State Rests In Buck Jones Trial At Midland In Death of Abilene Man; Insanity Plea Basis Sought

HOMETOWN TALK

BY BEDDY

We Need Good Roads.

Both sides in the bus-truck vs. railroad fight or, more properly, the railroad vs. bus-truck fight, were heard yesterday in Austin at a public hearing of the committee considering house bills dealing with regulation of the common carriers whose right-of-ways are highways built with money collected by the national, state and county governments from taxes on gas, as well as real estate and other things.

Buses and truck operators actually pay more in taxes in Texas than railroad companies, said our fiery friend Lloyd Price, once the young sage of northeast Texas, in the state senate.

Once we sat for several days in the dingy Travis county court house during hearing on ex-attorney general's petition for writ restraining the lamented J. T. Robinson, then land commissioner, from selling leases on state lands in West Texas.

It appeared some of Austin's professional land-grabbers didn't want a free-for-all letting on the leases. So, through Truehart, an assistant, Attorney General Pollard was fighting the tried-and-true Robinson, who is dead, his departure perhaps quickened by unwarranted prosecutions by certain members of the legislature, under pressure and influence from certain outside sources.

Lloyd was, in our opinion, on the right side then as attorney for intervenors who were fighting the attempt to obtain an injunction. And, take it from us, Lloyd's brown eyes snapped, his tongue lashed and his feet paced that little courtroom to help frame pictures of strife and opposition between him self and Truehart.

He was on the right side then. He's not so dead right this time. But, most every industry threatened with hard-to-digest legislation has to hire a lawyer to represent them in these legislative committee hearings, so old "Joey" fanned as an all-fired good un in such a job, has got him one outside the courtroom.

This column never has shouted that buses and trucks ought to be run clear off the highway for good. They have to have roads to move over. They are indispensable to present-day conditions and needs. Any man or woman who likes to ride a bus, or has to ride one to get some place when he wishes, earns the thanks from railroads or anything else if he does ride 'em. It's a free country.

But, so long as buses and trucks operate as common carriers, fixing of their rates, the weights, length, height and width, etc. should be properly regulated so as to leave the field wide open for the race with railroads for business.

Competition is a good tonic in transportation. But the idea is not to let one industry engaged in transportation dig its toes into the road a pace or two ahead of another industry engaged in transportation—let's have no handicaps at the starting line in the contest for business.

Taxes can be equalized between the two, taking into consideration capital investment, revenue, etc. But taxes on both railroads and public motor vehicle lines cannot easily be obtained through the same methods and by placing the tax on the same common source or type of property.

Railroads spend millions for right-of-way, trackage, rolling stock and much other equipment. Bus companies need no right-of-way, no tracks. Just rolling stock. That's where the difficulty in equalizing taxes comes in.

However, it can be solved and should be.

Railroads, it is well-known, feel, and in many cases the feeling is justified—that the whole public has got it in for them. Let someone file a damage suit against a railroad and in many instances the road, feeling it is useless for a "big-crue" railroad to win a lawsuit just go to the plaintiff and learn

MIDLAND, Feb. 24. (AP)—The state rested today in the trial of Buck Jones, charged with murder for the slaying of Weldon L. Russell, Abilene business man.

The defense attempted steadily to lay the base for a plea of insanity, cross-questioning state witnesses on the "hallucinations," bragging, and moodiness of the defendant. The defense expected to produce physicians in an endeavor to prove that a wound which left a scar on Jones' head was responsible for purported insanity.

Little new testimony about the actual shooting was offered today. T. A. Russell, father of the slain man, gave testimony the jury was not allowed to hear. He said his son, after being shot, told him Jones said, "This is the way we bring them down in California." The testimony was ruled inadmissible as a dying statement.

The defense in its cross-questioning appeared to be placing part of the responsibility on Leonard Cox; but Sheriff A. C. Francis testified that Jones, when arrested, said, "don't arrest that boy; I'll take all the blame."

Cox, state witness for the state, testified that just before the shooting he seized Jones' arm, was jerked loose, and then saw Jones throw up his head and fire, hitting Russell. Cox identified guns belonging to Jones and Bert Bennett, Russell's clothing, and Jones' overcoat.

Bennett appeared as a defense witness.

Some Mulligan!

Two "Transients" Begin with "Stew," End With Unusual Mixture of Fluids.

"We were going," explained two Irishmen, "to have a mulligan. You know what a mulligan is, Chief. Well we were going to have a mulligan. Going to cook it myself. And then, well I guess we just got too much."

Thus explained the two men to Chief of Police E. A. Long today, why they were drunk. They were fined $15 each, and after that formality was over, were given thirty minutes to move east.

"What," inquired Chief Long, "were you drinking?" "Well, when we started talking about the mulligan, we had whisky. When we ended we were drinking denatured alcohol, mixed with lemon soda water."

8-Hour Day On Public Works Bill's Object Committee Unanimously Approves Liard House Measure

AUSTIN, Feb. 24. (AP)—The eight-hour labor law would apply to all public works if a bill by Representative Laird of Lufkin, voted out favorably last night by the house labor committee, becomes law. It was voted out unanimously.

It was opposed by Don Lee, representative of the Highway Contractors Association, who stated it would have a detrimental effect on highway construction work because of the limited time in which contractors have to work on these projects. Lee also claimed that the average wage of thirty cents per hour for highway labor was not sufficient to enable workmen to make a living working only eight hours per day.

H. W. Caylor Displays Two Paintings At Interesting Rotary Club Meeting

H. W. Caylor, artist and pioneer Big Spring resident, displayed two of his pictures, "The Trail Herd" and "Rush for Water" at the luncheon of the Rotary club today and gave a resume of the source of his data for pictures that he has painted of the old West.

Mr. Caylor told of securing data for these particular pictures from the widow of Mr. T. Reynolds, whom he termed "a cowman of the old West." One of the scenes shown by Mr. Caylor reproduced vividly the rush by cattle for water of the Pecos river and the efforts of the cowboys to control the animals. The other canvas portrayed a herd of cattle in the old West. Mr. Caylor explained in a very interesting way of the hardships of cattlemen of the day, of the club support the work of Troop One of the Boy Scouts in a material way. Loan Bill Not To Cause 'Raid' Says Senator

Vandenberg Resents Reports; Vote Expected Soon

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. (AP)—On the eve of receiving a veto message from President Hoover of the veterans' loan bill, Senator Vandenberg protested in the senate today against "this constant effort to make the country believe that in this plan there is some awful raid upon the treasury."

"This is no raid," shouted the Michigan republican, after another analysis of the bill.

"Not a single penny is to be taken from the treasury would funds held in trust for the veterans."

He said he had demanded an explanation from John E. Edgerton, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, for his letter to President Hoover expressing fear the bill would cause an increase in taxes. He said he had wired Edgerton yesterday but had received no answer.

"I ask," continued Vandenberg, "is not such an unwarranted statement a needless menace to business?"

Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, said Vandenberg was giving "undue dignity to Edgerton, because on almost every occasion he misrepresents almost all kinds of legislation."

LOVE PIRATE LANDS IN JAIL

BRENNHAM, Texas, Feb. 24. (AP)—One man was killed, two young women school teachers were injured seriously and eleven other persons, most of them students at the University of Texas, were hurt slightly late last night when a bus was sideswiped by a cotton truck four miles east of Borton, Texas.

L. L. Fowler, of Elgin, driver of the cotton truck, which is owned by the W. C. Dunks Motor Freight company of Elgin, was charged with murder in connection with the accident. He was held here.

The man killed was W. W. Warner, advance agent for Roxy's Gang, theatrical troupe from New York.

The two most seriously injured were Miss Mary Elizabeth Wright of Houston, teacher of languages in the Giddings high school, and Miss Bessie Black, principal of the Giddings school.

Miss Wright's head was crushed and her condition was regarded as serious. Miss Black suffered a broken left arm.

A partial list of the others injured includes: Bernard Pearlman, Galveston; Frances Howett, Hempstead; Sidney Ohlhausen, Eudora, Ark.; Philip Halman, Houston; Miss Allene Simpson, Belleville; E. S. Litzman, Galveston; Miss Magda Cuenod, Austin; Miss Kate Johnson, Austin.

J. A. Rosenburg of Austin, was driver of the bus. Passengers praised his handling of the bus after the crash, saying he prevented it from turning over.

Most of the passengers were scratched and cut by flying glass and slivers and continued to Austin after treatment at Burton.

The bus was en route from Houston to Austin.

Mrs. Kate Johnson, one of the eight persons taken to an Austin hospital, said she was seated beside Warner just before the collision.

"The truck struck the left side of the window where Warner was sitting," she said. "The impact threw him completely over my head and he landed across the aisle. Shattering glass fell all about. Practically every window in the bus was broken and the entire car was in confusion."

Student Escapes Robert Williams of Austin, University of Texas Medical student at Galveston, gave a graphic description of the crash. Williams escaped with a sprained side.

"I was sitting in the left rear seat and could see the whole thing," Williams stated. "For a moment it looked as if the truck would pass us safely—Bang!"

The rear end of the truck collided with the mid-section of the bus and all was confusion. Our driver grasped the situation and started fighting wheel in attempt to keep the bus upright. His efforts were successful and within a 100 yard space he had brought the vehicle to a standstill at the side of the road.

"With the lights extinguished by the impact, flying glass clattering to the floor, and hysterical screams and yells of passengers, the entire bus was in confusion after the crash," Williams stated.

These bills are divorcing the filling station or retail business from the rest of the oil business; a fixed earnings basis for common carrier pipe lines; prohibition of proration on small pumping wells; and prevention of discrimination between sections in the retail price of gasoline.

Disintegration of the oil business to prohibit those engaged in other branches of the business is a new theory in Texas, but is gaining ground rapidly in the minds of the people. Senator Woodward will address the banquet on this subject.

Carl Estes, newspaper man of Tyler, will deliver an address entitled "Individualism" at the banquet.

The public is invited to all sessions except the director's meeting.

Government Will Continue Enforcement

Appeal From New Jersey Judge's Decision Successful

UNANIMOUS OPINION

'Language of Article 5 of Amendment Not Ambiguous'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 24. (AP)—The eighteenth amendment was sustained as valid today by the supreme court.

Under the decision the government will continue its efforts to enforce the Volstead law.

The ruling was handed down in the government's appeal from the decision of Federal Judge William Clark of New Jersey, who held the amendment invalid because improperly ratified.

Judge Clark contended that to be valid the amendment should have been submitted to state conventions for ratification rather than to state legislatures. This view the court found untenable.

Not Ambiguous

Justice Roberts reviewed in detail the arguments in favor of and against the validity of the amendment. He said the language of article 5 of the constitution was not ambiguous, as was contended by opponents of the amendment, adding it clearly gave congress the liberty to decide whether constitutional amendments should be submitted to state legislatures or state conventions.

Justice Roberts said congress was not restrained in the exercise of its discretion, adding that ratification by state legislatures was valid.

When William H. Sprague and William J. Howey were brought to trial before Judge Clark on a charge of possessing and transporting 50 half barrels of beer, he quashed the indictment, holding the prohibition amendment invalid.

In an exhaustive opinion he took the position that as the eighteenth amendment attempted to transfer to the federal government jurisdiction over rights reserved to the people it should have been submitted to them in state conventions for ratification.

He held that its ratification by state legislatures was insufficient to make it effective.

The government appealed at once. The supreme court expedited the proceedings, hearing oral arguments in about a month, although counsel for the defendants sought approximately three months more time.

Contending the question raised by Judge Clark had already been before the supreme court in the national prohibition cases, Solicitor General Thacher in a brief argument declared the court had disposed of the controversy.

First Bi-District Battle Tonight

Steers, Buckies Are Set For Contest

Dope Points to Longhorns To Take First From Breckenridge

West Texas' bid for a sectional basketball championship will be made tonight when the Big Spring Steers clash with the Breckenridge high school quintet at Breckenridge, in the first of a scheduled three game series to decide the winner of bi-district honors.

The Steers, winners of the District Eight title, left Monday for the Stephens county hamlet. They will work out today on the Breckenridge gymnasium, in order to get "the feel" of it before tonight's contest.

The Buckies won the right to meet the Longhorns for bi-district honors by capturing the District nine title last week-end. In the finals of a tournament held at Eastland, the Buckies plastered a 17 to 7 defeat on the backs of the Claco Leboes of big dam fame.

The Steers are favored to capture the initial contest from the Buckies and it is not out of line to predict they will sweep two games in a five, ending the series here Thursday night.

Steers Good
Bill Stevens invades the Oil Belt with one of the fastest quintets ever to step across West Texas soil. He has everything that goes to construct a perfect basketball team. He has five clean youths, three of them high enough to cause constant worry to opposing forces. He has little to worry about at the guards, with Ted Phillips and Bill Flowers holding down the assignments. At center he has Elmer Pardue, who in every contest he has participated in this year, has been the outstanding tip-off man.

He has goal shooters in Tommy Hutto and David Hoppe. He has aggressiveness, and defense strength. His passing and his dribbling are constantly threatening. When a better combination than this is placed opposite the black and gold clad basketeters, the Boves will drop their initial title play contest.

In Abilene, the Steers found a collection of maple floor performers that came near measuring up to this standard. But the Eagles fell short, and when the Longhorns got over that hill, they earned a rest until the state finals.

Second Here
The Breckenridge organization is not as good a collection as the one the Abilene mentors sent against the Steers, or this reason, the Steers are expected to out-French much more ease than they did the Eagles.

The second game of the series will be played here Thursday night. Should the Steers take the two contests and the title, they will be one of thirteen teams to enter the state finals, to be played at Austin in a C.M.R.C. Tonight's game will start at 8 o'clock.

Clarke Looks For Same Amount of Line Drives
SAN ANTONIO, Feb. 24 (AP)—Having given the new ball a preliminary test, Tom Clarke, veteran coach of the New York Giants, comes up with the opinion that it's as lively as ever.

"There may be better pitching this year and more accurate throwing by the infielders," says Clarke, "but the ball travels as far as ever. There won't be so much wildness on the mound but the line drives will be just as wild as ever."

Rogers Hornsby Has One Business, One Hobby; They's Both Baseball

By PAUL MICKELSON
CHICAGO, Feb. 24 (AP)—A hero worshiper on a visit to Catalina Island, training ground for the Chicago Cubs, sided up a rookie one day.

"Say," he said, "who is that guy over there by the fireplace? I've seen in this hotel for days now and every time I come into the lounge I see him sitting and staring at everybody, he isn't a ball player, is he?"

"A ball player!" gasped the amazed rookie, "why noster, that's Rogers Hornsby, probably the greatest right hand hitter the game has ever known."

The hero worshiper retired in confusion, but he had seen a real picture of the Rajah, perhaps the strangest person in baseball. He has been booed and cheered alike by millions of fans and has broken record after record with his big stick, and yet he acts just as he did sixteen years ago when he came up to the major leagues, a raw-boned, inquisitive kid from Texas.

Is Lone Wolf
He is a lone wolf because of habits, rather than preference. He doesn't chew, smoke or drink. He doesn't dance, play cards or golf. His business is baseball and so is his hobby. He will talk of it for hours with anyone who will listen. In the conversation is switched to some other subject he is apt to walk right out of the discussion. He sits for hours staring out of a chair in hotel lobbies like a farmer boy on his first trip to a big city. He rarely reads even baseball stories in the papers, saving his eyes to watch the pellets curving across the corners of a plate. Rarely does he go to the theater.

He doesn't know a brassie from a niblic, but he raises sod for putting greens on 87 acres of his Missouri farm. He has never seen a putt made on his own grass. Twice, out of curiosity, he has hit golf balls. He dubbed the first drive in the park at Catalina and hit the next one 250 yards and out of the lot. He never hit another. He wasn't interested.

Humor Keen
His sense of humor is keen and sly. By organized cheering he plotted Andy Lotshaw, Cub trainer, and Hank Gramp, bull pen pitcher, a couple of left footers, to a dead heat for the annual camp dancing championship at Catalina. Once he asked a sports writer's wife to teach him to dance. She agreed but when the music started up he redoubled and said: "Aw, I was just foolin'." I could never learn to dance."

He likes to watch airplanes flying around. Some day he'd like to own and fly one. He likes to farm. If prohibition hadn't become a law he might have been as good a bartender as he is a ball player. No matter how fine the mixture he won't drink it. He is one of the most difficult men in sport to interview. He will answer questions fully and clearly but volunteers little information.

Once while hitting over 400 he fell into a slump for two days. A rookie who never could hope to club 250 seriously pointed out certain mistakes in his stance and grip. Hornsby had the novice go over the instructions again and again. The ribbing went on for over an hour.

When the Rajah started tearing the cover off the ball again he gravely asked the rookie from time to time if he was following instructions properly and suggested that a constant eye be kept on his batting style to prevent future slumps.

Good Steaks
He believes in lots of food for ball players. Warren Brown once asked him the secret of his punch at the plate.

"Steak steaks," he answered. "The next day he took Brown and several players with him to a dilapidated lunchroom and fed them steaks the size of dish pans. "Just eat them steaks awhile and you'll hit," he insisted. "They give you something to work with. They give you beef and power."

Behind his seriousness is a back drop of melancholy. He doesn't care what is said about him. Whether he's liked or disliked. Last summer I asked him to go to the horse races—an interest he has given up because of difficulties that once beset him.

"I'd like to go," he sighed. "There's lots of things I like to do. But I can't. People would say 'There he is back at the horse races.' Sometimes I wish I was just a fat boy. Then I could do a lot of things I want to do."

Pirate Manager Puts Kayo on Golf Playing
PASO ROBLES, Calif., Feb. 24 (AP)—Any Pittsburgh Pirate with some golf in his system must get it out before the National League pennant chase starts.

The advance squad today had it straight from Manager Jewel Ens that: "The minute the regular big league season begins I believe the niblic and mahlis should be laid on the shelf."

"The fellow who goes over nine or more holes of golf in the morning cannot do justice to himself on the diamond the same afternoon," Ens said.

Hoppe and Cochran Defend Invasions
NEW YORK, Feb. 24 (AP)—Two American home-breads, Willie Hoppe and Welker Cochran, have repulsed the first foreign assault in the international 182 ballkine billiard tournament.

Hoppe opened the tournament yesterday with a 400 to 374 victory over Eric Hagenlacher of Germany. Cochran defeated Kinry Matsuyama of Japan, 400 to 380.

Cochran was matched with Hagenlacher in the first of today's matches and Hoppe with Matsuyama.

The tournament is sponsored by the Federation of Billiard Players organized by Hoppe in opposition to the National Billiard Association.

Mickey Walker Meets Risko Tonight

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP)—Promoter "Pa" Stribling will try to pry the lid off the 1931 heavy-weight outdoor season tonight with a card featuring Mickey Walker and Johnny Risko in the ten round final, besides exhibition performances by the forthcoming championship rivals, Young Stribling and Max Schmeling.

He expects 25,000 customers to contribute $50,000 to $60,000 at the bargain scale of $2 to $5.

If it rains tonight, the show will be Wednesday night. The weather has been threatening.

There was no hitch in the arrangements otherwise, Stribling said, despite mysterious reports emanating from New York, that a cancellation was likely. These reports appeared more concerned with the fate of the return Carnera-Maloney bout, scheduled as the second of the winter's flitic festivals in the Madison Square Garden arena here on March 5.

Ever since a crack developed in Carnera's tenth rib, the boys have been skeptical, despite the flat statements of Promoter Frank J. Bruen that under no circumstances would he consider calling his show off.

The wires have been shuttling messages back and forth between those pulling the strings for this year's heavyweight program. With Carnera signwed to meet the winner of the Stribling-Schmeling bout in a second title contest in September, it is no secret that Italian's board of managers, led by Bill Duffy, have no desire to run unnecessary risks.

Walker and Risko meanwhile are ready for just an old-fashioned socking bee. Walker won the last time this pair collided in Detroit, but Risko, with a 25 pound pull in the weights, looks to be in condition to spring one of his typical upsets.

The preliminaries tonight, including five six rounders, are slated for 8 p. m., the main go at 10.

Betty Robinson and Stell Walsh Square Again After Century Race

CHICAGO, Feb. 24 (AP)—Betty Robinson, who won the 1928 Olympic 100-yard dash for the United States, and Stell Walsh, the sensational Polish miss from Cleveland, squared off in a race from their rivalry.

Miss Robinson, now a co-ed at Northwestern University, last night evened up for a defeat by Miss Walsh last summer, by winning a feature century in the Illinois National Guard and Naval Militia games, by a scant foot over the Cleveland runner.

The time, 1:14, was only four-tenths of a second slower than Miss Walsh's world record which was made on an outdoor track, and was remarkably good for the slow bumpy track in the 124th Field Artillery armory. Miss Robinson gained a margin of about a foot at 25 yards and held it to the finish.

CLEARWATER, Fla., Feb. 24 (AP)—When Shakespeare wrote that line about "What's in a Name" he must have had Wilbert Robinson, portly manager of the Brooklyn Robins in mind.

THE WATER BUCKET

It was along in the early part of last year's football season. The fate of the Steers of 1930 was yet unknown. They had made an auspicious start, and the spark of hope was far from being buried beneath the grim ashes of a string of defeats. The Steers, infants in the always rocky Oil Belt, were scheduled to clash with the Breckenridge Bucaroos on the local gridiron. For some reason, the Longhorns had hopes of defeating the 1929 co-champions. They didn't, but they gave Boone Magness and his cohorts a brilliant battle—the best one, incidentally, the Boves staged all year. In the press box that day was "Silme" Hill, Claco's assistant mentor. He had come here, not to watch the Steers, but the Bucaroos. But he was compelled to watch the work of one slender youth. After the game, Hill, in typical Hill fashion, said, "better watch the scouts, they'll have that center of yours away from here before the season is over." Silent Prince Shotwell, who says less, and perhaps thinks more, than any coach in the Oil Belt district, had little to say after the Breckenridge Bucaroos won a 19 to 6 victory, and Bill Flowers had galloped through the opposition for 80 yards and a touchdown. But he did voluntarily submit the opinion, "What's the center's name? He's good." That's an oration, coming from the compressed lips of Breckenridge's super mentor. The center, in question, was Elmer Pardue, six feet tall, flashy, clean cut athlete of Big Spring high school. Pardue had but one failing that this department could see all year. And he saw him in every game, excepting one. That was, there was so much of him, he got hurt often. Tonight Pardue goes against the Breckenridge Bucaroos again. And he's playing center. But it is a center of a different sort. As one of the most formidable assets of Bill Stevens' club, Pardue and his four sidekicks go up against the Buckies tonight in the first game of the series to decide the bi-district championship. From the gridiron to the hardwood stretch, Pardue has moved his athletic wares. As center of the Steers' quintet, he, so far, has met no rival brands of aggressiveness. He is fast, for a six foot hulk. He is a sharpshooting goalester when he is in close range of the hoop. Seldom does he lose on the tipoff. And seldom does an opposing passer advance any great length with Pardue confronting him. In 1929 as center on the gridiron, the lanky youngster made Breckenridge like it to a certain extent. In 1931 as center in the gymnasium, the same youth is destined to make the Bucaroos like it again; only this time, more so.

win, lose or draw. The high school gymnasium should be packed. Chairs probably will be at a premium. Only this department is sure of a chair. We merely sit "Uncle Walt" Smith down, and it is no trick at all for him to cover two chairs as well as one. When we arrive he merely moves over. The only hitch is, sometimes we fear comfort will overcome his sense of justice and companionship, and he might refuse to budge. And there is nothing we could do about it, come to think of it.

Talked with a few representatives of the oil field here the other day. They are preparing for the baseball season. The oil companies will have their teams as usual, and in all probability the Oil Belt League will be revived. The City League probably won't. It was too much of a financial strain last year. A good semi-pro outfit probably will be organized, with several of the amateurs on the roster. That is well enough.

Texas Christian and Southern Methodist are at it again. When it seemed that all hopes of the Fort Worth school winning a pennant had vanished from sight, the Ponies had their hoofs shot and slipped in a couple of defeats. As a result the Christians are back in the melee and are fighting hard for a cage title. The thing will probably be settled when the two get together. And what a gala night that will turn out to be.

LOSE MANY SHIPS
BERLIN (INS).—The merchant marines of the world lost 679 ships with a total of 610,590 tons during 1929, according to statistics compiled by a German business magazine. Compared with a loss of 591 ships during the preceding year, the above figure means an increase of 11 per cent.

WOULD FACEY BERLIN
BERLIN (INS).—To clean up Berlin and to quell the "secret civil war" going on between ultra-radicals right and left is the ambition of Albert Grezinski, police president of the capital. Regular raids on the meeting places of the fascists and the communists will be made by special police squads in motor cars with the purpose of confiscating hidden arms and munitions.

Railroads are absolutely necessary. Buses and trucks didn't take the lead in developing this country. The railroads helped fix things so the country could advance into what many term the automobile age; they fixed things so that buses and trucks could be operated profitably.

Yes railroads are necessary. Yet they are pretty widely cursed. This is caused partly from the fact that they are 'big corporations' and all you need to start a lot of folks to cursing something is to describe it as a 'big corporation.' Another cause for this cursing are the tactics sometimes used by railroads.

Railroads we must have, the more the better. But while communities need railroads railroads need communities, and it is to their interest to see everything possible done to quicken development of territory touched by them.

Railroads should not assume the attitude of the spoiled child who can advance but one reason why everything and everybody in the world should stop and, regardless of their own interest hop in and scrap with railroads for something railroads want, overlooking interests that are not directly connected with interests of railroads.

ing, said the Santa Fe would protect connection both north and south of Sweetwater, in case consolidation is granted.

Jensen said the two westbound trains were established to accommodate travel during the oil field boom several years ago and that present business does not justify two trains.

In behalf of the application for discontinuing train No. 10, Jensen said the cost of operation on this schedule is now 86 cents per mile, while the earning is less than 15 cents. The train carries only seven or eight passengers daily to Fort Worth, he said.

Under the proposed change, train No. 2 now leaving Big Spring at 9:10 a. m. and arriving at Fort Worth at 4:30 p. m., would depart from Big Spring between 12:30 and 2 p. m. and arrive at Fort Worth between 7:45 and 8:45. This schedule, Jensen said, would provide better connections from Ft. Worth to eastern points.

Men of Families In Care of Salvation Army Do Park Work

Men of families being aided by the Salvation Army and the Community Chest, will aid in work at the city park. It was announced today. In some instances, officials declared, families furnished food by the chest fund, have able bodied men who are willing to work at the city park in payment for the aid given them.

Although a number were supposed to go to the park today, only three volunteered their services.

Another attempt to place the men to work will be made Thursday. The men are engaged in doing work which would offer no remuneration. Trucks to be used in the construction of the Boy Scout hut, are being gathered. The park is being cleaned generally.

A REAL OPPORTUNITY TO SAVE

CONOCO

Yes, Sir, I can back up what I say about Germ-Processed Oil with actual proof, O.K'd by A.A.A.

THREE stock cars from three price classes went through six weeks of testing on Pike's Peak. Three nationally known oils were used in comparison with Conoco Germ-Processed Motor Oil. All of the testing was directly supervised by the American Automobile Association.

At the end of six weeks the AAA took the more than ten thousand observations, then issued a report of the outcome. The report stated that in the Pike's Peak Tests Conoco Motor Oil had shown a reduction of 76.4% in the rate of motor wear... that it had shown greater stability... had lowered frictional temperatures... increased compression pressures... reduced oil consumption... added to gasolene mileage... reduced crankcase dilution... lengthened motor life.

No higher authority could have been called upon to prove the merits of Germ-Processed oil. No more sweeping commendation could have been asked for. The complete story of the Pike's Peak tests is told in an attractive booklet. We'll gladly send you a copy upon your request mailed to "Conoco, Ponca City, Oklahoma"... or you can obtain it at stations showing the sign of the Conoco Red Triangle when you go there to change to Germ-Processed oil, as thousands of other motorists are doing every day.

Hollywood Sights

BY ROBBIN COONS HOLLYWOOD—Some of the lesser "contract featured players" at the studios are in a position comparable to that of climbers who are forever buzzing about the outskirts of the social whirl.

MARIE PREVOST But they are the pets of the studio publicity gank, who can press them into service almost any day to pose for "rag" pictures, to fulfill advertising tie-ups with shoe and lak cosmetics companies, and pinch-hit generally for bigger stars.

They appear quickly, bright-eyed and eager, glad of the chance to be photographed at a zoo riding elephants or feeding the lions, or to make up their faces in what purports to be the latest cosmetic rage from Paris, and pose by the hour for still pictures.

In this manner they get loads of publicity scarcely justified by their movie standing, and that is balm to their hopes.

They are usually good troupers, these stars of the stills, and work hard. Not infrequently one of them, on the wings of a bit exceptionally well done, sails into the security of better opportunities.

Others remain as bit-players and become competent actresses, but somehow usually fail to make a lasting impression.

And still others, after their moment of glory, fade out of the picture entirely.

PLUMP AND FLUCKY

MARIE PREVOST, who used to be an attraction as a leading lady and star, is capitalizing in her come-back to pictures on the nemesis of stars—plumpness.

Instead of reducing, she is playing parts wherein her extra pounds are "in character."

Flashes of Life

By The Associated Press LONDON—John Bull has developed a terror of the skies. A single seater biplane carries six machine guns. Two shoot through the propeller. Four are on the wings. Fired at once by the pilot, the guns make a cone of bullets that meet a few hundred yards ahead. The plane carries four bombs and makes 194 miles an hour.

NEWARK, N. J.—Sixteen models of the cathedrals and religious shrines made by the late Mayor Thomas L. Raymond are on view in the Newark museum, to which they have been presented. Making them was a hobby for 40 years. Architectural details are reproduced in the miniatures, the largest of which is eight inches high. Tiny mica windows are in different colors.

KINGSTON, N. Y.—William H. Pratt, who thinks he was steamrolled out of a job as city steam roller operator, has failed to obtain satisfaction in the courts. He set forth that the job was abolished and somebody else was given it later.

NEW YORK—Some taxi drivers who have been losing high wide and handsome at galloping dominoes have learned why from the police. They showed a table seized in a raid on a gaming room above a taxi garage. A camouflaged iron table top was connected to wires in a table leg. By stepping on a button under a rug the operator could magnetize the plate and make metal-plugged dice turn in desired fashion.

CHICAGO (INS)—Advertising recently was characterized here as an educational force that has improved our standards of living, spurred our ambitions, and contributed in an invaluable manner to the greatest era of progress ever known.

ANGELS CAMP, Cal. (INS)—The fourth annual revival of the historic jumping frog jubilee, made famous by Mark Twain, will take place here May 14 and 17.

YORK, Pa. (INS)—Reuben Chalfant, 95, retired farmer and Civil War veteran, has a razor, which has given 75 years of service. "I bought it for 50 cents in 1856," said he.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (INS)—"Lover's Lane," an old town road laid in 1790 near Lake Mahkeenac, said to be used almost exclusively by "petting parties" will not be closed. At a town meeting it was voted to keep the old highway open.

THE CRIME IN THE DUTCH GARDEN

STENOGRAPHER: The mystery of the murder of Annabelle Querdling deepens as Police Superintendent Richmond and Jimmie Haswell, amateur detective, probe the tragedy in her Dutch garden. Here the eccentric spinster, watching the sunset, was crushed fatally by a stone statue, toppled with evil intent. Marjorie Blake, niece of Miss Querdling, finds her aunt dead a few minutes after she and Dr. Neetherton, a neighbor, had talked with her. Hearing Marjorie's alarm, her sister, Evelyn, and the latter's fiancé, Lionel Duckworth, run from the music room and go with her to the garden, joined by Major Gresham, who has been on the grounds at the time. Suspicion points toward a disgruntled chauffeur, Green, and a new possibility appears when Constable Roscoe reports having seen a strange car and driver near the estate at about the time of the murder. Evelyn tells the superintendent of her aunt's opposition to romance, but adds that she had consented to her marriage to Duckworth at the end of six months.

Chapter 6 WHAT THE LETTER SAID HERE Superintendent Richmond considered was a case where it might in the absence of eyewitnesses, prove difficult to bring the guilt home to any individual. It might be possible to show that certain persons could have committed the crime, but the wider the possibility the less the certainty. The letters, Evelyn said, were in Duckworth's possession. Shortly after she left at Richmond's request to summon him, Duckworth came in, looking tired and haggard, and delivered the envelopes, arranged in the order received. Superintendent Richmond and Jimmie scrutinized the letters closely. They were rudely scrawled in printed characters on cheap paper. The first was the "longest" and bore a postmark nearly five months old. You are a bad wicked old woman. You go to church, but what do you pray for. You ought to be punished. Wait till I get the chance. The second was more definite: I am waiting my chance. It won't be long. You are for death, sudden and quick. Aside from sundry writing, the third was similar: Are you ready to die? The end is near. You made others suffer and you shall pay. You beast. The next merely said: Psalms 69. 28. This means you. "What's the reference?" questioned Jimmie. Old Annabelle Querdling had penciled it on the back: Let them be blotted out of the book of the living and not be written with the righteous. Constable Roscoe said that he suspected Joe Allen, the gardener dismissed for making love to one of the maids, as the writer of the notes, because Joe had once been in the choir. "He swore he wasn't," admitted the constable. I could have done it last week, wicked woman. I won't wait much longer. That was the next letter, and the others continued in the same vein. Richmond said treating the finger prints of the letters had been useless, since many persons had handled them. At this point Duckworth suggested possibly the letters had not all been written by the same person. "Doesn't help us much," muttered Richmond. "When writing is disguised there are often differences when he turned to Duckworth and asked him for particulars about himself. "She did not altogether like it," was Duckworth's frank reply to the superintendent's question concerning Miss Querdling's view of her niece's engagement to him. "but I think she was getting more used to the idea." He said that on the night of the tragedy he had been in the room with Evelyn singing, remaining there until Marjorie had come to tell of her aunt's death. "You didn't see any one in the garden at any time?" the superintendent asked. "Well, as a matter of fact, I went to pull the curtains," he pointed to the windows—"and I noticed a woman hurrying across the pathway you can just see. While I can't describe her well, she was of moderate height and wore a long dark coat or mackintosh. I couldn't see her face, as she was going the other way. Of course, I didn't take particular notice."

"It was still quite light?" the superintendent asked, and noting Duckworth's nod, continued, "then why did you pull the curtain?" "Well," Duckworth smiled, "I was here with Miss Blake and we did not particularly want to be opposite those windows. Besides it was hardly light enough for her to see the music." No one suggested who the woman might have been, and interest turned at once to Major Gresham, announced by the maid, who said that he called at the suggestion of the sisters. The major, short, slightly bow-legged, florid and frowning, entered pompously. "Morning Richmond," he began, "I have you got the rights of it?" "What do you mean?" "Just what I say. On your own showing, you arrived in the garden at ten minutes past nine and you were there until half past—when Miss Querdling was discovered dead." "The major's wrath flamed up at what he took to be the insinuations in the question. "What can I tell you!" he exclaimed indignantly, and then, after Richmond explained his purpose of clearing up the mystery, he said, "Of course, I'll help you. That's what I came for. What can I do for you?" But his answer to Richmond's questions were not in keeping with this quieter mood. He blustered and protested that the questions were impertinent. As to the time he left his home to go across the links to the Querdling estate through the gate from the links—"Call it 8:45, but what's the good of asking silly questions like that?" "When you went through the garden to the lawn," persisted Richmond, "did you see anyone about?" "Bligh it, no!—I'd have said so." "It might take you 20 to 25 minutes to get from your house across the links to this garden. That would make it ten past nine on your arrival. Now, what did you do when you got here?" "Nothing—I came to see Miss Querdling and her niece met me and said there had been an accident." "That was later," Richmond's glance was hard. "You arrived at 10 or 15 minutes after nine. You say you called to see Miss Querdling. If you did not go to her directly you arrived—what were you doing from the time you arrived until you were seen by Marjorie in the garden at about 9:30." "What do you mean?" "Just what I say. On your own showing, you arrived in the garden at ten minutes past nine and you were there until half past—when Miss Querdling was discovered dead." MOTHER ADVISED. TAKING CARDUI

Lady Who Had Been In Bad Health Took Cardui And Was Benefited.

Birmingham, Ala.—When in a run-down condition of health some time ago, Mrs. W. P. Siveley, 5412 Seventh Avenue, South, this city, took Cardui, with the resulting benefit which she describes below. "About a year ago, my health was not good," writes Mrs. Siveley. "I felt weak and tired, and had pains in my back. I lost weight. "I knew by these symptoms I needed something to build me up. My mother advised me to try Cardui, which I did. I found it was what I needed, for it built me up. The pains in my back stopped, and I felt better and stronger than I had in some time. "I took about seven bottles of Cardui in all, and now I am feeling just fine, and have been since taking Cardui."

Thousands of other women have written to say that Cardui has proved of valuable assistance to them in building up their health. Cardui is a purely vegetable medicinal compound, and contains nothing harmful or injurious.

A Dismaying Spectacle

THE city lights which big-city politics thrown on the workings of democracy in America are sometimes rather dismaying. In the Chicago mayoralty campaign, for example, we have the two leading candidates openly accusing "imbeciles" and "nutty" epithets at one another in a way more reminiscent of a bar-room brawl than a supposed sober political race. Chicago has had plenty of trouble in recent years; and when the leading contenders in a race for the mayoralty indulge in cheap personalities of that kind, instead of confining themselves to a serious discussion of the important issues involved, the spectacle is discouraging beyond measure. Does one have to be something of a clown to carry an election in a large American city?

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

The Modern Villain

Paris News: THE latest indictment of present-day modes and manners is that we take our villains too lightly. If we do not pull up short, we shall soon be without them altogether. Dickens and other early authors offered blackhearted villains in plenty. But writers today are not so generous and some critics and readers are moved to ask for more. Writers should not be permitted to deprive the world of villains.

The fear that scoundrels are disappearing from literature seems well founded. Realism is the fashion of the day, yet a change has come over the idealist. Once he was down on people; then he became sternly impartial; now he is infinitely tender with his unfortunates.

Things have come to such a pass that often it is hard to tell hero from villain. The poor fellow whom hereditarily environment and author have pushed into a life of villainy and knavery gets all the sympathy.

There is danger of falling into soft ways if villains are to be explained, analyzed and denatured. There is a certain elevation about the villain; he does the thing handsomely. If this meat is to be stricken from our literary diet there may soon be a generation of flabby, anaemic readers.

There is a strange similarity between the change of heart toward the villain of fiction and toward the criminal. Just as the city slicker who didn't do right by our Nell is no longer suffered to die a terrible death of worms, the social manufacturer is no longer treated as an unregenerate renegade deserving of no consideration. Novels are but mirrors of their times; authors typical of their generation.

ANOTHER MEANEST THIEF PITTSBURGH, Pa. (INS)—Joseph Geiser, ill in bed, held on tightly to $125 he had placed in the pocket of his nightgown. The patient dozed off for a few minutes. When Geiser awoke he discovered that the nearest claimant to the title of the "meanest thief" had pried open the bedroom window and made off with the money.

HONOR VETERANS NEW HAVEN, Conn. (INS)—Business on the New Haven railroad was sufficiently good in 1930 to permit the road to give forty diamond pins to as many employees for serving more than fifty years. The list of fifty-year men included the company tax commissioner and then ranged down to a janitor.

ASKS JOY AT HIS BURIAL AMESBURY, Mass. (INS)—"Make the occasion as enjoyable as possible, for it will be so for me." That was one clause in the will of George B. Morrill, 81 of Salisbury Plains in giving instructions for his funeral, which came eight years after the will was written on both sides of a single piece of faded paper.

KEEP "LOVER'S LANE" STOCKBRIDGE, Mass. (INS)—"Lover's Lane," an old town road laid in 1790 near Lake Mahkeenac, said to be used almost exclusively by "petting parties" will not be closed. At a town meeting it was voted to keep the old highway open.

WHO'S WHO In last week's edition of The Herald the name of Ted Phillips, plucky captain of the Steer basketball team, was included in this column. Since that date the Steer team has been crowned the district championship team. For this reason we believe that the starting five of this team should be given mention in this column, hence the other four are given today.—The Editor.

George Washington was not by nature a scholar, yet he was thoughtful and studious and mastered a great many things by self-study. This thoughtful proved to be a very useful thing to Washington as later when his life turned to military affairs, he was considered the greatest leader and general of the time. Since Washington had been so successful in leading the country through the crisis of war, the people felt that he would be the man to direct the country through the trying period of reconstruction. After many years of service to his country Washington died at his home at Mount Vernon. His death was not only mourned by his countrymen but also by his many European friends. It has been written of Washington that he "avoided the snares of faction and partisan politics, generously overlooked the harshest criticisms, respected and used abilities of his opponents." Without a doubt the words of his friend Harry Lee, "First in war, first in peace, first in the hearts of his fellow countrymen" are literally true of Washington.

Assemblies A called assembly on Friday, February 10, took the nature of a pep rally in honor of the Steers' victory in defeating the Abilene Eagles on Thursday night, and thereby winning the district championship. After a few words by Mr. George W. Blankenship, a short talk to the student body about backing the Steers. The whole talk to the student body then gave yells and sang songs to show the team appreciation for past honors and to urge them on to greater victories. The regular chapel on Monday was in charge of Mr. D. H. Reed and Mr. Blankenship in the absence of Mr. Gregory. Minister Crews of the Church of Christ made an address on a life of service, using the life of George Washington as a basis since this is the day celebrated throughout the nation as a holiday for his birthday. Mr. Crews presented the life of George Washington as one of service and trust in God. Mr. Crews said that if any one has a strong determination and will power he can master anything that he wants to do. Accomplishment merely needs a person thinking that he can if he wants to attain it.

Book Reviews THE GREEN GODDESS LOUISE JORDAN MILN (Stokes, N. Y., 1922) The Green Goddess by Miln is a very interesting book. It is well written and related in an enjoyable manner. It is especially worth reading because it gives an intimate knowledge of the customs and religious beliefs of the people in the Himalaya Mountains, a result of the adventures of Lucilla Crespin, who moves to India from England with her husband. A few years later, they start on an aeroplane journey with Dr. Traherne. They lose their way and are forced to land in the small kingdom of Rukh. The Raja of Rukh has lived in Europe for some years and knows the English language perfectly. He says that the members of the captured party must be sacrificed to the Green Goddess, a hideous six-armed idol of his people, at the same time his three half-brothers are to be killed by the British government. He offers Lucilla the choice of living with him or dying. She chooses and while she, Dr. Traherne, and Crespin are left alone for a while, Antony sends a wireless to the station that they are to be killed at sunset on the following day. The Raja shoots Antony as he is sending a second message, which he says does not get through, just as sunset an aeroplane squadron comes and rescues Lucilla and Dr. Traherne.

Miss Agnew Hostess To Staff of Library Miss Eloise Agnew entertained the librarians and their guests at the home of Marguerite Alderson Friday evening. Hearts was the game of the evening. Hazel Smith made low score and won a heart-shaped box of candy. A lovely plate carrying out the Valentine motive was served. Librarians were Ruth Earyl, Marguerite Alderson, R. V. Jones, Fred Koberg, and Jacqueline Ruffner. Guests were Pearl Butler, Marie Johnson, Paul Lee, Walter Deats, Claudine Miller, Georgianna Touchstone, Gertrude Tucker, Hazel Smith and Trust Grant.

Editorial It seems of late that in several leading newspapers articles are appearing which tend to disparage early-learned stories of great men and their doings. For instance, according to one article, Paul Revere did not ride over the route which was learned of in elementary history. Another states that Lincoln was not born and raised in a log house in the woods. And still another has it that George Washington never cut down the well-known cherry tree with the likewise familiar hatchet. What is the purpose of these articles, tearing down the heroes of childhood? What good does it do anybody to learn that George Washington's treachery is a myth? Certainly it is a beautiful story in the first place. Furthermore, the memory of that story has prompted many to abstain from "tree chopping" as well as telling untruths about the misdeed in consequence.

SELF-RELIANCE Self-reliance is one of the most essential qualities to success boys and girls of the high school age especially need to rely upon themselves and less upon their parents and teachers. They need to learn how to fight their own battles, and paddle their own canoe, so to speak. A great deal of talent is lost in the world for want of a little self-reliance. Every day sends men to their graves whose timidity prevented them from making a first effort; who, if they could have been induced to begin, would, in all probability, have gone for a career of fame. The fact is that to do anything in the world worth doing, one must not stand back shivering and thinking of the cold and danger, but dive in and scramble through the best he can.

George Washington was called a general, patriot, statesman, and a friend of humanity. Few men of our country have had such a tribute paid to their lives. It is a good thing to think of George Washington not only on his birthday but every day of the year because his life is an example of everything that an American should be. George Washington was not by nature a scholar, yet he was thoughtful and studious and mastered a great many things by self-study. This thoughtful proved to be a very useful thing to Washington as later when his life turned to military affairs, he was considered the greatest leader and general of the time. Notes On Sports In the two games which the Steers took from Abilene there were several shining lights on both teams. Hopper, the big forward for the Steers, showed he was an asset to his team by his all-around playing. He pitched goals and intercepted Abilene passes, playing an almost perfect passing game himself. Hutto had a better eye for the goals than he had a week previous at Colorado, and his intercepting the passes of Abilene accounted for many goals for the Steers. Bill Flowers, Phillips, Forrester, and Pardue all played a beautiful game, and especially the dribbling of the Steers guards was far superior to Abilene. On the other hand, J. and S. Smith for Abilene played beautiful games for Abilene, and especially the left-handed crisp shooting of J. Smith brilliant. The others on the Abilene team played more or less good games but it was to no avail against the Steers.
