CANADA

Canada is becoming increasingly popular as a place for Americans to go on their vacation trips. That is not all on account of the ease with which one may get a drink across the border, compared with this side. Those interested in the quaint and historical find much to fascinate them in the old French settlements in Quebec and the historical coast of Nova Scotia. Fishermen, mountaineers and motorists, as well as ordinary vacationists, from the United States spent $289,000,000 in Canada last year, the Department of Commerce estimates, while Canadian tourists spent about $91,000,000 on this side of the border. Considering that Canada has less than 10 per cent as many people as we have, that is a pretty good showing for our northern neighbors.

FLYING

The flying season is just now at its height. Roger Q. Williams flew the 1,560 miles from New York to Bermuda and back without a stop, between daylight and dark, or in 17 hours. John and Kenneth Hunter, flying over Chicago, beat the endurance record for continuous flight, 420 hours, on the same day. Still comparatively few in America have ever been up in an airplane and fewer still, proportionately, use planes for transportation. Just how rapidly we are becoming nationally "air-minded" nobody can tell exactly, but not as rapidly as the aviation folk hoped when Lindbergh made his historic flight.

It takes a lot of time to change the habits and point of view of the human race.

FORD

I visited Henry Ford's great plant at Dearborn the other day. As I came out of one of the buildings I saw a rope stretched across the brick pathway.

"We'll have to walk on the grass," said my guide. "There's a killdeer's nest down that path. Mr. Ford saw it the other day and had us block the path. The killdeer, you know will leave its nest and let its young ones die if it is disturbed."

I didn't know that fact of natural history, not having been brought up in the prairie country where the killdeer flourishes, but as I looked down the path and saw the mother bird hovering over the nest in a low bush I felt that I had got a glimpse of another phase of Henry Ford's character.

METALS

The most precious of all metals is neither gold nor platinum, but the rare substance known as iridium, which is used chiefly to make points of fountain pens and to alloy with platinum to give it the necessary hardness.

Last year iridium prices ranged in the United States from $180 to $450 an ounce with $229 as the average price. Platinum dropped from $110 an ounce to $56, the drop being due to the large importations from Colombia, whence we got over 45,000 ounces. Before the war Russia was the principal source of platinum, but only 6 ounces came from there last year. The United States produced only 516 ounces of this metal.

Palladium, worth about $40 an ounce, osmium about the same value as platinum, and ruthenium, only a little less valuable, are other rare metals used by jewelers.

Ozona Asked To Choose Duchess

West Texas Exposition To Stage Elaborate Coronation

Efforts of officials of the West Texas Exposition at San Angelo to make the 1930 exposition, Sept. 22 to 27, valuable to every county in the territory are being encouraged in Ozona by Evert White and Victor Pierce, members of the West Texas Advisory Board of the Exposition.

The Ozona members have just been advised by Preston Y. Chumley, assistant manager of the exposition, that their help will be appreciated in furthering interest in the exposition in this vicinity.

Selection of a duchess to represent Ozona in the colorful ceremony which will surround the coronation of the Queen of the West Texas exposition before the grandstand at the exposition grounds on Friday evening, Sept. 26, will be the local members' first step toward furthering the 1930 program. The duchess will select her maid of honor and they will be privileged to select their escorts, making a total of four persons to represent Ozona in the coronation ceremony, it was explained in a letter received by the local members from the Exposition offices in San Angelo.

The local members are expected to select the duchess at once. Immediate selection of the duchess and maid of honor to represent this community has been urged in order that widest possible publicity might be given our part in the exposition program, the local board members explained.

Any resident of this community interested in becoming a nexhibitor or in taking any part whatever in the West Texas Exposition is urged to communicate at once with the local members of the West Texas Advisory Board.

A feeder lamb show, horse show, official rabbit and cavy show, West Texas band contest, rodeo events, horse races and a Terrapin Derby are features of the exposition for 1930 about which the local members of the advisory board will be able to supply information to any local citizen.

Wilson Recounts Lions Convention

Local Delegate To International Meet Is Enthusiastic

An enthusiastic report of the work of Lionism all over the world was brought to the Ozona Lions Club at its luncheon Monday by Lee Wilson, official delegate of the local club to the International Convention of Lions Clubs held last week in Denver, Colo. There were approximately 3,500 delegates from all over the United States and many foreign countries and thousands of visiting members present for the meeting, Mr. Wilson said.

The Texas delegation left Fort Worth last Sunday in a special train, which made stop-overs in important cities along the route where the delegation was entertained by local clubs. The Texas delegation was the largest of any state in the Union, a total of 139 Lions going from this state. California was second with 131 delegates.

Earl Hodges of New York City was elected International president to succeed Ray L. Riley of California. Julien C. Hyer of Fort Worth, Texas, was elevated from second to first vice president and will be elected president of the International next year. The convention goes to Toronto, Canada, next year.

Mr. Wilson was impressed with the splendid talent assembled for the convention programs, including some of the greatest public speakers in the nation and musical programs that were as good as could be heard anywhere. Reports from various clubs over the

Davidson Lambs Sold At 9 Cents

Fat Lambs Shipped To Fort Worth Market Wednesday

Two carloads of mixed lambs, nearly 600 in number, were sold on the Fort Worth market this week by Joe T. Davidson at 9 cents a pound.

The lambs were gathered and taken to Barnhart by truck Tuesday night for loading out to Fort Worth.

These were fat lambs and averaged nearly 70 pounds in weight. The price secured on the Fort Worth market was the highest reported in this area for the season and local ranchmen see in it an encouraging sign of a rise in price of lambs.

Big Crowds Attend Rocksprings Goat Show Last Week

ROCKSPRINGS, July 17—The annual show and sale of the Texas Angora Goat Raisers' Association closed here tonight after three days of big celebration featured by varied entertainment. More than 3,000 attended the big free barbecue at noon today and gate receipts, while not checked tonight assured that some money would be left over for a start on next year's meeting, which also will be held in Rocksprings.

Forty goats were sold at private sale during the show. The top price was sold today by A. E. Mayes of Rocksprings to M. Holkamp of Kimble County at $350. Yesterday's top was $250 for a buck paid by C. A. Pepper to V. A. Brown. The average for 38 goats sold at auction last year was $187.90, while it was thought to have been less this year.

GRIMMER-KIRKPATRICK

Tot Grimmer, son of Mrs. Edward Grimmer, and Miss Hallie Kirkpatrick, daughter of Mrs. John Mitchell, surprised their friends here when they slipped off to the Methodist parsonage Saturday night and were married by Rev. J. H. Meredith. They left immediately after the quiet ceremony on a short wedding trip, returning here Tuesday night to make their home.

Elbert Alexander, tailor at the Roy Parker shop, left Tuesday for his home in Sherman to be at the bedside of his brother, who is reported critically ill.

World showed the wonderful work that is being done by the International organization toward promoting international understanding and world peace and toward rehabilitation of the unfortunates of the world.

F. A. Gray Leases 16-Section Ranch

Ozona Man Buys 1200 Yearling Ewes To Stock Ranch

F. A. Gray, water-well driller here for many years, will join the ranks of sheep raisers on September 1 when he takes over a 16-section ranch leased this week from Jim O'Harrow of Eldorado.

The lease is located in Upton County about 15 miles from Rankin. Mr. Gray has purchased 1200 head of yearling ewes from John Fogarty for September 1 delivery. These ewes will be the initial stock to be placed on the 16-section lease.

Mr. Gray is having a home erected on the ranch this week and will start fencing in the next few days. Three new wells are also to be sunk on the land. The land which Mr. Gray has acquired joins the A. C. Hoover ranch in Upton county. The lease runs for five years.

Shower In Honor Of Bride-Elect

Mrs. N. W. Graham and Mrs. Leta Hawkins entertained with a miscellaneous shower Wednesday morning at Mrs. Graham's home in honor of Miss Kathryn Baggett whose marriage to Richard Flowers will take place on August 12.

The bride's chair was draped in white and placed under an arch from which hung a white wedding bell. Beside the chair a large basket of pink and yellow zinnias was placed. The house was profusely decorated with flowers.

After two contests, in which Mrs. Massie West and Mrs. John Bishop were winners, Miss Ethel Childress sang with Miss Lucile Ingham accompanying her on the piano. Mrs. Bascomb Cox also sang a solo, Mrs. J. M. Dudley playing the piano accompaniment.

A huge brightly colored rainbow was seen in the dining room at the end of which sat the proverbial "pot of gold." Mrs. Hugh Childress, Jr., called the honoree's attention to the pot of gold by reciting a poem. At the end of the rainbow Miss Baggett found the "pot of gold" laden with gifts from friends of the young couple.

After the guests had inspected the gifts, a salad course was served to about 65 guests.

CAMPERS BEAT MERTZON

Mike Couch's Campers continued their conquests on the diamond last Sunday by defeating a team from Mertzon by a score of 6 to 2. The previous Sunday the Campers gathered a 3 to 2 win off Menard in a ten-inning game. The Couch team left Wednesday afternoon for Eldorado to meet the fast Schleicher County team, which took the Ozona Giants to an 'nglorious' cleaning last Sunday.

Many Predatory Animals Slain

Landon's Report Shows 331 Taken In June; 7,196 In Year

Predatory animal control work in Texas made great progress during the month of June, according to the monthly report of C. R. Landon, leader of this work under the supervision of the Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, co-operating with the Livestock Sanitary Commission of Texas, and the Texas Predatory Animal Eradication Association.

During this month a total of 331 predatory animals were destroyed in Texas, 79 men being employed in the work, at a total cost to the state and federal government and co-operators of $10,940.16. Mr. Landon's report shows. The animals captured during the month include 61 bobcats, 212 coyotes, 56 red wolves, and 2 mountain lions.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 1930, the predatory animal eradication forces had destroyed a total of 7,196 animals, the report shows. This report covers animals trapped by salaried trappers and a total of 846 poisoned animals actually found dead. Many others probably died of poisoning but the report covers only those found. The year's catch includes 3 predatory bear, 856 bobcats, 4,388 coyotes, 6 mountain lions, 1 lobo wolf and 1,096 red wolves. In addition to these there were a total of 977 unborn young killed during the year.

"The total catch of predatory animals is the largest that we have made in Texas since the work was inaugurated," Mr. Landon said in his report. "This total includes many notorious stock-killers and a good many letters commending the services of various individual trappers have been received from stockmen."

The catch by counties for the month of June shows eight bobcats, seven coyotes and one mountain lion captured in Crockett County during the month. Predatory animal control work is carried on in 71 counties of Texas.

Reference is made in the report to a number of "famous outlaws" captured during the month of June. One of these was a female red wolf captured by W. S. Hall in Bexar County. Mr. Hall had been trapping for this wolf for several months. "This was a small wolf but an exceedingly destructive one," the report said. "Mr. Hall states that this animal weighed under 20 pounds and he had seen signs on various occasions where a sheep or goat had dragged the wolf 50 or 100 yards before being brought down by her." Another outlaw was captured in Ector County by Harry Kloss. This animal was reported to have inflicted losses amounting to thousands of dollars to ranchmen in that section during the past two years.

Skating Rink Scene Of Dance Fri. Night

Ralph Britt and his St. Angelus Hotel Orchestra, will furnish the music for a dance to be given Friday evening at the skating rink operated here by Joe Forehand.

The dance will begin at 9 o'clock and last until 1 a.m. The skating rink floor will be worked down and put in good condition for the dance and everybody is assured of a good time.

BENEFIT FOR GRANDSTAND

"Hot Curves" was the name of a comedy drama of the baseball diamond given at the Ozona Theater Wednesday night as a benefit for the fund being raised here for the construction of a grandstand at Powell Field for use of town and school athletics. A series of seven baseball games between the Ozona Giants and the Old Timers teams netted a total of around $67 toward the fund. More than $500 will be necessary to build the grandstand, it is estimated.

HEAVY VOTE EXPECTED IN ELECTION SAT.

Voting To Be Stimulated By Growing Interest In Contests

POLLS OPEN AT 7

Election Officials Are Named By Co. Democratic Committee

Interest in contests for local offices and the growing interest in the race for governor and other state offices is expected to bring out a heavy vote in Crockett County next Saturday when the first Democratic primary election will be held.

The total voting strength of Crockett County is nearly 700 and local observers are looking for a record turn-out of votes in the Democratic primary.

Election officials were named this week by the County Democratic Executive Committee to hold the election in the various voting boxes of the county. The officials were named as follows:

OZONA BOX (Courthouse) — John R. Bailey, presiding officer; John Young, Early Baggett, and J. M. Baggett, judges; and Houston S. Smith, H. J. Friend, Welton Bunker, Claude Russell, A. W. Robertson, Vernon Cox, Evert White and Ralph Watson, clerks.

OWENS BOX—J. W. Owens, presiding officer.

COATES RANCH (Howard Well)—Chas. E. Coates, presiding officer.

POWELL FIELD—Chas. Black, presiding officer.

PECOS POWER PLANT—J. R. Jones, presiding officer.

Lamb Meat To Be Advertised

National Wool Growers Will Raise $400,000 For Campaign

LOGAN, Utah, July 15—Plans for a national advertising campaign involving the expenditure of $400,000 in an effort to increase the consumption of lamb meat were presented to the Utah Wool Growers' Association here today by F. R. Marshall, secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association.

This sum, to be raised from wool growers of the 12 western range states, including Texas, would be levied at the rate of 1-1/2 cents for each sheep they own. It is planned to use it in advertising in newspapers, magazines, and by radio, and in educational and demonstration work before audiences of housewives and retail meat dealers.

"The new program is altogether bigger and different than anything that has even been attempted by organized wool growers," Mr. Marshall said. "The present conditions and prospects make such an undertaking extremely necessary."

He estimated that the increased duty on wool will be worth at least 10 cents on the average fleece grown in the United States; that on lamb to 2-1/2 cents a fleece, and the increased duty on lamb to about 75 cents per ewe.

"Had your representatives been on the ground at Washington, immediately after the appointment of the Federal Farm Board," he continued, "and insisted upon consideration for wool marketing, there would have been a different story to tell about selling of our 1930 clips. Unsatisfactory as were the prices we received, it is freely conceded by our bankers that the buying and loaning prices on this year's wool were at least 4 cents per pound above what they would have been in the absence from the field of the National Wool Marketing Corporation."

ELECTION DAY SATURDAY

Next Saturday is election day, the first Democratic primary. As the time draws near, the contests for various offices of the state government are working up to white heat. The governor's race has narrowed down to about four of the strongest candidates and at this distance it is difficult to even hazard a guess as to the outcome.

For the convenience of voters here, a sample ballot for the Democratic primary is printed in this issue of The Stockman. This ballot is exactly like the official ballot will appear and it is printed in this issue of The Stockman in order that voters might have an opportunity to study it thoroughly before going to the polls. This sample ballot should not be carried to the polls, however. The law forbids voters to carry a sample or marked ballot or notations of any kind to the polls.

To cast this ballot the voter should draw a line through the names of all candidates he does not care to vote for. For example, there are eleven candidates for governor and a line should be drawn through the names of ten of these, leaving the name of your choice for the office untouched. The same should be done in all offices. Use a black pencil or black ink. Do not mark out the pledge at the top of the ballot. If you do, you will mutilate your ballot and it will not be counted. Do not sign your name to the ballot; if you do it will not be counted.

The polls will open at 7 o'clock Saturday morning and remain open until 7 in the evening. All qualified voters may vote in the box of their residence. The question of "residence" is often an election day problem. The law says that the residence of a single man is "where he usually sleeps at night" while the residence of a married man is "where his wife resides."

Every person who is more than sixty years of age, or is blind, deaf, or dumb, or who is permanently disabled, or has lost one hand or foot shall be entitled to vote without paying a poll tax. Persons who have become 21 years of age since January 1, may vote without a poll tax receipt. Exemption certificates are not necessary in Crockett County, but in case of doubt, the presiding judge may require an affidavit from the applicant.

In this election, as in all others, no voter shall be entitled to receive a new ballot in lieu of one mutilated and defaced until he first returns such ballot. No voter shall be supplied with more than three ballots in succession, when they are mutilated or defaced. Judges of the election are authorized to administer oaths to ascertain all facts necessary to a fair and impartial election. The presiding judge of the election, while in the discharge of his duties as such, shall have the power of the district judge to enforce order and to keep the peace.

NEW AMENDMENTS

The general election on November 4 will decide a question that is of more importance to the people of West Texas and of Crockett County in particular than that of who is elected governor of this state.

This issue is the amendment to the constitution of the state of Texas which provides for the levy of a property tax on lands owned by the University of Texas. This amendment, along with three others, will be submitted to a popular referendum at the general election.

It is likely that a comparatively few people throughout the state even know that this amendment is to be submitted to the voters in the November election. It is an amendment that should carry 100 per cent in West Texas and should receive a majority vote in the eastern part of the state. In West Texas it means relief from an unfair burden, a burden which means approximately half the taxable lands in Crockett County. To the fair-minded people of East Texas this amendment should find favor. It so happened that in granting University lands, these tracts were selected in West Texas and while they remain tax-free, this part of the state is required to furnish this support to the state school and at the same time pay the same taxes into the state treasury for its upkeep that the eastern part of the state pays.

In fairness to the counties where these lands are located the state should pay the usual tax on them. Even then the burden would not be evenly distributed, for the counties where the land is located suffer by reason of the fact that the huge blocks can not be sold and thus development is retarded to that extent. Payment of property taxes on the land would amount to a very small amount if distributed over all the state, but it amounts to a considerable burden to the counties themselves where most of the land is free from taxation.

Interested counties in West Texas should co-operate in a drive to pass this amendment at the general election. It is of vital importance to the future of this section and a question of fairness which should be put squarely before the people of East Texas. It would be worth the effort to put a group of speakers, literature, etc. over the state in the interest of the amendment. The time is comparatively short and the drive should get under way as soon as possible.

THE "LOWER HOUSE"

Most observers of public affairs will agree with Mr. Coolidge in his recent statement that in the Congress which adjourned the other day the House of Representatives proved itself the saner and more statesmanlike of the two houses and went far toward regaining its former prestige.

Certainly the performance of the United State Senate is nothing for the nation to be proud of. Instead of being the sedate, deliberate body which it was intended to be and was for many years, the Senate has become the forum for the wildest and most irresponsible demagoguery. This is a condition which cannot be entirely blamed, perhaps, upon the so-called "popular" election of Senators; but certainly a considerable number of Senators, whom we might name, could never have got into the Senate in the old days when State Legislatures chose the members of the so-called "Upper" House.

It was the House of Representatives which was responsible for practically all of the constructive legislation which the 71st Congress has enacted thus far. While Senators of both parties were posing for individual effect and taking every possible opportunity to give the President a slap in the face, the House of Representatives went about the public business in a business-like way and stood firmly against the wildest and most impractical proposals of the Senate.

The attempt to assert the authority and dominance of the Senate and to reduce the Presidency to the status of an office-boy has had some curious manifestations, but has aroused the laughter and derision of the public more than its sympathies. The rejection of the President's first nominee for Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, Judge Davis, was much more an attempt to "put the President in his place" than because of any real objection to Judge Davis.

No wonder that President Hoover said, when informed of the birth of his latest granddaughter, "I'm glad she doesn't have to be confirmed by the Senate."

The Senate controls all important patronage, under the Constitutional clause requiring its "advice and consent" to major Presidential appointments. But in the last few weeks of the session it became apparent, even to Senators, that the country was resentful of the Senate's antics. The President wisely refrained from trying to crack the whip over them. Apparently he thought that if he gave the Senate enough rope it would hang itself, and that is what happened, so far as the people is concerned.

Time for the Turn to Come

According to the political and business prophets who were so full of optimism last Winter and Spring the nation ought at this time to be beginning to feel the pulsations of returning business activity.

Signs of the expected upturn are noted by several observers, and there is a general feeling among those who make it their business to watch events that the lowest point of the depression has been reached.

Perhaps the most reliable reports are those made to the National Conference of Business Paper Editors and the Associated Business Papers. According to these 150 publications which are intimately in touch with as many different lines of business, there is no line in which there are now stocks on hand in sufficient quantity to carry even sub-normal business for very long. Buying must begin within a few weeks, these observers report. As soon as buying begins, factories must increase production.

It is interesting to note that in some lines of business there has been no falling off this year as compared with last, but a definite increase. While some lines have suffered a 40 percent shrinkage, the consumption of electric current for the first six months of 1930 was 2 percent greater than in the same period of 1929.

It has been a curious sort of business crisis, in that consumer purchases in general have not been greatly curtailed and wages have been reduced in only a few cases. In spite of all the talk about unemployment, there is no evidence of poverty nor any general distress.

Wall Street reports that many large foreign loans will be made in the early Fall. The proceeds of those loans will be used abroad to purchase American goods, thus stimulating export trade. Home mortgage loans are reported easier in some sections and home building is picking up. Bank credits are expanding, indicating that idle money is being put to work.

Nobody can predict the future with certainty. If we could, we would not be running a newspaper but playing the stock market or dealing in grain or cotton futures. But in the long run we pin our faith, as we have always done, on the future of the United States of America. We believe that this country is still moving forward toward the goal of universal and continuous prosperity for everybody and that any set-back can never be anything but slight and temporary.

An Announcement of Interest to Patrons of our Service Dept.

Effective June 1, we are turning over active management and supervision of our repair and service department to Arthur M. Quist and Louis Donaho, supervising mechanics, and after that date our repair department will be operated by these men on a commission basis.

Both Mr. Quist and Mr. Donaho are expert mechanics. Both were formerly connected with the Dudley Motor Company here and Ozona people know their ability as mechanics. We believe that under the new management patrons of our service department will find it more satisfactory to deal directly with the heads of the department where the work is to be done.

This department is thoroughly equipped to do any kind of welding or machine work and to service and repair any make of automobile. Service rates will remain the same as at present and all bills for this work will be handled through the usual channel of the McLeod Motor Co. as at present.

SELLS FOR CASH—SELLS FOR LESS

Miss Nobody from Nowhere

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

Her own life, Eve was beginning to think, would mean acceptance and reconstruction. Marcel and Leon seemed broken reeds, and her present condition might go on indefinitely. If it did, she would at least continue temporarily in this new environment. She was helping Ivy, whom she had persuaded to see a specialist and follow his treatment. Miss Morris had hinted that she would like to learn some French, and had added frankly:

"Some English, too, teacher. Don't think I ain't wise to the way I spill words."

Even Stella was more human with Eve than with others, and on one occasion had sought the novice's apartment to make a tearful confession of a sort not often given. Eve gathered that Stella had so far forgotten her prejudice against men as to fall in love with one of the regulars at Jake's, and to throw herself violently at the head of the unappreciative young man. When he failed to respond she sent him notes.

When he ceased coming to Jake's obviously to avoid her, she called at his rooms late one afternoon and waited there till he came home.

At this point in the account she gave Eve, Stella's sobs grew so loud that Eve feared they might draw Miss Davenport from the next apartment. She mentioned this danger to the raconteuse, who stifled the expression of her grief. It was no part of Stella's plan to make Ivy a confidante. But her plain face was tear-streaked as she went on, and Eve experienced a deep sympathy not only for her but for the regular who had been subjected to this sort of scene. There may be girls who are beautiful when they weep. Poor Stella was snot among them.

"I let'm see why I was there," Stella gulped, "an' he was that polite he broke my heart. I'd taken off my coat an' hat before he come in, for of course I thought he'd keep me to dinner anyway. Don't they always, in stories an' pictures? But he didn't. He got my hat an' coat, an' he put 'em on gentle an' kind, like he was dressin' a kid, with soothin' noises, an' he told me I was too nice a girl to put myself in a compromisin' position. Wasn't that the el'phants' knuckles! An' he got me to the door an' outside it, an' the first I knew he had the elevator up and was puttin' be in it an' sayin' good by. Oh, Berson, it was awful! For of course I caught on then right off. I seen I was a woman scorned!"

This phrase seemed to please Stella, for she tried it again on a higher key.

"A woman scorned," she repeated. "Berson, give you my word I cried all the way home. Now, what d'you think I ought to do? Give him up?"

"Yes, Stella," Eve said, with a straight face and a comforting pat on the shaking shoulders. "If I were you I'd give him up."

She had believed that, with the possible exception of Queenie, Stella had the keenest sense of humor of any one at Jake's. Now she realized anew that one's sense of humor often perishes under the first assault of one's emotional nature.

"Well, if you say so, I will," Stella agreed with a pathetic smile; and she drifted away, greatly relieved by an outburst to which she never again referred.

Yes, one could do a little for these girls, Eve reflected, as she depressedly walked at Hunt's side. She was earning money, too, and saving most of it, and beginning her readjustment, and doing her sleeping in the daytime, and not having to face black nights. Yet, admitting all these things, her panic returned in some degree every time she met strangers.

Tonight, she told herself, she had been mad to come. Deep within her an alarm was sounding softly but persistently. It grew louder as she approached the man at a corner table. He had risen, and stood watching her with an air of tense expectancy. He took a quick step forward when she reached the table, and then under her conventional smile stopped short with a look of incredulous stupefaction.

He was a big man, six feet tall, smooth-faced, of dark complexion, middle-aged, and inclined to stoutness. He had a large head covered with thick gray hair, brushed straight back from a good forehead. His gray eyes, just now fixed unwaveringly on hers, were partly concealed by the thick lenses of the hornrimmed spectacles he wore. They had the peering look of the near-sighted, and this constant effort to see clearly had lined his forehead and tufted his thick gray eyebrows.

"I wish I knew what this meant," he said at last. "Perhaps you'll tell me. But take your time."

She made two efforts before she could speak. He was some one she had known, but her inner panic proved that he was also some one she had reason to fear. She did not know him now, and she would let him see that she did not. It seemed the safest course.

"I'm always rather nervous with strangers," she admitted, and then asked breathlessly, "Would you care to dance?"

He laughed at that, on a sudden harsh note; and again he took his time to speak, his eyes on the cigar as if he were thinking deeply.

"Strangers!" he repeated. "Strangers!"

"I think," she suggested, "you are mistaking me for some one you imagine you know."

He straightened as if she had struck him.

"My God! Are you telling me I don't know you?" he cried.

"I think you're misled by a strong likeness. There are some amazing resemblances, you know."

Jake passed the table as she spoke, glanced at the pair, and hesitated. Eve did not see him, but the stranger did.

"Jake says you're working for him," he brought out with difficulty. "He tells me you're substituting for another girl. That's about the limit, but we won't go into it now. However, I know the rules of the cabaret game. I must not take the time of his people for nothing. So here's a sop for him."

With extreme deliberation he took a roll of bills from his pocket pulled off one ten-dollar bank-note and tossed it on the table before her. In her increasing panic she hardly observed the action.

The stranger saw that Jake had passed on, and his manner changed as abruptly as if some nerve in him, tense till now, had suddenly snapped.

"Well, young lady," he rasped out, "it's time to drop this chicanery of yours and come to an understanding."

Eve stared at the man in a frozen silence.

"I don't understand," she faltered, after a brief clash of eyes between them.

He smiled wryly. "I'm afraid neither of us is meeting this very well," he said wearily. "I'll admit t's too much for me. But we'll understand each other all right when we've had our talk. "Go and put on your coat and we'll get out. This is no place for you, and God alone knows why you came here."

Eve stood up quickly. She must end this nightmare.

"I must go to the dressing-room and get my wrap," she said.

Queenie was in the dressing-room. Eve caught her arm.

"Is there a back way out of this place?" she asked desperately. Her expression forbade questions and Miss Morris rallied to the obvious crisis of the moment.

"Sure there is!" she remembered. "The boys' dressin'-room has a window on a back alley."

She hurried Eve across the room and with an emphatic push helped her through the window that opened on the alley.

It was all quite simple now. Three taxicabs stood in a waiting line just around the corner, in front of the side door, and with a crisp command she entered the first.

"Sixth Avenue and Fortieth Street. Quick, please," she directed; and the chauffeur, who seemed used to such instructions, started with a suddenness that made her bite her tongue.

She paid him and left the taxicab at the point she had indicated, and when the cab was out of sight, she took another that was passing, and ordered herself driven downtown. The Garland, she had decided, was her only refuge. She dared not return to the apartment to which she could so easily be traced and no other good hotel she knew of would take her in at that hour of the night without luggage and in evening clothes.

During the swift journey, she planned her story for the hotel clerk. If Jenkins, the night man, was on duty, she was sure he would take her in. She left the cab a block from the Garland and walked the remaining distance; and her panic lifted a trifle when she entered the lobby and saw the plump face of Jenkins confronting her across the night desk.

"Oh, Mr. Jenkins," she began with a desperate effort to speak naturally, "perhaps you remember me—"

"Miss Parsons? Of course. How do you do? I can give you the same rooms you had before, if you like," he hospitably added. "They are vacant."

"Thank you, yes; I'd like that very much."

Eve took her key, gave him a forced smile, and went on to the elevator, breathing more naturally.

A warm bath partly soothed her, the familiar bed was comfortable, and the quiet neighborhood was

THE BIG PARADE

All this happened in one day! A twenty-three-year-old boy came into our office to apply for a job. When we asked him about his present occupation he said he was a parachute jumper.

"I like the work all right," he added, "but parachute jumping isn't steady."

I met a mother whose son is about to graduate from college. What do you think he wants to be? A bond salesman? A movie star?

He wants to be an archaeologist. A man named Volk died in New York City. He claimed the distinction of having torn down more big buildings than any other man who ever lived. But he died without realizing his ambition. He wanted to live to tear down the Woolworth Building.

Think of it. Six million people walking daily through the streets, each with his separate home and desire. Who would ever imagine that one of them was constantly saying to himself: "Oh, if I could only tear down the Woolworth Building. That would crown my career."

A man with a noisy wife and seven grown children disappeared from his home in Brooklyn, and was discovered some months later in Hartford. Questioned as to why he left his family, he replied that he had done his duty as a father and believed himself entitled to a little peace in his old age. He had taken a job as a night watchman in a deaf and dumb asylum.

Why do I take up valuable white space to set down these apparently unimportant and unrelated incidents? Because, my friends, one of the biggest and least expensive of all pleasures is reading the newspapers and marveling at the eternal freshness and variety of the human race.

Let those who are bilious rail at the "standardization of modern life." It is true that many of the things we eat and use are standardized, and living is much simplified in consequence.

But have no fear that color and interest will disappear out of the world. Every baby has in him some little spark that makes him different from every other.

Life will always be amusing to those who have sense enough to enjoy it. Practice the good and inexpensive habit of being eternally entertained by your fellow human beings. Forget about yourself for a little while every day, and enjoy the big parade.

S. J. R. No. 2 PROPOSING A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 4, 1930

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas, that Art. V of the Constitution of Texas shall be amended by adding a new section to be known as Section 3a, to read as follows:

"Section 3a. The Supreme Court may sit at any time during the year at the seat of government for the transaction of business and each term thereof shall begin and end with each calendar year."

Section 2. That Section 3 of Art. V of the Constitution of Texas shall be amended by repealing the sentence of said section which reads: "The Supreme Court shall sit for the transaction of business from the first Monday of October in each year until the last Saturday in June of the next year, inclusive, at the Capitol of the State."

Section 3. If the Constitution shall not have been previously amended so as to provide that the Supreme Court shall be open at all times, then, in that event the foregoing Constitutional amend-

When a Front Tire "Blows"

What Happens?

WHEN a front tire "blows" at high speed it's road to wreck in a split-second. You're in the ditch before you can reach the brake. No time to think—less time to act. . . . Even at moderate speed you're off the road or head-on into approaching cars in a flash. Then—costly damage, permanent injury. It's a cruel penalty for a tiny temporary economy! Don't risk it. . . . No longer need any motorist face the hazard of a fatal wreck through blowout. Let us equip your car now with the tire that eliminates all the risk of blowout.

Record Breaking Price Reductions

You Pay Less for Your New Tires
You Get More for Your Old Ones

FOR this one big sale event of the year we have reduced our General Tire prices below the lowest that has ever been possible in former years. But we have not stopped there!

Coming right in the midst of General's nationwide safety campaign to put the new Blowout-Proof Tire on every car, our special Trade-in Sale arrangement with the factory permits greater allowances than ever before to remove the doubtful rubber from your rims.

Even if your tires are new they come under this special trade-in concession —for there are many new tires of reclaimed rubber or "ply-shy" construction that are just as risky in hot weather as the smoothest worn tires on the road.

Tomorrow and for the few days that our sale continues, the miles left in your present tires will buy thousands of brand new miles on Generals—and leave you a balance so easy to pay that you are actually getting General's extra safety and easy riding comfort for less than your mileage costs today.

Come early and bring your car. You can get your special quotation quick and there's no obligation. Plenty of extra help during rush hours—early morning, noon and evening—for those in a hurry.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

WHISKEY AND ALCOHOL.

Neither of these drugs should be used as beverages, no matter when or what the dilution. No medicine should be handled flippantly carelessly or impudently. For most medicines are deadly in overdose. It is the "beverage" item that has brought these two valuable medicines into disrepute, and has divided our people socially and politically to a dimension equal to that of the slavery question preceding the Civil War!

Most rational-thinking men and women will admit that whiskey and alcohol are all right "in their place." Where that place is, the educated physician, it seems to me, would be the better judge.

Once for all, alcohol and whiskey are valuable medicines. When that is said, all is said. Capable physicians need pure alcohol in their offices daily. Great hospitals use it as a valuable adjunct in laboratory and nursing departments. It is little less than a crime to deprive the wasting invalid of anything that can possibly aid in bringing about his comfort or recovery—os there!

Whiskey is a valuable stimulant and aid to vital processes in "lingering" or wasting illness, especially in aged patients. Practical proofs have been well known for year. No chemical equation can do away with actual bedside experience. Drunkards are not made here; neither are monkey wrenches provided for political machinery in the sick room of the old and infirm.

Granted with our "dry" zealots that we could do without alcohol and whiskey; we could as a beverage; we could as a medicine; but you, dear reader, have no right to tell me what I shall or shall not give to my patient, in my efforts to restore him to health; if you assume that right, I shall ignore you. And you fight beverages all you want to; I'm with you there but, keep out of the way when I am treating an invalid!

June Fire Loss In Texas Shows Decline Over June Year Ago

The fire loss for the month of June 1930 shows a decrease of $142,679.00 as compared with the month of June 1929, the report of the state fire insurance commissioner shows. Total fire loss for June was $827,286.20.

"Carelessness" still prevails as the leading cause of all fires, and it is only within the power of the people themselves to eliminate this cause. When the people have learned to be more careful with fire and the many things that are so likely to cause a fire, we will see a great reduction in the fire losses of this State, the commissioner report declares.

It is very important that the home should be kept safe from fire, and it is possible to do this by observing a few simple rules:

1. Keep matches in closed metal container and out of reach of children. See that they are extinguished before leaving your hand.
2. Keep all gas lights and open flame away from woodwork or other material that will burn.
3. Always disconnect the electric iron, toaster, heater or other electrical appliances from the socket when not using them.
4. Watch the gas stove. Do not use rubber gas connections.
5. Keep floor mops in metal containers and do not place them in the closet.
6. Do not start fire with coal oil, benzine or gasoline.
7. Gasoline should not be used for cleaning purposes.
8. Remove all rubbish and refuse matter. Keep the attic and basement clean.
9. Keep flues and chimneys clean.

MILLIONS OF FISH ARE SAVED BY WET HANDS

Millions of small fish may be saved this summer to grow into large fish if anglers will follow one simple rule—wet the hands thoroughly when taking little fish off the hook preparatory to releasing them back to the waters. Small fish should be handled gently and released under water, not thrown back. A dry hand disturbs the protective film of the fish. If this is broken, fungi attaches to the body of the fish and eventually kills. Thousands of anglers that have been wetting their hands declare that millions of small fish have already been saved by this practice.—Ex.

No Town Ever Lost A Customer From Being Too Clean

Calvin Coolidge, addressing the American Federation of Arts and the American Association of Music, said, "If clothes make the man, and certainly good dress gives one a sense of self-respect and poise, how much more is it true that clean, beautiful surroundings lend a moral tone to a community?" And added, "We are gradually getting rid of the oppressive ugliness of our communities."

Oppressive ugliness: a good home next to a shack; a beautiful lawn with a vacant lot overgrown with weeds adjacent; unsightly out-buildings; highway entrances cluttered up with nondescript, clutter, unpainted and otherwise obnoxious billboards; store signs of every sort, shape and description protruding at all sorts of angles from store buildings—some high, some low—all derogatory to any sense of attractiveness; poorly kept streets, open dumps unpainted buildings, a dilapidated square, tin can alleys, visible pollution of streams, and ugliest and most oppressive of all—a citizenship with an inferiority complex and devoid of pride.

Oppressive ugliness is that which makes residents of a community say, "Oh, you won't mind that after you've lived here awhile;" and the absence of which makes a stranger say, "I like this place."

Oppressive ugliness is that which creates atmosphere. How often have you gone into communities or mercantile establishments and given as a reason for not being sold on the place that there is no "atmosphere?"

Atmosphere is that which invites or repels; atmosphere is the making or losing of sales, prestige and good will.

Oppressive ugliness relates materially to appearance. How does your community look to a customer? Eighty per cent of those things purchased today are sold through, or influenced by the eye. Therefore, how your town or community looks is important.

This is the season of the year when everything oppressive should be annihilated. Nature is ready to help make things attractive. Start now to help take your town or community to a good old-fashioned house-cleaning. Clean it up—scrub it up—dress it up—and keep it up! Include yourself in the cleaning; get rid of the mental cobwebs that make everything about your place of abode so commonplace. Rid your self of the superstition and prejudice that your town cannot be as modern, attractive and interesting as any city anywhere.

Like life, your town or community is what you and the rest of the people like you work to make it. It is just as big or just as little as the people in it.

free from the car-clanging that had disturbed her at the apartment she had. With a mighty effort of will she tried to draw mental shutters between memory and the episodes of the night, but the gray-haired stranger pushed back those shutters, with compelling hands. The room seemed full of him. The very world seemed full of him, and of some horror connected with him.

The horror was worse than the man himself, because it was intangible. Like those trailing ends she was always striving to catch, it lay beyond her reach, just back of him. . . . In some way he was connected with it all. . . . he was in the very heart of it. At moments she was just within grasp of what it was. . . . something lifted, lightened, and suddenly darkness again even as she was holding her breath in dawning understanding. She was convinced that she had fled to avoid him and that to return to her normal self would be to return to him. . . . to him. . . .

The sun rose, bringing with it, first, endurance, then reviving courage.

She was awakened by a tinkle, sharply imperative. The telephone was in her sitting-room and she rose to answer it. At the first words that came over the wire her heart caught, then leaped, and reviving courage lifted her like a wave.

"Miss Parsons?" It was Hamilton's warm and friendly voice, holding the thrill of controlled excitement. "Robinson has just told me that you're back," he continued "and it seems too good to be true. I don't want to be a nuisance, of course."

"Oh, I shall be glad to see you!" Eve gasped. "You can't imagine how glad I'll be. But—" with an effort she controlled her shaking voice—"I shan't be around to it for a couple of hours. I'm just awake. Will eleven o'clock be convenient for you?"

The last of her panic had slunk away at the sound of Hamilton's voice. With Hamilton in the hotel she was safe.

She rang for the chambermaid, who came promptly, and offered the girl five dollars for the loan of a hat, a dress, a coat, and a pair of shoes.

The clothes fitted fairly well, as she had expected them to do, after her first glance at Margaret's trim figure, but the general effect was that of a young working girl of a flamboyant type.

An impulse came to her and she stopped to consider it.

"I really must be rather a good sport, somewhere under all this," she told herself. For the impulse was the unexpected one of walking in on Hamilton in all her garish finery when he came to her sitting-room, of making no explanation of it, and of watching its effect on him. "But I won't do it," she stoutly denied; and when his knock fell on the panel of the outer door she hid her excitement and emotion by making her explanation while they shook hands.

"Don't look at me," she begged, trying to speak lightly. "I'm in the chambermaid's Sunday plumage, and it doesn't suit my style."

But he did look at her as they sat down together; and that look of sympathy and understanding brought the story of last night from her in a rush of words which he was careful not to interrupt.

"So you see, it comes to this," she summed up: "I'm even more afraid of knowing who I am than of not knowing it. I'm afraid of what's on the other side of that blank wall. He's there; I'm sure of that. And I'm sure, with nothing but my terror to back the conviction, that he was the danger I ran away from. And yet, as I think of it, he doesn't look like a man one would fear. There was nothing cruel in his manner—quite the contrary. He seemed to be suffering; once he almost broke down. But all the time I was cold with fear."

Hamilton nodded. "There's something back of it," he said. "I've got several pieces of the puzzle to put with yours. We'll talk it all over later on. But first—" he saw the need of temporarily diverting her mind to other phases of her problem—"why did you run away from us?"

"I seem to be running away all the time," she said, "and today I suppose I'll end by running away again, notwithstanding all I've said." She shivered. "I suppose I shouldn't take the risk of being in the same city with that man, whoever he is."

She had expected him to protest, but he nodded.

"Yes," he said, "they're evidently on your trail, whoever they are. Did this man arouse any memory in you. . . . any sense that you knew him. . . . and had seen him before?"

"No memory—only paralyzing fear. But of course I must know him, and it was hideously clear that he knew me and felt himself in some kind of authority over me." She was struck by a sudden recollection. "What were the important things you said you wanted to tell me?"

He decided she was cool enough now to hear them.

"The most important is about this."

He drew a bill-case from his pocket and found in it a small piece of paper which he unfolded and handed to her. It was a cutting from a newspaper, and as she read it her face whitened. It ran:

Wanted: Information about a young lady who disappeared on August 30th. Twenty-three years old, weight about one hundred and eighteen pounds, height, five feet five inches, gray eyes, small regular features, bobbed, bronze-colored hair. When last seen she wore a green dress with gold cuffs and collar, a small green hat, patent-leather pumps, and champagne-colored silk stockings. A liberal reward will be offered for information leading to her return to her friends. Address X 50, in care of this newspaper.

For a moment she could not speak. He waited patiently.

"When did that appear?" she asked at last.

"About a week after you left."

"Did you—" she seemed almost unable to bring out the words—"do anything about it?"

"Nothing you would disapprove of," he told her, and added hurriedly, "That is nothing that would give you away if you didn't want to be found."

It was clear that she breathed more freely, and even as he observed this she commented on it with the insight into her own situation which had surprised him from the first.

"God knows I need to be found and taken care of by my own people, if I have any," she confessed with a sigh. "Yet, as I've told you, I'm as much afraid now of being found as of not being found. What I'd really like," she desperately added, "is to come back to myself, and to know who I am, without any one else knowing it till I decide what to do. What I couldn't endure would be to be in any one else's power in my present condition."

He understood.

"It's a subconscious fear," he agreed. "The chances are that your large friend of last night is back of it in some way."

"Tell me exactly what you did, and all about it."

"I wrote an unsigned letter to X Fifty, saying that you were safe and that some new friends you had made would like to know all the circumstances before putting X Fifty in touch with you. I signed the note with fake initials and gave the newspaper office as the address. I got a reply the same night, but it was mighty uncommittal. X Fifty wasn't showing his hand any more than we were. He wanted to know all I could tell him (I'm assuming that it was a man, you see), and he was rather high-handed about it. That, of course, didn't make any hit with Carrick and me. We decided that a family circle wouldn't be so cautious. In fact, the whole situation looked extremely suspicious to us."

"I can't see a family circle either," she murmured. "But then—God help me!" she broke out with sudden passion. "I can't see anything. What have I done. . . . what could I have done. . . . to deserve this!"

"Sit tight," he urged, and the familiar injunction steadied her. She straightened with a quick breath.

"I beg your pardon," she said in a different tone. "I'm making it harder for you, instead of listening and helping to think things out. Please go on, and I'll try to do better."

"Half a dozen notes were exchanged in the next few days," he told her, "each of us trying to draw out the other. Meantime the advertisement kept appearing. It was in regularly for a week. Since then I haven't seen it, or heard from X Fifty. It looks as if he had given up. So I decided to leave town myself, and had made all my preparations; but for some reason I hung on and—Jove!—how glad I am that I did!"

"He hasn't given up," Eve said, from the depths of a black abstraction. "He's just going at it in some other way." She had not observed his emotion, but now she noticed his silence and checked her self to meet his eyes. "I wonder why I said that," she mused. "It sounds as if, under it all, I had some definite knowledge. . . ." She broke off. "It's lucky I've left the green dress and the green hat behind me forever," she continued in a lighter tone. "Is there any way they can trace me through those things?"

"I don't think so. If your janitor—Smith, did you say?—reads the newspapers, he may have seen the advertisement. But, as I've said, hosts of newspaper-readers never dream of looking in the personal columns. Take the men in this hotel, for example. Even if you had been right here, wearing the green

PROPOSING A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 4, 1930.
Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas: Section 1. That Section 11 of Article VII of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended so as to read as follows: Section 11. In order to enable the Legislature to perform the duties set forth in the foregoing section, it is hereby declared all lands and other property heretofore set apart and appropriated for the establishment and maintenance of the University of Texas, together with all the proceeds of sales of the same, heretofore made or hereafter to be made, and all grants, donations and appropriations that may hereafter be made by the State of Texas, or from any other source, shall constitute and become a permanent university fund. And the same as realized and received into the Treasury of the State (together with such sums belonging to the fund, as may now be in the Treasury), shall be invested in bonds of the United States, the State of Texas, or counties of said State, or in school bonds of municipalities, or in bonds of any city of this State, or in obligations and pledges issued by the Board of Regents of the University of Texas, or secured by such obligations and pledges, for the construction of dormitories and other buildings for the use of the University of Texas, or in bonds issued under and by virtue of the Federal Farm Loan Act, approved by the President of the United States July 17, 1916, and amendments thereto; and the interest accruing thereon shall be subject to appropriation by the Legislature to accomplish the purpose declared in the foregoing section; provided, that the one-tenth of the alternate sections of the lands granted to railroads, reserved by the State, which were set apart and appropriated to the establishment of the University of Texas, by an Act of the Legislature of February 11, 1858, entitled, "An Act to establish the University of Texas," shall not be included in, or constitute a part of, the permanent university fund." Sec. 2. Said proposed amendment shall be voted on by the electors of this State qualified to vote on constitutional amendments at an election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1930. PROPOSING A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 4, 1930.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas: Section 1. That Section 5 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended so as to hereafter read as follows: The Legislature shall meet every two years at such time as may be provided by law and at other times when convened by the Governor. When convened in regular Session, the first thirty days thereof shall be devoted to the introduction of bills and resolutions, acting upon emergency appropriations, passing upon the confirmation of the recess appointees of the Governor and such emergency matters as may be submitted by the Governor in special messages to the Legislature; provided that during the succeeding thirty days of the regular session of the Legislature the various committees of each House shall hold hearings to consider all bills and resolutions and other matters then pending; and such emergency matters as may be submitted by the Governor; provided further that during the following sixty days the Legislature shall act upon such bills and resolutions as may be then pending and upon such emergency matters as may be submitted by the Governor in special messages to the Legislature; provided however, either House may otherwise determine its order of business by an affirmative vote of four-fifths of its membership.

Sec. 2. That Section 24 of Article 3 of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended so as to hereafter read as follows: each county seat now or hereafter to be established; no member to be entitled to mileage for any extra session that may be called within one day after the adjournment of a regular or called session.

Sec. 3. The foregoing constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the electors of this state qualified to vote on constitutional amendments at an election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, A. National Capitol in Washington, it would seem that the last vestige of animosity born of the war between the states have passed away.

Sixty-nine years ago Davis became titular head of the Confederate States of America. He had served as Secretary of War in President Buchanan's cabinet, and on one of the abutments of Cabin John bridge in Washington, carrying the Washington Aqueduct, a blank space appears where his name was chiselled out when the South seceded! That was a war gesture, as important then and as silly in perspective, as our ban upon teaching German in the public schools, when we were at war a dozen years ago.

All the old bitterness may never die. There is still a considerable body of Jacobite in Canada who hold that the present King of England has no right to the throne and that an obscure European nobleman of the Stuart line is the rightful heir of James II. But nobody takes them seriously, any more than anyone now takes seriously those who try to keep our old sectional enmity alive.

PROPOSING A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO BE VOTED ON NOVEMBER 4, 1930.

Be it resolved by the Legislature of the State of Texas:

Section 1. That Article VII of the Constitution of the State of Texas be amended by adding thereto Section 16, which shall read as follows:

"Section 16. All land mentioned in Section 11, 12 and 15 of Article VII of the Constitution of the State of Texas, now belonging to the University of Texas shall be subject to taxation for county purposes to the same extent as lands privately owned; provided they shall be rendered for taxation upon values fixed by the State Tax Board; and providing that the State shall remit annually to each of the counties in which said lands are located an amount equal to the tax imposed upon said land for county purposes."

Section 2. The foregoing Constitutional amendment shall be submitted to the qualified electors of the State at the next general election to be held throughout the State on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November, 1930.

Sheepmen Talk Next
President Of Sheep
Goat Raisers Assn.

By Sam Ashburn
In San Angelo Standard-Times

The next president of the Sheep and Goat Raisers' Association is a topic of conversation among the ranchmen today. The convention is at Brady, July 29 to August 2.

It is generally believed that T. A. Kincaid of Ozona will be held in the post but in case he should refuse it, there are a number of interesting possibilities.

There is Roger Gillis of Del Rio, vice-president of the association and vice-president of the National Wool Marketing Corporation. He's a leader, a big ranchman and he is credited with the success of the National Wool Marketing Corporation in Texas.

Another possibility is Sol Mayer, ranchman leader and the man who has had the most to do with plans for the nation-wide advertising of lamb. He not only knows the ranch business but other businesses as well.

H. W. Rieck of Roosevelt, the orator of the convention, is mentioned.

W. O. Shultz of Paint Rock is mentioned often as a president of the group. He has large farm and ranch interests and is successful at both.

hat and dress, they probably wouldn't have noticed what you had on. Your disappearing so suddenly and leaving those clothes may mean, of course, that everything you left in your apartment will have a sharp inspection; but even that wouldn't carry the investigation very far. You're very well disguised now."

"Yes," she admitted, "in my borrowed clothes. Margaret's wardrobe has given me an idea. I've got to buy new clothes, of course. What I'll get will be the plain black dress and plain black hat and plain black pumps of a nice little waitress with quiet tastes. They will be cheap, which is my first reason, and they will be a disguise, which is my second. But I don't know what I'll do about my hair," she added thoughtfully. "I suppose I'll end by dyeing it dark brown."

"Oh, don't!"

"I'll have to do something," she reminded him. "My hair is rather unusual, you know."

"It is," he fervently agreed, watching her with eyes so eloquent that she refused to meet them. "It's the most beautiful hair I've ever seen. The lights in it—"

"That one detail might give me away," she went on, ignoring the compliment; but she made up for this in her next words. "You see, though I say I'm a trifle afraid of you, I'm trusting you with all my plans, as far as I know them myself."

"I know you are, and I can't tell you how much I appreciate your confidence. That reminds me of something more."

He took a package of papers from an inside pocket and handed them to her. "These credentials I wanted for Carrick got here a few days after you left. I showed them to him, and I want you to look them over, too. Please!" he urged as she hesitated.

"I trusted you without these," Eve murmured, as she handed them back.

"I know you did... up to a certain point. Now I'm going to ask you to trust me all the way I want you to promise to keep me posted from now on," he rushed along. "I haven't any right to ask, but, somehow, I don't think I could stand another two days and nights like those I went through before I got your note. It wasn't alone the sense that I had lost you."

"I promised myself I wouldn't speak till you were normal again. But your leaving that way, and now, this new danger and your fear of it changes the looks of things. I want you to know that it isn't just the interest and help of a friendly stranger I'm offering you. It's the interest and help of a man who loves you."

"When you're well, Eve," he continued steadily, "I'm going to ask you to marry me. I want to

LOSES ARM

Last Sunday night George Peters of the Murchison ranch, in company with Harry Shuttleworth, while coming in to Fort Stockton from the TD farms, met a sheep-shearing machine near a culvert, devote my life to making you happy, if you will take me. But in any case let me begin to look after you right now." He stopped an instant then added: "I've said it all. I'll not mention it again till you're well, or till you tell me I may."

"I don't know what to say to you," murmured. "I oughtn't to let you speak of such things. You're simply following a shadow. Why don't you keep out in the sunshine where you belong, and forget about me?"

"I like the shadows better, when you're among them," he said quietly. He pressed the hand she impulsively held out and went on in a new tone, quietly matter-of-fact. "That's that, and I won't speak of it again. I just wanted to make it clear to you that some one to whom you're first in the world is standing by."

Eve left the hotel through the servants' entrance, as befitted her appearance, and walked across to Fourth Avenue. There she picked up a taxicab and ordered herself driven to the nearest large department store.

Eve, keeping close to her new role, selected a simple black one-piece dress of good quality, a severe black coat and a small black cloche hat.

"Could I go to movin' pictures with the minister in these?" she inquired as she revolved before the sales woman in the new outfit.

The Ozona Giants suffered a 15 to 2 defeat at the hands of the Eldorado nine on the Eldorado diamond Sunday afternoon. Kelly King, former local hurler, now of San Angelo, started in the box for the locals but was knocked off the mound in short order by Eldorado batsmen.

and in some manner they crowded too near each other, and George Peters had his left arm in the door of his Chevrolet coupe and some part of the shearing machine struck his arm, cutting it off just above the elbow. George was rushed to the Dr. Martin Emergency Hospital, at which place Dr. Martin, assisted by Dr. E. A. Barrett, stopped the blood, dressed the wound and at the time of going to press George is reported doing nicely. The car was slightly damaged and Shuttleworth escaped injury.—Fort Stockton Pioneer.
