A DANGEROUS AMENDMENT

The Texas Weekly—

"The most potentially dangerous of the amendments is that which most persons have passed over as innocuous. It is that which would empower the State to furnish free text books to children in private as well as public schools. The most obvious arguments against it are conclusive. Separation of the church and State is a cardinal principle in the Bill of Rights of the Texas Constitution, and it was not without cause that the forefathers made it so. In the first place, public schools are provided indiscriminately by the State for all children in the State, and the State should not be made to bear the burden of supporting students in parochial schools of various denominations. It may be argued that providing them with free text books is not supporting them, but experience has wisely taught that a precedent once established often becomes a practice. If students in sectarian schools should be provided with text books by the State, should they not also be provided with teachers by the State? And with new buildings later? Once religion is injected into politics, grief inevitably follows.

"But even these basic arguments are less important in condemning the amendment than is a 'joker' written into it which goes far beyond providing textbooks to school children. It would change the entire method of distributing school funds in the State of Texas. In Section 5 of Senate Joint Resolution No. 24 this statement is made: 'The State Board of Education may furnish State adopted textbooks free to every child of scholastic age, attending any school within the State; and the available school fund herein provided shall be distributed to the several counties as may be provided by law.'

"The phrase 'as may be provided by law' is the profoundly significant change about which little is heard. It means that the present constitutional method of apportioning school funds to counties on the basis of their scholastic population would be abandoned. It means that the Legislature would be empowered to say just how much money each county should have this year and whether it should have much more or much less next year, leaving schools and teachers constantly in perplexed uncertainty. It means further that political rivalry between big counties and little counties would be kindled by the millions of dollars which the Legislature could juggle as it saw fit, leading to discrimination first against one class and then another, depending on the changing sway of political leadership. Whether or not the present method of apportioning of school funds is the best that can be devised is beside the point. It may be that a better system can be worked out, and if so it should be written into the Constitution and kept out of the reach of political manipulation. But the proposed amendment suggests no alternative whatever. If adopted, it would throw the public schools into the arena of politics, with practical politicians the winners and school children the losers. This proposed amendment is bad in principle and poorly written."

CHILDREN'S CRIME HOUR

Listening, as we do, to repeated complaints of parents who object to the penny-dreadful type of broadcasting that comes over the radio to their children at supper time we wonder at the shortsightedness of many advertisers and radio stations.

Concern over this type of program finds reflection not only in the ill will of potential customers toward the sponsors and the advertised product, but also in a statement by Anning S. Prall, chairman of the Federal Communications commission. Mr. Prall is certain that some of the dime novels of the air are injuring children. And he offers the remainder that "about half a dozen stations have been taken off the air in recent years for failure to live up to the proper standards of public service."

The resentment against this type of program is not of the negative sort that is received and forgotten with an indifferent shrug; an embattled parent is a dangerous adversary for any institution, no matter how big, to face. School officials and educators in general have repeatedly emphasized the demoralizing effects of these programs. Highly strung children are keyed up to an uncomfortable pitch by radio shrieks and horror stories; and even the most phlegmatic child is apt to have his vocabulary corrupted and his standards warped in formative years by what might well be described as the Children's Crime Hour.

Many of these programs are a nuisance to parents also, and to a degree which it is hard for adults without children of their own to appreciate. Once a child's sympathy has been aroused by the sponsor of a product, it will plead and beg incessantly for the purchase of that product. In a current radio sequence children were made to believe, though it was not actually stated, that purchase of a certain article would aid the fictional hero in securing money to pay for the necessary operation on his ailing mother!

The sheer impudence of an appeal to any child in the home over the radio, over the parents' heads, in behalf of an advertised product might be enough to give the sponsors pause; but combined with the ill effects of such programs upon the child, as shown by Professor Busse of New York University and others, and the resentment kindled in grown-ups, it would seem that, even if advertisers do not, the radio powers that be would take heed in their own interest.—Christian Science Monitor.

Only a day's drive from Ozona is one of the most picturesque towns on the continent, Monterrey. It is approximately 450 miles from Ozona, located on the Pan American highway which leads out of Nueva Laredo.

A drive of 140 miles southwest from Laredo over good pavement brings one to the interesting town, which is the industrial center of the north part of the Republic.

Returning delegates from the Lions Convention at Mexico City found the city a fascinating place to stop over after the long tedious trip over the mountains and thru the jungle strip. Those halting on Sunday or Thursday are highly entertained in the colorful promenade in which the eligible young señoritas and the young caballeros of the town promenade around the central plaza. The señoritas march around on the outside and the men promenade (in opposite direction) on the inside. To the American, it is "Promenade, caballero, until you find the desirable lady—then, cut into the line and join her."

One of the relics of the city is the Bishop's Palace, built on top of a hill overlooking the city in 1782. The palace served as a fortification to which the Mexicans retreated in the American invasion in 1847. From this eminence, one can see the city in bird's eye view. The city is skirted with mills, factories, breweries and now a huge hospital is being erected to the west side of the city.

Most enjoyment of Monterrey, as is Mexico City, for the average American, is the glamorous night life at the clubs but just to stroll the streets, stop in at the odd shops, talk with a resident who speaks English or eat at one of the top notch restaurants affords something different.

Not more than twenty miles from the city is the fan-like "Horse-Tail Falls," retreat for American tourists where the Sierra Madre Mountains rear into the sky. From the city can be seen Saddle Back Mountain, dimmed through the morning by clouds.

Song and story about the 'Count City,' named for the Count of Monterrey, Señor don Gaspar de Zuniga y Acebedo, have added glamour to an already romantic city and the American tourists are making a deep and wide trail to its spots of interest.

Food Contamination Most Likely During Warm Summer Season

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 7.—It is a matter of vital importance, particularly during the warm summer season, that sanitary measures be applied to prevent the contamination of perishable foods, stated Dr. John W. Brown, State Health Officer. Various intestinal disorders result from food which has in some way been rendered unwholesome. Summer diarrhea or "summer complaint," affecting young and old, is a serious type of stomach and bowel condition. So called "ptomaine poisoning," in nearly all cases, is none other than a food infection due to the presence in food of harmful bacteria or germs.

Perishable food, if contaminated, endangers human health. This hazard is greater in warm weather, because germs or their products multiply or develop more rapidly at high temperature. Some of the most valuable foods are of perishable nature. Such foods demand the exercise of safeguards. Among well known precautions, which need to be used if perishable foods are to be kept wholesome, are the following:

1. Some form of modern refrigeration or cooling is necessary to preserve food from day to day. Lack of an effective cooling process causes meat to spoil and milk to contain a dangerously large number of bacteria.

2. Resort to thorough cooking or boiling is the simplest and yet most useful method of preventing illness of food-borne character. This precaution applies especially to food prepared for infants and children.

3. Contamination of perishable food is avoided through the constant exercise of cleanliness on the part of those who handle food.

4. Pastries and other food products make a far greater appeal to the consumer or patron if there is an entire absence of flies. Adequate provision for screens and application of every known means of fly and insect extermination are worthwhile.

The rewards of improved sanitation include tangible assets in good health and sound business.

Marked Increase In Shipment Of Sheep To Market

Ft. Worth Stockyards Record Smaller Increase in Cattle

AUSTIN, Texas, Aug. 7.—A moderate increase was recorded in livestock shipments from Texas to Fort Worth stockyards and interstate points during June as compared with the similar month last year, the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research said in its monthly report on the livestock trade. Forwardings totaled 4,465 cars against 4,182 cars a year ago, an increase of 7 per cent.

The greatest increase occurred in shipments of sheep, 586 cars against 449 cars last year, an increase of 30 per cent; followed by cattle, 3,197 against 2,861 cars up 12 per cent. Shipments of calves totaled 507 against 505 cars practically no change. Hog forwardings dropped 52 per cent from 367 cars a year ago to 175 in June of the current year. Aggregate forwardings during the first half of 1935 were 29,473 cars against 28,255 cars during the corresponding period last year.

Shipments to the Fort Worth market were characterized by a sharp drop in the number of hogs and an equally marked rise in the number of sheep. Los Angeles received about one third as many Texas cattle and hogs as in June last year, while a sharp increase occurred in shipments of cattle and no forwardings whatever of sheep were made to points in California other than Los Angeles, just the reverse of a year ago. Substantial increases occurred also in shipments of cattle—other than the large markets—to Colorado, Illinois, Kansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, Indiana and New Mexico, and of sheep to Colorado, Kansas, Missouri and Indiana.

Districts of the State showing substantial increases in forwardings of cattle in comparison with June last year were: East Texas, Trans Pecos country, South Texas and the Coastal Prairies.

You can therefore count on a two services of worship and preaching every Sunday.

New Book Imparts Gay Speech 'Boners'

It was Oscar Wilde, you remember, who once admiringly remarked to Whistler after that bright wit (and a bit of a painter, too) had said something particularly clever, "I wish I'd said that!" On which Whistler said, comfortingly, "You will, Oscar, you will," referring to Wilde's penchant for annexing the bright things said by others. Which anecdote accounts for the title of a merry little book—"I Wish I'd Said That," being a discussion of the art of repartee by two good listeners, Jack Goodman and Albert Rice.

There is another side to the discussion—called footsawing, or "I Wish I Hadn't Said That!" For example (given by the authors), pause to consider the disaster which overtook the young American who found himself seated next to the eminent Chinese, Wellington Koo, at a diplomatic banquet. Completely at a loss as to what to say to a Chinese, this young man, with a touch of genius such as may be detected only in real faux pastmasters, said: "Likee Soupee?"

Mr. Koo smiled and nodded. Several moments later, when called upon to say a few words, he delivered a brilliant little talk in flawless English, sat down while the applause was still resounding, turned to the young man and said: "Likee speeche?"

And think of the mistake made by the guest who was debating the advisability of going home. His host looked out of the window and said: "You simply can't go. It's raining. You must stay for dinner."

The guest glanced through the window and said: "Oh, no, it isn't raining that hard."—Kansas City Star.

Comfort, pleasure, and safety on a tour depend largely on efficient loading of the luggage, and modern body designs have done much to ease the problem, as these views of Chevrolet models reveal. ## Revolution And Counter Revolution Constantly Harassed Spanish Regime In Texas, Historical Documents Show

Bexar Archives Reveal Interesting Developments in Province

By Mrs. Mattie Austin Hatcher, Bear Archivist, University of Texas Library

AUSTIN, Texas Aug. 7.—On the night of March 2, 1811, Juan Bautista de las Casas, who had surprised and arrested the governor of Texas on January 21, 1811, was rudely awakened to find himself facing the daring sub-deacon, Don Juan Manuel Zambrano, at the head of five hundred armed men.

Early on the evening of March 1, Zambrano and a few other men had organized a Junta, or council. It was composed of ten members, the secretary and the president, Zambrano. At 2 o'clock the morning of March 2, Zambrano marched at the head of that body and the army and led his forces in front of the government building and paraded them there. Casas was then awakened and deprived of the staff of office.

The following day letters were sent out to all military posts informing them of the change in government and asking for their support. On that same day an ayuntamiento was organized to take the place of the one disbanded. That afternoon, officers were elected for the veteran and militia troops of the province. At 7 o'clock that evening Father Salazar, who, along with Aldama, was on his way to the United States to secure aid, was surprised while organizing a rebellion against the newly organized Junta. A mass meeting was at once called by Zambrano and steps were taken to prevent further disorders.

On March 8, two representatives of the Junta were sent across the Rio Grande with secret instructions to communicate with the viceregal army and report the counter revolution. These representatives reached Monclova and started a movement that culminated with the capture of Hidalgo and other leaders of the revolution at Bajan.

On March 26, not having yet heard of the complete destruction of the revolution, the Junta, at the head of five hundred men, set out for Laredo with the intention of giving battle to the insurgents. Upon their arrival in Laredo, however, they heard of the defeat of the rebels.

With the revolution destroyed, the Junta returned to Bexar and proceeded to restore life in the province to its normal course. Provisions were made to furnish the garrison and residents with adequate food supply; police regulations were set down and strictly enforced; a primary school was opened, and threats were made to hang anyone found guilty of inciting the people to rebel against the established government.

The Junta remained in control of the provincial government until July 22, 1811. On that date Don Simon de Herrera, appointed by Commandant General Nemesio Salcedo, assumed the office of acting governor.

On July 14, 1811, the Junta took formal leave of the residents in a proclamation, an original copy of which is found in the Bexar Archives in the Library of The University of Texas. A translation of the proclamation reads as follows:

The Government Junta of this Capital.

To the Residents, Officers and Troops of the Garrison:

During the brief period that it has been in charge of the government the Junta has felt the greatest satisfaction and gratification with your law-abiding conduct. It has been pleased because you have helped to uphold the just rights which this Junta championed during a most dangerous and critical period, one fraught with all kinds of evils. You have been outstanding in the defense of the sacred rights of religion, the king and the country and you have made yourselves memorable to posterity. Because of the glory you have earned, you will be the envy of the traitors and of those who have suffered the shameful reconquest of which you well know. They will never be equal to you in the glory you have earned. They will always be despised, and you will always be praised. They will never be employed in any office of importance, and you will enjoy this privilege. Finally, they will always have on their shoulders the heavy burden of the distrust of their commanders, and you, on the other hand, will have the satisfaction of knowing that your commanders have blind trust in your actions. Therefore, noble residents of this glorious soil, beloved patriots, and dear fellow countrymen, let everyone continue to observe the love and loyalty toward superior officers which has been shown up to this day. Let everyone carry out and obey their orders, being positive that such orders are given with no other intention than that of advancing your welfare.

Now you are more secure than ever before. This is true in the first place, because you have been disillusioned and the rebels and traitors have been punished. In the second place, you are more secure because of the many precautions taken by our leaders, the commandant general, with the assistance of His Excellency, the viceroy of New Spain. In the third place, you are safer because it has been your good fortune to have had Lieutenant Colonel Simon de Herrera appointed as acting governor of this fortunate province. His talent, prudence and other virtues you well know. You can be certain that he will devote his noble qualities to no other purpose than that of promoting the welfare of each person and the security of the district under his command. However, in order that all these excellent and beneficial measures may be fully effective, it is necessary for you to show implicit obedience and scrupulously observe all decrees. By doing so, you will be adding to your own merit, your services will be more commendable, and you will be gallant and noble. By the implicit obedience you show to this honorable commander, you will also be rewarding the work of this Junta, which is now concluding its work.

Don Simon de Herrera remained in command of the province until October, 1811, when Don Manuel de Salcedo was restored to his former office. Salcedo then had a brief period of peaceful administration to the latter part of the following year. Then, on August 11, 1812, the Gutierrez-Meane expedition captured Nacogdoches. On November 14, 1812, the invaders took LaBahia, and on March 29, 1813, San Antonio surrendered to them. Governor Salcedo and his staff were taken out of San Antonio on April 1, 1813, and brutally murdered. But retribution was to come with surprising suddenness.

If you have guests in your home it will be a courtesy to them and information that your friends want to record their visit in the current issue of The Stockman. Just phone 210 and give the reporter their names.
