62% Of Faculty To Summer School

Ten Local Teachers To Pursue Studies During Vacation

Sixty-two percent, or nearly two-thirds of the faculty of the Ozona High and grade schools, will pursue their studies in colleges and universities during the coming summer vacation months, perfecting themselves for more efficient service in their profession.

Ten out of the sixteen teachers in the grade school and high school here plan to attend college or university classes all or part of the summer, according to a survey made by Supt. John L. Bishop.

Six of the nine teachers in the grade school are planning to attend summer school, the superintendent reported. Miss Elizabeth Fussell plans to attend the University of Colorado a part of the summer. Miss Norene Allison will spend a few weeks visiting with her family in Brownwood before entering the University of Texas for summer school work. Mr. Claude Denham is in Lubbock where she and Mr. Denham, High School principal, are both attending Texas Technological College summer school. Miss Aleen Hampton has gone to her home in Hawley, Texas, but later plans to enter T. C. U. for the summer session. Miss Mary E. Webb likewise went from here to her home in Ballinger, planning later to attend the University of Texas. Miss Patti Raiza will attend the West Texas State Teachers College at Canyon after a short visit with her family in Lewisville, Texas. Mrs. R. O. Smith and Mrs. Tom Hunter, both Ozona residents, will spend the summer here. Miss Sophie Haug, kindergarten teacher, is spending the summer at her home in Marlin.

In the high school division, Ted White expects to spend most of the summer here, teaching in the local school, but later in the summer plans to attend Colorado A. & M. at Fort Collins, Colo. Miss Lucille Williamson will visit with her family in Moody before entering the University of Texas summer school. Miss Ada Moss will remain in Ozona until the opening of the University of Texas summer school where she will be a student, according to present plans. Guinn Carruthers will spend the summer at his home in Paradise, Texas, and Miss Ludee Mae Harrison will spend her vacation at her home in Greenville, Texas. Mr. Bishop will also spend most of the summer in Ozona, he and Mr. White planning to start next week with the local high school summer session.

NO EVIDENCE OF T. B.

Circulation of rumors to the effect that he is suffering from tuberculosis having made it difficult for him to find employment, J. E. Evans recently made trips to Del Rio and to the State Tubercular Sanatorium at Carlsbad where he underwent thorough examinations at the hands of physicians. Mr. Evans this week appealed to The Stockman to assist him in getting the findings of the examining physicians before the public in order that the facts concerning his physical condition might be made known.

Dr. H. B. Ross of Del Rio and Dr. J. B. McKnight of the State Sanatorium both examined Mr. Evans and according to their signed statements found no traces of active tuberculosis. Dr. McKnight, who is superintendent and medical director of the State Sanatorium, declared in a written statement that he had examined Mr. Evans and found "no evidence of active tuberculosis." "His general condition is good. He has no cough, no expectoration and would not be infectious to anyone," the statement added.

George Russell was a business visitor to San Angelo Wednesday.

Scenes and Personages in the Lindbergh Tragedy

Map shows where the body of little Charlie Lindbergh was found, by William Allen, a Negro, five miles from his home. The circle device was signed to the ransom note left by the kidnappers, who said the money should be given to whoever showed that. Dr. J. F. Condon gave $50,000 to a man who produced the baby's sleeping suit, but the baby had been killed before that. The pictures of "Lindy" and "Anne" are the last ones made before the kidnapping.

Miss Tommy Smith Wins Club Award

Adjudged Most Deserving Student By Faculty Committee

Miss Tommy Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Smith, a Junior in High School the past year, was adjudged the most deserving student in the entire high school by a committee composed of faculty members at the close of the 1931-32 session last week.

By winning this distinction among her fellow students, Miss Smith won a cash prize of $10 offered by the Ozona Woman's Club.

This prize was established last year, the first award going to Miss Bernice Bailey, a member of this year's graduating class. Presentation of the club award, a check for $10, was made during the commencement exercises Thursday evening by Mrs. W. J. Grimmer, president of the Woman's Club. In making the presentation, Mrs. Grimmer explained the points of consideration in making the selection. The general attitude of the student toward school duties, the attitude toward the student and the general ability, application, personality and citizenship of the student were factors which were considered by the faculty committee in making the selection.

The party will get under way at 8:15 and invitations have been sent out this week to Lions and their ladies and other guests. A big crowd is expected. An elaborate program of entertainment, consisting of games and various stunts, has been worked out by a committee headed by M. M. Fulmer.

Fair Assn. Meet Called For Sat.

Definite Decision On This Year's Show To Be Reached Then

Definite decision on whether or not the annual Crockett County Rodeo, Race Meet and Stock Show is to be held this year will be reached at a called meeting of stockholders and directors of the Fair Association to be held at the Hotel Ozona next Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, it was announced this week by Joe Pierce, president of the association.

The association stockholders in a recent meeting decided to stage the entertainment this year for two days, July 4 and 5, but some question or misunderstanding has arisen recently and another meeting has been called to thrash out the question, Mr. Pierce said.

All stockholders of the association and others interested in the local entertainment are requested to be present promptly at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

Giants Shut Out Sonora Bronchs

Locals Push Over 8 Runs To Win Seven Inning Match

Sam Cox's Ozona Giants smeared the Sonora Bronchos for a shut-out on the Powell Field diamond Sunday afternoon while they pounded out a total of eight runs in an agreed seven-inning match.

Buster Miller and Frank James divided honors on the mound, Miller taking the first shift for four innings and James pouring them across the last three. Together they allowed only four hits. The locals were able to hit safely eleven times off the offerings of Smith and Holmig. For the first time this season, the Giants turned in an errorless game, not a single miscue marring their afternoon's performance. The visitors were chalked with three errors.

Pierce started things off for the Giants in the second inning with a single. He stole second and third and scored on Kyle's roller to pitcher, Greer having gone out in the meantime.

Again in the fourth frame, Pierce led the way to additional counters, again rapping out a single. Greer and Kyle followed suit to fill the bags. Childress trucked out but Miller came through with a single that scored the three men on bases when the right fielder let the ball get away from him. Frank Russell was next up and rapped one to shortstop who tried to catch Miller at the plate but the catcher dropped the ball and Miller scored. Frank Russell stole second and scored on Claude Russell's single, making the fifth score of the inning.

The locals ran in two more in the sixth, their last time at bat. This time Frank Russell led off with a single. Brother Claude doing the same. Jack Sharp struck out, Rex Russell was passed, Pierce flied out to right, Frank Russell scoring on the throw-in and the other runners advancing a base. Greer singled, scoring Russell. Bob Weaver singled but Rex Russell needed more to make it home and the side was retired when Childress was out short to first.

The Giants will journey to Iraan Sunday to take on the oil field squad and the following Sunday will entertain the San Angelo Shepherders, a semi-professional nine, here.

The box score for Sunday's game will be found on page 6.

Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Fitz have moved here from Lufkin to make their home with their son, Van B. Fitz, bookkeeper at the Ozona National Bank. They are living in the J. C. Kirby house.

HIGH SCHOOL DAYS END FOR 22 GRADUATES

Largest Class In History Receives Diplomas Fri. Night

STRANGE SPEAKS

Orator-Humorist Entertains With Wit And Philosophy

The big auditorium of the new Ozona High School was filled almost to capacity last Thursday evening for the first commencement exercises to be held in the new building.

A graduating class of twenty-two members, nine girls and thirteen boys, received their high school diplomas at the hands of County Judge Charles E. Davidson, the first class to graduate from the handsome new $170,000 structure.

Miss Maxine Murdock played the processional march as the largest class in the history of Ozona High School entered the auditorium, wearing caps and gowns, to take their places on the stage. Invocation was pronounced by Rev. L. N. Moody, minister of the local Church of Christ, Miss Bernice Bailey, a member of the local graduating class, played a piano solo, "Prelude" by Rachmaninoff, which was followed by the salutatory address of Miss Margaret Deland.

A piano duet by Misses Bernice Bailey and Mary B. Vaughan, "Country Dance" by Nevin preceded the valedictory address by Marvin Greer Rape. Both the salutatorian and the valedictorian took occasion in their splendid addresses to express on behalf of the entire class their appreciation for the opportunities afforded them to complete the first step in their education, thanks to the faculty for their patience and guidance, to the parents and patrons for their support and interest and to the school board for the facilities which made their attainments possible.

W. T. Strange of Longview, a member of the firm of Peters, Strange and Bradshaw, architects on the new High School building, delivered the commencement address. He was introduced by John L. Bishop, superintendent.

Mr. Strange did not disappoint those in the audience who were expecting great things of him in the way of rare humor, sound philosophy and oratorical splendor. His opening sentence brought a roar of laughter and he kept his audience convulsed until he finally tapered off into the serious vein, offering sound advice to those who were on the threshold of greater attainments and inspiring them with vision and hope for the future.

Judge Davidson, in handing out the diplomas, added his compliments to the class for their achievements and exhorted them to further pursue their quest for knowledge as far as possible.

Patterson's "Commencement Recessional" was then sung by the class, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. H. Meredith, pastor of the Ozona Methodist Church.

Need For Sidewalk In Front Of School Building Is Cited

The need for a concrete sidewalk in front of the new Ozona High School building was cited at the Lions Club luncheon Monday noon and plans for bringing about such an improvement were taken under consideration.

The school board is at present without sufficient funds to put down the sidewalk in front of the building, it is understood, and the Lions Club may interest itself in working out a plan whereby the project can be accomplished.

THURSDAY, MAY 26, 1932.

MEMORIAL DAY

Next Monday, May 30th, is the day observed in forty-two of the forty-eight states, and in all of the territories of the United States, as Memorial Day. It is the day upon which the nation pays tribute to its honored dead, who served their country at the peril of their own lives. Originally established in the North as a day for decorating the graves of soldiers who had lost their lives in the war between the states, Memorial Day has practically lost its sectional significance; for North and South alike contributed the heroes of the Spanish War and of the great World War, whose memories are preserved with special ceremonial on this day. In the South, in the states of the old Confederacy, where another date is still set apart in commemoration of the men who wore the gray, the 30th of May is now largely observed as the national day of commemoration for all of the brave.

It is meet and fitting that at least once a year the nation should be reminded that our country has had, from its inception, to fight for the liberties, the rights and privileges which we, more than any other people in the world enjoy so greatly. The seeds of that liberty have been sown in the blood of heroes. We make a great fuss about hard times. We complain with bitterness about our personal business and financial worries. But all the troubles that we in time of peace are compelled to bear are insignificant compared with the risk of life itself, which every man who has served under our flag has accepted cheerfully, even jubilantly. There is no tribute too great to pay to those who proved their willingness to make that sacrifice if necessary. To whom do we raise monuments but to these? Let us, then, who are still living, unite on the 30th of May to praise these illustrious dead, and at the same time let us renew our tacit pledge that they have not died in vain, that the nation which they fought to save shall proceed forever onward toward a higher and more glorious destiny.

SHORT SELLING

There are some people who think it is a terrible thing to sell something you haven't got in the hope or expectation that before you have to deliver it you can buy it at a price lower than you have agreed to sell it for. That is what so-called "short selling" on the stock market means. Nobody quarrels with the man who contracts to deliver a hundred head of cattle, for example, at the present market price, because he believes that the price is going down and that he will be able to buy them for less and make a profit.

Congress has been investigating short selling on the Stock Exchange. It has not found any evidence that anybody engaged in short selling operations was doing anything more serious than betting that the prices of stocks would go down still farther. Some times they did and sometimes they didn't. Several million people lost a lot of money in 1929 by betting that stocks would go higher. That is all that most of the transactions on the Stock Exchange mean - betting that the market will go higher or lower. Percy A. Rockefeller told the investigators that he had lost "many, many millions" betting that the market would rise and had succeeded in winning only $550,000 of it back by betting that the market would go down. Mat C. Brush, probably the biggest of all the stock market operators, frankly admitted that the business of Wall Street is "a racket like Al Capone's," and he confirmed what we have long suspected, that people who are not professional traders in securities are simply suckers when they dabble in stocks and are sure to lose in the long run, no matter which way the market goes.

In Memoriam - May 30

By Albert T. Reid

One of the principal troubles of the United States these days arises from the extension to every corner of the country of facilities for gambling on the stock market. Of course, there must be an open market for the purchase and sale of stocks and bonds, and we don't know any way to stop human beings from gambling, in one form or another. But we do think that it is just as reprehensible to tempt the unwary into speculating on the stock market, as it is to try to take their money away from them by selling them lottery tickets.

THERE IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

We think we live in a complicated age, but more than three hundred years ago everything was just as topsy-turvy as it is today. Robert Burton, who was born in 1576, published a famous book called "The Anatomy of Melancholy" in 1621. And three hundred and eleven years ago he wrote in that book a number of paragraphs which have a very familiar sound in this year of grace, 1932. Here are some of them:

"New news every day. Those ordinary rumors of war, plagues, fires, inundations, thefts, murders, massacres, meteors, comets, spectrums, prodigies, apparitions, shipwrecks. A vast confusion of vows, wishes, actions, edicts, petitions, lawsuits, pleas, laws, proclamations, complaints, grievances. Then come tidings of weddings, entertainments, embassies, trophies, sports, plays, treasons, robberies, enormous villainies of all kinds, funerals, death of princes, new discoveries and expeditions.

"Our summum bonum is commodity, and the goddess we adore, Dea Moneta, Queen Money. "So many professed Christians, yet so few imitators of Christ; so much talk of religion, so much science, yet so little conscience. "To see so many lawyers, yet so little justice; so many laws, yet never more disorders. Lawyers get more to hold their peace than we to say our very best.

"New books every day, pamphlets, stories, whole catalogues of volumes of all sorts, new paradoxes, schisms, heresies, controversies in philosophy, religion, &c."

Only the very young or the very inexperienced think that there is any material change in human nature and its manifestations from century to century.

Mr. and Mrs. Ples Dryden are the parents of a daughter born Tuesday in San Angelo.

SCANDALS

By THE TOWN GOSSIP

That worried look so many folks have these days is from trying to remember who borrowed the lawn mower last.

At last we know what that "servant problem" is. These politicians call themselves "servants of the people." And, boys and girls, they are "some problem."

Speaking of politicians, a candidate in our district is running on a platform of "fewer laws and lower taxes." That second plank has a definitely familiar ring to it. Surely, we must have heard that before somewhere. It's something like the weather, all the politicians talk about it but none of them do anything about it. And as for fewer laws, the only way that will ever be accomplished is for somebody to organize a raiding party, tour the state, gather up every lawbook and record of laws in existence, build a big bonfire with them and let the legislature start all over again. We might get a breathing spell while the lunk heads muddled through it all again.

Anthropologists tell us that aside from the tail, the only difference between man and monkey is that the latter has no appendix. So, if you have had yours removed they have only made a monkey out of you.

Asked for the definition of a pedestrian, a local high school girl is said to have replied that it was a girl who wouldn't "neck."

And it was a high school boy who defined "cosmetics" as peach preserves.

The story is being told of a Scotchman who invented a mouse trap that would kill the mouse before it ate the bait.

And then there's the story of the Scotchman who spanked his children and then took them out to the flower bed to let them cry.

Let's Hang Out The Welcome Sign ... and 'Strike Up ... the BAND!'

When flags flutter to the breeze; when lively band music quickens the pulse; when a great city is in holiday attire; when streets are filled with a merry throng. . . it is then that the pride of citizenship in that particular town or community wells within the heart and one feels, . . . "it's great to belong." But how many who have been a part of or witnessed such city, town or community activities have ever stopped to consider the source of that commonwealth's ability to put across progressive programs which make for the popularity and growth of the town?

The source, the origin . . . the very beginning of that town's ability to do things and grow was in the spirit of cooperation of its citizens . . . its business men, its civic leaders. They stuck together—and they did things. They helped each other to help themselves. They saw to it that when one of their citizens invested his money, his time and his ability in honest home effort that he was supported . . . that he received in return for all that he was giving—to make a better town in which to live.

A town is no bigger than its citizens make it. Likewise, a town is just as big as its citizens make it. All of which brings us down to the question, "how big do we want Ozona to be?" Are we satisfied with our town? Are there improvements we should like to have and enjoy . . . in civic life . . . in church life . . . in the schools . . . in our homes . . . in our business? Neither town nor individual can stand still . . . They must either go forward or slip back. Citizens of Ozona with investments in homes and property most surely do not want the town to slip back—to see their earnings and savings fritter away . . . and be lost.

Then support the home merchant; support home industry in every manner; keep jobs open and citizens employed; help yourself by helping your town, its business men, its civic leaders. Every dollar taken out of Ozona, to be spent in the shops of city stores . . . or with mail-order houses, is a dollar gone forever, so far as the development and growth of Ozona is concerned. Trade at home . . . Boost Ozona,—hang out the welcome sign and, strike up the band.

MAN MADE THE TOWN

by RUBY M. AYRES

SYNOPSIS

Diana, in love with a married man, Dennis Waterman, has a nervous collapse as a result of the gay life of London society. Her aunt, Mrs. Gladwyn, takes her to a doctor, who orders her to the country for a rest. Dr. Rathbone has a country home nearby. Dennis calls at the cottage, then goes away for a long trip. He writes from America that he is there with Linda, his wife. Diana finds herself becoming more and more interested in Dr. Rathbone, and questions her nurse, Miss Starling about him. She also questions Jonas, a farm boy of the neighborhood, about a woman who lives in Dr. Rathbone's house. Her name is Rosalie. Then Diana meets Rosalie in the woods; she acts strangely and leaves Diana puzzled.

Soon after the meeting in the woods with Rosalie, Dr. Rathbone calls again at Diana's cottage.

A cablegram from Dennis arrives. He is returning from America. That interrupts what might have been a tender episode between Diana and the Doctor. He leaves; later Dennis cables that his return will be delayed. Diana, thirsting for love, turns her thoughts again to Dr. Rathbone. She is thinking of him now as "Donald." Regardless of the mysterious Rosalie, Diana resolves to see Dr. Rathbone. She goes to his house, but as she stands at the front door the doctor's big police dog leaps at her.

THE STORY

And then, as there was no answering smile on his face, she sighed and went on.

"I wish I understood about myself. Sometimes I think that you understand, that you know all about me, only you won't explain to me. Why won't you?"

"Perhaps because I'm not clever enough. Perhaps because I know I should only hurt you."

Diana was looking down at the little three-cornered scar on her slender arm.

"Well, I've got this to remember you by, anyway," she said ruefully.

He made a swift movement, as if of protest, then stood still again. "Nothing more than that?" he asked.

She raised her eyes. "Yes, much more," she said. "I shall always remember you as the dearest, best—"

"Don't make me concede." She sat down in the chair in which he had sat to dress her arm, leaning her chin on its high back and looking up at him.

"Well, that's that," she said in a puzzled sort of way. "When do you want me to go?"

He smiled at the question. "Well, not today or tomorrow," he said whimsically. "I only thought that before Mrs. Gladwyn comes back . . ."

"Supposing she never comes back?"

"We won't suppose anything so unlikely, and besides, I must see that left arm a great deal better before I let you out of my sight."

"Then I hope it never gets better," Diana said.

Dennis had come down for one last visit before Diana returned to London.

He was full of plans for their future but Diana found herself cold to all of them. His caresses failed to thrill her as they had before her illness.

Finally Dennis had flung away from her and gone back to London. His angry departure had failed to stir her, although it left her with the feeling her world was falling away from her.

She wondered if her love for him had died. And the thought, strangely, carried with it no regret.

And then suddenly came the revelation that it was Donald she loved, maddeningly, distractingly. She knew then she could never be happy with any other man.

"Tomorrow," Diana said to herself, "tomorrow I am going to London."

She was glad because it was Rathbone whom she loved: a man surely worthy of the best life could give him, and in some strange way that gladness outweighed the knowledge that, even supposing he cared for her in return, he would never tell her so. But she could not believe that he cared—why should he? There were so many women in the world more deserving of happiness than she—noble, unselfish women—not just selfish, spoilt—useless. Then she was conscious of a great fear: fear because all her life she would have to do without him; that would be hardest of all to bear.

When morning came she found that out of the mass of confused thought only one fact had struggled; she must keep her pride whatever happened. Nobody must ever know, nobody must ever dream that she had loved him and her love had not been returned.

"I may as well go away with Dennis, or anybody else who wants me," she told herself recklessly, as she watched the creeping daylight. "I can't ever have the man I want, so nothing matters."

CHAPTER XV

Diana made a quick trip up to London to do some shopping. She had lunch with Dennis, who told her Linda was going to Paris and begged her to run away with him.

She kept putting him off with indecisive replies to his urgent begging and he finally drove her back to the country. She promised him, as she was kissing him goodbye, that she would give him an answer in a few days.

Miss Starling told her, when Dennis had left:

"Dr. Rathbone came just after lunch."

"Oh," Diana's voice was studiously indifferent. "He left a message for you."

"Oh," Diana said again. "What was it?" she asked as Miss Starling kept silence.

"He asked me to tell you that he did not consider there was any real need for him to call any more—that he had arranged with Dr. Finlay to look after you regularly, and that he hoped you would approve. He asked me to say that, of course, if you wished to see him again particularly, he would be pleased to arrange to call or for you to go to his consulting room in London." The Creature was knitting so rapidly now that the needles flashed dazzlingly in the afternoon sunlight.

Diana closed her eyes.

"Thank you. That will do nicely," she said, uncertainly.

When, a little later, Miss Starling had gone for her usual constitutional, Diana sent a telegram. It was addressed to Dennis Waterman at some West End Club and consisted of only two words:

"Yes, Diana."

Diana left the cottage very quietly on the Friday afternoon. She told the Creature she was going to dinner and a theatre with Dennis Waterman and would not be home until late.

Diapa drove straight to Mrs. Gladwyn's house when she got to London. She was not expected, and the maids seemed rather flustered by her sudden arrival.

She intended to pack a small suitcase for which Dennis would presently send his chauffeur, and after that—well, after that her mind was a blank—after that nothing would matter very much. Nothing mattered very much now, if it came to that. Diana was amazed because she felt—cold and unconcerned.

Even the thought of Rathbone hardly distressed her. That episode, precious as it had been, was definitely ended.

She did not know what plans Dennis had made, and she hardly cared. Since the afternoon she sent that wire she had often wondered why she had done it. It was not because she wanted to go with Dennis except that deep down in her heart was a foolish, feverish hope that perhaps he could help her to forge—could drug her senses and take away the endless pain of loneliness and longing.

Dennis was the one creature in the world of whose love she was confident, and so she had turned to him as a half-frozen outcast would turn to the first fire that gleams through the night.

She had no regrets—nothing mattered.

At seven o'clock she sent the maid for a taxi and put on her cloak. She would be a little early for Dennis, perhaps, but the silence and memories of this room worried her—it would be better to get out and mingle with the noise and bustle again.

She went down to the waiting taxi, leaving orders about the suit case. She did not care if her aunt's maids suspected anything; she knew it would not be the first time she had set them all talking. It was only really genuine people like Miss Starling and Jonas who made one feel ashamed.

The cab stopped, and a commissionaire hurried to open the door. Dennis had chosen to meet her at this small, rather unpretentious restaurant because he said they would be unlikely to meet anyone they knew, and it was Diana herself who had suggested the theatre. "It's so long since I saw a play," was the excuse she made, but that was not the real reason. It was because she felt the desperate need of excitement to help her—of stimulant to give her courage; if Dennis offered her champagne tonight she would certainly not refuse. She walked into the little lounge and sat down by the fire. It was very quiet—just the kind of place runaway people would choose, Diana thought cynically.

The swing door moved noiselessly, and Diana turned. If it was Dennis—Diana stared blankly for a moment at the woman who came in—stared, and thought herself mad or dreaming, for the woman was Linda Waterman.

She was alone, and their recognition was mutual before Linda came across the lounge with easy confidence, beautifully gowned and looking young and untroubled.

"How strange—that you should be here," she said. "Dennis tells me you have been very ill. I hope you are better."

"Yes—yes, thank you." Linda held her hands to the warmth. There was a large diamond on one finger that caught the light and sparkled into cold white flashes of fire.

Diana was very pale, and the vivid blue of her gown intensified her pallor. She was wondering vaguely what would happen when Dennis arrived. Something seemed to tell her that of them all he would be the only one seriously disturbed. With an effort she forced herself to speak.

"Did you have a good holiday in America?"

"It was hardly a holiday. I had so much business to attend to. Dennis hated it—he was long to get back all the time."

Her eyes dwelt on Diana's face with half-amused interest.

"Are you waiting for him now?" she asked abruptly.

Diana's lips moved, and she flushed crimson, but no words would come, and Linda said with an unconcerned laugh:

"You need not mind telling me if you are. I have not come here to spy on you—it's just bad luck that we should both have chosen the same rendezvous. I am waiting for a friend myself."

Diana rose to her feet.

"I thought you were in Paris," she stammered, and then wondered why, of all the things she might have said, should she have chosen words that were surely an admission.

Linda shrugged her shoulders. "I suppose Dennis told you that. Well, I wanted him to believe."

Announcing A NEW POLICY

It has always been our policy to accommodate our customers in any way that we could, and if not convenient to pay their accounts when due, we would gladly carry them until a more convenient time to pay, and our creditors would extend the same courtesy to us.

But we have never before faced a crisis like this, when sufficient money to run our business was so difficult to obtain.

So at least until business conditions are improved, we are compelled to sell for cash, or strictly 30 day accounts.

We regret that we are not in a position to do business as in days gone by, but as we have several thousand dollars on our books, and inasmuch as our creditors demand cash for their merchandise, we cannot avoid taking this step at this time.

The WAY of LIFE BY BRUCE BARTON

HUMAN NATURE

Some nights I go home emotionally tired out.

Not by work, but by repeated revelations of the meaner side of human nature.

All sorts of unpleasant characteristics come to the surface under the stress of hard times. Partners quarrel; husbands and wives snarl at each other; companies throw their "codes of ethics" into the discard; bluffers and cheaters, who have "got away with it" for years, are shown up in their true colors.

All this is depressing.

BUT... When in human history has there ever been a time when so many million people were acting generously and sympathetically as now?

I can name dozens of concerns that have continued to operate at a loss because their owners felt a responsibility to their employes, and other dozens that have fought off any reduction in salaries to the last possible minute and then made the heaviest cut at the top. I know, one large city where twenty-five hundred volunteers have each adopted an equal number of destitute families and are carrying their members through the winter. I can name a struggling little college whose underpaid teachers voluntarily asked a ten per cent reduction in salaries in order that certain poor students might not be compelled to leave school.

The action of the railroad men and executives gave me cheer. It brought back a vivid memory of a certain Sunday morning when I was seven years old.

My father, a clergyman, had never purchased a Sunday newspaper. On this particular morning he came down to breakfast looking deeply concerned, and said to Mother: "I feel today that I must know the news before I go into the pulpit."

The news that he felt he must know was about the railroad strike in Chicago, where men were killing each other, and Grover Cleveland had ordered out the Federal troops.

We have made a lot of progress in the intervening years.

A wise old professor in my college used to quote the following verse from the Psalms: "What is man that thou art mindful of him? or the son of man that thou visitest him?"

Most people, he said, interpret that to mean: "What does petty, futile man amount to, that you (God) should give him a ny thought?"

A better interpretation, the professor argued, is this: "What a wonderful creature man must be that even God is mindful of him and likes to visit him."

We can get almost any view we choose of human nature. Man is either just "a little lower than the angels" or just a little higher than the beasts.

According to where and how we look.
