague was appointed District Judge of the 112th Judicial District on October 18, 1929, and has served in that capacity since that date.

He comes from a renowned family of Texas pioneers; the County of Montague having been named after his great-great-grandfather.

Judge Montague is capable and efficient and qualified for the office he is seeking. He is not opposed for the office.

134,000 Pounds Of Wool Sold In Sealed Bids At San Angelo

In the first sealed bid sale for Texas wool this season, and perhaps the first for the southwest, the Wool Growers Central Storage Company Tuesday sold 134,000 pounds of wool. No other sales have been announced and most of the big lots will be offered during May and June.

Fifty thousand pounds of 12 months wool and 24,000 pounds of eight months clip went to D. E. Hughes, resident buyer for Studley and Emory of Boston, 60,000 pounds of clippings going to Tom Richey of Lampasas for the Central Texas Trading Company. Prices, not announced, were said to have been satisfactory.

The wool on which 10 buyers made bids, were from the early shearings and most of it from marketable muttons.—S. A. Times.

AMERICA IS CHOOSING

BUICK

ACCEPT THIS INVITATION—

Prove BUICK supremacy in traffic, on hills, on the straightaway—choose the car that's winning two-to-one buyer preference in its field.

May we make just one suggestion: Take the wheel of a BUICK and experience the full measure of its abilities before buying any car. Then buy according to results!

Performance! That's what you want... performance plus the exceptional beauty of Body by Fisher... and a ride in any one of the 15 Buick models will prove a revelation of power, flexibility, swiftness, smoothness and stamina.

Fine car owners everywhere are preferring Buick. In fact, so marked is the trend to Buick that America is awarding it from 35 to 50 per cent of the combined sales of the fifteen makes in its price class. But be your own judge of Buick's performance and value. Come, take the wheel!

TEXAS

NEW POWER UNIT COMPLETED

Whirling an additional 20,000 horsepower into the great network of transmission lines which covers virtually all of West Texas, the new steam turbine at the Concho Generating Station was completed and put into full operation on April 15th by the West Texas Utilities Company.

The enlargement which has more than doubled the output capacity of the station bringing the total generating power to 35,000 h. p., entailed the enlargement of the building and adjacent substation. The boiler room which has been added to the north wing of the plant was extended 25 feet by 115 and the switch room, added to the south wing, was extended 40 by 50 feet. With the addition of 20,000 h. p. steam turbine unit and condenser, raw water softeners, evaporating units and two boilers of 1,000 h.p. each, were also added. The 66 Kv substation which was built is approximately twice the size of the one which has been relegated and the mammoth spray pond completed enables the station to cool off more than double the amount of water used before.

The generating unit weighs in all 86 tons, 31 tons of which were whirling at a tremendous speed when the generator began to revolve. The unit was completed and thoroughly tested last week and its traditional 20,000 h. p. shot into the hundreds of miles of transmission lines on April 15th.

FLASHES

How to produce a light which airmen could see through fog has puzzled electrical experts ever since the problem of lighting flying fields at night became important. "Lindy," flying across country, noticed that the flashes of the electric arc produced when a trolley pole slips off the wire could be seen from the air when no other light was visible. He reported that to the General Electric Company and the result is a new flashing arc beacon, the safest guide to night flyers yet evolved.

Great inventions come often from close observation of little things. Col. Lindbergh is what he is because he notices little things.

PROMISES

Politicians deal in promises. Economists deal in facts. Nobody loves facts. Everybody loves promises. That is why we listen to the politicians and turn a deaf ear to the economists. And because the politicians seldom are able to make good on their promises, we throw them out and elect another set who make even more attractive promises.

For ten years economists have been trying to get Europe's finances straightened out, following the war into which the nations went because of what their politicians promised them. The principal obstacle to settlement of the war bills was the promises of politicians made after the Armistice. As Owen D. Young pointed out the other day, politicians of France, England and Italy promised they would make Germany pay $33,000,000,000. Now the economists have got the war debts finally settled. The most that Germany can pay is $9,000,000,000. Her creditors have agreed to accept that sum. Now the same politicians are making other promises and their peoples are believing them, in the same old way.

ZEPPELINS

The airship is coming into its own. Half a dozen great American manufacturing industries, backed by the National City Bank, have arranged to manufacture commercial dirigibles of huge size, on the successful Zeppelin design, in both Germany and the United States. It will be a year or more before the first of these is ready for service, but within five years we may look to see an immense volume of freight and passenger traffic carried by air in these huge ships. Meantime, other Americans are experimenting with all-metal dirigibles on a smaller scale, and those look promising.

EUROPA

The fastest passenger ship in the world is the new German Europa, which crossed from Cherbourg to New York in four days, 17 hours and six minutes. The next fastest is the Bremen, also a German ship, which did the trip in only 17 minutes slower time. There are only three ships in the world larger than the Europa and the Bremen. They also were built in Germany. They are the Majestic originally the Bismarck, seized during the war by Great Britain, the Leviathan, originally the Vaterland, seized by the United States and the Berengaria, originally the Imperator.

Commercially speaking, these big fast ships are not profitable. Speed costs too much. But as advertisements of their respective nations they pay large dividends in goodwill. Just now Germany seems to be getting most of it.

DRUDGERY

The world is full of people, especially young folk, who think there is some short cut to fame and fortune. They try to write stories and poems, paint pictures, carve statues, act leading roles on the stage or make their fortunes in business, without serving the long and painful apprenticeship which always precedes real success. It can't be done.

Just now two young men who broadcast a Negro comedy feature every night are attracting world-wide attention. "Amos 'n Andy" are reported to be drawing a salary of $100,000 a year, so thousands of young men who think that is easy money are trying to break into the same game.

The young men who are earning a fortune for their ability as entertainers went through years of ill-paid, long-hour drudgery before they became masters of their art. So did every other great artist in any line. So did every man or woman who has made a success in business or industry. Young people don't believe that. It was true when the pyramids were built and it will still be true when they have crumbled into dust.

BUILDING

Plans already developed for new buildings to be constructed in 1930 call for an expenditure of nearly double that of 1929. And this does not include private residences. States and municipalities have raised more funds by bond issues in the past three months than in any similar period, and the proceeds of those sales will be used for new roads, public buildings and other improvements. Everything points to a greater volume of construction work under way in the near future than we have seen since the first year or two following the war. And that means employment for everybody, money freely in circulation again, renewed prosperity for all sorts and conditions of men.

J. O. Secrest was stricken suddenly ill at his office at the West Texas Lumber Company here Tuesday and was taken to his home. He was reported somewhat improved Wednesday.

"GUNMAN'S BLUFF"

Connor was sitting at a table shuffling a pack of cards. He looked up as Luke entered the room.

"Did you have to cosh him?" he asked pleasantly.

The man who held Luke's arm grinned.

"Sit down," Connor pointed to a horsehair sofa against the wall and Luke was glad to accept the invitation. "Tried to put up a squeal, did you, Smith?"

There was nothing unfriendly in Connor's tone. He did not cease shuffling the cards as he spoke.

"I thought you were a man when you did that bust—yes, one of my lads saw you get into that flat, and saw you when you bolted. But you're nothing better than a dirty squealer. Went into the Yard and asked for the Sparrow did you? Is he a pal of yours?"

"I know him," said Luke.

Mr. Connor nodded pleasantly.

"And then you tried to get him on the phone—what was the squeal about? Don't trouble to tell me; I know. I never trusted you from the start, Smith—I don't trust Australians."

Despite his aching head, Luke could not but smile at this libel.

"I shouldn't think they trust you a great deal, do they?" he asked.

"Not much," said Connor.

He cut the pack in two, shuffling them scientifically, and all the time his eyes were on Luke.

"So you know the Sparrow? That's good. I bet you know Danty, too."

Luke started.

"Danty Morell?" he asked.

Why had Danty gone out of his mind? Why had he forgotten that Danty was a confidant of his wife—that his one desire in seeking freedom from the sinister environment in which he found himself had been to expose that confidence man?

"Know Danty, too! Connor's voice was almost admiring. "And Pi Coles?"

Luke nodded.

"Yes, Coles—that's his servant. Connors smiled broadly, and there were grins on the face of the other two men.

"Pi is his servant all right. You seem to know the whole darn shoot! I'm telling you, Smith, that a man that knows Danty and the Lewing gang, and calls at Scotland Yard to see his friend the Sparrow, isn't a healthy fellow to have around the house."

There was a long pause, and then he added.

"That's why you're not going to be around the house."

He looked up at one of the men thoughtfully.

"When is high tide?"

"Four o'clock."

Connor nodded. Again his dark eyes fell on Luke.

"You a good swimmer?"

"Fair," said Luke coolly.

"We'll give you a little dip tonight," said Connor. "Put him in the cooler, Harry."

Connor carried on a legitimate if unprofitable business. He was a dealer in certain building materials, and barges came regularly but at rare intervals to this wharf and were unloaded. He bought and sold scrap iron, cement and any commodity which offered an immediate profit. The wharf could be and was hired for a fee.

A few paces from the door of the sitting room they came to another. Luke could not help wondering whether the little chamber into which he was thrust had been used for the same purpose before. It had no windows, but in other respects was curiously like a prison cell. It might have been employed for the storage of coal, but there was nothing in it now, not even a bed or a stool. In the light of the man's electric torch he saw that the walls were of brick and whitewashed. Then the door was slammed on him he heard a bolt shot and he was left alone with the unpleasant knowledge that it would be high tide in five hours and that Mr. Connor in his amiable way, had planned to give him "a dip."

Margaret found several sheets of notepaper on the floor of Luke's room. She picked up one, read it and gasped. The date had been scrawled in on the top line and it began:

My dear Hulbert, I am in a most terrible—

It was Luke's writing! It was Luke who had been there that night. She found another sheet covered with writing — this also was addressed to the solicitor, but the three scrawled lines were undecipherable. He had deliberately crossed them out. Evidently he had sat down to write a letter to Hulbert, had made two attempts and then had changed his mind.

It was so like Luke—he could never resist the temptation offered by a sheet of note paper — he must write to somebody, he had often told her.

Luke had been here. Luke was the burglar. But why?

She turned to the detective, and it was on the tip of her tongue to make the revelation when he said something that struck speech from her lips.

"He must have been a pretty bad man, that fellow—one of our men recognized him as the chap who was driving a car this afternoon when Taffany's was robbed. He gave one of the shop assistant's a punch in the jaw—"

"But that's impossible!" she said indignantly. "This man—"

"Ah, you've read about it in the papers—a bearded man. That's right, madam, he's taken his beard off this afternoon. Johnson—that is the officer — saw him driving with a girl around the park."

Again speech died on her lips.

"They got her tonight," said the communicative detective. "Mr. Gorton's pretty certain she'll put up a squeal—I mean to say, she'll tell who her companion was. From all accounts he's a man who has been seen about with her a great deal in the past year or two."

BIG BUSINESS

Man of the world! You are busy indeed
Guiding the fate of the land;
Planning the things that the country will need,
You carry them out as you planned.
Highways, big business, contracts and such
To your business man's mind are a joy.
And they are important and vital and yet—
Give some of your time to your BOY!
Men are the things that build nations it seems,
Not contracts, nor highways, nor gold,
So isn't he worth just a part of your time?
This "man who is twelve years old?"
An hour now and then, an evening at home.

Will bring you contentment and joy.
Remember, some day you'll depend upon him—
Give some of your time to your boy!—Scout Bulletin.

COMPARE the delivered price as well as the list price in considering automobile values. Chevrolet's prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing. Easy G. M. A. C. Terms.

There is one sure way to get greater value in a low-priced car today—choose a Six!

This greater value is instantly obvious when you drive a Chevrolet Six. You notice first of all its greater smoothness. There is no tremor in the steering wheel—no rattle in the floor boards—no drumming in the body.

In addition to the finer performance of its six-cylinder motor, the new Chevrolet gives you truly remarkable economy.

Its six-cylinder smoothness saves the entire car from the strain and wear of vibration. This, of course, lowers the cost of maintenance and assures a longer-lasting automobile.

From the standpoint of operating expense, Chevrolet is equally economical. No automobile uses less gasoline and oil. No car shows a lower expense for tires. And no car costs less for service.

Because of its modern engineering, Chevrolet also assures a high re-sale value—for its entire design is just as advanced as its six-cylinder engine.

Chevrolet gives you fully-enclosed, weather-proof, 4-wheel brakes. It gives you a modern fuel system—with the gasoline tank mounted in the rear outside the body. It gives you four long semi-elliptic springs, mounted lengthwise in the direction of car travel. It gives you beautiful Fisher bodies built of combination hardwood-and-steel. It gives you a full ball bearing steering mechanism, an adjustable driver's seat, a Fisher VV non-glare windshield, and tilting beam headlights, operated by a foot-controlled button.

Before you decide on any car in the low-price field, see and drive the Chevrolet Six. The more thoroughly you investigate, the more certain you are to conclude that it's wise to choose a Six—for value, for performance and for economical transportation!

Santiago Vargas Found Not Guilty

Jury Acquits Local Mexican On Assault To Murder Charge

Santiago Vargas, Ozona Mexican, was acquitted by a jury in Crockett County district court last week on a charge of assault with intent to murder in connection with the alleged shooting of one Antonio Agurra in the Mexican suburb of Ozona on March 15. The jury was out but five minutes, only one ballot being required to reach a verdict.

Self defense was Vargas' plea, the defense showing that the wounded Mexican had made threats against the life of the defendant.

The Vargas case was the only criminal case tried during the April term of court here.

LAS AMIGAS CLUB SHOWERS BRIDE - TO - BE

Miss Eleanor Ingham entertained the Las Amigas Bridge Club with a bridge-breakfast last Saturday morning at her home, naming Miss Rachel Graham, a bride-to-be as honoree.

Grape fruit, eggs, toast, bacon, jelly and coffee constituted the breakfast menu. High score prize for the club was won by Miss Kathryn Baggett and Miss Carolyn Fox won high guest prize. Cut prize went to Miss Hester Bunger.

The party was turned into a surprise feature for the honoree when at the end of the games she was handed a bundle of "washing" which proved to be presents for her kitchen and breakfast room.

Those enjoying the affair were Misses Kathryn Baggett, Beulah Baggett, Hester Bunger, Carolyn Fox, Mary Childress, Gracia Swanson, Beth Davidson, Mary Kincaid, Mary Augustine, Mildred North, Rachel Graham, Lucile Ingham, Gussie Watson, Wanda Watson, Maxine Roth, and Mrs. Marshall Montgomery.

Miss Louise Henderson is reported seriously ill with an attack of measles.

A number of cases of measles and chicken pox are reported here for the past several weeks.

Senior Play Gets Good Crowd For Showing Fri. Night

A fairly well filled house greeted members of the cast of the 1930 Senior class play "Kingdom of Heart's Content," presented at the Ozona Theater last Friday night. Total receipts of the evening amounted to approximately $85.

The play, which was under the direction of Miss Berta Mae Norman, was a three-act comedy of college life, with a wealth of laughs and an interesting plot. There were eighteen characters in the play and all performed their parts splendidly.

Rocksprings Trounces Ozona High Lions In Swat-Fest Saturday

The Rocksprings High School nine led the Ozona Lions at the final count last Saturday in a scoring bee on the Rocksprings diamond which resulted in a score of 14 to 11. The Rocksprings lads were able to hit safely 15 times while the locals rung up 12 bingles.

The Lions will be idle this weekend, but they will make up for it with a very busy one next week. Two games in two successive days is the program for the next weekend, Friday, April 25, a return game with Rocksprings on the local diamond, and Saturday Eldorado here.

The score by innings in Saturday's game at Rocksprings follows:

Surplus Mileage—the Extra Margin of Safety

Big mileage isn't the only economy in the Dual-Balloon. Its reserve mileage is the best guarantee against accidents and tire worry of every kind.

You have at stake your comfort, time and safety—plus the primary purpose of a tire, the protection of the car itself.

On any car, large or small, you will be amazed at the difference with the Dual-Balloon.

Twice the Mileage—Twice the Comfort

No other tire can run at such extreme low pressure without premature wear!
No other tire has shock absorbers built in. These extra plies of thick, soft rubber completely absorb the shock you have been accustomed to on single balloons.
No more rebound. No more shimmy, wobble or gallop—no more side-sway even on the sharpest curves.

[Now is the time to save the most. Rubber prices are up—but tires are still priced on the old low cost.]
